Our one Life.
'Tis not for man to trifle. Life is brief,
And sin is here;—
Our age is but the falling of a leaf—
A dropping tear.
We have not time to sport away the hours.
All must be earnest in a world like ours.
Not many lives, but only one have we—
One, only one.
How sacred should that one life ever be—
That narrow span!
Day after day filled up with blessed toil,
Hour after hour still bringing in new spoil.
Our being is no shadow of thin air,
No vacant dream;
No fable of the things that never were,
But only seem.
'Tis full of meaning as of mystery,
Though strange and solemn may that meaning be.
Our sorrows are no phantoms of the night,
No idle tale;
No cloud that floats along a sky of light,
On summer gales;
They are the true realities of earth,
Friends and companions even from our birth.
Oh, life below! how brief, and poor and sad!
One heavy sigh.
Oh, life above! how long, how fair, and glad!
An endless joy.
Oh! to be done with daily dying here!
Oh! to begin the living in yon sphere.
Oh, day of time, how dark! Oh, sky and earth,
How dull your hue!
Oh, day of Christ, how bright! Oh, sky and earth,
Made fair and new!
Come, better Eden, with thy fresher green!
Come, brighter Salem, gladden all the scene.

Home Life of Sir T. F. Buxton.

We turn now with pleasure from the agitations of public life, from scenes of conflict and struggle, to contemplate the subject of this memoir in the peaceful retirement of home.
A pleasant picture illustrative of this, is here given by his biographer.
"Once at rest in the retirement of Cromer Hall, Mr. Buxton began to lose the grave and earnest expression which usually marked his countenance while under the heavy pressure of business in town; not that the autumn was spent wholly in recreation—on the contrary, his studies, chiefly bearing upon public objects, were assiduously pursued. He generally passed the latter part of the evenings alone in his study, frequently remaining there to a very late hour.
"Cromer Hall was often filled with an easy, social party, but he had no wish to extend his circle much beyond his own relatives, and the families in the immediate neighborhood. He had no taste for society of a more formal, and, as he thought, insipid character; nor did he find much pleasure in conversation, though at table he would usually entertain the party by his playfulness of manner, and by his store of anecdotes, which he could tell with much force and spirit. He took great pains in providing amusements for the younger members of the circle. There is much picturesque scenery around Cromer, and large parties were often collected for excursions.
"At home, also, he was energetic in setting on foot amusements for his young friends, such as acting, charades, Christmas games, or amusing readings. At one time, a family newspaper was started, which appeared once a week; and great was the interest excited in reading the various contributions, grave and gay, which every one sent in. Sometimes he would give a list of poets, from whose works the juvenile part of the circle were to learn by heart, and examinations were held, with valuable books for prizes.
"Of Mr. Buxton's power over the minds of those about him, drawing them out and inciting them to action we have the following testimony of one who was a frequent guest in the family circle:
"I wish I could describe the impression made upon me by the extraordinary power of interesting and stimulating others, possessed by Sir Fowell Buxton some thirty years ago. In my own case, it was like having power of thinking, powers of feeling, and, above all, the love of true poetry, suddenly aroused within me, which, though I may have possessed them before, were till then unused. From 'Locking' good, 'Understanding,' to 'William of Wyndham' good at last, he woke up in me the sleeping principle of taste, and in giving me such objects of pursuit, has added immeasurably to the happiness of my life."
"For the benefit of the young with whom he associated, Mr. Buxton wrote a collection of favorite maxims. A few of these, copied from a rough manuscript, give an idea of his character.
"Mankind in general mistake difficulties for impossibilities. That is the difference between those who effect and those who do not.
"Burke—'The more one has to do, the more one is capable of doing.'
"Plato—'Better eat in acts than principles.'
"Idleness the greatest profligacy.
"The endowments of nature we cannot command, but we can cultivate those given.
"My experience is, that men of great talents are apt to do nothing, for want of vigor.
"Is there one whom difficulties dishearten—who bends to the storm?—he will do little. Is there one who will conquer?—that kind of man never fails.
"Let it be your first study to teach the world that you are not wood and straw—some iron in you."
"But it is not hard to imagine that the very presence of the master of Cromer Hall was diffusive of happiness, so thorough was his own enjoyment at these periods of relaxation. He well improved his retirement from public duties, in exercises which gave vigor to the frame and elasticity to the mind.
"No Arab," says his biographer, "ever took greater delight in horses than Mr. Buxton; and several of his favorites, especially John Bull, Abraham and Jerome, were renowned for their strength and beauty."

Religious Intelligence.

Encouragement for the Diffusion of the Bible.

On the establishment of a National Bible Society in Holland, the British and Foreign Bible Society promised the sum of five hundred pounds, besides a grant of Bibles and Testaments. When this liberal offer was made, in the presence of three of the wealthiest citizens of Amsterdam, one of them stood forth, another one exclaimed with astonishment, and the third exclaimed, "The English are a pattern to all nations." In 1819, in the town of Hoorn in Holland, scarcely a single servant could be found without the Scriptures, and the large hall of the Alma House, formerly filled with disgraced mobs, now resounded with hymns of praise. School masters in Zepp, were ordered not to let a day pass without reading a chapter to the children, "for the Bible places every one in the sphere where he ought to be, it is itself the best rule, the most faithful counselor, and the safest refuge."

Experience of London Missionaries.

At a recent Wesleyan Home Missionary meeting, held in London, a missionary engaged in laboring among the teeming myriads of the Spitzbergen population, delivered an address so full of most interesting and valuable facts as to the spiritual destitution of that part of the metropolis, that we cannot refrain from quoting a portion of it. He said, "that he was not present as a counsel to plead, but simply as a witness to give evidence. He had not to preach to the sable sons of Africa, but to men and women with bodies black with guilt, and hearts black with guilt; not to do with the castles of India, but with the outcasts of London; not to grapple with heathen mythology, but with men who worshipped no God, who never heard the name of Jehovah, and who never uttered his name save with blasphemies; not to decipher the thousand characters of the Chinese language, but to preach to London thieves who spoke a language peculiar to themselves." In narrating some of his adventures in the dark regions of London, Mr. Ewer said, "that there were hundreds of mothers who did not know how to wash their babies, dress their babies, cook their food, or mend their clothes. He had frequently met with women who had been glad to get rid of their children by death. And to show the miserable wages paid to women by the metropolitan stop-shops, he said: 'Numbers of them are employed in making match-boxes at 2½ pence per gross, superfine trowsers at 10 pence a pair, boots are bound for 1½ pence per pair.' He has often held, not 'midnight,' but 'mid-day meetings' for unfortunates, when 'the temples throbbed, the heart ached, and consciences were smitten.' And 'twelve of them had been rescued from the streets, and were now in his charge. He had been surrounded by a mob of thirty thieves, with two or three bull-dogs, but he had never been insulted. 'There was a door to every man's heart, and these poor wretches felt as others felt, and love as others love, when kindly treated.'"

The Naval Expedition.

Late New York papers contain details of the bombardment and fight at Fort Royal. We insert some interesting extracts below.

THE FIGHT.

The day itself was more beautiful, if anything, than the finest which we have been favored since our arrival in Port Royal. Early in the morning the rebel gunboats took up the position which they had occupied on other days at the entrance of the bay, while as many as seven larger river steamers coming from behind the headlands, passed backward and forward in the offing, occasionally approaching the fortifications on either side, and communicating by means of a row boat with those on shore. Some of these vessels had brought reinforcements from Charleston, but the larger number were crowded with excursionists from all the country, who had come to witness the utter humiliation of the "Yankees," and the destruction of their fleet. At 9 o'clock the fleet was signalled from the Wabash to raise anchor, and in rather more than half an hour afterwards all the vessels were in motion. They moved slowly toward the land, intently feeling the way with the sounding line, arranged in two columns, of which the first was led by the flag-ship and the second by the Bienville. The first column comprised the Wabash, Squamham, Mohican, Semole, Pawnee, Unadilla, Ottawa, Pontchar, and Vandalia. In the second column were the gunboats Paganin, Augusta, Curlew, Seneca, and H. H. Forbes, followed in the track of the Bienville. Sufficient force was given each vessel, in order that the first of one column might not interfere with the operation of the other. It was well understood that the Commodore intended to fight at close quarters, and the fact intensified the interest every body felt in the approaching conflict. As the fleet moved majestically toward the fort, the few minutes consumed in getting within range of the batteries seemed dreadful long to the spectators, who watched in deep suspense the commencement of the fight. At length, precisely at five minutes before 10 o'clock, the Bay Point Battery opened its fire upon the Wabash, and that at Hilton Head followed within a second. The ships were then nearly midway between the hostile guns, and scarcely within range. For a minute they made no reply; but presently the Wabash began. Then grandly she poured forth her massive sides a terrible rain of metal, which fell with frightful rapidity upon either shore. The other vessels were not slow in following her example, and the battle was fairly begun. From my point of observation, on board the Atlantic, which was taken as close to the combatants as was consistent with safety, in order that Gen. Sherman might witness the proceedings, it was apparent that only a few of the shells, which at first were the only projectiles used, burst within the fortifications. The guns had too great an elevation, and their iron messengers were crashing among the tree tops a mile or two beyond the batteries. The same was the case with the rebels, whose shells passed between the forts and shore, and did not follow the example, and the battle was fairly begun. ## Revival Meetings in Braemar.

Lord Radstock gave an address in the Free Church of Braemar on the evening of Sabbath last. Mr. Hamilton Magill, of the U. P. Church of Glasgow, and several Free Church ministers, took part in the proceedings. Clergymen and laymen of various denominations have of late delivered addresses in the same place, among others, Rev. E. A. Auld of St. Dunstan's, London; Rev. Henry Venn of the Church Missionary Society; Rev. George Lee, Curist's Church, Birmingham; and Major Straith of Cheltenham of the Church of England; Rev. R. McDonald, North Leith; Rev. H. N. Williamson, Huntly; Rev. J. O. Dykes, East Kilbride; Rev. John Milne, Perth; Colonel Davidson, Edinburgh; and Professor Dickie, Aberdeen, of the Free Church; Rev. Dr. Patterson, Kirkwall, of the U. P. Church, and Col. Ramsay of the Establishment. The work of revival seems to be still going on throughout the district.

God not in the House.

A Scottish laborer went to work for a wealthy farmer. It was regarded as something of a favor to be employed by him, as he was a prompt and liberal paymaster, and had everything about his farm in order. The Scotchman remained with him only a few days. "You have left Mr. Runyan," said a neighbor.
"Yes," was the reply.
"Was the work too hard?"
"No."
"Wages too low?"
"No."
"Why did you leave, then?"
"God was not in the house," and he went on his way, leaving his questioner to ponder on the strange answer.
"Family worship was not known under Mr. Runyan's roof, not was there a single praying member in his family. The laborer did not like to live under such a roof. He did not like to be even for a season, a member of such a family.
"Of how many houses in our happy land can it be said in truth, God is not in the house? The house may be spacious, elegant, furnished with every comfort and convenience, but God is not in it. There are none in that house to thank Him for the blessings bestowed upon them. There are none there to serve and honor Him."

A Doubting Heart.

Where are the swallows fled?
Frozen and dead,
Perchance, upon some bleak and stormy shore,
O doubting heart!
Far over purple seas,
They wait, in sunny ease,
The balmy southern breeze,
To bring them to their northern home once more.
Why must the flowers die?
Prisoners they lie
In the cold tomb, heedless of tears or rain,
O doubting heart!
They only sleep below,
The soft white ermine snow,
While winter winds shall blow,
To breathe and smile upon you soon again.
The sun has hid its rays
These many days:
Will dreary hours never leave the earth?
O doubting heart!
The stormy clouds on high
Veil the same sunny sky
That soon (for spring is nigh)
Shall wash the summer into golden mirth.
Fair hope is dead, and light
Is quenched in night,
What sound can break the silence of despair?
O doubting heart!
The sky is overcast,
Yet stars shall rise at last,
Brighter for darkness past,
And angels' silver voices stir the air.

A Word to others.

Consider thy religious duty to take outdoor exercise, without fail, each day. Sweeping and trotting around the house will not take its place; the exhilaration of the open air and change of scene are absolutely necessary. I know all about "Lucy's gown that is not finally set," and "Tommy's jacket," and even his coat, his buttonless coat thrown into your lap, as if to Provincial Wesleyan Almanac for 1862.

We call the attention of our readers and the ministers on the different circuits, to the advertisement found in our columns, announcing the publication of the Almanac for 1862.

It was used by Her Majesty's Pilots, on the coast of the Province of Nova Scotia, and was highly commended by the Admiralty.

THE PROVISIONAL WESLEYAN ALMANAC FOR 1862 comes out in good time, filled, as usual, with important matter for everybody.

It contains the usual regulations, Religious and Statistical information, and many other matters of interest to Merchants, Farmers, and the public generally.

Board of Aldermen of New York, tendered hospitality of the City to Com. Wilkes, inviting him to receive congratulations of citizens in the Mayor's room, City Hall.

A National Salute will be fired in New York on Wednesday in honor of the capture of Port Royal.

The report that the President intends to call for 200,000 volunteers is unfounded.

Before the meeting of Congress the 500,000 rifles authorized will have been raised.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20, 1861.—Despatches received here from Washington state that Lord Lyons, the British Minister, has assumed a menacing tone and demanding that Slidell and Mason be given up, and reparation be made for indignity offered to British Consul.

It is also said that the other foreign ministers agree with Lord Lyons.

It is understood that the United States Government fully approve of Commander Wilkes' conduct in making the arrest of Slidell and Mason, and in sending them to Fort Mifflin.

Our Children's Corner.

The Dew-drop. A thoughtful child, with pallid brow And wisdom fitting ripen years...

Alas, the brightest, fairest gems Along the garden's glistening path...

Now look, my son, the father cried, The morning dew is gleaming yet...

No more the careless land of man To earth may dash their glory down...

The last, my son, the gems of love That first from mortal life are given...

Thus spake the sire; but of the child Prophecy words to him were given...

The Little Disciple. We hope all the little boys and girls who read the Advocate and Journal...

A few days before his death his sister Rebecca said to him, "Why, Henry, you look so well; you'll soon be well."

On the morning of one of the last days of his life, while his mother was resting her head on his pillow...

His father entered the room, and he smiled on him and said, "Dear pa, I'm so happy; I can smile for you, I'm so happy..."

By this time his two eldest sisters entered, and as they came forward he addressed each by name...

During this scene the house was filled with Jews and Christians. He greeted all as they entered with a smile, and calling them by name...

This child had no Christian instruction but that he gleaned at the doors of the Baptist and Methodist churches on Sabbath morning...

Turning to his mother, he said with earnestness: "Ma, tell this to all my dear friends, and tell it to the whole world, mamma, for I'm so happy; I see the beautiful place I'm going to, and I see Benny; how surprised he'll be to see me so soon; but I don't finish."

Another breath, a quiver of the lip, and the bright spirit had winged its way to the realms of glory, to dwell with Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not."

Health and its Pleasures. Or Disease with its Agonies, CHOOSE BETTER THEM. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. Nervous Disorders.

What is more fearful than a breaking down of the nervous system? To be excited and nervous in a small degree is most distressing, for when a remedy is found, there is one—drink but little wine, eat little meat, and take no coffee, weak tea being preferable; get all the fresh air you can; take three or four Pills every night, until you feel better, and the use of sleep; and if these golden rules are followed, you will be happy in mind and strong in body, and forget you have any nerves.

Mothers and Daughters. If there is one more than another for which these Pills are so famous it is their purifying properties, especially their power of cleansing the blood from all impurities, and removing the cause of the most dangerous secretions.

Sick Headaches and Want of Appetite. These feelings which so often, and so frequently arise from annoyance or trouble, from obstructed preparation of food, from indigestion, or from any cause, this disordering the liver and stomach.

Disorders of the Kidneys. In all diseases affecting these organs, whether they secrete too much or too little water, or whether they secrete it with stone or gravel, or with acids and pains settled in the loins or the regions of the kidneys, these Pills should be taken according to the directions, and the treatment should be well rubbed into the anal of the back at bed time.

The Stomachs out of order. No medicine will so effectively improve the tone of the stomach as these Pills; they remove all acidity, occasioned either by intemperance or improper diet; they reach the liver and reduce it to its natural state; they are wonderfully efficacious in cases of spasms—in fact they never fail in curing all disorders of the liver and stomach.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases: Ague, Dropsy, Liver Com., Bilious Com., Female Irreg., Bilious on the face, Rheumatism, Retention of Urine, Dropsy, King's Evil, Consumption, Inflammation, Secondary Syphilis, Jaundice, Uterine Disorders, General Affections, Worms of all kinds, Weakness from whatever cause, &c. &c.

CAUTION!—Now are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernible as a watermark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot of the box; the same way is plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicines or sending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

Sold at the Manufactory of Professor Holloway, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and by all respectable Chemists and Dealers in Medicines throughout the civilized world, in boxes at about 25 cents, 62 cents and $1 each.

Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box.

HUNNEWELL'S GREAT REMEDIES. This combination of Remedies, now perfected in every department, and price within reach of all, calls for special attention.

The Rheumatic Remedy, without the slightest restraint upon its use, and containing no ingredients to debilitate the most delicate constitution, becomes the perfect remedy to all Throat and Lung Complaints, from that terror in childhood, Whooping Cough, to old age with its infirmities. For Hoarseness, and Complaints so common to Public Speakers and Singers, it is without an equal.

The Tonic Anodyne, a certain Remedy for Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Tooth-Ache, Ear-Ache, Bone Complaints, St. Vitus Dance, Bleeding at the Lungs to that chief of all causes of Insanity and Depression of Mind.

For common Head-Ache, and Nervous Sick Head-Ache, it is a certain cure, and calls for most special attention.

The Robotic Pills, designed as the Great Mercantile substitute, and assistant to the Tonic Anodyne and Cathartic Remedy, when cases to which they are adapted are aggravated by Indigestion, Biliousness, &c. To produce all the requirements of a gentle and thorough Family Pill, but seldom more than one is required to do a dose.
