FOOTBALL.

LONDON DEFEATED AT TORONTO. The Toronto World thus describes Saturday's final game for the intermediate Rugby championship:

"Varsity II, now holds the intermediate cup. They defeated London in the final game on the campus by 64 to 5 on Saturday. The half-time score was 19-1. This game not only gives them the championship, but the combination of the halves was perfect. It was this that made such a show of the Forest City players. They were never in it at any stages of the game, and Varsity scored as they pleased. In fact, their opponents were bewildered by the brilliant play of the halves, and on two occasions stood and watched them go over the line."

London was without Reid and Stringer while they played Woodworth, who has been playing with St. Catharines at quarter, and "Chick" McCrae, the old Queen's star at half. The latter proved to be about the poorest half on the field, and not only this, but he resorted to his hands and feet. Varsity warned the referee. "Varsity played the team they have been playing all season. The game was fairly free from rough play although Ford and Varsity were ruled off in the first half, while Ransford had two ribs broken and had to give up. Spence going to Varsity's team to even up. Foreman, Varsity's quarter, was kicked in the back by McCrae and went off, being replaced by Wale from back, Wale's place being taken by Balls."

Sharp on time the game was started before a small crowd, owing to the cold and threatening weather. London won the toss and kicked south with the ball. A conversion was made by Brown going over. McCordie failed to convert. Score, 4-0. After McCrae made a bad fumble, Stoddart got a tackle in goal, and Varsity had 8-0. Shortly after this Scott got the piskin, made a pretty run, and went over. McCordie again failed to convert. Score, 12-0.

The backs then got in some pretty play. Brown kicked over. Niven fumbled the ball over the dead line, and Varsity had a rouge. Score 12-0. McArthur, from a pretty punt, got a touch-in-goal. Score 14-0. Niven was forced to rouge. Score 15-0. After McCordie, Wale and McArthur carried the ball up the field. Wale went over and McCordie failed to convert. Score 19-0.

After London did some dribbling, Balls was forced to rouge, and half-time was called, the score being 19-0. In the second half Ferris got the ball and scored the first of many touches for Varsity. Brown converted the try. Score 25-1. Brown went over and converted the try. Score 31-1. Wale was the next to get a touch. Score 33-1. After a conversion, McArthur then got a touch-in-goal. Score 35-1. McCordie, on a pass from Wale, went over the line, and McArthur converted the try. Score 41-1. McCordie again got the ball from a throw-in and scored another touch, but failed to convert. Score 46-1. Brown, after some pretty combination, got over with the ball, and Telford converted the try. Score 54-1. From a long kick McCrae caught the ball, giving London their total, 5. Score 59-1. Wale was the next to score and Wale converted the try. Score 65-1. McArthur got the ball in his quarter and carried it down the field, going over. Balls failed to convert the try, giving Varsity their last point. Score 64-5. Varsity were thus champions of '97 in the easiest possible way.

Varsity (44)—Beck, Wale; halves, Brown, McCordie; McArthur, quarter, Foreman, Stringer, Smith, Hinch, Hall, wings, Tanner (captain), Ansley, Stoddart, Ferris, Telford, Scott, Spence, London (5)—Beck, Niven; halves, McCrae, Ransford, Hobbs; Woodworth, scrum, Drummond, Payne, Sinton; wings, Slipi, Clarkson, Teale, Donnelly, Fraser, Reid, Skinner. Referee—J. M. Mowat. Umpire—W. Ormiston. Goal Judges—Ford and MacNabb. Touch-line Judges—A. H. Beaton, C. R. McDougall.

A FREE FIGHT. Ottawa, Nov. 8.—The Quebec Union has another unfinished game on its hands. The Ottawa City-Ottawa College game ended with the score a tie, each team with 8 points and seven and a half minutes left unplayed on account of darkness. Ottawa claims that the score is 8 to 7. The Ottawa still have a majority of one point from the first game with the college. Saturday's game was simply a continuous free fight.

OSGOODE DEFEATS HAMILTON. Hamilton, Nov. 8.—Luck was decidedly against the Hamilton Tigers in the first contest against the Osgoode Hall kickers in the final for the senior Rugby championship of Ontario on Saturday. The home team went on the field much weakened by the absence of Capt. Counsell, Ripley and Quinn, but played a splendid game. Osgoode won by a score of 6 to 2. It was a scrum game throughout, in which Osgoode had somewhat the best, aided by an abundance of free kicks.

FATAL FOOTBALL. Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 8.—Two football players received probably fatal injuries in games here Saturday. Bobt. Grange, one of the Hamilton athletic team, suffered from concussion of the brain, and is now lying in a precarious condition. Bert Tibble was hurt internally, and may die.

OTHER GAMES ON SATURDAY. At Quebec—The Montreal team, with their big advantage of 12 points, were easily defeated by Quebec by 24 points to 1, leaving Quebec, at the end of the game victors and 11 points of an advantage.

At Hamilton—The results in the Hamilton District Association football matches were: Normal College, 3; Watford, 0. St. Matthews, 3; Victoria, 0. At Philadelphia—University of Pennsylvania 20, Carlisle Indians 10. At New Haven—Yale 16, Chicago 4.

At Hartford—Wesleyan 6, Trinity 4. At Newton—Brown 24, Newton 0. At Princeton—Princeton 57, La Fayette 0.

At West Point—West Point 48, Lehigh 6.

At Ithaca—Cornell 45, Pennsylvania State College 0.

BASEBALL. PORT HURON EXPECTS TO BE REPRESENTED in the proposed international baseball league. J. A. Murphy, who managed the Port Huron team in the State League last season, reports a guarantee of enough money to run the season through, and that it is expected that the league will be composed of Port Huron, Batavia, Saginaw, London, St. Thomas, and Guelph.

IN VICTORIA. Melbourne, Victoria, Nov. 8.—In the cricket match between Capt. Stoddart's English eleven and an eleven representing the colony of Victoria, the latter scored 278 runs for 8 wickets.

THE TUG. LONDON HOUNDS SUCCESSFUL IN CHICAGO. Chicago, Nov. 8.—In the competition between regularly organized mynt teams at the Coliseum Friday night the London Hunt team was victorious, winning the majority of events in the different contests.

Two Philadelphia teams were pitted against the Londoners, but, piloted by Adam Beck, the master of the London Hunt, they were able to take second and third places.

TIPS. The famous racing horse, Archduke, which is to be run in the Derby next season, was shipped for London Saturday morning on the American transport liner Maudslayi from New York, as was also the racing horse Indian Chief.

The Seagram stable of Waterloo is credited with winning $12,450 in the last season.

Joseph Jolley, widely known as a driver and handler of horses, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a revolver. Death was instantaneous. Jolley was a brother of "Float" Jolley, a well-known horse owner.

WHEEL. BROKE THE 24-HOUR RECORD. Brocton, Mass., Nov. 8.—Frank B. German, of this city, broke the American 24-hour record by riding 342 miles between 4 p.m. on Friday and the same hour on Saturday. The former record was held by Davis, of Cleveland, Germany, who rode 322 miles in the same time. The course was from this city to Fitchburg, Mass., a round distance of 54 miles.

German made the trip up and back six times, and finished the ride at 11:30 a.m. on Sunday. He finished the 342 miles just seven minutes before the expiration of the 24 hours, and being nearly his home stopped rather than ride out the even hour. A number of local bicyclists on tandems and single wheels paced German.

SPOKES. PIATT-BETTS HAS PLACED THE AUSTRALIAN mile record at 1:47 2-5. Previous record, 1:48.

In Christiania, Norway, the local ordinances forbid riding a bicycle other than in single file.

The London Spectator estimates the number of cyclists who daily use the roads of the United Kingdom at not less than 1,000,000.

Barden, Green and Ainsworth, the English "crackjacks," will spend the winter in America. The racing season is just opening, and many a big purse is offered. The Austral is worth $3,200 this year.

Michael has not always ridden a high gear. According to the Wheel, he began four years ago with a gear of 65, he increased it to 70, then to 77, 80, 88, 95, and at last 105 and 112. His gear is higher than any other rider's.

HOCKEY. PARIS CLUB. Paris (Ont.) has organized a hockey club, with the following officers: Paton, A. H. Baird; honorary president, Mayor Fisher; president, W. W. Patterson; vice-president, J. A. Martin; secretary-treasurer, J. S. Arncliffe; auditors, Messrs. D. Adams, Jun., and C. W. Lawton; managing committee, H. Wren, T. Hall, S. E. Arnold, and the secretary, captain of the team, E. Howell; representatives to the S. O. H. A., E. Howell and C. W. Lawton; rink committee, Mayor Fisher, J. S. Arncliffe and E. Howell.

CURLING. INGERSOLL'S ABERDEEN CLUB. There was a fairly good attendance at the opening meeting of the Ingersoll Curling Club. Officers were elected as follows for the current year: Dr. Walker, president; John Ross, vice-president; J. E. Gay, secretary; treasurer, A. E. Gay, P. R. Hurdle and Jas. McLaren, committee of management; A. E. Gay, representative member; Jas. Smith, honorary member.

was gone, and that she couldn't be moved, we knew we could not live in the trough of that fearful sea, and the only hope left us was to run the anchor and bring her up to the sea, and let her ride out the gale. Every seaman realized the danger of attempting to do that in the trough of a hurricane, and when Capt. Gillies decided to do it he ordered the lashing of the boats cut, and told the men they were to be taken to sea by a pilot boat, and decided to abandon the ship, fearing that she would go down before they had another chance to get away. One of the pilots determined to make an effort single-handed to save the ship, and he stayed on board alone, while messages were sent to Halifax for assistance. Tugs put to sea at once, but owing to thick weather were unable for some hours to locate the sinking vessel. It was then too late either to tow her into port or to beach her. At 12 o'clock the pilot was taken off, and shortly afterwards the ship took a plunge and disappeared beneath the water. Some of the crew of the McLeod were injured by being thrown about on the disabled ship, and one of them has been sent to the hospital with a broken arm.

The ship, which was worth $25,000, was owned by J. W. Purdy, St. John, the captain and others, and was not insured. The ship was 1,500 tons register.

A GOOD REMEDY. "When the little girl is naughty," says Miss Jessie M. Fowler, giving a mother directions for curing her small daughter's bad temper, "put on her best gown and you will see that she cannot withstand the influence." This should be a good remedy for "grown-ups," suggests an exchange. It is said that a man is never so much of a gentleman as when he is wearing an evening suit.

covered by ice in a few minutes, for though the top of the spar, which was hanging was twenty-five feet above the water, the big waves struck us and broke over us, and the hail cut us like shrapnel. I knew that it was about 3 o'clock when we went down, and it seemed to me that daylight would never come. For what seemed an age we hung on to the rigging, and we twisted our arms about the spar and let them freeze in position, or we cussed the men plumbly, and I headed for the spar. When I got near I was puzzled how to help the men off, for I could not lower the boat in such a manner. Finally I floated the spar until I ran alongside, and my men picked the poor fellows off. They had to crawl away from the spar by force, for they had been there so long that their arms had BECOME ALMOST DEAD, and were twisted about the mast and spar, and when we reached the bottom on board we put them in bunks and gave them some warm food and soup, and had them feeling pretty good physically when we reached harbor."

A SURVIVOR'S STORY. The story of the foundering of the steamer Idaho is told most graphically by Beckhard Wm. Gill, one of the two men taken from the spar by the crew of the Mariposa. The name of the second man who was rescued is not known. He was the second mate of the Idaho. Gill's story is as follows:

"We left here Friday night, bound for Chicago, with a cargo of general merchandise. Everything seemed all right until we got outside the breakwater, and then we were struck by the worst storm that I ever saw. When the first big breaker struck us, we were tossed up in the air like a top, and a second later a big roller came over the port bow and rolled down amidships a foot deep. The wind shrieked and howled, but we didn't pay much attention to the storm. We had felt wind before. The captain consulted with the mate, and decided that he could weather it, and he kept on his course. There were some old sailors in the crew, and I think all of them were satisfied that we were in danger. As we headed up the lake, dead against the gale, it appeared to be getting worse every minute.

The waves were running high, and the wind threw the tops from the breakers like dust. The men who lost their lives, Alexander Gillies, captain, Buffalo; George Gibson, first mate, Buffalo; Wm. Clancy, chief engineer, Buffalo; John D. Taylor, steward, Buffalo; Nelson Skinner, first assistant engineer; Louis Gilmore, watchman; Richard McLean, wheelman; Robert Williams, wheelman; A. J. Richards, lookout; Henry Thomson, lookout; Conrad Black, fireman; Wm. Gray, fireman; John Healy, assistant steward; Frederick Moffitt, officer; Edward Smith, deck hand, Rochester, N. Y.; M. In the Dining-Room.

TUESDAY, NOV. 9.

BREAKFAST—Oatmeal with cream. Fried mushrooms. Buttered toast. Coffee.
LUNCHEON—Wheat bread. Cold sliced meat with East Indian Sauce. California fig cake. Tea.
DINNER—Purée of bean soup. Broiled veal steak. Baked potatoes. Rice taffie. Coffee.

Cut out these recipes and paste them in a scrap-book.

Fried Mushrooms—Take large, firm mushrooms, remove the stems and peel. Roll in meat and fry in boiling fat. Sprinkle with salt, and squeeze a little lemon juice over them. Serve immediately.

East Indian Sauce—Chop fine a half-handful of green mint; put into a bowl; add a little lemon juice and rub into a paste. Take one large, green pepper; chop it and add to the mint in the bowl; add a little lemon juice and rub into a paste. Empty the bowl of mint into the bowl of green pepper; mix thoroughly, adding a saltspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of fine white sugar, and more lemon juice, until a thick green liquid is produced. Stir this constantly; pour into a shallow dish and serve. This sauce must be used as soon as made, otherwise its fragrance and piquancy will be lost. This is an excellent sauce for cold meats, fowl or game.

California Fig Cake—One-half teaspoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of sugar, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of flour, three eggs, a teaspoonful of baking powder and a half pound of figs. Open the figs, spread them upon a plate and put in the oven a few moments to soften. Mix the batter and pour half of it into a square pan. Spread the figs over the surface; then add the remainder of the batter. Bake in a moderate oven. Spread a thick layer of boiled icing over the cake.

Broiled Veal Steaks—These are delicious broiled as beefsteaks over a hot fire. The steak should be cut about a quarter of an inch thick to cook quickly through, and when taken up on a heated platter should be spread with a little butter and sprinkled with a little salt and pepper. Or place three pounds of veal steak, cut in the ordinary manner, in a pan with a lump of butter, a teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper sprinkled over it lightly, also a little flour, and bake in a hot oven about half an hour. This is truly delicious.

Rice Taffie—One cup of rice; cooked tender in one quart of rich milk; take from stove and add yolks of two eggs, one cup of sugar and a pinch of salt; pare and round out the cores of six good cooking apples; put one teaspoonful of jelly in each cavity, with the same quantity of thick, sweet cream. Pour the rice between and around the apples and bake until apples are tender. Beat whites of the eggs with one-half cup of sugar; add a little lemon juice; spread over the top, and return to the oven to brown. To be eaten with cream, if desired.

Yeoman's Weather Stuffs are the best.

On European Happenings--The Delay of the Sudan Campaign Creates a Howl of Disgust.

France and England Perilously Near a Collision—Efforts to Belittle the Significance of Bye-Election Results in England—An Ill-Timed Menace—Agricultural Experiments—The G. O. M.—Emperor William Kills a Pig.

London, Nov. 8.—Although expected, the definite announcement that the Anglo-Egyptian campaign up the Nile has been abandoned for the present has been the signal for a howl of disgust similar in tone to the outburst of the Morning Post, which paper, in a specially displayed editorial article, denounced the government for "its hesitancy and invertebrateness on all great occasions," adding that the unfortunate losses in money and blood are due to procrastination, and now, when the hour is ripe to vindicate Gordon and to smash the mahdi, nothing is to be done, but a baneful hesitation sets in, a moral influenza, which paralyses our statesmen. Similar denunciations have been heard even from the most ardent supporters of the ministry. The latter's decision not to consider the Sudan campaign is attributed both to lack of money and to the impossibility of finding British troops for this service until the Indian troubles are over.

DANGERS OF DELAY.

Any suggestion that the Egyptian troops have already broken the khali's back and are capable of reaching Khartoum alone, is frowned down, until it is beginning to be whispered that the British are agreed to let the Egyptians know how much they are capable of accomplishing alone. In any case, whatever the reason for stopping the campaign may be, it seems to be folly to wait until next year to accomplish what could now, seemingly, be so readily realized, while the desperadoes and other tribes already rescued from the tyranny of the khali are ready to help the Sudanese to overthrow the British possession in the center and south of Africa, and the knowledge that Great Britain is resting on her oars will cause them to redouble their energies. The Marquis of Salisbury is urged on all sides to take spirited action, and it is insisted that if funds are lacking Great Britain must advance them or even supply the amount requisite to carry out the campaign. The British expedition sent to that place not to allow anything to prevent the re-occupation of any British territory thus far lost to the French, and other European forces. To this is probably attributed the hasty retirement of the French troops on the approach of the British.

A statement made by the parliamentary secretary of the colonial office, the Earl of Selborne, in the House of Commons, has carried out the effect of opening the British Niger companies' territory to all trades, shows that the government intends to take over these territories.

ON THE BRINK OF WAR.

"On the Brink" is the caption under which the Daily News editorially discusses the Anglo-French relations, and wonders how many persons in recent years England has been upon the brink of war with France. The same feeling is known to exist among the well-informed in both countries. The news from Lagos, West Coast of Africa, on Thursday last, that the French had evacuated Saki, one of the posts in the Niger delta, which has been occupied by their troops in contravention of the agreement of 1893, leaving that place so soon as the British force of 2,000 men, sent there by Lord Salisbury, showed how serious the situation in West Africa has been, and demonstrated that a contest between the French and British troops in this instance was only averted by the retirement of the former, and it further shows that such a collision may occur any day.

Three ministers were simultaneously engaged in defending the government on the night when the Middleton poll was announced, so that the Liberal Lancashire was apparently not unexpected. Liberal writers contend that the Middleton election is a sign of a widespread popular revolt against the division as a chameleon constituency, which has never voted the same way twice in succession, and further, that the bye-elections never make anything, and that the party in general has lost only five seats since the last election. The Times, having been warned in advance by Mr. Maxse, the bimetallic editor of the National Review, that the Liberal party would go against the government, says that Lancashire has flung itself wildly into the arms of the Liberal majority, and that the defeat of the Liberal party is a disaster to the Liberal majority. The defeat, under these conditions, is a disaster, is not creditable to the government, and even at the risk of losing other concessions, no encouragement should be given to a dangerous currency craze.

Elections in Liverpool and Deptford are impending, and there is much interest in the result. The prolonged labor war in the engineering trade has created a feeling of discontent among the working classes, and, although Mr. Ritchie has persisted in repeating his offers of mediation, to which the employers refuse to listen, the government inevitably suffers from the social unrest whenever a bye-election comes on. Times are already bad, with the engineering trade half paralyzed by the strike, with the tremendous shrinkage of the cotton industry, with another cut in the wages of the tinplate workers and other disturbing causes. The ministry, however, with a large majority, is in no danger, especially as the next session will be devoted to Irish measures, which Nationalists and Liberals may seek to improve, but against which they will not vote.

THE MINISTERIAL SPEECHES.

Mr. Balfour's speech at Norwich contained a threat that churchmen might be compelled to abandon the support of their own schools and capture the board of schools outright for their creed and catechism. This was an ill-timed menace, since the London school board elections are now pending, and the victory of the progressive party over Mr. Diggle and the extremists is well-nigh certain. Mr. Balfour thrashed over old straw, and then incautiously threw a burning brand into the fire. He made the declaration that the army would be increased, but Mr. Chamberlain, fresh from his academic triumphs in Glasgow, made the declaration that the army would be reduced, declaring that all the "Unionist" pledges have been rescinded, and that Lord Salisbury has triumphed gloriously in diplomacy, and then hitting out in his slashing style at Mr. John Morley and the Liberal Party. The Earl of Salisbury, with fine irony all Liberal criticism as stray shots, fired by political snipers. Sir William Harcourt is said to be only match for him on the Liberal side, and he will soon be heard at Dundee.

AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENTS.

What is considered to be the discovery of the century, an English agriculturist, has been tested experimentally, with the greatest success at Earl of Winchester's experimental farm at Sandford. It consists of applying the principle of cross-fertilization to grasses, clovers, cereals and other food plants. The Earl of Winchester's secretary says that the experiments were made, not only with clover, but with cereals, and that with those all foreign agricultural countries. Special varieties that are best suited to any particular soil or climate have been produced. The experiments have not been made public hitherto, in order that a sufficient quantity of seed may be raised to supply the demand when the importation results were made known. Mr. Garton has already received applications from some foreign governments for seed. The United States have effected crosses of wheat, but have not attempted to cross barley or oats. Mr. Garton has succeeded in all his efforts, and Great Britain is thus enabled to supply the world with seed. This will be a potent factor in relieving the world from the famine of the future. Mr. Garton's methods of producing marvelous permanent types of cereals are most unique and original, and that comparatively useless cereals are converted thereby into the most valuable food plants.

CRIME IN OLD LONDON.

The recent police records of the East End of London read like the old days of Deadwood, Dak. Revolver shooting has occurred almost daily, and on Wednesday there were no less than four commitments to trial for crimes of that description. One was the case of a boy who had killed a girl, another was of a youth who seriously wounded a woman, in a third a man shot a woman, and the fourth episode was that of a boy who discharged a revolver in the pit of a music hall. Earlier in the week a boy was shot by a girl, and on Monday a bullet crashed through a watchmaker's store, narrowly missing the proprietor. The Royal Free Hospital recently had ten patients suffering from bullet wounds. In short, the possession of a revolver is so common in the East End that residents of that district annual daily to the magistrates and police for the adoption of measures to put an end to lawlessness.

THE SEAL TREATY.

The British officials regard the prompt agreement arrived at between the United States, Russia and Japan, providing for a temporary suspension of pelagic sealing, as a vindication of their refusal to enter into the conference and as a demonstration of the wisdom of their policy. It is not likely that Great Britain will consent to stop sealing. Her Majesty's government confidently expects a settlement of the question by the United States purchasing the Canadian fisheries.

LONDON AND NEW YORK COMMERCE.

The local government journal makes an interesting comparison between Greater New York and the English metropolis. It asserts that Greater London is double the size of New York, has double the population, more than twice the number of police, and only half as many firemen. London has four times as many scholars in her public schools, but only 25 per cent more teachers; she has more public libraries, but not so many in proportion to her population; she has half as many hospitals as New York and three more cemeteries. In New York there is a church or chapel for every 2,000 persons, and in London one in 4,000. The London debt is 35 per cent lighter for each taxpayer. In New York organized charity relieves one family in every 200; but in London one family in 45 is maintained by the ratepayers. In the matter of crime, particularly house-breaking and burglary, London is better off. If the ratepayers in London under these conditions were to the same proportion New York there would be 2,000 instances a year, whereas there are only about 100 more than in New York.

RHEUMATISM CURED BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

I have been troubled with Rheumatism for several months. I could scarcely get around. I had tried various remedies, but of no use. I read of the wonderful cures Dodd's Kidney Pills had done, and purchased one box. From the first box I began to get relief. I have used 4 boxes and I am cured. I remain, yours, etc., W. H. SIMPSON, Lindsay, Ont.

Grand Trunk Railway Progress.

We have received the official report of the directors of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, together with the statement of accounts for the half year ended June 30 last. It is a carefully prepared document, and contains many points of interest to our readers. When Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson requested Mr. Charles M. Hays, the present general manager, to become chief executive officer, it was with the understanding that the road should be kept up to the best standard of American efficiency, and at the same time that every reasonable economy should be adopted. It is apparent that Mr. Hays is running the road as a commercial enterprise, and that he has succeeded in making reforms that have been of decided advantage to the shareholders. During the six months ended June 30, the working expenses were cut down from 71.34 per cent of the gross receipts, to 61.49 per cent of the gross receipts for the same period of 1896. This was a saving of $278,835. The company's passenger traffic decreased 0.12 per cent during the six months, probably owing to the withdrawal of unprofitable suburban business, but the freight traffic increased 1.49 per cent. The general manager has put up a vigorous fight for a full share of the freight traffic between the Western States and the Atlantic seaboard, and he has been eminently successful. Here is a significant comparison of the gross receipts and working expenses for the two periods referred to:

	Gross receipts.	Working expenses.
First six months, 1896	$3,537,700	$2,091,225
First six months, 1897	$3,537,700	$2,091,225
June, 1897, June, 1896	$6,121,455	$5,812,840

It will be seen from these figures that in increased business, for which Mr. Hays and his assistants had to work hard, and in reduced operating expenses, there was a betterment of $445,000 in round numbers for the six months of the present year. The following is a comparison of working expenditures for the half years ending June 30, 1897 and 1896:

	June, 1897.	June, 1896.
Maintenance and repair of way, bridges, etc.	$780,820	$709,840
Locomotive department	2,050,910	2,231,575
Car department	635,825	638,360
Traffic department	1,833,430	2,017,139
General charges	139,455	155,225
Miscellaneous expenses	122,850	123,030
Rent of rolling stock	202,635	175,215
Rents and salaries	47,070	42,350
Totals	$5,822,830	$6,091,225

In the return of working stock, 363 old freight cars were reported to be out of service. They were not replaced during the half year, owing to the interruption of the work of renewal consequent upon the removal of the Toronto and Brantford shops to London, where the works are now concentrated, but the cost of the construction of new 30-ton cars to replace the deficiency was provided for in the accounts under review. The total length of the lines owned by the G. T. R. Company is now 4,550 miles, steel track, and 92 miles iron—the latter principally sidings.

The reports of General Manager Hays' assistants on the state of the road and its equipment contain many points of interest. Chief Engineer Hobson points out that during the half year recently ended, the expenditure for the maintenance of the company's property was $69,089.38 greater than in the corresponding period of 1896. The company's permanent way and works generally have been maintained in good condition. Mr. Frank W. Morse, superintendent of motive power, reports that the average number of cars moved per train for the two periods was as follows:

	Passenger.	Freight.	Mixed.
First six months, 1897	4.5	23.3	18.4
First six months, 1896	4.7	21.3	10.9

Mr. McWood, superintendent of the car department, reports that during the half year ended 4,000 and 5,000 cars underwent repairs, while over 7,000 were repaired. The effect of the changes as seen in the general improvement in the appearance of the company's rolling stock.

The great bulk of the expenditure in running a railway is devoted to the payment of wages and running expenses. For example, out of a total expenditure of $2,050,910 for the locomotive department of the G. T. R. during the past six months, all except about $300,000 was devoted to paying for labor and fuel. The average quantity of fuel used per month is 577 cords of wood and 62,182 tons of coal.

Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, president of the G. T. R., recently inspected the company's lines and property. In submitting the report from which we have quoted, he reports "his satisfaction at the improved working of the system, attributable to the energy of the general manager, and the efficient manner in which his efforts have been seconded by the heads of departments and the staff generally." This recognition of faithful stewardship is well deserved. There is no more hard-working body of men in the Dominion than those charged with the operation of the pioneer Canadian railway system.

The Montreal Herald very wisely protests against the holding of a mid-winter carnival. In this land of beauty, a summer festival is of much greater value to us all.

Canada in London.

The Globe continues to print interesting interviews with leading business men of Toronto as to the establishment of a commercial agency for the Dominion in London, England. The proposal is for the purpose of bringing Canadian products and resources more prominently before the notice of the British public, and by taking advantage of the great wave of popular enthusiasm which followed the action of the Canadian Government in giving preference to British goods in order to obtain a larger share of the British market for our products. The suggestion is considered an opportune one just at this particular time, and all of the business men heartily favor the scheme, considering that some such action of this kind was necessary in order that a footing may be obtained in the British markets which the excellence of Canadian goods merits. The bureau should be able to furnish exporters from this country with reliable information as to the means of disposing of their products in the old country and other markets.

Canada needs such an establishment more than she needs the present official establishment in an out of the way section of the metropolis, which is utterly unfit for aiding Canadian interests. The commercial agency should be right in the center of business London, where its contents could readily be seen and closely examined not only by London dealers, prospective investors or settlers, but by the large number of visitors to the metropolis.

As has been well said, Canada cannot any longer afford to do business on a back street.

Welcome addresses are sometimes pretty dry, but their writers stumble on a chunk of truth now and again. For example, in East Durham, the Conservative Association assured Mr. Whitney, the Ontario Opposition leader, that his tour was "fatiguing." There can be no doubt about that. The ancients, who tried to make bricks without straw, never undertook a more tiresome task than Mr. Whitney has assumed in endeavoring to obtain office by merely decrying the ability of those whom he would fain displace.

Britain's Industrial Disturbances.

Our English cablegrams today show that there was a decrease in both the British imports and exports for October. It is also shown that there are on strike, in the engineering industry alone, 84,000 wage earners and consumers. This means that not only is this vast army of workmen idle, but that hundreds of thousands of workers in allied industries are prejudicially affected by the incidental paralysis of trade and commerce. Until this great strike is ended, no one need expect to see British trade advancing. At present, much business that would in the ordinary course go to British workshops is being snatched up by the Germans, who are not fighting about a reduction in working hours to eight a day, but are pegging away for ten hours or more daily, endeavoring to profit by the disagreements of their neighbors. In the present condition of European trade, it is difficult for one nation to cut down its work hours while its neighbor and keenest competitor makes no change. Surely it is time to end the great strike.

Sir William Van Horne favors the establishment of a Canadian mint. Why not work up some of our gold, silver and nickel into monetary tokens?

Crime and Tramps.

Though the Rawdon, Que., tragedy is not rendered any less revolting because the elder brother of the four persons murdered has confessed that he committed the fearful deed, many persons living in lonely parts of the country will be relieved to discover that the murderer was not a tramp. For the tramping fraternity, it may be said that ordinarily they are not inclined to commit deeds of this kind. The large majority of these transients would rather avoid doing anything that may get them into jail. Those of them who have been there have a mortal fear of the Central Prison, and there are many indications that the fraternity who have not been inside the walls of that institution have profited by the warnings of ex-convicts whom they have come across. One of the best means of obtaining immunity from attack by tramps is to have the reputation of keeping little if any money or valuables in the house. Nine out of every ten burglaries perpetrated in the country are undertaken at premises where the hope of large gain at small risk of detection exists. Even in cases where murder has resulted from the resistance of burglars, it has often been proved that it was only undertaken because of the fear that detection and long imprisonment would ensue.

Good Breeds as an Investment.

Mr. Gooding, of Idaho, United States, has been in the counties of Huron, Middlesex and Perth, buying the pick of well bred sheep, which have taken prizes at the Western Fair. The purchase aggregated 240, and the average price paid was $12.40, a few choice specimens bringing as high as $75. There is money in sheep, in cattle, in horses, and in other animals if they are well-bred. One's wonder is that so many people are contented to rear and market nondescript animals, when the cost of raising the very best breeds can be carried on at no greater cost for feed and house-room.

It having been pointed out that one of the principal issues in the elections at Buffalo the other day was whether or not the bed-bugs were to be driven out of the almshouse, the Sarnia Observer remarks that this is about up to the standard of the Provincial Conservative campaign cry: Is Ontario going to maintain a piggery?

WOUND UP.

[Chicago Times-Herald.] A cheerful imbecile in Oshkosh tried to drink three pints of whiskey at one sitting to win a bet, and died within a few minutes. Loss, 75 cents; no insurance.

TRY IT AT TORONTO.

[Philadelphia Inquirer.] There is a tribe in central Africa among whom speakers in public debate are required to stand on one leg while speaking, and to speak only as long as they can so stand.

BELLAMY'S BARGAIN COUNTER.

[Chicago Times-Herald.] Edward Bellamy has kindly arranged a plan for all of us by which every man is to draw $4,000 a year and retire on a pension at 45. What's the use of looking further? Let's accept the offer.

CAMPAIGN RHETORIC.

[Boston Globe.] One of the campaign speakers in New York is credited with this delicious bull: "That avalanche that drowned him last year is returning on the ocean, and will land him high and dry in the arms of Victory."

NORTHWEST PROGRESS.

[Montreal Witness.] According to Mr. Clouston, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, the Northwest is progressing rapidly. This year's crop has been so good in Manitoba that a good number of the farmers have been able to pay the first cost of their land and improvements out of this year's profits. The extent of the mining industry is indirectly indicated by the enormous demand for food, one supplier averaging 800 head of cattle and 2,000 sheep per month.

PRISONERS' TESTIMONY.

[Woodstock Sentinel-Review.] There is a great difference of opinion among judges and lawyers as to allowing prisoners to testify in their own behalf, as those who attend the assizes well know. At the opening of the criminal assizes in Toronto, on Saturday, Chancellor Boyd, speaking of the backwardness of criminal laws in England, mentioned that an innocent man could not get the opportunity of going into the witness box. Yet we find that when a prisoner does go on to the stand the judge generally impresses upon the jury the importance of not taking his evidence too seriously, pointing out the inducements there are for him to concoct a story in support of his innocence. Judge Meredith, at the last assizes held in Woodstock, did this in a very pronounced manner; yet, when his brother, Chief Justice Meredith, sat on the same bench a few months earlier he told a prisoner who could not testify and who was acquitted by the jury, that the fact that he had not gone into the witness box was strong moral evidence that he was guilty. The law, therefore, seems to place a prisoner on the horns of a dilemma—if he does testify, his judges are told to believe him a liar, and if he does not, he is informed that that alone is evidence of his guilt.

DOUBLED UP!

UNABLE TO WORK.

Suffering Agony Day and Night.

"For nearly two years," says Frank J. Wray, 211 Sherbourne St., Toronto, "I suffered greatly with lameness and pain in my back. It often happened that my back and kidneys pained me so badly that I was doubled up and could hardly walk, except in a stooping position. Very often I was unable to work, suffering agony both day and night. I had severe pain in the lower part of my stomach, and other symptoms which proved conclusively that my kidneys were in a very unhealthy condition. My appetite was lost and my strength declined rapidly. "I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills in March last, and after using three boxes of them was completely restored to health. I have not had the slightest pain or stiffness in any part of my back, or any indication of my former trouble, since using these wonderful pills. "With the restoration of my kidneys to a healthy condition, my appetite was restored, and my strength returned, so that I am now strong and hearty. I make this statement of my cure by Doan's Kidney Pills with the greatest pleasure, because when I commenced taking them I did not really expect so remarkable a cure as that which followed their use. I am very thankful that I hit upon this remedy, and gladly recommend it to all sufferers." 287

GIBRALTAR SCOFFED AT.

Distinguished Britishers Think That Toulon is a More Valuable Naval Station Than the "Rock."

[London Today.] Sir Charles Dilke considers that our fleet should be stronger than others in the ratio of five battleships to three, and two cruisers to one. Admiral De Horsey lays particular stress on the facts that there is no rock at Gibraltar, and that France possesses a vastly superior and better trained reserve. Admiral Hornby would not exchange Gibraltar at any price, but maintains that Famagusta, in Cyprus, is the only British Mediterranean harbor where warships could be docked, and then only at big cost.

Mr. William Allan, M.P., of the Allan Line of Steamships, speaking as an engineer, says that "it is downy to boast that the work is done nowadays" that the chief engineer must be recognized as the captain's right-hand man before anything further can be done. Mr. Arnold Forster scoffs at Gibraltar, and urges its exchange for an African port, alleging that, whereas at Toulon 24 ironclads can be coaled simultaneously, and it can be repaired simultaneously, "Gib" is practically useless for these purposes, and adds that the English navy needs immediately ten thousand seamen, one thousand officers and hundreds of boys, while Sir E. J. Reed declares that France and Russia are constructing half a dozen torpedo boats for every one built by Britain; that France is pre-eminently the leader in naval science, and that the British taxpayer must be made to pay for the needed improvements and additions.

What says the patriotic taxpayer? But Sir Thomas Sutherland (chairman of the P. and O. Company) opines that, to insure supremacy, Great Britain's naval strength should be equal to that of any two powers, and that the English people will gladly pay for it. Admiral Lord Alcester, of Alexandria fame, thinks that twenty millions at least should be spent on the navy, and that the Mediterranean squadron should be heavily reinforced at once. General Brialmont, the accomplished Belgian engineer, reiterates this view, adding that Britain ought to be powerful enough in the Mediterranean to insure her superiority. If, in fact, in the Black Sea, Sir Charles Dilke strenuously urges that his countrymen do not spend half enough money on their fleet, and that Toulon is the most valuable naval station, as well as the most invulnerable fortress in the world.

HONORE'S FATE.CHAPTER IV.

It was no very new thing for Capt. Trent to be walking with Honore Craven along the road which lay between Deergrove and the Larches; but something seemed to strike him as new in the performance tonight.

"You are not talking at all, Honore," he said at last, when the reason of the novelty dawned upon him. "What a very unusual thing! It does not show nicely-regulated manners to talk a good deal at one time, and say nothing at all at another."

"Hervey," said the girl, pausing suddenly in her walk, and turning her eyes upon him so that he could see their laughter in the gloom, "don't you lecture me when nobody is present. When Mrs. Trent and Theodora are by it affords them great pleasure to hear you, so I don't mind; but when we have no audience, we will have no performance, please. On those occasions—being, as they are, few and very far between—we will imagine ourselves on an equality. Now we will talk as much as you like, for I shall soon be at home. Hervey, do you want to know?"

"Why do you want to know?" inquired Capt. Trent, speaking sharply, but whether in consequence of Honore's introductory remark or of that last question was not clear.

"It does not signify; I can find out from Lawrence."

"He is as likely to be an adventurer as not," suggested Hervey, spitefully; "looking after Theodora for her fortune, and for her expectation of a share of old Myddelton's money."

"I should have thought you old enough to know a true gentleman when you met him," observed Honore, with provoking gravity. "And, if he really is come to woo Theodora, what shall you do?"

"Why?" he asked, his tone a trifle harsh, either in anger or self-consciousness.

"Because you are to marry her, you know."

"Do not say 'you know,' Honore; it is unnecessary and inelegant, and I do not know, though you do, it would seem."

"Of course I do; everybody knows it."

"Of course I could win her if I chose," mused Hervey, complacently, "if that is what you want, your everybody knowing I am to do so."

Honore's laugh rang fresh and clear on the night air, and she naturally clung to Capt. Hervey's arm, and said, "It is most childish to laugh at nothing, as you do."

"Only yesterday you told me it was childish to laugh at everything. You are inconsistent, Hervey, if you guide me at once in one way and then in another."

"If Mr. Keith wins Theodora and her fortune," remarked Hervey, presently, "with an idea of stopping retaliation, what will Lawrence, Honore, do?"

"Cause everybody knows, as you say, that Lawrence is to marry a rich wife if he marries at all."

"No answer, so he put the question direct."

"Do you think Haughton will marry a rich wife?"

"Hope he will."

"Why?" she answered, with a tightening of her lips, "he won't be at all happy if he does—men never are who marry for money, pretend you are. It is you who are laughing at nothing now, Hervey."

"Your notions of the world seem to be gleaned from novels. Why do you not wish he would marry a penniless wife, just to spite Jane?"

"Because—Jane would break the heart of the penniless wife."

"Honore!"

"Yes, I'm here."

"Why, you have tears in your voice! Are you so unhappy at the Larches?"

"I was not thinking of myself," returned Honore, hastily.

"Don't grieve for Phoebe," said Hervey, in a tone of relief, "she doesn't feel these things. It is far harder for you, Honore, to bear the love of the man you scorn, than it is to her to bear the scorn of the man she loves—poor girl!"

"Hervey! how dare you speak so!" cried Honore, passionately. "You know nothing about it—about Phoebe's love about me. I will not allow you to talk so to me of my cousin, or of myself. Do not ever again pretend you can teach me how to be a gentleman, for you do not yourself know how to be a gentleman. Go back! I'm quite safe; I would rather not have you."

"My dear Honore," he began, in his most plausible tones, "you should try not to be so hasty. Why should I not mention what, to use your own words, everybody knows? Phoebe makes no secret of her infatuation for Lawrence, and Lawrence makes no secret of his indifference to her, so why should I? You make no secret of your indifference to Lawrence, and he certainly makes no secret of his infatuation for you, so why should I?"

"It is most ungenerous!" said Honore, hotly, and then she maintained perfect silence for the rest of their walk.

The Larches was a sombre, red brick house, standing a little way from the road, and separated from it by half a dozen yards of brick wall between two white gates at either end of the curbed drive which passed the front door. At this door Honore stood in the darkness, wondering rather anxiously how she would let her in. Hervey had left her at the gate; but, though she did not know it, he was lingering there, waiting to see her safely into the house. He had not long to wait; the door was opened promptly to her summons, and he saw her enter the lighted hall.

"It was Haughton himself who let her in," muttered Capt. Trent, as he walked away. She will be vexed if no one else has waited up for her; and certainly it cannot be by Phoebe's own choice that she has left Haughton to do it alone."

He hastened on now, "whistling as he went, for want of thought," and by this time Honore and Mr. Haughton had entered the warm and lighted drawing-room.

"Everyone gone to bed?" she exclaimed, a note of keen vexation in her tone. "Why did not Phoebe sit up for me? She promised she would, and I am as early as usual."

"I told Phoebe to go to bed," returned Mr. Haughton, gently taking off the soft white hat which Honore had worn under her dark cloak. "I chose to wait for you, and I did not need anyone to keep me company."

Honore glanced at him for one moment as he stood in the full light, and then she quietly pushed away the chair he had drawn up to the fire for her.

Honore's guardian was a man of 40, a little above the middle height, but so broadly built that he looked below it. His hair was thickly streaked with gray, and his mustache—gray, too—was heavy and coarse; his eyes were shrewd and caustic, and his eyes keen and restless; for any other expression which might be upon his face tonight, or at other times when he was alone with Honore, was not its customary one. He was a powerful man, both physically and mentally, a man who seemed to have his passions and his words completely under his control, and who, if he had not, might be, perhaps, a dangerous man to thwart or anger. His clients spoke of him as a safe, self-concentrated lawyer, as hard to understand as to defend, a clever fellow, whose soft, white fingers could unravel, in that constant silence of his, the most intricate knot in law. But there was one inmate in his house who knew him in two characters, and who put no trust in either.

"I have coffee ready for you, Honore," said Mr. Haughton, taking the coffee-pot from the table and carrying it to the table where stood one solitary cup. "I know it will refresh you after your walk."

"Thank you," said Honore; but her voice, for all its gentleness, was utterly indifferent, and Lawrence Haughton noticed this.

"Have you had a pleasant evening?" he asked, rather nervously pursuing his unwelcome and womanish task.

"A little better than usual," she said, quietly; "but I am very sleepy, Lawrence. May I go to bed?"

"Just wait until you have drunk this coffee, dear. I made it myself, on purpose for you, and I have kept it hot, and fancied you would enjoy it."

He had come up to her then, with the cup in his hand, and she could not turn away. She took it with a little laugh, for she knew that he was not.

"You look odd at that, Lawrence. Why did you attempt it?"

"Because it was for you, my dear. There is a subdued eagerness in his tone. 'There is no task I would not attempt for you, Honore.'"

"I hope there is," she answered, very gently; "and please let Phoebe keep her promise next time, and sit up for me, Lawrence."

"Anyone but me," he said, with a dark flush rising in his face; "yet my only pleasure in this world is the anticipation of these minutes, when I should have you here to talk to me, and look at me, as you rarely do when you have others to select or speak to."

There was silence between them then, while he tried to school his tones to easy indifference, such as he hoped she would wonder childishly whether her guardian's culinary achievement was known to his sister, whose one strong idea was that it was he who ought to be waited on by all the household.

"Who was at Deergrove tonight, Honore?"

Lawrence was standing against the mantel-piece, and the face of the girl beside him; and it seemed as if when she answered the question, his gaze grew more intent and even stern.

"No one," he said, and then he continued.

LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believed it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me any good."

At the Church of St. John the Evangelist yesterday morning, the rector, Rev. W. T. Hill, preached a strong sermon on Sabbath reverence, and incidentally made some pungent remarks on pulpitis sensationalism. He declared that some of the subjects of sermons advertised in the newspapers by ministers of the gospel bordered on blasphemy. He condemned theatrical pulpitis in the said text, and some clergymen had so little respect for the Bible that they pounded it with their fists, as if it were an anvil, and no hard thing to look at everyone so hard that they would never come back again. "Morgan Wood," said the speaker, "was an extreme man, and the papers scorn him severely, but there was some truth in the remarks. Let me say to the young men in the gallery, if you are your religion to become too cheap a thing, it will degenerate and you will lose interest. Church in Canada, I chose his text from James IV. 'Whereas ye know not what shall be in the morning, for what is your life? It is even as a vapor that appeareth for a little while and then fadeth away.' After referring at length to the uncertainty of life, its brevity, and the selfishness of mankind while life lasted, Mr. Johnston referred to a young man of one of the best families of Montreal, who had given himself and his small fortune to foreign missionary work. Funds were low, and although the young man had given up his inheritance, he had not given up his life. He had that a companion might go with him, it was insufficient, and the young man was told there was no money to send his friends. He then asked the young men of the congregation to subscribe $200 for the next four years to the young men in the Presbyterian Church in Canada bought bicycles at about $100 each, and yet the W.F.M.S. of the great Presbyterians in Canada were unable to provide a small amount to support a missionary."

Funds were low, and although the young man had given up his inheritance, he had not given up his life. He had that a companion might go with him, it was insufficient, and the young man was told there was no money to send his friends. He then asked the young men of the congregation to subscribe $200 for the next four years to the young men in the Presbyterian Church in Canada bought bicycles at about $100 each, and yet the W.F.M.S. of the great Presbyterians in Canada were unable to provide a small amount to support a missionary."

At the annual meeting of the King Street Methodist Church, which was held at the home of Mr. Johnston, the rector, Rev. W. T. Hill, preached a strong sermon on Sabbath reverence, and incidentally made some pungent remarks on pulpitis sensationalism. He declared that some of the subjects of sermons advertised in the newspapers by ministers of the gospel bordered on blasphemy. He condemned theatrical pulpitis in the said text, and some clergymen had so little respect for the Bible that they pounded it with their fists, as if it were an anvil, and no hard thing to look at everyone so hard that they would never come back again. "Morgan Wood," said the speaker, "was an extreme man, and the papers scorn him severely, but there was some truth in the remarks. Let me say to the young men in the gallery, if you are your religion to become too cheap a thing, it will degenerate and you will lose interest. Church in Canada, I chose his text from James IV. 'Whereas ye know not what shall be in the morning, for what is your life? It is even as a vapor that appeareth for a little while and then fadeth away.' After referring at length to the uncertainty of life, its brevity, and the selfishness of mankind while life lasted, Mr. Johnston referred to a young man of one of the best families of Montreal, who had given himself and his small fortune to foreign missionary work.
