price, her eyes all aglow with happiness, her face radiant with the joy of life. She and Maida were standing in the gorgeous hall at Marston Towers waiting for the carriage to take them for their afternoon drive; and Maida, who was looking through the great door-way at the sunlit lawns and flower-beds, smiled at the girlish rhapsody.

"You are so happy, dear!" she said in her low voice.

"Happy!" echoed Carrie, as if words were too poor to convey the sense of her felicity. "I should think so! Aren't you? Think of it! Only three weeks ago and we were poor nobodies, and now we are rich and the owners of Marston Towers, of all this!" She waved her hands comprehensively. "It is like a story out of the 'Arabian Nights,' and I'm always in a funk lest it should prove as improbable; and you don't help me to realise it; no, Maida, you don't. There is a lack-of enthusiasm about you that is distinctly disappointing."

"I'm sorry, dear."

"You take it all so quietly, just as you did the night father came home and flung the bank-notes and diamonds about. Do you remember? It seems years, ages ago. If you'd only let yourself be carried away, if you'd only try to live up to it, as father and I do—I declare, it's only when I see father marching about in riding-breeches and gaiters, like the grand, old English gentlemen in the song, that my doubts and fears fly, and I realise that the thing is real, that we are fabulously rich, and that Marston Towers is ours. Here he comes with Mr. Spinner. Doesn't he look splendid?"

"Mr. Spinner?" said Maida, watching the two men as they crossed the lawn and approached the house.

"Mr. Spinner? No. The slightest imagination could not describe him as splendid. No—father. How happy he must be! Think of not having to go to that beastly city, not having to be shut up in a grimy, smoky office for so many hours a day! Think of having as much money to spend as you can possibly want; think of being the owner of all this! Maida, don't tell me that wealth is a sham and a snare. I declare to you that it makes me mad when I hear the parsons preach about riches and poverty. Why, half the crimes that are committed are caused by poverty. Poverty breeds meanness and all kinds of vice. It is very difficult to be good when you're poor, but precious easy when you're rich. For instance, when you're poor you're tempted to steal—of course you are! If I saw father and you wanting a loaf of bread, shouldn't I be tempted to sneak one—that's Ricky's word, and a very good one, too—for you? Why, certainly! But when you're rich you don't think of stealing. Why should you? And look how envious the poor are, and must be! And quite right, too. Didn't I envy the swell ladies in the stalls and boxes in the theatre, envy their dresses and their diamonds?"

"Did you?" said Maida, dreamily.

"I did not. I always thought that though they were so well dressed and wore such splendid jewellery that they might have aching hearts."

"That's because you are an artist, a poet," broke in Carrie, with a mixture of impatience and admiration. "And if they have, isn't it better to have a Worth dress and plenty of diamonds over your aching heart? Well, father? well, Mr. Spinner? Been round the estate?" she broke off as the two men entered the hall.

CHAPTER X.

Mr. Spinner's remark that the photograph lacked the colouring of the real place was literally true. To be as candid as that gentleman himself, there was, perhaps, a little too much colouring; the bricks were too red, the stone facings too white. The same note ran through the gorgeous interior; for the hangings, the furniture, the very pictures and armour were new and dazzling. To Mr. Carrington the magnificence of style and material were satisfactory enough; but Maida was conscious of a mental recoil from the brilliant tout ensemble, and even Carrie was a little overwhelmed.

They went over the huge house, with its immense and luxuriously furnished rooms, and afterwards dined in a dining-room which would have served for a stage banquetting-hall.

The Carringtons were too excited to enjoy the meal, and it was Maida who, when it was over, suggested that they should stroll in the grounds. She and Carrie wandered side by side along the smooth, well-kept paths, while Mr. Carrington walked with Mr. Spinner, who, waving his cigar, expatiated on the beauties and advantages of the property. The two girls presently reached one of the new and spick-and-span lodges, and involuntarily passed out of the gates and down the public road.

Suddenly, at a turn of the road, they came upon a sight which brought them to a standstill and an exclamation of admiration and delight to Carrie's red lips.

"Maida, isn't that beautiful? Oh, what is it?"

"That" was the top of the gable and a bit of the facade of an ancient house whose grey stone rose whitely above some noble trees and against the red of the slowly dying sunset. Maida looked at it with all the artist's joy in the Thing Beautiful.

"That's one of the houses of the local nobility, I expect," said Carrie, almost with bated breath—for the place was impressive in its grandeur and silence. "Let us wait and ask Mr. Spinner. See, Maida, here is the lodge. How old it looks! You can just see the windows through the ivy."

"That," said Mr. Spinner, "is Heroncourt."

"Heroncourt!" repeated Carrie. "It is just the name for it."

Mr. Carrington nodded as he gazed at what could be seen of the house,

"That's not for sale, I suppose?" he asked.

Mr. Spinner smiled.

"No, my dear sir, it is not; for a very good reason. It is entailed. It is the family seat of the Earl of Heroncourt. I am sorry it is not for sale—so's his lordship, I expect."

"Heroncourt? That is the name of the man Ricky told us about," said Carrie.

"No doubt," said Mr. Spinner. "No, Mr. Carrington, you can not buy Heroncourt; but you will have its master for a neighbor—if you purchase Marston Towers."

The two men made their bargain in the smoking-carriage in the train, and Mr. Spinner's smile as he parted from them at Paddington seemed to light up that classic station.

An hour or two later Baxter apologetically informed his master that Mr. Spinner wished to see him. Heroncourt had just returned from a visit to Glassbury House, and the burden of the countess's talk was ringing heavily in his ears. It had been, "You must marry for money, Byrne."

He looked up from the chair into which he had thrown himself and frowned.

"Oh, well," he said, resignedly, and Mr. Spinner was shown in.

He was smiling, it is true, but the smile was beautifully toned down by respect; and he did not appear disposed to indulge in the pantomime with which he had treated the Carringtons. Indeed, the Mr. Spinner of Bloomsbury and Marston Towers was a very different Mr. Spinner to him who stood quietly and respectfully waiting for his lordship's greeting.

"How do you do, Mr. Spinner? Sit down. Will you have a cigarette?"

Mr. Spinner declined, with proper gratitude.

"I am sorry to trouble you at this hour, Lord Heroncourt," he said, quite simply and free from affectation, "but I am glad to say I have completed the arrangements I have spoken of, and that the loan is ready whenever you desire to take it up."

Heroncourt looked gravely surprised.

"That is very good news, Mr. Spinner."

ner," he said. "I'm rather astonished. You say that you have obtained this further advance. Good heavens! do you know the risk you run—that there is absolutely no security?"

Mr. Spinner smiled, but reservedly. "The security I shall ask will satisfy me, Lord Heroncourt. I just want your acknowledgment of the debt and your promise to pay it."

Heroncourt rose and leant against the mantel-shelf.

"When?" he said, with a grim smile. "My dear sir, if you put a plate at all I should recommend the idea of March, which is equivalent to 'never.'"

"I am afraid that would be a little too remote," said Mr. Spinner. "No, my lord; here is the draft of the little agreement. It is quite simple, but no doubt you will like to look it over at your leisure. You will see that I have made the loan repayable one month after your marriage."

The smile died from Heroncourt's face and he looked darkly at the bland countenance before him.

"You'd better keep your money, Mr. Spinner," he said. "I shall never—I may very probably never—marry."

Mr. Spinner was about to wave his hand, but checked himself.

"That is my risk, of course, Lord Heroncourt. I am quite willing to take it; and that being so, I do not see—if you will excuse me—why you should hesitate; especially as you will find that I have set down a rather large interest—I am candour itself."

He checked himself again, with a little cough.

Heroncourt read the agreement. As Mr. Spinner had said, it was very easy; a school-boy could have understood it.

"See here," he said; then he stopped and shrugged his shoulders. "Very well," he said. "But, mind, I warned you!"

CHAPTER XI.

"Is it only three weeks ago, or is it three years? Does 28 Coleridge Street really exist or have we only dreamt it or is this only a dream, and shall we find ourselves back in the old lodgings tumbling over Sarah's pall and trying to shut out the sound of the second floor's piano? I declare to you, Maida, that I often wake up in the night and look round in fear and trembling, lest I should find that we are back in that poky bedroom listening to the booming of the hundred and fifty London clocks, and when I see my big bedroom, with its wonderful furniture, I gasp and turn over and fall asleep again—wake with the same old doubt, the same old fear."

It was Carrie who spoke—Carrie, sitting in a tailor-made gown of the most perfect fit and extravagant

Deadlock Continues

Business of the Legislature at a Standstill—Firm Stand of Opposition.

For the fourth consecutive day, with the Estimates of the Civil Service under discussion, not a solitary bit of business has been done at the House of Assembly, the Opposition members occupying the floor during all yesterday afternoon's sitting and talking for fully three hours and a half.

The Colonial Secretary tabled the report of the Commission appointed two years ago to investigate the alleged public scandal going on in the Postal Telegraph Department.

Mr. Winsor continuing from the previous day dealt with the increased salaries of civil servants, disagreeing with the principles adopted by the Government. He criticized the disparity in the stipends of Postal officials and showed where some were overpaid and others underpaid. He advised the Government to take a leaf out of the Postmaster General's book with a view to getting a better system.

Mr. Jennings was the next speaker, calling attention to the distorted reports of his speech that appeared in the Daily News and Evening Herald yesterday. He considered the reports unfair and deliberate and tended to injure him. He wished the members opposite to understand, especially the member for Burin, that he was not tied to the apron strings of anybody inside or outside the House. Whenever he spoke and whatever he spoke on were entirely his own independent views and were not made by arrangement with his Leaders. He hoped the member for Burin, who edits the News, would correct the statement.

Mr. Stone followed, deploring the fact that there was no provision in the Estimates for a General Election. Every electoral district in the country, he said, wanted an election this coming fall.

Mr. Higgins—"Mine doesn't."

Mr. Stone replied by stating the Government members were bound hand and foot under the party whip; denounced the papers of St. John's for saying an election was undesirable, adding that these papers were all paid for by the Government at the expense of the taxpayers of the country. He then attacked the business people of Water Street, designated them "unscrupulous grafters" and as a finale paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Coaker to whom, he said, the entire credit was due for putting so much money into the pockets of the sealers.

Mr. Coaker then stood up and for two solid hours spoke on a variety of matters. He first thought that an apology was due Mr. Jennings from the Editor of the News. He thought it a shame that 70 cents per day difference had not been paid the Naval Reservists ere this and then went on to tell how the northern people were flocking to him and singing out for an election. Here he remarked "The Premier is laughing."

The Premier: "It would make a cat laugh."

Mr. Coaker asked the Premier if it was his intention to stigmatize the fishermen of the country, and if it was he would be making the biggest mistake of his life.

The Premier said he would find that out as he did four years ago. Some more cross-firing ensued and resulted in Mr. Coaker accepting the Premier's excuse that he was not laughing at him or his speech.

Mr. Coaker resumed his remarks by citing a number of cases where money had been given by the Government to outport people for their votes and contrasted this exposure with the announcement that he intended to stand for Harbor Grace at the next election; and while talking on graft said that the British Government had made thirteen million dollars on one four transaction this year. He referred to the non-fulfillment of the promise to build the 17 sanitariums by the Reid and spoke of the Duke of Connaught's visit here and the ceremony that took place in connection therewith. He next criticized the Daily Star for publishing an editorial and alarming the people by the statement that the country was on the threshold of a food famine, and the Evening Herald for frightening the people by writing a story about our Regiment being "wiped out" and wondered why the strict censorship was not applied to these papers as it was to his, when it was prevented from entering the mails because it contained an item about the sailing of a vessel. Incidentally he complimented the Editor of the Herald on his efforts in connection with the war work here, though he scored the Star for advising the people to put in an extra quality of foodstuffs. If such advice had been acted upon, he said, flour would today be $20.00 a barrel. The fisheries and the increases of salaries for civil servants and the poor mail service on the Labrador coast were also dealt with.

Mr. Piccott said that the Labrador mail service could not be better attended to under the circumstances.

It was then 6.45 p.m. and the House adjourned till this afternoon when the Estimates will again come up for discussion.

HOW TO RELAX FOR BEAUTY.

Lie flat on the floor with a folded blanket under you. Relax every muscle in the body and lie perfectly still for a few seconds. Raise first one leg and let it drop as though you had no power over it, and then do the same with the other.

Rest a moment, putting your muscles in a state of tension again. Then do the same exercise with the arms. Rest again with tension and then stand on your feet and hands and kick out backwards, first with one foot and then with the other. Do this about a dozen times. Then walk around the room on your hands and feet.

When you have completed the circuit of the room, stand erect, throw your shoulders back, and start the blood racing through the upper part of your body, by thrusting your arms first up, then sideways and then down, repeating this exercise with vigor and energy until the muscles are tired.

This exercise should leave your cheeks rosy with color and your eyes shining. If you find, however, that your lips do not look quite as fresh and soft and pink as you would like to have them, a dainty way of making them as sweet as a baby's is to bathe them in milk and rose leaves. This is a famous recipe which has been handed down for generations among the feminine members of the French nobility.

Fads and Fashions.

New coats are without wide collars and cuffs and many of them have no buttons.

White cotton fringe will make a pretty finish for the girdle of the bathing suit.

Pale gray handkerchiefs and linen dresses are really cool looking for a summer day.

Bridesmaids will carry novel bouquets in the shape of muffs made of fresh flowers.

Ribbons and bows accompany lace in making the new summer frock a frilly affair.

Sweaters can easily be mistaken for blouses this season, so graceful and pretty are they.

Gray in all tones is used over deep rose or cream color—the gray usually being chiffon.

The sleeve that is tight-fitting from the wrist to the puff that springs out at the top is really fashionable.

Panel skirts have the panels cut on the straight of the goods, then gathered inside the belt and allowed to hang loose over it.

Lack of Ships to Convey U.S. Army Overseas.

9,250,000 Men Have Registered—Number Greatly Under Estimate—Census Over-Optimistic.

Washington, June 12.—Shortage of ships for military transport service constitutes one of the biggest problems before America's war chiefs today. That the despatch of the bulk of the new army may have to be delayed by reason of this lack of transports is admitted by the men in charge.

There are sufficient ships to carry vast numbers of soldiers, but this is only a small part of the problem, inasmuch as these men must be constantly supplied with food, clothing, artillery and other equipment.

This in itself is a tremendous task. The army will require its own weight in food every thirty-nine days, while all artillery must be renewed about every thirty days. Other supplies must be kept going in a constant stream.

In addition to these needs there is a question of supplies to the Allies.

Government Perplexed.

With these two needs—commercial and military—the government is sorely perplexed about meeting the problem. Next year will see a new flotilla of cargo carriers, but the big needs will come in the next few months.

Lord Northcliffe, in America to co-ordinate the work of British Missions, is counted on to make some vital suggestions in the line of obtaining enough shipping for all needs.

As army plans now stand, they contemplate the despatch of units abroad more or less constantly and in comparatively small numbers.

Soldiers already partly trained will get the finishing touches in France. The fact of sending these skilled men ahead will necessarily delay somewhat the despatch of the new army, for the absence of a training force will delay the moulding of the recruits.

9,250,000 Registered. The total registration for selective service will be approximately 9,250,000, according to the revised figures given out to-day by the Provost-Marshal, Gen. Crowder. This number is more than 1,000,000 below the original census estimate.

Revision of the figures was made when the Provost-Marshal General's office realized that in using census figures officials did not take into account the fact that about 600,000 men of eligible age already have volunteered for service in the regular army—National Guard, Navy and Marine Corps.

Another factor in the revision was the belated realization that census bureau estimates—made previous to the war—did not take into account the fact that in the past three years immigration has practically stopped.

While officials realize that there are still probably many thousands of slackers, they point out to-day, following the revision of estimates, that the number will be far less than at first expected.

The War Department indulges in no figures or dates, inasmuch as such information is of value to the enemy, but in general it can be said that the idea of sending no troops across for a year has been modified, and that the Pershing expedition will be augmented by other forces before the expiration of a year.

By the end of a year the transport situation will be clarified it is felt, whether or not the submarine menace has been solved. Navy men, working on anti-submarine devices, however, believe they will get the "answer" to the submarine before long, and that this will simplify shipping problems entirely.

The Demand For Ships.

(From the N. Y. Times.)

Germany is beginning, unwillingly, to supply the ships we and our Allies need for ocean service. Two of those seized in our ports have been leased by the Government to France, two to Italy, and two to Russia. Many more will soon be ready for use, as the time required for repairs was over-estimated. Five sailing vessels, 12,500 tons in all, are already at work in the Pacific. The Shipping Board reports that the Ockenfels, a steel steamship of 5,000 tons, will be ready this week. On the 10th, five, nearly 30,000 tons, will be commissioned. Before the end of the month two, of 5,000 tons, will be added, and in July the number will be increased by ten, with a capacity of 59,000 tons.

All of these ships have new names. One of them is now called the Carl Schurz. Several have been brought to the Pacific Coast from Manila and Honolulu. Six of these will be used by the Pacific Mail Company, and they may help Russia by carrying across the ocean the great quantities of war supplies awaiting transportation from our west coast. These additions to our merchant marine, with others of the same kind that are to come when repairs are completed, may satisfy in part the emergency demand which has compelled large appropriations for new construction. Orders have been placed by the Government for nearly 100 ships, about two-thirds of them to be of wood, and lumber for many more of this kind will soon be bought. But completion of a new steel ship cannot be expected in less than five months, and it is said that the first of the wooden carriers will be ready in January. The President will be empowered by legislation to take for national service ships now under construction in American yards. On May 1 the number of these was 704, and 537 were steel, having a capacity of 2,039,000 tons. During the war our shipbuilding industry has shown remarkable growth. The capital stock for new companies or additions to old ones since the beginning of ruthless submarine piracy on Feb. 1 has been nearly $80,000,000. It may be necessary for the Government to draw from the great supply in the yards, where builders are working for European neutrals, our Allies, and American shipping companies. Probably a considerable number of these vessels can be obtained by friendly agreements with the owners. If we cannot afford to wait for the new ships whose keels are not yet laid, it is fortunate that what must be had can be found in our own shipyards.

Fashions and Fads.

The hemstitched handkerchief linen collars and cuffs are effective.

White chiffon combined with black chantilly lace fashions a pretty frock. If the costume is severely tailored it should wear very dainty collars and cuffs.

Colors that never were put together before are fraternizing cheerfully now. Good taste and smartness are usually shown in a combination of black and white.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

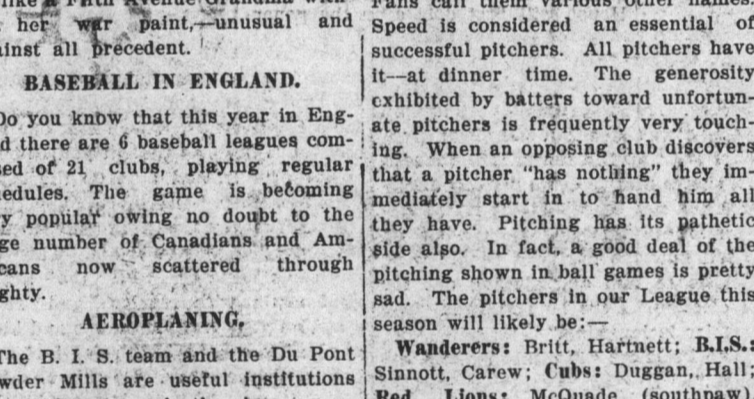

SLUGGING. Of course I would never knock baseball that's clever. The "squeeze" is a pretty smart play. The hit-and-run sally. I like 'em to swing the old mace. I want 'em to poke it. I want 'em to soak it. I want 'em to lean on that ball. The fence busting crashes. And "bunting" cops may a fray. A good pitcher's battle. I like clever stealing. Are nifty and nice in their place; But kid, hear my chatter, Wake up at the platter, I like the old ball in the base. I want 'em to poke it. I want 'em to soak it. I want 'em to lean on that ball. I like the long smashes. The fence busting crashes. The wallops that sail out o' sight.

THE PITCHER. There are two kinds of pitchers; those who do and those who don't. Also, roughly speaking (which is the way to speak to those pitchers) all hurlers may be divided into classes—those who pitch with their right fins and those who use their left paws. Occasionally, but only occasionally remember, we find a pitcher who employs both his arm and his head for pitching purposes. These fingers are generally called "Stars." When there is a great deal of pitching in a game there is correspondingly little batting. And vice versa. Pitchers are known as either Great, Good, Ordinary, Bad, and Awful. Left-handers (called southpaws) are believed to possess certain peculiarities as a class. Naturalists tell us that in their native state, all left-handers are wild. They can be tamed, however, and some left-handers have become so domesticated as ballyard pets that bleacher denizens love them dearly and apply affectionate pet names to them, such as Bonehead, Bum, Cheese, and Skull. Some pitchers are known as in-and-outers. This means that they go in without Hartnett this day week will be "Wickie" with Avenue Grandma without but war paint, unusual and against all precedent.

BASEBALL IN ENGLAND. Do you know that this year in England there are 6 baseball leagues composed of 21 clubs, playing regular schedules. The game is becoming large number of Canadians and Americans now scattered through Bighty. AEROPLANING. The B. I. S. team and the Du Pont Powder Mills are useful institutions until they go up in the air. THERE ARE OTHERS. Which reminds us that the difference between a submarine and the Cubs is that the former eventually comes up for air. HOW THEY'RE FARING. Tommy Winter is going to guard the initial sack for the Cubs. This will probably enable Mr. Collins to play St. John in his old position at short.

Why Not the Couriers?

The Government in granting the increases to Civil Servants have made a great error in overlooking the mail couriers, many of whom have spent the best years of their lives in the service. If under ordinary circumstances the courier is entitled to, and sometimes does, secure an increase in salary, how is it that he is not included in the proposed schedule of increases given in the new estimates? We state without fear of contradiction that no other employee of the Civil Service performs such hazardous and arduous duties as is the usual lot of the man who conveys His Majesty's mails. No matter how severe the climate or dangerous the route over which he must travel, there is only one thought uppermost in his mind and that is to deliver the precious mail at the proper place in the quickest possible time. Many instances can be shown where these brave fellows have laid down their lives at the call of duty. It is to be hoped that the Government will see their way clear, before the estimates are finalized, to include these deserving officials in the general increase.

Farms for soldiers.

A Work of Empire to be Undertaken By Canada. The Canadian Press is informed that a memorandum has been submitted by Hon. Robert Rogers and Bruce Walker to the Empire Land Settlement of former soldiers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. The proposals are as follows: The Canadian Minister of the Interior would reserve large areas of suitable lands in the Prairie Provinces for settlement by ex-service men, administration to be in the hands of a settlement board. It is proposed to grant approved ex-service men one hundred and sixty acres each of crown lands, the following persons being entitled to participate in the gift land: Honorably discharged soldiers; sailors who enlisted for active service in the naval forces of Canada in the present war; soldiers and sailors domiciled in Canada at the outbreak of war who afterwards were engaged in active service; soldiers and sailors not domiciled in Canada, but engaged in active service; widows whose husbands died on active service. In addition to the 160 acres, the settlement board would be empowered to grant a loan of $1,500 to each approved person to cover the cost of house, barn, implements, and stock. The land cultivation loan would constitute a first charge on the homestead, and would be advanced at a low rate of interest, repayment not to exceed fifteen years. All applicants shall have sufficient farming experience or training before they become eligible; inexperienced agricultural workers to be trained.

Fishery Prospects Discouraging.

The Board of Trade are in receipt of the following fishery reports: From J. Gosse, (Spaniard's Bay to Upper Island Cove)—Ten traps and 16 skiffs are fishing. Prospects are not encouraging as yet. A few traps the last few days have taken from 1/2 to 3 qts. each, but the hook and line are doing nothing. They expect to do better on the next tide. All the schooners have left here for Labrador. From J. F. Williams, (Bay Bulls South Head to Long Pt.)—The total catch is 240 qts. with 160 for last week. Twenty-five traps and 25 motor boats are fishing. Prospects are poor and nothing is being done with the jigger, as there is no bait. Only a few of the traps are getting some fish. From M. J. White, (Aguaforte to Caplin Bay)—The total catch, about 160 qts. has been taken by a few traps, 18 of which are operating. No dories or skiffs are out, as there is no bait to be had. From A. Keats, (Placentia to Long Hr.)—Bait is very scarce, there being no herring obtainable. A small quantity of caplin was hauled a few days ago on this good catches were secured, cod being fairly plentiful. Prospects are good and the fishermen think that when the caplin strikes in abundance they will do well. From T. Hogan, (Carbonear to Crocker's Cove)—Twenty-six traps and four punts are fishing. Prospects are not very good at present, though there is plenty of caplin and a good sign of codfish with jiggers in deep water. From W. White, (Trotty to Port Rexton)—The catch to date is 280 qts. and for last week 10. The fishery this week was practically a blank, most of the traps getting barely enough for local consumption. Prospects are poor and the caplin has not yet landed. Salmon is reported plentiful. Fifteen dories, skiffs and boats and 64 traps are fishing.

OPPRESSION OF POLES LEADS TO SERIOUS SITUATION.

ZURICH, June 19. The Polish Deputy Dazinski declared in the Vienna Reichsrath that more than 30,000 Poles have been hanged by order of the German authorities, according to the Vienna Arbeiter Zeitung, which prints special details of the sittings of the Reichsrath on the 14th and 15th. Deputy Striberny also described the abominable treatment accorded political suspects, whereupon the pan-Germanist Deputy Heine shouted: "They haven't used the rope enough; all of them ought to have been hanged." At these words all of the Slav and Polish members rushed upon Heine, and the President was obliged to suspend the sitting in the midst of a tremendous uproar.

SEIZE NEWSPAPER.

LONDON, June 19. A despatch from Petrograd says the anarchists have seized the editorial rooms and printing offices of the Republican newspaper Ruskia Voila.

GERMAN INGENUITY.

PARIS, June 19. An official note issued last night warns the families of prisoners of war in Germany against letters purporting to come from prisoners, which contain requests for food or certain information of a military character to be conveyed by means of underlining certain words which together form phrases. Sometimes it is suggested that answers can be written in saliva on the side of envelopes. The public is recommended to send these letters to the military authorities. It is said these proceedings are employed by the enemy to obtain information and food parcels for their own use.

HOPES OF MOSLEMS FOR SELF-GOVERNMENT.

LONDON, June 19. The Stockholm correspondent of the Chronicle reports the arrival of Abdurroschod Ibrahim, representative of the Socialist Conference from the Russian Moslems, who has issued a statement in which he says he has been authorized to inform the Conference concerning the Moslem peace interests. He said that 25,000,000 Russian Moslems are building great hopes on the Conference, which they expect will claim self-government for all peoples; but they think first of the hundreds of Moslems living in the English and French colonies, and he says they anticipate with joy that the conference will claim national independence even for them.

BROUGHT DESTROYING GERMAN CROPS.

COPENHAGEN, June 19. Throughout Germany, according to reports here, all the valuable grain crops are burning up as they did in 1915, in an unprecedented heat wave. A prolonged drought has not been broken since early May. Berlin on Sunday experienced the hottest June 17 on record in seventy years' experience of the weather bureau. Tropical temperatures were also reported everywhere west of the Oder River.

PLAIN WORDS TO QUEBEC.

LONDON, Ont., June 19. The London Free Press says to-day the issue that the Leader of the Opposition raises is whether a single province may block the way to Canada succoring her sons on the fighting line. Quebec is amenable to the laws of Canada or she is not. The majority rules or it does not. The day of minority rule has gone by. Harmony is maintained by playing the national game upon an equality basis. Quebec is fully represented in the law making of the land. She ought

An official statement from the British headquarters in Salonika, issued to-night reads: Owing to the advent of malarial season, our troops east of the Struma have been somewhat withdrawn. Our patrols have been active on the east bank and have cleared Homondos, Jenker, Cucilik, Cavdarmah, Elisan and Faszatur, which small hostile detachments had occupied. The ground evacuated by us is completely dominated by our positions on the hills west of the river. British detachments are participating in the occupation of Thessaly and Piraeus.

THE APPAM CASE.

NEW YORK, June 19. On the ground that submission to capture by a ship constitute abandonment of cargo entrusted to it, the Federal Court here to-day dismissed the suit against the owners of the British steamer Appam to recover as freight money the proceeds of the sale of her perishable cargo. The Appam was captured last February off the Canary Islands, while bound from British West Africa for England by the German raider Mowee. Her prize crew subsequently brought her into Hampton Roads, Va., where she was returned to her British owners by the Supreme Court, which held that the title of capture was forfeited by a breach of American neutrality in overstaying the time allowed a belligerent in a port of this country as neutral.

The "Indifferent" Prisoner of War.
Westminster Gazette: An officer home on leave said that among the German prisoners he had taken recently was an elderly, bearded, spectacled, and greatly depressed man of learning, who said in perfect English, when he had rounded him up: "Please don't ask me about the war, I am quite indifferent to it, and I don't care how it ends." It seemed that, being still just of military age, he had been torn ruthlessly from a professional stool in a neutral country to which he had migrated and been compelled to go fighting with the rest. He regarded the whole affair as a gross intrusion on his ordered life, and his pathetic appeal excited universal compassion.

Conservative M. P. Resigns.

Rather Than Support Half-Way Measures of Premier.

OTTAWA, June 11.—After hearing the provisions of the bill in the Commons this afternoon, Captain J. H. Burnham, Conservative member for West Peterboro, who recently returned from active service overseas, wrote out his resignation as Conservative candidate for his riding at the next election. Captain Burnham declares that he cannot support a government or a bill that merely seeks to levy on the manpower of the dominion for military service, while wealth escapes. He says he endorses the resolution passed by the Canadian Presbyterian General Assembly at Montreal on Saturday last advocating conscription of talent, wealth and energy of the Canadian people, as well as the enrollment of men for military service.

In his letter to the President of the West Peterboro Conservative Association, Mr. Burnham says in part: "The last man and the last dollar means more than the man alone. The Prime Minister is a power of strength to the cause and to the empire, but his bill is not in my opinion, equitable as it stands, and as there is a promise of nothing further in that regard, I cannot support it. The safety of the state, both at home and abroad is, I am persuaded, dependent upon a broader bill than the Prime Minister's bill brought down to-day. I cannot vote to saddle the whole burden of the war on the great mass of the people alone. There must be sacrifice all round or Canada cannot throw herself unflinchingly and wholeheartedly into the mighty struggle."

WILL STICK TO GOVERNMENT NOW.

OTTAWA, June 14.—J. H. Burnham, M.P., for West Peterboro, Ont., who had broken with the Government because its conscription policy did not embrace conscription of wealth, announced this morning that he will now support his party on the issue. The reason for his latest decision, he explains, is "the new forward development of government policy" as indicated by the announcement that there will be measures toward conscription of wealth, probably in the form of an income tax.

"No government could stand higher than the Borden government," Mr. Burnham stated, "but there has been one or two little sore spots which a humble back-bencher could see perhaps better than a man in the front seats. I shall, of course, support the conscription bill and do all I can to make it a success."

The Cure is "Fighting."

London Daily Mail: It is not assurances that "the best brains" in the Admiralty are busy with the submarine problem that the nation looks for and means to have. We insist upon results. We are tired of hearing grown-up men in gold braid repeating the parrot-cry that there is "no sovereign cure for submarines." There was no sovereign cure for Zeppelin raids until our airmen were sent up to fight the Zeppelins. There is a sovereign cure for everything in war, and it is contained in one word—Fighting. The command of the sea is not a mystery which can be hidden away in huge battleships that have to be kept in safety. It is a power that rests in the hands of those who use it. We saw this clear enough when the German High Sea Fleet tucked itself up in the Kiel Canal. But we forget it when the German submarines come out and sink the world's shipping at the rate of more than half a million tons a month. Are we to treat this as a temporary inconvenience? If we do, there will soon be very little doubt as to who commands the sea. In using the word "fighting" we are thinking of the irresistible energy and aggressive temper that are required for the direction of our fighting machine. Our Fleet will do anything it is given to do, but it is helpless if the High Command is feeble.

Nature's Chemistry.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

I have a friend who considers that environment and not heredity is the determining factor in the formation of character.

He came to me the other day triumphant with an illustration of his point. Two sisters who had been adopted as children, one into a desirable environment, the other into a rather undesirable one, have turned out utterly differently.

"There," he says, "you can't deny that environment made the difference in them."

I Don't Know And He Doesn't Either. I can't deny it, but I do deny that he can affirm it.

The difference may have been due to environment and then again it may not.

For I can point to half a dozen cases where two sisters or brothers with the same environment and also the same heredity have turned out very differently.

Can't you?

We were talking of a woman we had recently met. She is very well bred and very intellectual. Her enemies call her "high brow". Someone said, "I've heard that her sister is entirely different, very free and easy, almost coarse."

Why Should Two Sisters Be Utterly Different?

"But why should she be?" said someone else. "They had the same parents and the same upbringing."

And no one seemed to be able to answer.

Of course there are several answers.

One is that some single factor in their upbringing may have been very different. For instance either sister may have had some friend who exerted a powerful influence.

Another is that the two women had married very different men (but of course they were probably already different to have attracted and been attracted by such different types).

Another, and I think the most cogent answer, is that nature, given the same materials is perfectly capable of mixing them to produce entirely different results in character just as well as features.

How Often Nature Produces These Varied Results.

Look about you and see how often she does it.

Two striking examples spring to my mind. First a daughter who has been everything to her widowed mother and a son who has been utterly selfish and conscienceless; second two sisters, one very domestic and feminine, the other just the opposite.

Surely nature is a wonderful chemist and no study in the world could be more interesting than that of her compounds.

"If the groom does not care to wear the conventional outfit for morning, a day or evening wedding, he may wear a buxak business suit. THE TEMPER.

The temper is a combustible substance which at times combusts with great fury and produces homicide, divorce suits, black eyes and contusions on the masculine headpiece. Many a trustful, unsuspecting married man has been set upon by a high temper and covered with deep, aching dents which had to be attributed to being tripped up by the coal hod. Life is full of such self-sacrifices as this, and yet wherever he goes the married man is reviled and maligned and labeled as a cross, call-bounded joke.

Temper in children should be extracted as early as possible with a shingle.

There are two kinds of temper—sweet and sour. The former of these two is preferred, as it does not shatter so many pre-nuptial dreams or nose-glasses. A sweet temper is more useful in the average home than the self-dumping flour bin. If bridegrooms would look more at the temper of a tall, muscular fiancée and less at the real estate owned by her father there would be fewer husbands carrying a furtive look and a split lip. A real sweet temper never has an off day, and is invaluable in ironing out the rough spots and smoothing the fur of a husband who comes home with his back arched like a pussy cat.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas Range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. LONDON GOSSIP.

ADMIRAL BEATTY'S BROTHER KILLED.

The death from wounds of Sir David Beatty's brother, Captain Charles H. LeBeatty, is deeply felt at Newmarket (England's principal racing centre), where he was for many years a popular gentleman trainer. "Charlie Beatty" as everybody called him, was a fine all-round sportsman, as well as a gallant soldier. In addition to having ridden successfully on most steeplechase courses, he was an enthusiastic huntsman and polo player. At Newmarket he managed Colonel McCalmont's stable, and afterwards trained the Colonel's horses for Lord Howard de Walden. In the Boer War he gained the Distinguished Service Order for going through a heavy fire to fetch assistance for a comrade in difficulties. "Charlie Beatty" and his brother, Sir David, come of a race of soldiers and sportsmen. Their great-grandfather fought through the Peninsular War. Their grandfather hunted his own hounds in Wexford for forty years. Their father, Captain David Beatty, of the 4th Hussars, was one of the finest riders to hounds ever known. Captain David stood 6 ft. 3 in. and turned the scale at 13 stone.

The fishermen who man the drifters had been for a long time absent from their homes in Fifeshire and Grimsby and other parts of the British northeast coast, harbouring in a land that was very foreign to them and bravely defending it by sweeping for mines and hunting submarines. Now they are in an enemy prison, but fortunately it is in Austria and not Germany. The Italian Minister of the Interior was speaking of these men when he talked of the friendliness that had grown up between the British sailors and the Sicilians. Something had been done to give these men homely comforts and society by different missions and social bodies. In one of these places where Scots fishermen gather their chief joy is homely tunes thumped out on the piano by one who was once a well-known London exquisite and possibly the best living copyist of Italian old masters, who now lives a simple life and gives all his mind to the happiness of these exiles. A friend who was travelling through Italy lately said that the most curiously exotic touch he had ever experienced was when the train stopped at Pisa and he came out for a glance at the City of the Leaning Tower and suddenly heard the words, "This is the place where we hae oor passports lookit."

DRIFTER MEN IN ITALY.

The news of the sinking of the fourteen British drifters off the Italian coast and the capture of the crews strikes one as particularly sad.

CHANGES AT THE TREASURY.

Rumor has been busy during the past few days in political circles here of early changes of a very important kind at the Treasury. It is being realized that the strain now being placed on the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Bonar Law, is heavier than any man can be expected for long to bear. As a member of the War Cabinet he has to take part in daily, and sometimes twice and thrice daily, War Councils, while as Leader of the House of Commons he has to be present in his place in Parliament during every important debate, and to be an acourant with all legislative business. He will shortly have to face the committee stage of the Finance Bill, the second reading of which is being taken this week, and that may prove a troublesome and possibly a tedious task. The misfortunes which recently have overtaken his two sons serving in the war, and the illness of the two at home, have naturally had their effect on his strength, and the question which will have soon to be solved is how best to relieve him from his departmental duties while retaining his much-valued services as Leader of the House. It is premature, however, to name any successor to him as Chancellor of the Exchequer, and though it is far from impossible that Mr. Montagu, who was a highly-successful Financial Secretary to the Treasury in the late Coalition Government, will shortly join the War Administration, it is not into Bonar Law's present official position that at this moment he is expected to come.

RECRUITING WOMEN FOR FRANCE

The announcement that a recruiting office had been opened at the Mansion House for the Women's Auxiliary Army brought throngs of girls there all day long yesterday. The Mansion House, by the way, is the official residence of the Lord Mayor of London. The rush began at half-past seven with scores of munition girls leaving the night shift, but as the specific demand was for clerical workers these applications were generally unsuccessful. No woman whose husband is serving in France is allowed to serve abroad and the recruiting officers must have felt dismayed as one bright, young girl after another from some City office who seemed just the alert, efficient type that is wanted, said that she had lately been married to a young soldier now at the front. "Nearly all the girls over nineteen seemed to be war brides," said one of the officials despairingly. To-day the recruiting office was almost empty. It is not going to be easy to find enough women clerks to fill vacancies abroad.

A FAMINE IN REPRINTS.

During the war there has been a tremendous buying and reading of popular editions of the books old and new. A large proportion of those reprints have gone to the "tented field" in France or elsewhere, taken there in the baggage of the fighting men or sent to them by friends at home. It will be seen, therefore, that the cheap reprint has in the common phrase done its "bit" in the war. Now comes the disquieting news that the supply of reprints may perish for want of paper. Already the price of that commodity is so high that reprints can scarcely be sold even at the larger prices to which they have been advanced, so altogether the outlook for a very popular form of literature is unpromising.

OPERA IN ENGLISH.

In the world of entertainment the war has brought about some unexpected happenings, but nothing quite so startling as the success of grand opera in English. Who could have thought it possible that after nearly three years of warfare two theatres in the West End of London would be open in the summer with opera in English as the attraction? Yet such is the position. Sir Thomas Beecham's company (Sir Thomas being the son of the famous pill merchant who died recently), fresh from triumphs in Manchester and Birmingham, start a big season at Drury Lane Theatre, London, next week, and the Carl Rosa Company—how doing very well at the Garrick Theatre—intend continuing their labors at the Shaftesbury. It will be interesting to watch the financial result of a rivalry so deliberately courted by the older body. Sir Thomas Beecham has at his command great orchestral resources and a fully equipped company of principal artists.

POTSDAM PALACE CLOSED.

I hear from Berne that, according to information which has been received in official quarters there, the Kaiser has given orders for the closing of his palace at Potsdam as well as Wilhelmshöhe, his place at Cassel. This step apparently has been dictated not only on the ground of economy but by the difficulty of providing provisions for the large staffs of servants and estate hands at these establishments, notwithstanding that

MRS. MAY'S LETTER to WOMEN

More Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves Suffering.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a bad case of female ills. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and I took about six bottles. It fixed me up all right. The common symptoms of such a condition—pain when walking, irritation, bearing-down pains and backache, nervousness and disordered digestion—soon passed away. I look much better now than I did before, and I recommend the Compound every time for female troubles, as it did for me all it is claimed to do. You have my permission to publish this letter." Mrs. J. MAY, 3648 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

If you have any of the symptoms mentioned in Mrs. May's letter, remember what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and try it yourself. It is a good old-fashioned medicine, made from roots and herbs, and it has helped countless numbers of women. If you need special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidentially), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

many of them have been called to the colors. It is also reported that one of the wings of the Royal Schloss in Berlin is to be shut up for similar reasons. Potsdam, which is the Windsor of Germany, but within easier driving distance of Berlin than Windsor is of London, is the Kaiser's favorite residence, and the earliest public slight he placed on his father's memory was to change its name from Friedrich's Palais to Neues Palais, though the former was the more appropriate as it is built within hailing distance of Sans Souci, the historic home of Frederick the Great, the place of which it took as the regular abode of the Prussian Kings.

Couldn't Keep Back Tears

When the Nervous System Broke Down—Queer Feelings in Back of Head Caused Much Alarm.

Midland, Ont., June 20th. — Collapse or breakdown of the nervous system leaves one in a most pitiable condition. Strong, healthy-looking women and men will weep from helplessness and despair.

The case reported here was a most severe one, as is indicated by the hysterical condition, the pains in the back of the head and the futility of the many treatments used.

This is further evidence that the regular and persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for a reasonable length of time will positively restore the most exhausted nervous system. Mrs. S. Sharp, Midland, Ont., writes: "About eleven years ago I had a serious nervous breakdown, and was so bad at times that I could not keep back the tears. I also had a queer feeling in the back of my head. Sometimes I seemed to be going backwards. I could not do any sewing, and finally could do no work at all. I tried other remedies and doctors' medicines, but they only gave me temporary relief. Last Fall I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and had not taken very many until I found I was getting better. I kept on taking them, and am at present greatly improved. I am now able to do my work, and they have strengthened me splendidly. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for nervous trouble of any kind." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box, a full treatment for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmansson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

THE BURDEN.

The prices of all things are high, and they'll be higher yet; you'll soon pay more for soup and pie, and liverwurst, you bet. The prices of all things are high, and they'll be higher yet; no wonder that you heave a sigh, if you are plunged in debt. At all times debt's a cure and blight that robs life of its bloom, and when the nations whoop and fight, it is a thing of doom. The man who doesn't owe a red may calmly view the storm; he'll have enough to lay in bread and keep the shanty warm. And if an evil day should come when he must ask for tick, the merchants will not haw or hum, but say "Yes" pretty quick. And if he has to borrow mon, the banker will observe, "You are a thrifty lad, my son; I've watched your every curve. When others went in debt with speed, you were a cautious gent, and now I'll lend you all you need, at seventeen per cent." But if you've always run behind, have always owed the price, the banker will surely find as cold as Greenland's ice. Dark days may come upon us soon, the times that make men sweat; unhappy then the thriftless loon who always is in debt.

Truce On Church Union

General Assembly Agrees to Discontinue Subject Until Two Years After the War.

Montreal, June 12.—The 43rd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada to-night unanimously agreed on a course in regard to the projected union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational denominations which practically assures a discontinuance of organized propaganda for and against the object until two years after the conclusion of the war, and averts a temporarily threatened split in the Presbyterian Church through the determination of the Presbyterian Church Association, that the Presbyterian Church should be continued independently of the union.

The resolution which thus brought about unanimity in the assembly arose from a conference between the moderator and seconder of the majority report of the church union committee. Sir Robert Falconer, Toronto, and Rev. Dr. Herridge, of Ottawa, the mover and seconder of an amendment for two years postponement, the Rev. Dr. Clay, of Victoria, B.C., and Judge Farrell, of Mooseomin, Alberta; Dr. Dickie, of Montreal, and Professor Jordan, of Queen's University, Kingston, movers of a second amendment to defer the question for five years. The conferees represented the opposing factions in the assembly.
