BRITISH PERIODICALS,
-VIZ-:
The London Quarterly Review, (Conservative).
The Edinburgh Review, (Whig).
The Westminster Review, (Radical).
The North British Review, (Free Church).
AND Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, (Tory).
The American Publishers continue to reprint the above-named periodicals, but as the cost of printing has increased, the price of paper nearly trebled, and taxes, duties, licenses, &c. have increased, they are compelled to advance their terms as follows:-

TERMS FOR 1865:
For any one of the Reviews, per annum, $4.00
For any two of the Reviews, do. do. 7.00
For any three of the Reviews, do. do. 10.00
For all four of the Reviews, do. do. 12.00
For Blackwood's Magazine, do. do. 10.00
For Blackwood and one Review, do. do. 7.00
For Blackwood and two of the Reviews, do. do. 12.00
For Blackwood and three of the Reviews, do. do. 15.00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews, do. do. 16.00

Subscribers in the British Provinces will remit, in addition to these prices, TWENTY CENTS a year for Blackwood, and assure CENTS a year for each Review, to cover the United States Postage.
The works will be printed on a greatly improved quality of paper, and while nearly all American Periodicals are either advanced in price or reduced in size—and very generally both—we shall continue to give faithful copies of ALL the matter contained in the original editions. Hence, our present price will be found as cheap, for the amount of matter furnished, as those of any of the competing periodicals in this country.

THE FOUR REVIEWS FOR 1865.
A few copies of the above remain on hand, and will be sold at $5 for the whole lot, or $3 for any one.
We also publish the FARMER'S GUIDE,
By Henry STEPHENS, of Edinburgh, and the late J. P.
MORRELL, of Yale College. 5 vols. Royal Octavo, 1860 pages, and numerous Engravings.
Price $1 for the two volumes—by mail, post-paid, $1.

Poetry.
HARVEY HOME.

I looked o'er the waving fields
On golden, bearded grain,
That danced on gentle uplands,
Bibbled o'er many a plain,
And my heart was glad and thankful,
Earth's promise seemed so fair;
"Oh, give our voices fruition"
Hope found a hope in prayer.

CHAPTER VI.
When Costalga left his companions in that wild gully
of the woods he began his journey with all that caution and circumspection for which his race has long been widely celebrated. His ear drank in every sound, he breathed the woods with the lightness of a fawn, his feet searcely stirred the leaves and twigs which covered the ground, and his arms were so held as to avoid all chance of contact with the trees.

There was something singularly solemn in the aspect of the forest through which the red-skin glided noiselessly stealthily, as a snake does through the tall prairie grass or the thick under-bush. For some time his path led through the thicket that skirted the side of the stream.
This, however, he crossed at the first convenient opportunity, and plunged deep into the forest itself. It now became truly a matter of wonder how he guided himself, how he found his way. All was darkness, gloom, and night. There was not a sound to tell that nature was not dead. Not an owl hooted, not a wild beast leaped to roars; and it's gentle sighing of trees in the lights air that prevailed, was all that told that nature lived and ruled creation.

But Costalga moved along with the unerring instinct
of a woodsman, and the progress of whose woodcraft
was well known to the most experienced of hunters.
When one has become in some degree accustomed to penetrate in a "direct line" through a wood where there seems no guide, the pebbles in the path, the color of the bark, the twinkling of a star, the point of a rock, are indications to the hunter as sure as a signpost or road. He was dark, gloom, and night. There was not a sound to tell that nature was not dead. Not an owl hooted, not a wild beast leaped to roars; and it's gentle sighing of trees in the lights air that prevailed, was all that told that nature lived and ruled creation.

Costalga had rested himself for about five minutes, and had in that time gained height and reflected on the course now to be adopted. All was darkness, gloom, and night. There was not a sound to tell that nature was not dead. Not an owl hooted, not a wild beast leaped to roars; and it's gentle sighing of trees in the lights
air that prevailed, was all that told that nature lived or a Claude. And the merry group of girls, and the sedate and sad women, were, with the children, the dogs,

and the other little attendants of the scene, singularly picturesque.
Costalga stood in the deep shadow of the trees, about congregated. It was evident, from the steady gleam of his eyes, that he had been watching them for some time. He had seen them all, and he had seen them all in the same position. He had seen them all in the same

CONFEDERATION FROM THE ANNEXATION POINT OF VIEW

CONFEDERATION FROM THE ANNEXATION POINT OF VIEW. THE NEW ERA, AN AMERICAN PUBLICATION...

One of the immediate results of returning peace should be the revision of our relations with foreign governments, especially by those that by their policy during our recent struggle for national existence evinced a desire to aid in the overthrow of the republic...

PROJECTED PLOTS OF THE REBELS IN CANADA. During the struggle against rebellion we had our closest neighbor a Power that was at heart desirous of the destruction of our government...

SYMPATHY WITH THE REBELLION—THE EFFECT OF THE MASSACRE OF CANADIAN PEOPLE. The masses of the Canadian people in sympathy with the South, unwittingly followed the lead given them by their British rulers...

It is a well established fact that neither the government of England nor France anticipated the downfall of the Southern rebellion. They looked to a different termination of the war, and their policy was shaped to meet what they regarded as an inevitable result...

Our business is with England and her avowed policy of building up a new nation in Canada. That province is now in a transition state. She cannot remain longer in her present condition...

THE ISSUE FORCED UPON OUR GOVERNMENT. It must become an immediate and serious question with the American Government whether she will sit idly by and suffer England, for avowedly hostile purposes, to erect on the American continent a series of impregnable fortifications...

THE POLLY OF A DIVIDED CONTINENT. It is the custom of many of our people, in discussing this question of annexation in a cursory manner, to express the opinion that the republic is already too large, and that we do not want Canada...

THE FREEDOM AND POLICY OF IMMEDIATE ANNEXATION. It is difficult to conceive how an American can question not alone the prudence and policy, but the humanity of at once consolidating the European races upon the American continent under one form of government...

Certainly no citizen of New York, who is more immediately affected than any other State by England's policy, can remain indifferent on the subject. Her position along Lake Ontario renders her open to attack along her whole northern border...

ANNEXATION DEMANDS BY CONSIDERATIONS OF HUMANITY. If annexation is demanded on the ground of prudence and policy, it is even more imperative from considerations of humanity. This country, the natural ally of the oppressed and suffering of

The Old World, was not designed by Providence to be like Europe, the battle-field of rival races. Canada, like the British Empire, is an arena of office for the defence of the American republic...

THE CANADIANS DESIRE ANNEXATION. In examining the question of the expediency of annexing Canada to the United States, it is proper to consider the interest and the sentiment of the people of that country as well as our own...

PROGRESS OF THE ANNEXATION SENTIMENT—THE MOVEMENTS OF 1837 AND 1849. The question of annexation to the United States is not new to the Canadian mind. From the infancy of the republic there have been those on the other side of the lakes who have foreseen that the true interests of the province must lead them to a political connection with the neighboring States...

THE HISTORY OF THE MOVEMENT OF 1837 is well known. It partook of the character of an armed rebellion against the existing government. It was induced by a feeling of discontent with the British rule, and the standard of revolt was raised by leaders who had in vain appealed to the government for reform...
