CHAPTER I.

"It all depends upon what you call it," he said. "I am afraid I should seem to you very aged."

She thought a moment.

"Aunt says that a man is as old as he feels, and a woman as old as she looks."

"Reckoning on that basis, I am ninety-three," he said.

She smiled at him with innocent amusement.

"And I?"

He looked at her with a listless kind of scrutiny.

"Seventy-eight—"

She put the cake down, and stared at him with girlish indignation.

"How absurd! I am nearly twenty!"

He was surprised, and he looked faintly.

"Really?"

"Yes, really. You are like aunt. She is always telling me that I look like a girl, and imploring me to remember that I am a woman—as if it made any difference."

He got out a cigarette-case—got it out mechanically—then glanced at her, and was putting it away again, when she said:

"Are you going to smoke? Do, if you wish. I do not mind."

He lighted his cigarette and leaned his elbow on the table.

"You live with your aunt?" he said, not because he wished to know, but just to make conversation. She nodded over her tea-cup and munched her cake for a moment before replying.

"Yes; I have lived with her for the last ten years—she and I alone together."

"Then—your parents are dead?"

"My mother is," she said, quietly, and with a sudden sweet gravity in the lovely face. "I went to aunt when my mother died. My father is alive, and I have a brother. He is younger than I am. Aunt adopted me, you know. I had no mother nor sister, and father was travelling about, and—I suppose he was glad to get rid of me. Girls are always a nuisance, are they not?"

"I don't know—not always, I should think. Only sometimes."

She seemed struck by the reply, and a faint—a very faint—blush stole over her face.

"Perhaps I am a nuisance to you now?" she said. "I have kept you—I didn't think; but you need not wait. I can find my way to the gate, and aunt may come up any minute. Please do not wait."

She spoke quite frankly, without a touch of coquetry or pique, and he answered as frankly:

"You are not keeping me; I assure you I have nothing in the world to do, and it is very pleasant here. Besides, I feel in a way responsible for you, and should like to see you safe in your aunt's keeping."

"Why, what harm could come to me?" she asked, with wide-open eyes and a smile of amusement. "Do you think I should fall into the bear's cage, or get run over by the elephant?"

"No; but all the same, I should like to see you safe in your aunt's care. By the way, you did not tell me her name."

"Lascelles—Lady Lascelles," said the girl.

He raised his eyebrows slightly, as if he recognized the name.

"And you did not tell me yours," he remarked.

"You didn't ask me," she said, simply. "It is Decima Deane. What is yours?"

She leaned forward, her chin resting on her now ungloved hand—by no means small, by the way, but beautifully shaped and with a character of its own—and regarded him with girlish, friendly curiosity.

The waiter came up at the moment, and the gentleman put his left hand in his pocket for his purse. He had kept his arm behind his chair during the tea, and even now he moved it out of sight again quickly and shuffled his purse to the right hand; but Decima's eyes were sharp as well as beautiful, and she saw the rent in the sleeve.

She forgot all about his name, and exclaimed:

"Why, the lion did tear your sleeve! Oh, did it scratch you?"

"No, no," he said, rather shortly. "How much, waiter?"

"Three shillings, sir."

"That is eighteen pence each," said Decima, taking out her silver chain purse, and she extracted a shilling and sixpence, and laid them down on the table.

The man smiled grimly. It was evident he was the first man she had ever taken public tea with.

"Put your money back," he said, much amused.

"Oh, why?" she asked, with wide eyes. "Why should you pay for me?"

"I don't know," he said, "excepting that it is usual, and that it would be exceedingly bad form for you to pay for it yourself."

"Now, I can't understand that!" she said, with girlish insistence; and just as if she were arguing with a school-fellow. "Why should a gentleman always pay for ladies?"

"Because it is one of the few privileges we wretched men possess."

"That's absurd!" she laughed. "Besides, we are strangers. And I don't know what aunt would say. She says that girls should always be independent and—Oh, here she is! Aunt, how did you lose me?" and she sprang up and caught the arm of the tall lady in gray, who approached with stately steps and a grave countenance.

"My dear Decima, where—where have you been? And—as the gentleman rose and removed his hat—"and who is this?" she added in an anxious under-tone.

Decima turned a smiling and grateful face toward her late and temporary guardian.

"Oh, this gentleman has been helping me to find you, and we could not, though we went everywhere—"

Lady Lascelles glanced at the tea-table and then at the tall and erect gentleman in front of it, with a grave and stern eye.

"—And I was so thirsty," Decima went on, answering the look, "and he got some tea; and—well, then you came up. I am so glad! But I should not have been lost, should I? I should have gone to the gate where the carriage was to wait. And oh, aunt, will you please thank this gentleman for taking so much trouble—"

Lady Lascelles touched the girl's arm as an exhortation to silence, and addressed the gentleman.

"I am greatly obliged to you for your care of my niece, sir. I am afraid she has given you some trouble. To whom am I indebted?"

The gentleman frowned slightly, as if the question were an unwelcome one. From his cigarette-case lying on the table he took a card and gave it

"That is my name," he said, quietly. Lady Lascelles started slightly as she crushed the card in her palm, her face flushing.

He bowed as if he understood, his lips set tight, the weary, listless look back in his eyes again.

The stately lady became taller and more stately, and with a cold "Good-day," she drew Decima's hand over her arm—as if the girl suddenly needed protection—and was walking her off. But Decima looked back with a troubled expression in her eyes and about the expressive mouth, and swiftly releasing her arm, she ran back to where Lord Gaunt was still standing, a faint grim smile of amusement in his eyes.

"Oh, I haven't thanked you as I ought to!" she said. "You were so kind and—patient! And you showed me the private lions, you know—and I am so grateful—and—oh, please do not be offended with aunt, but—shake hands!"

She held out her hand, and he took it. He did not press it, but let it fall, and with another lifting of his hat, turned away.

Lady Lascelles waited with her lips tightly set, a frown upon her broad brow.

"Decima, come, please," she said. Decima returned to her aunt's side, but looked rather wistfully after the tall, retreating form of the man who had been so coldly treated for his kindness.

"Why—why were you so angry with him, aunt?" she asked, just a little piteously. "He was very, very kind, and—and—what has he done to make you so cross?"

"My dear Decima, you must not ask questions which I can not answer. It was very wrong of you to permit a gentleman—a stranger—to walk about the Gardens with you. And how could you possibly sit there and take tea with him?"

"I was thirsty," said Decima, simply.

Lady Lascelles almost groaned.

"Decima, you are nothing more than a child—a mere child. You must never do such a thing again!"

"Why not? What harm have I done?" insisted the girl.

"It is—it is not usual; it is bad etiquette, manners, form, to walk about with a strange man; to take tea with him is worse. Any strange gentleman is bad enough; but that man of all men in the wide world!"

"Why was it worse to walk about and sit down to tea with him than any one else, aunt?" Decima asked.

Lady Lascelles hit her lip.

"Because—my dear girl, you would not understand—"

"But, aunt—why?"

"Because he is a bad, wicked man—one of the most wicked men in the world!"

And Decima was silenced at last.

CHAPTER II.

"One of the most wicked men in the world" meanwhile walked slowly across the Gardens to the Clarence Gate, and calling a cab, told the man to drive him to Cavendish Square. Stopping the cab at the house of Sir James Starke, he inquired if the great physician were in, and was shown in to the consulting room.

Sir James Starke had just come in from his rounds, and had still got his hat on. He tilted it up with an expression of astonishment at sight of his visitor.

"Halloo, Gaunt!" he said. "I didn't know you were in England. How are you? Sit down! Anything the matter?" and as he shook hands, he surveyed the weary, handsome face with the physician's all seeing, penetrating gaze.

Lord Gaunt took off his coat, and rolled the sleeve above his left arm.

"Just cauterize that, will you, Starke?" he said, quietly.

Sir James turned the arm to the light—an arm well made and muscular; hard as iron and smooth as marble.

"Why—what is it?" he said. "A dog-bite? No, a cat's scratch? What is it?"

"A lion scratch," said Lord Gaunt. "Got it at the Zoo, fooling with the cub I brought over. It isn't much; but it felt angry, and well—I've seen a nigger or two go mad with blood-poisoning for less than this."

Sir James nodded gravely, and got the caustic.

"It's not like you to come to harm in this way, Gaunt," he said; "you must have been precious careless."

"Yes, I was," said Lord Gaunt, concisely.

After he had performed the simple operation, Sir James looked at his patient's face, and ran a finger on his pulse. Then he shook his head.

"Same old game, Gaunt!" he said, gravely.

Lord Gaunt smiled grimly.

"Same old game," he said, quietly.

"Pity! pity!" murmured Sir James. "Can't you do something better with your life than waste it?"

"I don't know. I've never asked myself the question. Perhaps I don't waste my life more than you waste yours. It's all a point of view, you know, Starke."

"My dear fellow!" expostulated the great physician; "I work—earn money—"

"—And I lounge, and laze, and spend it. Who shall say which is the wiser? Life is only a chance for making mistakes."

Sir James nodded sympathetically.

Proposal to Settle Irish Difficulty.

Earl Grey Presents a Solution--Russia Charges Allies With Aiding Poles -- Boston's Bank Run Result of Plot -- Sweden Does Not Approve Bolshevism.

GREY OFFERS ANOTHER SUGGESTION.

LONDON, Sept. 29. Viscount Grey, former Ambassador to the United States, in a letter to the Westminster Gazette to-day, puts forward new proposals for a solution of the Irish problem. He declares the present Home Rule Bill is not accepted by anyone, and says the only practicable policy that offers any prospect of success seems to be to have three cardinal points, first, a definite announcement that for these two islands of Great Britain and Ireland there can be only one foreign policy, one army and one navy, and that we cannot stand separation in these matters any more than the north could stand the separation of the south in the United States. Second, with this exception Irishmen must be as free as the people of the great self-governing dominions to settle for themselves how their country is to be governed; third, to give time for them to come to agreement with each other and draw up their own scheme. The British Government will continue to perform as best it can the function of government in Ireland for a period not to exceed two years, but at the end of that period or sooner, if Ireland is ready, it will withdraw and arrange itself if need be fair terms for retiring constabulary and others who have served it, and responsibility for Irish government will be on the Irish themselves.

CLAIMS ALLIES AIDING POLAND.

LONDON, Sept. 29. A wireless despatch from Moscow to-day says that Poland has received large supplies from the Allies through Danzig. England, the message declares, sent seven steamers loaded with munitions and three tanks and three small vessels with provisions, while the United States sent six ships with volunteers from France. Two ships arrived with more than one thousand infantrymen and 15 tanks, the message says.

POLISH SUCCESS CONTINUES.

WARSAW, Sept. 29. The official statement on fighting operations, issued just before last midnight says, that in the North Polish troops have reached the Shohara River, in the region of Grodno. The enemy is retreating. The statement adds, our detachments advancing in the direction of Pinsk have occupied Chomsk, Drohiczyn, and Ivanovo, where they captured the staffs of two Soviet divisions of infantry, six machine guns, a locomotive, and 150 cars.

SWEDISH ELECTION RESULTS.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 29. Returns from the recent general election show gains for Conservative and Peasant parties, and loss for the Liberals and Social Democrats. The Social Democrats elected seventy-six, Conservatives sixty-eight, Liberals forty-five, Peasant Party twenty-eight, and Bolsheviki four.

DEU TO A PLOT.

BOSTON, Sept. 29. The run on local banks within the past few days, as a result of which two have been closed and two others have temporarily suspended payments in their savings departments, was due to a plot, Simon Swig, Vice-President of the Tremont Trust Company, charged in a statement given out to-day, after an interview with Bank Commissioner Allen. It is a case of business rivalry of Hon (?) he asserted, and announced his intention in a day or two to expose publicly one of the greatest plots known in the banking history of the United States.

NO CANADIAN AMBASSADOR YET.

OTTAWA, Sept. 29. Cabled reports that the appointment of a Canadian Ambassador to Washington is likely to be delayed for a while, are in agreement with a general impression that has prevailed here for some time past. While no official announcement is forthcoming at the present, it is understood that the appointment may not be made for some time, but there is no indication that the plan will be abandoned.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE IN TRAIN WRECK.

HILLWOOD, W. Va., Sept. 29. Senator Warren G. Harding's special train narrowly escaped serious wreck near here to-day, when the trucks of the Harding car broke down. The car was derailed but no one was injured, although both Senator and Mrs. Harding were badly shaken up.

DRAFT EVADERS FOUND GUILTY.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29. Mrs. Edna C. Bergdoll and her four co-defendants were found guilty last night of conspiring to aid two of her sons, Cerver and Irwin, to evade the draft.

BASEBALL CROOKEDNESS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 29. Eighty thousand dollars were to have been paid to eight Chicago White Sox players, to "throw" the 1919 world's championship baseball games to the Cincinnati Reds, according to a confession to the Investigation Grand Jury by Eddie Cicotte, pitcher. Cicotte said he understood the gamblers had "double crossed" the players and only two players had received their money.

FURTHER RIOTING.

DUBLIN, Sept. 29. Rioting was renewed to-day in Lisburn, six miles from Belfast. Several houses and a shop were wrecked. The police charged dispersing a mob. A patrol of police was ambushed at Brimonsleague, near Skibbereen, and a sergeant precariously wounded. Reprisals are feared.

Bell Island Poultry Association.

The recently organized Bell Island Poultry Association of Wabana has started on a progressive policy and are holding their first annual exhibition of poultry, including ducks and geese, on Oct. 27, 28 and 29th, in the Orange Hall. In addition to the poultry exhibit the Association under President Hughes and Secretary J. T. Lawton, are holding an exhibition of vegetables and other agricultural produce such as cabbage, potatoes, carrots, beet, etc. Handiwork will also be shown in the shape of knitted wool. Prizes will be offered for the various classes. The poultry exhibit will be modelled after the St. John's Poultry Association's show. Tuesday night a deputation of this Association, Messrs. Walter Reid, W. R. Butler and Geo. R. Williams, visited Bell Island on invitation and addressed the members present, giving them an outline of the city show, and how it was organized and conducted, and offered to assist their show in the loan of coops, etc., or in any other way they could be of service, and President LeMessurier, C.M.G., of the City Poultry Club and other members have promised ten prizes for the Bell Island show--contributions from city poultry men. The managers of the Nova Scotia and Dominion Companies have promised their support and influence, and it is hoped to make this Agricultural Exhibition an annual affair. A large number of pure bred fowl are now on the Iron Isle and interest in the fowl is increasing yearly. Manager A. MacDonald's yards were visited by the three city poultry men and the houses and yards were models of perfection. Mr. MacDonald has some magnificent Pekin Ducks, Brown Leghorns and Rhode Island Reds, and gathers a basket of eggs daily, whilst the city visitors also saw some fine ones owned by Messrs. McLean, Petrie and others. Bell Island has certainly its share of progressive citizens and we wish their first venture a decided suc-

After Twenty-five Years

SCOT RECOVERS HIS MEMORY.

An amazing story of a man's recovery of memory after a lapse of 25 years is reported from Haskell, Oklahoma. He has been identified as Alexander Bell, a Scottish settler, born in Glasgow. His wife years ago gave him up for lost, remarried, and now finds herself the wife of two men. Twenty-five years ago, it seems, Mr. Bell left Tell City, Ind., to visit his brother at Chattanooga, Tenn. Reaching Chattanooga, he found his brother had moved to the country, so he set out through the woods to seek him. Nothing was heard of him from that time until he returned to Tell City recently. After Mr. Bell's disappearance his wife went on with their general merchandise business. Then she followed a daughter to Oklahoma, met Mr. A. R. Barr, and married him. Following a spinal adjustment Bell's memory returned, and he began a

Married Her Father.

An amazing story is told in a bill of complaint which has just been filed in the Baltimore Circuit Court by Anna Bella Jones for the annulment of her marriage with William M. Jones. The plaintiff says she has now learned that her husband--the father of her two children--whom she had supposed to be her stepfather, was in fact her real father. Mrs. Jones declares in the bill that prior to her marriage she had lived with her parents without the slightest inkling of her supposed stepfather's actual identity, and the story is rendered the more remarkable by the assertion of the plaintiff that the true facts were revealed to her in a dream. Two children were born of the marriage, both boys, aged three and eight years respectively, and both are said to be perfectly healthy and normal.

Shot Dead by Dog.

A dog was responsible for the death of a member of the shooting party at St. Andre de l'Eure. The party were resting for lunch and had left their guns resting against a heap of hay, when the dog jumped against them and caught its foot in the trigger of one of the weapons, which went off. The shot struck M. Louis Agasse (47) in the region of the heart, killing him instantly.

Apostles of Gloom.
 Between Bolshevism, the income tax and the rise threatened in the price of coal because of the "vacations" of the miners, everybody nowadays is inclined to be pessimistic. Time was when men and women were accustomed to look on the bright side of things, to laugh occasionally and to enjoy the fleeting moments as they passed, but now a Cimmerian gloom seems to have settled on the human race and the world so rarely smiles that the gaiety of nations may be supposed to have gone into the discard and been lost in the shuffle.—Washington Post.

 BELFAST, Sept. 30.
 Continuous rioting and bloodshed in the city is viewed officially as creating an intolerable situation, and Ulster's proposal for an armed civic guard is likely to be adopted if the disorders continue.

HORNWELL WINS.
 NEW YORK, Sept. 30.
 Although winners in the National Elimination Balloon Race are not officially announced, Aero Club officials declared yesterday that no competitors record is close enough to that of H. E. Hornwell, St. Louis, to dispute his victory.

DINED LIPTON.
 LONDON, Sept. 30.
 A number of intimate friends gave a dinner in honor of Sir Thomas Lipton yesterday on his return from another unsuccessful attempt to win America's Cup. The guests included Lord Dewar, Baron Leverhulme, Baron Inverforth and Sir John Ferguson.

SOME HAUL FOR A PIRATE.
 NEW YORK, Sept. 30.
 The largest shipment of gold, sixteen million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, ever transported across the Atlantic, is on the way to New York on the liner Baltic, which left Liverpool the twenty-second. The gold is consigned to United States bankers.

MACSWEENEY IS WEAK.
 LONDON, Sept. 30.
 Lord Mayor MacSweeney slept from nine-thirty last night until twelve this morning, according to a bulletin of the Irish Self Determination League, and was somewhat refreshed, but extremely weak.

NO AGREEMENT REACHED.
 LONDON, Sept. 30.
 Representatives of owners of coal mines and miners have thus far failed to reach an agreement relative to wages, which is the principal question involved in threat of strike. A conference was held at the Board of Trade yesterday, and proposals discussed, but nothing definite was done.

REPORTS PRESENTED.
 BRUSSELS, Sept. 30.
 Reports of the financial situation in Armenia and Hungary were presented to the world's financial conference this morning. The conference then took up the question of international commerce.

JANITORS STRIKE.
 ROME, Sept. 30.
 Homeless people, carrying red flags and singing Socialistic songs, attempted to occupy two monasteries and one nunnery yesterday, but were prevented by police. Janitors have struck in the city, asking free lodging for their families and more pay.

IMPORTANT POLISH CAPTURES.
 WARSAW, Sept. 30.
 Polish forces captured the important town of Lida and the fortified city of Minsk, ninety miles from Brest-Litovsk, according to an official statement. The Polish advance toward the north east is continuing and the fall of the Lithuanian capital, Vilna, is expected within a few days.

Not Dead Yet.
 There is a type of person going about to-day prophesying the prompt dissolution of the British Empire. "Look at Egypt," he cries, "Look at Ireland! Look at India!" We are quite prepared to contemplate all these countries not only with equanimity, but with cheerfulness. Both Egypt and India are going through a process of change inevitable as East and West came more in contact. The pace of this growth has been immensely stimulated by the world shock of the war. Naturally there are growing pains—that is all. This vitality is a sign of life, not of death. It would indeed be time to despair of the Empire if its Constitution and governing minds were so fast set in the old ways that they did not permit of local native self-government.—London Daily Express.

Love is Blind, But—
 Two charming sisters are engaged to two brothers, and their neighbors have been interested in this dual love affair. The young girls live in the second flat of a house on the south side of the street, and the other day the older sister was stopped in the street by the young scion of the family who occupy the second flat in the house just opposite.
 "Oh, Miss Miggs," said the boy, "my papa said last night that someone ought to tell you to pull down the blinds, 'cause if love is blind, the neighbors are not!"
 The sleeves of some dark cloth dresses have deep, full cuffs of brilliant chiffon gathered into tight wristbands.
 The very shallow décolletage at the front, and a low, veiled evening at the back, mark the new evening gowns.

I. O. O. F. at Bell Island.
 CITY BRETHREN HEARTILY WELCOMED.
 The representatives of the City Lodges, I.O.O.F., which left town yesterday to participate in degree work at Bell Island, received a splendid reception from their fellow members of the Iron Isle. They left the city at 6.30 p.m. by Lesters bus and private motor cars, crossing the tangle by the steamer Othar. On arrival they were received by the brethren and proceeded to the Hall where initiation degrees were conferred on several candidates. Messrs. E. Barnes, Noble Grand, and C. Butler, Vice Grand, on behalf of Wabana Lodge, No. 136, cordially welcomed the visitors and extended to them fraternal greetings. Messrs. J. C. Phillips, N. McLeod, W. Quick and C. White for the city Lodges addressed the gathering. After the ceremony the visitors were entertained at the homes of the members. Return to the city was made at an early hour this morning. The new Lodge has many enthusiastic members and there is no doubt that Lodge 136 will greatly flourish as a result of their efforts. In the near future the Bell Island brethren will visit St. John's when a right royal welcome will be extended to them.

Ex-Pupil Entertained.
 Mr. J. P. Hand Honored by Classmates
 The ex-pupils of St. Patrick's Hall who were classmates with Mr. J. Pierce Hand, gave him a welcome home at Brenocks last night. Before proceeding to the hostelry a call was made at the Monastery where Mr. W. J. Higgins explained the object of the visit. Rev. Bro. J. E. To Raise the Lusitania.
 Will the steamship Lusitania, lying in 250 feet of water off the Irish coast, again float upon the surface? It has been generally taken for granted since the giant liner was made the victim of a German submarine that she was lost for all time. But the World War, among its other lessons, taught many of value in connection with the salvaging of sunken vessels, and it is now regarded by experts as within the range of possibility that the Lusitania may be lifted from the ocean bed and brought safely into port. In the current issue of the Compressed Air Magazine, Robert G. Skerrett, its contributing engineer, discusses at length the progress of the art of recovering sunken ships, and describes the method by which, it is claimed, the Lusitania might be floated, through the lifting power of vertical pontoons, containing mechanism operated by compressed air.
 The ship is known to rest on a sandy or gravelly bottom, and it is believed that for some distance at bow and stern the keel is clear of the ocean bed. Were salvage work undertaken according to the method proposed, chains would be swept under the keel at the extremities of the vessel. These chains would lead to pontoons placed in pairs above the wreck. By alternately raising the bow and stern it is believed that chains might be slipped along under the hull until it was placed in slings so near together that the whole fabric could be swung clear of the bottom without danger of its being disrupted in the process. After that the work would consist in gradually moving the ship into shallow water, where ordinary salvage methods could be employed in finishing the work.

 Naturally the idea of salvaging the Lusitania makes strong appeal to the imagination, but if it is dismissed as beyond the bounds of probability, there remains much of fascinating interest in connection with schemes for the recovery of ships and cargoes lost during the war. There has been already many notable achievements in that direction, but what has been done is small in proportion compared to what may yet be accomplished. The Compressed Air Magazine makes the statement that "fully eight billion dollars worth of ships and cargoes were either sunk or driven ashore during the World War—sacrifices nearly totalling the combined toll of marine disasters for the preceding period of a hundred years." Eight billion dollars is about a third of the amount of the debt incurred by the United States because of participation in the war.

The efforts to retrieve portions of this enormous wealth scattered about on the bottom of the sea is one peculiarly suited to the ingenuity and the adventurous temper of Americans. In fact, before the war, Americans had done many remarkable things in raising and repairing wrecked vessels. But it is pointed out that in the future salvage operations must be conducted to a much greater extent by engineering talent of a high order and that, if vessels approaching the Lusitania in size are to be lifted from far beneath the surface, there must be an elimination of the rule-of-thumb methods that have been largely followed in the past. Certainly the prizes to be obtained are worth the effort. Hundreds of sunken ships may be made serviceable. Gold and silver worth millions are hidden in slime-covered hulks in the black depths. There are fortunes to be obtained through the recovery of marketable commodities which are of a character to resist the action of salt water. And in the quest for these things there is, in addition to the hope of great gain, the call of the sea and the lure of the battle with wind and wave under conditions the like of which adventurous spirits of the past knew nothing.—Boston Transcript.

The Prime Minister's Story.
 Mr. Lloyd George has a large collection of Abraham Lincoln stories. This is his favourite. An admirer went to Lincoln and, grasping him by the hand, remarked, "There are two people I have confidence in—God Almighty and yourself!" Lincoln smiled and replied, "Well, sir, at any rate you are half right!"
 Contrast of color is shown in all costumes—evening gowns sometimes are encrusted with spangles in various contrasting colors.

Not His Fault.
 "I don't know what the young men of to-day are coming to," said Mr. Smith. "In my young days there wasn't any need for all this courting. The girls then—"
 But he was cut short by the coal-scuttle which Mrs. Smith accidentally dropped on his toes.
 "I was only going to say, my dear," he remarked, when he had recovered his composure, "that I wish the young fellow who is calling on Christabel would go home. It's past midnight."
 At that moment there entered the small boy of the household. He had been, for the last hour or so, behind the draught-screen in the drawing-room, and vowed he had enjoyed himself better than if he had been at a Punch and Judy show.
 "It isn't his fault pa," said the heir of the Smiths. "He can't go; Christabel's sitting on him!"
 Many costumes have no waistlines at all; others show narrow girdles of colored beads or of the material of the costume.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

COMPLIMENTS VERSUS FLATTERY.

"What gracious things C. does think up to say," said a friend of mine of a mutual friend whom she had recently met. I thought her phrase "think up to say" unconsciously well selected. I think she will realize the value of it herself, when she knows S.

genuineness and sincerity is known to you can make you glow all over.

A More Delicate Flavor.

Of course the compliments that come through a third person are the most valuable of all—unless one suspects deliberate engineering, and even then one cannot help rather liking them—they have so much more delicacy of flavor.

It is said that when Hanna More was flattering Doctor Johnson, that very outspoken genius broke out with, "Madam, before you flatter a man so grossly to his face, you should consider whether his flattery is worth your having."

One does not admire Dr. Johnson's rudeness, but I think we all know people who make us think something like that, even if we would not say it.

He Knew the Same.

A story concerning Senator Harding, one of the candidates for the United States Presidency, refers to a visit he paid to a town in Ohio, where he had a chat with the local hotel proprietor. "You're from Marion?" asked the latter. "Um. Only crowd I know in Marion are the Klings—richest of the lot! Old man Kling is much upset because his daughter ran away and married a newspaper fellow. You know how hard up newspapers chaps are. Ever heard of old man Kling?"

Almost as Rough as Baseball.

Madrid. — Bullfighting, from the spectators' point of view, is becoming almost as strenuous as baseball. Bullfighting "fans" at Haro, displeased with the work of the torero, assailed him with a volley of stones. He was obliged to seek police protection. "Pop" bottles are not available at Spanish bullfights, and spectators are therefore obliged to fall back upon rocks as ammunition when they feel impelled to demonstrate their disapproval.

Rules for Tenants in Detroit.

No wonder there are daily to be found more and more empty flats in Detroit apartment houses. Landlords lately have been complaining that former tenants are moving into the suburbs.

Here are the conditions contained in one lease to which The Toronto Globe had access:

- No children, no dogs, no cats, no parrots or birds.
- Visitors allowed only up to 10 o'clock.
- No music or noise after 10 p.m.
- No visitors allowed to stay longer than two weeks in any one year.
- Only two visitors allowed at a time.
- Not even a handkerchief allowed to be hung out on a clothesline on Sunday.
- Reading of Sunday newspapers on the front porch barred.
- For all these numerous advantages the owner plans to raise the rent from $75 to $100.

THE AUTO PERIL.

Let's rise, O footsore readers, and form a union strong, to punish all the speeders who rush their cars along; with terrors dire they fill us, they make us weak and pale; they try to maim or kill us, and grumble when they fall.

The streets are scenes of danger, where speed laws won't stay, put, and heaven help the stranger who tries to cross on foot! Some reckless, bonehead driver will promptly climb his frame, and will not care a stiver how many more he'll maim. Oh, every night I wonder, when I retire to bed, that I'm not torn asunder, that I still have my head. For all the day I'm dodging death cars propelled by fools, and when I reach my lodging the sweat drips down in pools. I count my legs and knuckles, my wishbones and my hair, my garters and my buckles, to see if I'm all there; and if there's nothing busted I feel that I'm in luck, for I've been chased, disgusted, by auto, ford and truck. It's surely time to punish with more than paltry fines those reckless guys and Hunnish who try to break our spines, who always look for chances to wing the passing gent, and fill the ambulances with victims boneyard bent.

Just Folks

Nothing to laugh at.

"Tain't nuthin' to laff at as I can see! If you'd ben stung by a bumble bee, An' your nose was swelled an' it smarted, too, You wouldn't want people to laff at you."

If you had a lump that was full of fire Like you'd ben touched by a red hot wire An' your nose spread out like a load of hay You wouldn't want strangers who come your way To ask you to let 'em see the place An' laff at you right before your face.

What's funny about it, I'd like to know! It isn't a joke to be hurted so! An' how wuz I ever on earth to tell 'At the pretty flower which I stopped to smell

In our backyard wuz the very one Which a bee wuz busily working on? An' jus' as I got my nose down there He lifted his foot an' kicked for fair An' he planted his stinger right into me.

But it's nothin' to laff at as I can see. I let out a yell an' my Maw came out To see what the trouble was all about. She says from my shriek she wuz sure 'at I Had ben struck by a motor car passin' by But when she found what the matter wuz She laffed jus' like ever'body does An' she made me stand while she poked about

To pull his turrible stinger out. An' my Pa laffed, too, when he looked at me. But it's nothin' to laff at, as I can see.

My Maw put which hazel on the spot To take down the swellin' but it has not. It seems to git bigger as times goes by. An' I can't see good out of 't this one eye An' it hurts down to my very tose Whenever I've got to blow my nose. An' all I can say is when this gits well There ain't any flattery 'at I'll stoop to smell. I'm through disturbin' a bumble bee, But it's nothin' to laff at, as I can see.

Dispossessed.
(From the Columbia State.)

At a ball game between a South Carolina negro team and a visiting team of similar color a negro preacher was acting as umpire. The pitcher had gone rather wild, and had permitted all the bases to fill. Another man came to the bat, and the nervous pitcher slept one over.

"Ball one," yelled the ump. The pitcher tried again.

"Ball two," was the decision. Another effort by the hurler.

"Ball three," said the umpire. The pitcher saw his predicament, and made one master effort to save the day.

"Ball four," yelled the ump. "and the men's out."

"How come I'es out?" inquired the enraged batter.

"I'es repelled to put you out, nigger. Don't you see dar's nowhere else to put you?" reasoned the umpire.

Gas and Coal.

It will be a calamity if the Gas Company is obliged to go out of business on the last day of October, as per notice, for the want of sufficiency of coal to continue operating the plant. And such a calamity will be all the more great when it is realised how many industrial concerns in St. John's depend upon gas for the motive power of much of their machinery. Hence it would be well for those in authority to take instant measures to avert the throwing out of employment of numerous workers, which cannot fail to follow the shutting down of the Gas Company's business. The whole matter is one of coal supply. Local coal from the St. George's deposits has been freely tested and found to make good gas. Its quality, for this purpose, is far superior to the Sydney product, and with adequate quantities delivered the Gas Company could continue. We understand that the Government promised to furnish the complement necessary, but they have not—so far—done so. It is understood that as an alternative to the St. George's coal, that from the South Branch deposits will be submitted to a gas producing test, and should it fill the bill in equal value to the former, the company will receive supplies from that quarter. It is of course entirely immaterial from whence the necessary coal stocks are produced so long as the supply of gas to the city is continued, but should the South Branch product be of no value for gas making, it follows that a supply of St. George's will necessarily have to be secured. Anyway there is but one short month now to make the tests which will determine whether St. John's is to be without gas or vice versa.

The importance of the Gas Service to the city may be illustrated by figures showing how many essential industries are now using gas for various purposes. That these figures will give rise to much reflection and speculation as to what will happen if the company has to shut down its plant during the autumn and winter months, is undeniable. Six clothing factories and many smaller clothing establishments use gas extensively as motive power for their machines, and this equipment represents a large outlay which would have to be replaced at great expense, should the Gas Company have to go out of business. Two laundries and numerous smaller Chinese laundries use gas in their many appliances. Practically all the tansorial parlors depend on gas for heating water and in some cases for lighting. There are a considerable number of gas engines, large and small, operating in cold storage plants, fish shipping establishments, machine shops and other places. The principal hotels use gas largely, for cooking and heating. Bakeries and restaurants depend upon gas for many purposes. Newspapers likewise use gas for running their linotypes, heating metal pots and in connection with matrix tables and smaller presses. Several cooperages rely on gas for power. The United Can Factory, where practically most of the lobster and salmon cans are made, uses a special gas-heated steam boiler. Hundreds of other institutions and houses, as well as some of the churches have gas laid on, and the discontinuance of the service would be disastrous to them. Altogether there are nearly one thousand places using gas in St. John's, and it is absolutely necessary that every effort be made to have the service go on. From the above particulars it will be readily appreciated that it would indeed be a calamity of the first order if for want of adequate supplies of coal, all the plants and establishments catalogued, should have to suspend for want of gas motive power.

Motor Association Meeting.

At the meeting of the Motor Association in the Board of Trade rooms yesterday, the members of the Road Commission attended by special invitation. In reply to the discussion re the Portugal Cove Road, Mr. Parsons stated grading would be necessary to get it in permanent condition. It is not likely this can be done till next season. An addition was made to the by-laws which makes Section 3 read as follows: "A member of the Association must help any other member whose car is on the road and in trouble when signalled to do so."

Inspector General Hutchings, in reply to a request for information re motor traffic at Rawlin's Cross and Adelaide St. stated it is absolutely essential for drivers to inform the policeman on duty at Rawlin's Cross which way he is going when proceeding over that point. The ruling as to Adelaide St. is (1) motor cars must stop when passengers are transferring from the belt line to West End cars, or vice versa; (2) motor cars must stop when street cars are stopped anywhere for the purpose of taking on passengers and when the passengers have got on board the motors may proceed whether the street car does so or not.

Four Foot Coal Seam

DISCOVERED AT GRAND LAKE.
Geologist Hatch, who has been operating in the Grand Lake coal areas, reports finding a four foot seam of excellent coal about 250 feet below the surface. The find is at this side of the Gaff Topsails, and if up to expectations, would be able to supply Grand Falls and the eastern section of the railroad. As the property is said to be on Crown Lands, it is hoped that the lines have been correctly drawn and that no subsequent claimant will appear. The work being conducted this season by Mr. Hatch is a continuation of that undertaken by the late Government last year.

Labrador Report.

RYAN'S BAY TO HOPEDALE.
The Marine and Fisheries Department is in receipt of the following report dated September 24th from Capt. Barbour of S.S. Wren:—"North to Ryan's Bay, calling at all ports of call. Not much improvement in fishery since last report except north of Mugford. Seventeen schooners north of Mugford did fair, average 600 qtls. per schooner. Mugford south average per schooner about 300 qtls. There are now 30 schooners between Hopedale and Ryan's Bay; most of them are on the way home. A few schooners about Mugford intend fishing until first of October. Weather has been very stormy but no wreckage. All well."

We understand the S. S. Sachem brought a very large shipment of ladies' wearing apparel this trip. Some of the newest and best that Paris and London had to offer in Millinery, Coats, Dresses, Furs, etc., is already on display at BISHOP'S. The models are exclusive and most attractive. The unworthy in style, fabric and workmanship has been rigidly excluded. Judging from the great crowds of people to be seen around this store, it must be one of the most interesting attractions in the city.

Resultant From the Fish Regulations.

Reports from the West Coast indicate that many of the residents are on the verge of destitution. At Lawn, thirteen families are reported as having practically no food supplies. Owing to the anticipated drop in flour, merchants on the coast did not replenish their stocks, consequently much suffering is being experienced. There is very little fish being sold. The cull is evidently being carried out to the full extent of the standardization law and the price received averaged little better than $4.50 per qtl.

The Grand Lake Coal Find.

An item elsewhere to-day refers to the Grand Lake Coal deposits as being this side of the Topsails. Such, we have been informed, is not the case, the new coal find being West of the Topsails, which means that any coal taken from there will necessarily have to be hauled over the highest point of the railway.

Ordered Taken Back.

A young man, supposed to be a former resident of this city, arrived here from New York by Rosalind to-day, but being an undesirable was ordered by the Colonial Secretary's Department to be brought back again. The lad will be taken to Halifax.

Doing Good Work.

Bannerman Street is now being put in first class condition. A large amount of filling-in has been done there. Mr. Nicholas Murphy the East End Road Inspector is doing splendid work in his section, and considering the means at his disposal exceptionally good returns are being given.

On a Charge of Perjury.

A seaman belonging to the Northward who gave evidence for the Plaintiff in the Lady St. John and Harold Conrad collision case, was to come up before Judge Morris for preliminary hearing of a charge of perjury in connection with his evidence. The hearing has been set for Monday.

Rosalind's Passengers.

Wedding Bells.

A very interesting wedding took place at St. Mary's Church, on Tuesday, Sept. 28, by the Rev. Mr. Stirling, when Miss Gertrude Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Miller, of Champneys, T.B., was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Francis Hancock, son of Charles and the late Mrs. Hancock, of Brooklyn, B.B. The bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Thomas Miller. She was nicely attired in a dress of blue silk and hat to match, being attended by Miss Triffie Hancock, sister of the groom, who wore blue silk, also Miss Florence Day and Robert Miller, brother of the bride. After the ceremony they left for their future home, Brooklyn, B.B., where they will reside in future. We wish them many years of wedded life.

Lance Cove Platoon Inspected.

The Lance Cove platoon of C. W. Habana Co. C.C.C. was recently inspected by Major Murphy, of headquarters staff, and Capt. Greene, Company Commander. Accompanied by Lieut. J. J. Murphy the inspecting officers visited the armoury at Lance Cove and were received by Staff-Sergt. P. Stoyles and Sergt. P. Hammond. The Lance Cove platoon in full numbers were put through various manoeuvres and were given a lecture on Brigade work and discipline by Major Murphy, who expressed himself as well pleased with the platoon, and he warmly congratulated Capt. Greene and Sergt. Stoyles on the efficiency of the Lance Cove boys. In the brigade field sports held last week the Lance Cove boys carried off most of the honors, winning the inter-platoon relay race and several individual prizes. Pre. Michael Stoyles proved himself the victor in the 100 yds. race. After the inspection a re-union of all the Lance Cove members and their friends was announced to take place at an early date, the officers and sergeants of the Bell Island section being invited as guests. Supper was served by the officers at the hospitable residence of Mrs. John Hammond, and with pleasant memories of their visit to this historic settlement and pleased at the progress of the youth of Lance Cove as brigade boys, the officers departed for home.—Bell Island Miner.

A Revelation of Good Values at The Royal Stores this Friday & Saturday

A Local Answer to a World-Wide Problem

The whole world is still facing the problem of rising prices. From Patagonia to Alaska, from Vladivostok to Zanzibar, prices are climbing out of sight like aviators after altitude records.

We cannot solve the world problem, but we can help solve the local problem. We can and do help to reduce living expenses in Newfoundland.

Every Friday and Saturday we fire a hot shot at H. C. L. Every week-end we offer the things you need every day in your home or for your family—at specially lowered prices. Hundreds of people watch for these specials every week. Do you?

If you haven't been taking advantage of these opportunities, read this advertisement carefully and come this Friday and Saturday prepared to take advantage of the money savings offered at

THE ROYAL STORES.

To-Day's Messages.

LITTLE CHANGE.
LONDON, Sept. 29.
The bulletin of Lord Mayor MacSweeney, issued by the Self Determination League to-night says that his condition is little changed though he seems somewhat easier, and obtained some sleep.

NEW LORD MAYOR OF LONDON.
LONDON, Sept. 29.
Alderman James Roll to-day was elected Lord Mayor of London by the Court of Aldermen, with all the ancient picturesque ceremony. He will take office November 9th, succeeding Sir Edward E. Cooper.

ANOTHER DEATH.
NEW YORK, Sept. 29.
The thirty seventh death, as a result of the explosion in Wall Street September 16th, occurred to-night, when Theodore Peck of New York died in the Post Graduate Hospital. Burns and internal injuries caused his death.

VERDICT OF WILFUL MURDER.
BELFAST, Sept. 29.
A coroners jury inquiring into the death of James Connelly, 78 years old, who was shot dead at his home in Kinlough, South Donegal, when the military went to arrest his son, who is now a prisoner in Belfast jail, to-day returned the following verdict. "He died from shock and hemorrhage caused by a revolver bullet wound, wilfully inflicted by an officer, and a military sergeant accompanying him. We find the officer and the military sergeant guilty of wilful murder, which is accentuated by their not attending the inquiry."

NEW STEAMSHIP VENTURE.
MONTREAL, Sept. 29.
A continuous freight and passenger service to Iceland from Montreal during the open season, and Halifax in the winter will be soon in effect, if Mr. Arnie Gertson, a prominent real estate and financial broker of Winnipeg is successful in the mission he has undertaken for the Government of Iceland, from which country he has just returned.

20,000 PRISONERS.
SEBASTOPOL, Sept. 29.
General Wrangel, the anti-Bolshevik leader in South Russia, has made prisoners of nearly 20,000 Bolsheviks, North of Alexandrovsk with the aid of the Ukrainian General Makno, it is reported that Wrangel controls the famous Donetz coal basin.

ANTI-BRITISH DEMONSTRATION.
NEW YORK, Sept. 29.
Police were called to Carnegie Hall to-night, to eject a crowd of men and women, who forced their way into the building during the tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims. The intruders, carrying banners with anti-British inscriptions, created great disorder with shouts of "Hurrah for America," and "Down with England." The disturbances reached such proportions that it was impossible for speakers to continue, and it was decided to adjourn the meeting without further attempts to complete the programme.

England's Cricket Captain.
That the choice of Mr. R. H. Spooner to lead the M.C.C. team against Australia is an admirable one is the unanimous opinion of all the critics. I doubt if there is a more popular player in England than "Reggie" Spooner, whose modest and charming personality is illustrated by this story.

Mr. Spooner did his bit in the war, and was wounded twice. On the second occasion he was picking his way painfully along a communication trench when he met a number of H.A.C. men. Of this party he inquired the nearest way to the dressing-station.

They were giving him instructions, when Captain Spooner suddenly broke in: "You might shut up calling me 'Sir!' I was at school with many of you chaps."

The Fun of Business.
Lord Leverhulme recently told a good story to show why business men work as hard as they do. It is not for the money, he said, as much as for the sheer fun of it.

A man named Tyson, he said, went out to Australia in the early days. He now has sheep farms in Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia. He has millions of sheep and cattle, yet he lives as simply as one of his own stockmen.

He is now eighty years of age—bald and hearty. When he was asked why he worked so hard and lived like a workman, he replied that it was not a matter of money at all.

"I have put sheep where there were no sheep," he said; "cattle where there were no cattle—houses where there were no houses—white men where there were only black men before. That is the fun I get out of it."

Wedding Bells.

DUNPHY-McLELLAN.

On September 15th, the R. C. Cathedral, St. George's, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, the principals being Isabel, younger daughter of J. A. and Mrs. McLellan, and Alex.

M. son of Mrs. and the late Capt. Dunphy, of St. John's. As the beautiful strains of the wedding march pealed forth, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and the bridal party took up their position at the altar. The bride, who looked charming, was attired in a navy travelling costume and wore fox furs, which were the gift of the groom. She was attended by Miss Teresa Dunphy, of St. John's, and the groom was ably supported by Mr. Leo Boland, of Curling. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Brosnan, following a nuptial mass,

Masonic Garden Party.

BRETHREN OF THE MYSTIC TIE HOLD ENJOYABLE FUNCTION.

The garden party, sports, and sale of work conducted by the members of Cliff Lodge, Masonic Order, on Bennett's Field and in the C.L.B. Armoury, proved a great success and realized more than the most sanguine hopes of the Worthy Master, Mr. C. F. Taylor and his various committees. The ladies took a most prominent part in the conduct of the affair, particularly in the sale of work, while their catering was of a very high order and appeased the inner man of all those who attended. It would be impossible to individualize in the work of the Ladies' Committee. They all did well and are quite an adjunct to the Order, and we are glad to see that the lady friends of the members of Cliff Lodge are such splendid workers. A programme of sports on the field had to be cancelled owing to the disagreeable weather prevailing, but the football fives were held on the next evening; four teams entered; Stars, Swandos, Ramblers, and Cadets. In the preliminaries the Cadets defeated the Swandos, and the Stars defeated the Ramblers. In the finals between the Cadets and Stars, the latter went down to defeat, the Cadets winning by two goals. The winners were awarded handsome medals provided by Cliff Lodge. The team was: J. F. McEvoy, M. Farrell, M. Dobbin, F. Jackman, and J. Stone. Messrs. Taylor, Proudfoot, and the various committees are to be congratulated on the successful termination of the Masonic games and sale of work—Bell Island Miner.

A Word From King's Point.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—This is the first time ever writing to your esteemed journal, and I sincerely trust that you will give me a little space for a few notes. We would like to ask Mr. Coaker—the Big Chief—what he intends doing with our fish. Are we to sacrifice our summer's catch for less than nothing, or will he give us the $12.00 promised by him? There will be something doing when Coaker's "stalking horse," Jennings comes around here looking for votes. Quite a few letters passed through the Post Office here the past summer addressed to Coaker and Halfyard men, but they got knocked out in their plans. They tried hard to get one of their heebers here as operator and P. M. But we told Coaker and Halfyard that we would not tolerate it. We are all Cashin men here now. Only about half a dozen for the party now in power. Fred Thistle's daughter was turned out of the Telegraph office because her father was not a supporter of the clique then in power. You will hear from me again pretty soon, Mr. Editor.

Yours truly, FISHERMAN.

Winter's Coming!

Wintry winds hint shrilly that these woollen garments are in season.

Famous Jaeger Underwear

Dropped from $17.50 to $15.00.
Even at the old prices these garments were wonderful values. Confidentially, we know of other makes, less reliable, that have been selling for more, probably trying to beat Jaeger quality—which is impossible. There's an iron-bound guarantee of satisfaction with every suit. Unshrinkable, 100 per cent. all wool. The kind that sends the mercury mounting. Pocket the $2.50 and give us . . . . . $15.00.

WANT TO DRESS BETTER FOR LESS.

These washable Chamoisette Gloves will tickle your vanity and impress your pocket-book with the importance of buying now. Why not buy two pairs? Sport a clean pair of gloves every day. They'll cost you for two pairs just what you would have to pay for one pair of real Chamois.

$2.50 pair, cut to . . . . . $2.00

WE'RE OUT TO CREATE A SENSATION.

Not good business, others would call it, to reduce these rich looking Bannockburns when they were such good value at even the old price. Our answer is: they all must go. Famous English Caps with the new "cushy-fit peak"—"velvet touch," one chap called it—and he's right, they do fit easy.

Marking the Doom of High Prices.

Kearney says:

I care not for those who clamor that I can't do it. I have done it. To-day brings the proof. I have dared to take the situation by the forelock, marching back to '14 with big American manufacturers. Whether prices will lower sufficiently to make my scheme come true—whether the drop will be permanent—these are the risks I take. I am depending upon my gains in English Exchange to see me through. I am sharing that exchange with you. I am the first to do it. Let those follow who will. Kearney is first.

Kearney's Five Dollar Hats.

Christy's London Soft Felts, nationally known and worn. We'll stake our reputation on this value. We dare any hatter in the city to compete any other make against it for $2.50 more and produce the same wearing qualities. Colors: Dark Navy, Dark Grey, Green. Fine curled stitched brim. Sizes 7 1/4, 7 3/8, 7 1/2. Select the one that suits you . . . . . $5.00

Swan-Russel Five Dollar Hats,

The same make, selling elsewhere for $7.50.
You have hesitated about buying a new hat this fall—thought the price would be too high. That's no longer an objection. Here's an opportunity to add a smart soft felt to your wardrobe for less than to-day's prices in the foreign market. Assorted colors, all sizes, various styles. Your choice for . . . . . $5.00

"Midsize" Derbies.

Marked to a margin. Old Price $4.00. New Price $2.85.
A dressy stiff hat, cannot be approached by any other article of headgear for its natty, dignified look. Truly a man's hat. The "Midsize" self-conforming band fits any head. Price no longer an objection . . . . . $2.85

What $1 will Buy

A dollar is a mighty small amount these days—most men find it difficult to think up what they can buy for a dollar, when they have a spare one—much less such dressy appearing neckwear as we offer for . . . $1.00
The reason's apparent: these are all $1.50 Scarves—and you'll never get such an opportunity again to lay in a stock. Even half a dozen won't be too much, and you save $3.00 on the lot.

BATWING BOWS CUT TO $1.00.

A dollar is not so much to pay to have a different look to your turnout every other day. And these Bows certainly do give that. If you don't know how—we'll teach you to make up a neat appearing Bow. These were $1.25. All colours; all lengths.

WHAT ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY.

Many were the expressions of satisfaction made by Collar buyers when we announced a reduction in Famous Arrow Brand Collars, 40c. each regular price, 3 for $1.00.

It will pay you now to buy at least a dozen at a saving of 80c. Take them any way you wish, any size, any style. You'll not get this chance again—we are handling an entirely new line when these are sold.

THAT USEFUL DOLLAR AGAIN!

Yes, sir, we reckoned that the dollar was about the most common piece of money in circulation, so we cut all our Soft Collars accordingly. These range from 40c. up to 60c. Piques, silk stripe and plain; assorted styles, all sizes. Choose them as you wish. Why not a dozen assorted to your taste? Wear a new style every day. 3 for $1.00.

85 pairs FINE KNIT CASHMERE HOSE.

$1.25 pair, cut to . . . . . $1.00.
Double knit, perfect fitting, colors that won't dye the feet. Hose that give you a warm feeling from your feet up to your pocket-book. Buy them by the half dozen box.

It will pay you to buy your winter outfits now, even to stock up on your needs for next Spring. Never again will this opportunity be presented. Once the stock is cleared, there end our efforts. Delay not a day. Use the phone if you can't come.

Never before have there been cut prices in our store. Never again will such reductions be made.

Murdered in Hospital.

The "Echo de Paris" gives details of a terrible crime in the military hospital of Casablanca, Morocco, where Jean Esserted, son of a wealthy St. Etienne merchant, shot his wife as she lay in a hospital bed and then endeavoured to make out that she had committed suicide. The motive of the crime was the young man's craze for another woman. As a result of paternal pleading, he recently broke with this woman and married Mdlle. Lucie Godart.

A few weeks ago Mme. Esserted fell ill and was removed to the military hospital, where her husband obtained permission to sleep in an adjoining room. In the dead of night, Jean Esserted entered his wife's room unperceived, and, as she lay sleeping, fired a revolver shot at her heart. He then shot himself in the left arm and shouted, "My wife's committed suicide. She shot me in the arm while I was trying to disarm her." Then, seeing his wife still breathing, he shot her a second time.

The suicide theory was at first accepted at the hospital, but when the dying woman was lying on the operating table she momentarily recovered consciousness and screamed, "Take me away. My husband is going to kill me." Esserted was arrested, and he eventually confessed.

and who is nearly 2st. heavier. Barry was born in London in 1882, he was apprenticed as a watchman on the Thames, and won Doggett's Coat and Badge in 1903. His success in that race and in handicaps, attracted the notice of Mr. H. T. Blackstaffe and other sportsmen, and eventually he was matched to meet the veteran George Towns, of N. S. W., in a race for the championship of England, which Towns had won since 1899. Barry won easily and in 1911 he defended the title successfully in matches against the late William Albany, a River Lea sculler, and W. H. Fogwell, of Australia.

In the meantime he had sculled his first match for the championship of the world in 1910, when he met Richard Arnst, of New Zealand, at the regatta on the Zambest River, arranged by a number of sportsmen in Rhodesia. After a very hard race, Arnst won. Barry challenged the big New Zealander in 1912, and eventually the latter agreed to come to England, and the match was sculled on July 29, 1912. Another fine struggle was witnessed, but Barry lasted better than his rival, and wore the latter down before the finish. It was a notable occasion, for no Englishman had held the championship since the defeat of J. H. Sadler by Edward Trickett, of N. S. W., in 1875. Before the war Barry defended his title successfully in three matches, beating Edward Duran, of Canada, in the autumn of 1912; Harry Pearce, of Australia, in 1913; and James Paddon, of Australia, in 1914. On the Saturday Barry won his fifth world's championship match, a record equalled by Robert Chambers, (Tyne), Edward Hanlan (Canada), James Stanbury (N. S. W.), and Richard Arnst (New Zealand), and beaten only by William Beach (N.S.W.), who won seven consecutive matches between 1884 and 1887, and then retired.

They used to wear $15 suits and $3 shoes."

Nearly $900,000,000 in gold—said to be the greatest amount of the precious metal stored in any one place in the world to-day—has just been shot down a chute from the United States Sub-treasury in New York, across the alleyway, to the lower floor of the United States Assay Office, the new building next door east, which has the largest and most modern vaults in the world. The gold is in bars, about six inches long and two inches wide. A bar of gold of the size is worth about $6,500 if of the average coin-fineness, but some bars of especially high grade are worth $7,500 or $7,700.

Barry is Champion Sculler.

Brief despatches were published about Barry's victory, but the following details, sent to the London Times from Sydney, Australia, will be interesting:
 Barry recovered the sculling championship of the world from Felton on the Parramatta River by 12 lengths. One hundred and fifty thousand saw the race, which was rowed under deal conditions. The betting favored Barry, although there was not much to choose between the two men.
 After a long delay they got away well together. Before a quarter of a mile had been rowed, Felton had a length's lead, which at Putney, a mile and a half from the start, had increased to two lengths. Barry was rowing well with long sweeping strokes, and he was gradually bringing Felton back. Crossing Putney Point Barry seemed to converge on Felton, the boats appeared to touch, and both men stopped rowing and held up their hands. There was no signal from the umpire and the race accordingly continued, Barry being the first to pick up. From that point onwards Barry had a complete mastery over Felton.

 Rowing superbly, he seemed to go away at will, and he soon established a lead of two lengths, and at two miles he increased this lead to three lengths. For the remainder of the course, the race became a mere procession, Barry ultimately winning by 12 lengths, or 41 seconds, in 13 minutes, 32 seconds. Barry finished strongly, and he rowed back to his quarters as if he were out for exercise. Felton, on the other hand, seemed to have felt the pace set in the early part of the race, and he finished raggedly.
 The umpire explained afterwards that the supposed foul had occurred in neutral water, and that Barry had won. The general expression felt among the followers of sport was that the mishap made little difference, and that under ordinary conditions, Barry would have won almost as easily as he did. Experts say that Felton had rowed himself to a standstill in attempting to put a big gap between himself and the challenger in the early stages of the race.

 Paddon is expected to challenge Barry, but as the Englishman talks of returning immediately, the match is not likely to take place on the Parramatta. Arnst and Paddon are expected to meet, and the winner may go home early next season.
 The news that Ernest Barry has regained his title as sculling champion of the world will give the greatest satisfaction to followers of rowing, for his previous match against Felton gave no true test of the relative merits of the two scullers. Under the conditions which prevailed on that bitterly cold, rough day last October, success in the toss for choice of stations practically decided the issue. Possibly Barry held his rival too lightly on that occasion. At any rate, he lost his only chance when he failed to follow Felton over the sheltered water on the Middlesex side. While Barry struggled along in mid-river against the full force of the gale Felton established a winning lead before the first mile had been covered.
 Felton acted in sportsmanlike fashion by giving Barry the opportunity for another match before meeting other challengers, and it was due to the enterprise of the Daily Mail that Barry's stake money of £500 and expenses of £2,000 for the visit to Australia was raised. The result has justified the confidence of Barry's supporters, for the victory was obtained in very easy fashion. It was a particularly pleasing result in view of the fact that Barry is the first Englishman to visit Australia to scull for the championship. It is understood that Barry's old opponent, Richard Arnst, is anxious to meet the champion again. If Barry accepts the challenge he will probably stipulate that the match be rowed on the Thames.
 Barry is without a doubt one of the most finished scullers that ever sat a best-boat, his body form and sliding work being quite first class. On Saturday he outpaced a man who is some eight years his junior.

BANK WATCHMAN HAS FULLY RECOVERED LOSS.

Gain Tips Beam At 206 Pounds And Feels Like Different Man Since Tanlac Built Him Up So Remarkably, Says Gervais.

Yes, sir, it's a fact. Tanlac has really built me up forty pounds in weight, and I now feel like a new man altogether," said Celestin Gervais, of 550 Rivard Street, Montreal, a watchman at the Montreal City District Savings Bank.

"I have been in bad health for a good of fifteen years, and during that time suffered terribly from indigestion and stomach trouble. My weight was so poor that I could hardly stand the smell of cooking. At many times when I came home to work I could scarcely eat a thing. The little I did eat caused me great all up with sour gas, and I was such little nourishment that I usually lost forty pounds in weight.

"I had a severe pain across my chest that made me feel like I was carrying a heavy load, and I got such a run-down condition that I had to give up my trade of carpenter altogether. Although I tried all kinds of medicines, none of them seemed to help me, and I was at a loss what to do.

"I kept on seeing so many statements in the papers about all that Tanlac was doing, that I made up my mind to try it, and I'm mighty glad to say that it certainly has done the work in my case. Why, since taking four bottles of the medicine I have an excellent appetite, and eat just everything I want without feeling a sign of indigestion or gas. I have gained back every bit of that forty pounds in weight, and that awful pain has completely disappeared from my shoulders. As I said, I feel like an entirely different person, and I want to give Tanlac credit for putting me in such splendid health."

"Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Cormors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin E. Byrne, in Upper Gables by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. ## The Fish Regulations

From a Canadian Viewpoint.

Commercial men returning from Newfoundland, and advised by mail, the news of exceeding depression in the fish business, a staff correspondent of the Financial Post, writes a paper. The price of cod a year ago as it lay in the vessels, was $11 per quintal of 112 pounds, and that the merchants will pay to-day is about $8 per quintal. This is a great hardship to the fishermen and loss to the entire community. The foreign markets are depressed, and it is not certain that a price can be made even at the lower $8 are losers, and there had bought at a figure higher than $8 are losers, and there have been heavy losses, running in some instances into hundreds of thousands of dollars. The fishermen now get only $8 per quintal for their product had as large an outlay outfitting as when they commanded a price of $14, so that their loss is present, though it is not all loss, for the fact is admitted that at $14 a year profits were very large. The present decline is, however, felt acutely, and is the cause of much distress.

Fishermen, but whether in the long run it will be found beneficial remains to be demonstrated. The government refuse to clear a vessel with a fish cargo for a foreign port unless the price at which the fish are to be sold is stated, and no fish is to be sold as low as $8. The price which the importer in Brazil or Portugal or wherever the St. John's merchant has a market is fixed by the government, and unless this is accepted before the ship sails the customs officials are not allowed to clear the ship. How this is to work out does not yet appear, but it is considered dangerous and probably futile by the majority of the business men of St. John's.

National Banks Proposed.

Hon. Mr. Coaker announces that the matter of national banks for Newfoundland is under consideration. For many years the only banks in the country has had have branches of Canadian banks, the Bank of Nova Scotia having by far the most of these branches. This is a result of the disastrous failure a long time ago of the local Newfoundland banks. It is not unlikely that the recollection of the events of that time will deter the people generally from taking any very strong financial interest in the proposed national bank, but probably Hon. Mr. Coaker's ideas would be to use the bank for general financing in line with his own economic beliefs, and not that it should be essentially an institution for the people.

Newfoundland has had financial depression in the past. The country quickly recovers from them, and the times now being experienced will undoubtedly soon pass. Whether government price fixing and the establishment of state banks will contribute to this is not at all certain. In any event the great iron ore and pulp wood resources are constantly increasing as a great national asset.

Political Sidelights.

One of the members of the government is Hon. W. F. Coaker, who long been a figure in Newfoundland affairs as the head of the Fishermen's Union, a co-operative movement which was designed to transact business direct without the intervention of the middlemen in St. John's. Coaker secured a strong hold on the confidence of the people of Newfoundland outside the capital city of St. John's, and these are nearly all men. They would be a sort of party in Canada. In the elections the union figured largely. Mr. Coaker is a member of government. Now his hand is in the regulation of trade ostensibly in the interest of the big

"A CERTAIN RIGHT."

AWA—While technically, the presence of a United States armed vessel in the St. Lawrence river, may be a violation of the Rush-Bagot convention of 1817, no apprehension is shown by the official Ottawa, regarding the appearance of an American vessel in the St. Lawrence should be limited to the armament of small calibre but modern design. Officials here also point out that the U. S. government, in placing an armed vessel in the St. Lawrence river, is placing an armed vessel in the St. Lawrence river, as the U.S. is a friendly neighbour, there is no reason for taking

Dailies Come Into Their Own.

As we look back over the days when the newspapers were being made victims of political prejudice, the footballs of narrow-visioned Congressmen and Senators, and the hate of demagogues, we are aroused with enthusiasm over the remarkable progress that has been made by the dailies in spite of these unfortunate circumstances. The newspapers have come into their own because they have fought the battle against uncalled for prejudice openly and courageously. They stand to-day recognized as clear-cut business institutions, as fearless champions of all classes of people against everything that is not for the common good of us all. With the coming of their great and undivided strength, they have become entrenched in the good-will and respect of the American people. They have become the foundation of good Americanism, and they have become institutions which can never again be jeopardized through political activity or selfish purpose.

Considering all details entering into the making and distribution of a newspaper, there is perhaps no other branch of business which went through such trying days between 1914 and the present time—no other business which fought so gallantly and persistently to avoid financial embarrassment. Operating expenses mounted skyward with the speed that would have sickened the hearts of men engaged in other business activities, and there were times when even the stout heart of publishers were tired to the limit. But like the great ship that weathers the raging hurricane, the newspaper business of America sailed into port with its flag flying. Great captains are the publishers and editors of this country. The sea of journalism is still ruffled with angry breakers, but the moments of grave danger have been passed.

Newspaper production charges have advanced to a point where they are, in some instances, double what they were before the war—and yet month after month publishers hoped against hope that it would not be necessary to raise circulation and advertising prices. In many cases it will take years for publishers to regain the money they lost before they were finally compelled to pass part of the increased overhead on to readers and advertisers. Even under the new schedule of rates, publishers are still shouldering financial responsibilities that would have been quickly passed along to the public by any other class of business interests. Three cents a copy for a morning or afternoon newspaper may seem like a price that would leave a good profit, and advertising rates that have been materially increased may cause some advertisers to feel that considerable profit is being derived from advertising patronage. But this is not so, as I have learned after analyzing cost systems of a number of newspapers located in different sections of the country. Taking into consideration the hazardous nature of the newspaper business, the profit now derived by the average publisher is insignificant compared with the profit that is being made in practically all other industries. Here again we see that publishers are ever mindful of their reader and advertiser clientele. In fact I am sure that they are too much so.

For all together too many years publishers have given more consideration to readers and advertisers than they have to their own financial situation. For too many years publishers have sought to keep the selling price of their publications down to the lowest possible level. The people of the United States have come to realize that they must pay for their requirements, the prices that have been made necessary through newly constituted conditions, and they are invariably paying it with a will that is characteristic of the American spirit. The people no longer expect to buy newspapers at a price which doesn't permit of a reasonable margin of profit, and advertisers no longer expect to purchase space at a price that creates a deficit on the publisher's books. These are days of a new era in the general business of this country, and every commercial and industrial business must adjust itself to a point where the income is sufficient to guarantee a profit upon which business may be continued.

We are going to pay five cents per copy for our morning and evening newspapers before many moons have been crossed from the calendar, and advertisers are going to pay rates in keeping with the service that the newspapers are performing for them. For too many years we had cheap newspapers; for too many years we had cheap advertising rates. We doubt very much that either the reader or the advertiser ever appreciated the desire of publishers to give them cheap newspapers or cheap advertising mediums. We doubt very much that doing so, but in the new era of business we have all learned facts not common to us in the days gone by. The daily newspaper of the future will bring five cents per copy, and the public will pay the price willingly. Advertising rates of the future are going to be much higher than they are at present, and advertisers are going to pay the price cheerfully.—Newspaperdom.

PROPERTY OWNERS, ATTENTION!

I am now ready to take some repair work. Any part of the house from sill to roof I can handle. If you intend putting up a New Building why not have me superintend it. You can save money and get a better job than if you put it on contract. I also have a Pile Driver and all equipments for wharf building and would be glad to take on a job of that work. I will be glad to call and see anyone who may have work to be done.

The Work of the Grenfell Hospital.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I am venturing to send you for the information of the public a copy of the work of this Association for the past year, which has just arrived. It may be the whole thing, but I want you especially to allow me to draw your attention and that of the public to the hospital work. The number of patients treated has increased steadily every year, and already this year by the end of August more patients had been treated both in and outside of the hospital than any previous year. The actual cost of St. Anthony Hospital alone rose to nearly $29,000 last year, though that only allowed $2.42 per day for hospital care. The staff at the present moment includes: Dr. Charles Curtis, M.A., Harvard, Surgeon-in-Chief; Dr. Hayden, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, House Officer; Mr. Washburn and Mr. Richards, Harvard, Laboratory and bedside assistants; Dr. C. Mullineaux, Dental Surgeon, Dr. Joseph A. Andrews, California, Eye Specialist; Miss Hosmer, X-Ray expert with the General Electric Co., New York.

I have done most of the orthopedic work while in residence. Eight trained nurses, with occasional assistants, form the nursing staff. There has been added to the hospital a new portable bedside X-Ray apparatus, large new fluoroscope and a large house has been secured for additional tubercular patients, together with our big tent. Including the patients in the wards of the hospital itself, 70 to 80 patients have been treated at one time. A great deal of other surgical apparatus has been added to bring the capacity for modern work as high as we can make it.

The patients themselves, who come from all parts of the country, are best evidence of the results. When I left in June there were 800 patients waiting for admittance to the General Hospital at St. John's, according to figures here. At the end of 1918, I had to warn the people of the coast that unless more aid was forthcoming in Newfoundland I might feel obliged to close down the hospital. The patients have taken this matter up in earnest with the people of the coast, with the result that although the majority come during the earning part of the year, though we are probably the poorest section of the coast, and though many of the patients have to come long distances and pay their own passages both ways, they contributed this year at St. Anthony $5,872, as against $2,137 the year before. The other hospitals show an increase. With the increased cost of transportation and living commodities, the budget for this year cannot possibly be under $30,000 for St. Anthony, and it must be remembered that a good deal of the expert work is practically volunteer, thus the two trained nutritional workers who labored all the year amongst the children of the coast, paid not only their travelling expenses, but all their board and lodging. This invaluable work has taken the fancy of the people, and we are expecting good results. The work will go on during the winter, and one can see already very plainly by the children, the improvement that is taking place, not alone for the children, but for the generations that will follow.

Besides General Sir Robert Jones, the great orthopedist, who is expected next year, Dr. Emerson, of Boston, will give us the benefit of his advice, and we shall again have a full staff in each branch for consultation work. The criticism that our sick brethren in the North should not be afforded the opportunity for up-to-date treatment because they are poor and needy, as a criticism, answers itself, when the facts are put down in black and white, but at the same time we have had patients from various parts of the country.

I have been obliged to submit to the Council of this Association that even if I were physically able after thirty years' work to spend several months each year raising money, I have been led to consider that my time could be more profitably spent on the coast itself, and infinitely more pleasantly. The uncertainty of being able to raise money, with the increasing expenses of the hospitals, becomes a heavier mental burden each year, and it was realized that some endowment must be raised if the work is to continue. There were many, when the Seamen's Institute was built, who severely criticised the undertaking as an unnecessary "white elephant." There are those still in doubt in their own minds as to whether the hospital work in the North should continue. Can anyone say to-day that a self-supporting institution like the Seamen's Institute has not justified its existence? Everyone who knows it feels that it would be a great thing for St. John's if some kind person would build a similar institution in the West End. His Excellency the Governor, Rev. George Bond, and many others, have this year visited the work in the North, and are on the spot to express their opinion as to the value of it. A very delightful letter from Lord Morris reached us very recently. He paid us a personal visit to St. Anthony some years ago, and he refers to it in his letter as the "fine efforts and work on the Labrador."

I believe that no man who has lived any time in St. Anthony, would feel it was possible now to go back. There are few enough inducements to keep our young men in the country in these days, and once deprive the family man of the North of access to the kind of treatment that we who know what can be done in these days would demand for our children, and I am certain that there would be another large exodus from the north end of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Personally, I do think that the grant of $5,000 towards a hospital the size of St. Anthony, is not commensurate with the sum of $165,000 given to the General Hospital at St. John's. No one who has studied the problem can believe that the best interests, as far as the people go, are conserved by centralising all hospital work in the south, even if it is in St. John's, and while the population of White Bay and the Straits is a small one, it is a coast that raises a very large revenue through the fish it catches. An absolutely impartial Commission appointed by the Government two years ago, after a thorough investigation into the methods of the work, gave it its unqualified endorsement. This letter is not in any way to criticise the attitude the various Governments have taken towards the size of the grant to the hospitals; they have done what they thought their constituents would approve. What I do want to bring before the public is that they are unfamiliar with the importance of the work done, as were those who clamored there was no use for an Institute in St. John's, that the fishermen would never care for clean beds and separate rooms, or baths, reading rooms or lecture halls, because they have always bunked on a schooner while in port and had always been satisfied with it. There was, however, a general feeling that we ought to deprive them of the comfort and cheer of the saloon, the only place that many of them had, as they have told me over and over again, to get in out of the cold in the winter evenings when in the city.

At a meeting at Government House, called by His Excellency, and attended by a number of the leading men of the city, the plan of raising an Endowment Fund for the hospitals was unanimously approved. The unusual position of the money market at the present time and the large pledges given for the Maternity Hospital and educational work in St. John's makes it inadvisable to enlarge upon the scheme to render permanent this work, but already some of our friends have promised to help, and we hope in the spring, before next summer's season opens, to raise at least a partial endowment. We have had moving pictures made of the hospitals and some of the phases of the work which will be ready to show to the public together with the figures for this year's work. The appeal for help and for more proportional Government aid, will be considered, and I hope will be granted on the merits of the work, apart from any prejudice of sect, creed or politics.

I would like to close by saying that the hospital at Twillingate is fast approaching realisation. Alas, Magistrate Roberts, so generous and so earnest in his efforts to see it materialise, passed to his account before the work could be begun, but already plans have been drawn, the site chosen, funds in hand, and an unusually able surgeon selected to oversee and carry out the work as soon as the committee is ready to go ahead. Pilleys Island, in charge of Dr. Patrick Gear, has been doing excellent work this summer, and will probably continue to go ahead even after Twillingate starts, as a sub-station. Every surgeon in the outposts, I am sure, will endorse it when I say it is impossible to give to others what we should want for ourselves, if they have to work without trained nurses or any hospital accommodation or the best means of modern diagnosis.

Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor. Faithfully yours,
W. T. GRENFELL,
M.D., L.R.C.S., C.M.G., C.B.
Sept. 17, 1920.

The Right Arm of the Allies.

It was seen quite plainly at the time, but it is seen with still greater clearness now that the strong right arm of the Allies which enabled them to at length overcome the tremendous armament and the long preparation of Germany and her Allies was the sea-power of the British Empire. And by that sea-power we do not mean merely the navy, but the mercantile fleet as well. It is not too much to say that without the British sea-power the beating of Germany was a human impossibility. In the four years of the struggle the mercantile marine and the naval transports carried twenty million men overseas, two million horses, half a million vehicles, twenty-five million tons of explosives, fifty-two million tons of oil and fuel, and one hundred and thirty million tons of food and other material. Such figures were never known in history before, for they are equal to the transport, feeding, supplying and establishing of a nation nearly three times as populous as the Dominion of Canada. Without that navy the commerce of all the Allies would have been swept from the sea; Canada, the United States and Australasia would have been utterly unable to enter the war. Italy, on account of utter lack of coal and iron could not have been able to take any effective part beyond a few preliminary skirmishes; France would have failed for lack of food and munitions, and instead of the French colonies sending a million men they could not have transported a company. Of the heroic merchant marine Sir Robert Falconer has written:

"It was necessary to travel on the ocean during the war to realize the heroism of our sailors. Passengers had to carry their life-belts at all times, even hanging them over the backs of their chairs at meals; they were assigned to boats and given drill, and would get the first chance should any disaster befall. Suspense reigned from the beginning of the voyage to the end, but as soon as the ship touched the wharf they were off to their homes in safety. Not so, the sailor. He had to turn round and sail back over the same perilous course, and he was an exceptional man who did not, sometime, have his ship go down. The captain of one steamer that I crossed on had already been twice torpedoed, and he never left his post or was out of immediate call during the twelve days of my voyage. Officers and men went about their duties as faithfully as ever, undeterred by impending disaster. Towards nightfall one would see the stokers taking a short breathing spell on the topmost deck, and then descend again into the bowels of the ship, where if a torpedo were to strike they would be almost certain to be the first to perish. But we never heard that, through fear, they refused to do their duty. To all these men of the lower ranks of service, as well as to the officers and captains of mighty ships, we owe the deepest gratitude. England had not over much to eat last Winter (1917-18). The bread was dark, meat was scarce, sugar was doled out in small quantities, fruit had almost vanished, but the ships ran the gauntlet of the danger zones and there was enough to eat for health and strength during the hardest season of the war. It may be added in more detail that there were 300,000 merchant sailors serving the Empire in the world war of 1914-18; that they carried from Canada to the front $1,800,000,000 worth of munitions, or a sum more than enough to pay the national debt of Canada; that they carried billions of dollars worth of meat, wheat, and other commodities of Canada; that through their tireless, courageous, unflinching, unending efforts the people and armies of Britain, France, Italy and our other Allies were fed, re-inforced, armed and sustained; that more than fifteen thousand of these sailors were killed by submarine and floating mine and more than forty thousand of their dependents left to struggle along as best they might. Was ever such a record paged in history before?—Acadian Recorder.

Ambition—the Golfer's Great Aim.

There is no doubt that the golfer who plays a fairly good game, going through all the motions in a semi-serious attitude, gets quite a lot more enjoyment from golf than does the golfer who allows every imperfect shot to take a clip off his heart, writes Harry Vardon in the New York World. There is no doubt that the social game of golf is a greater benefit to the man—not the golfer—than is the match where much is at stake. But the besetting sin of the golfer is ambition. He wants to become very expert, and he so aspires even as he makes his first practice swing before the disapproving eye of his sorely afflicted instructor.

And as he wants to be serious, it is far better to treat him so. The beginner will stand most indignant teaching whereas that veteran who goes to an instructor with the end of having some imperfection erased, can perhaps stand a lot of ridicule. He has a feeling that golf is a silly game. I have had dozens come to me who would say that they were entirely satisfied with the sort of games they were daily playing. In fact, one would say, he would rather not be too good, for golf was taking as much of his time and thought as it deserved. And always I would ask why he had come to me to have himself corrected if he were thoroughly well satisfied. And there was no answer that he could give.

The fact is that all golfers are striving for perfection. Some, who have been working to improve for long months and vainly, laugh at the suggestion that they are ambitious. Those laughs are slight solace and little ease for the injured pride that comes from a disgraceful fault. There are others who fought for long before they allowed themselves to become converted. And they are somewhat loath to admit that there is ambition in their hearts. They would rather take the attitude that golf, in these cases, was begun at great sacrifice for the pleasure of wives and friends. But they are ambitious.

On the current tour, travelling from Cleveland to Columbus in Ohio, I was sitting in the smoking compartment with a white-haired gentleman who had confided to us all that he was a manufacturer of the tinsel for Christmas trees, and that he resided in Cincinnati. One of our party had in his hand the golf ball that Ted Ray had played in the final at Toledo. The gentleman gazed at the ball with interest and then reached out for it. He held it in his hand and asked what it was. He was told that it was a golf ball. "Take it away," he exclaimed. "I don't want to touch one." He was asked if he had ever played the game.

"No," he replied, "but my wife has been trying to persuade me to start it for the last two years."

I venture to predict that he will be playing soon, if he has not already begun.

The grip that the game has on those who play it, I should say no more than the desire, and the very humble one, to make progress to overcome difficulties. There is much social enjoyment at times, and there is indeed a joy in the spirit of contest, but the grasp with which it takes hold of one, and the tenacity with which it keeps that grasp are due, as I analyze it, to the powerful and inherent trait, the desire to attain perfection.

One can measure his progress in golf as in other games. There are no doubt writers who are happy in their successes. Business men, have aspirations to become good business men, are held in their business.

But in no game in life, it seems to me, can one so easily have his imperfections diagnosed as in golf.

There is no other endeavor in which one can measure his success or it in numbers as in golf, where the player can judge by his score.

This last is not at all a commentary thing to say. A man seeking to approximate perfection can seek no easier field of golf. If he has it in him it will out with sufficient effort.

Where Pianos Are Public Property.

The situation with regard to pianos in Bolshevik Russia is described in an enlightening article in the French paper Musique et Instruments, which reaches this country in the form of a translation in the London Musical Opinion. The article, written by M. L. Abbiati, at one time professor of violoncello at the Imperial Conservatoire in Petrograd and just returned to France, constitutes one of the rare authentic reports on matters musical in the dark and distraught land. "All the pianos in the town are registered," writes M. Abbiati. "They are public property. Naturally the piano is the instrument mostly in use for the innumerable workmen's clubs, barracks, schools, etc., must be provided with them. Nobody has the right to sell them or to move them; at least not without special permission from the commissary. Pianos necessary to the needs of the people are requisitioned, for with the nationalization of the factories and warehouses new supplies are no longer available. In addition, all pianos left in homes abandoned by their owners are seized, and the number is considerable. However, I know of no case where the piano of a private person has been taken. It goes without saying that no repairing or tuning is done, and consequently all pianos are in a deplorable condition.

In the matter of stringed instruments, according to this observer, the situation is even worse. Lack of repairs is fatal to such instruments, yet luthiers who remain at work make such exorbitant charges that people find it better to discard their broken violins and guitars, in the expectation of buying better ones from those formerly rich but now compelled to sell at starvation prices.

How Lincoln Dressed.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor has written an interesting study of Abraham Lincoln's personality. He gives a quaint picture of the great man in his early days.

His hat was brown, faded, and the nap usually worn or rubbed off. He wore a short cloak, and sometimes a shawl. His coat and vest hung loosely on his gaunt frame, and his trousers were invariably too short. On circuit he carried in one hand a faded green umbrella, with "A. Lincoln" in large white cotton or muslin letters sewed on the inside. The knob was gone from the handle, and when closed a piece of cord was usually tied round it in the middle, to keep it from flying open.

In the other hand he carried a literal carpet-bag, in which were stored the few papers to be used in court, and underclothing enough to last until his return to Springfield. He slept in a long, coarse, yellow flannel shirt, which reached half-way between his knees and ankles. It was probably not made to fit his bony figure as completely as Beau Brummel's shirt, and hence we can appreciate the sensation of a young lawyer who, on seeing him thus arrayed for the first time, observed afterwards that "he was the ugliest figure I ever saw."

One other little touch to complete the picture; it is the story of Lincoln's hat. The hat of Lincoln—a silk plug—was an extraordinary receptacle. It was his desk and his memorandum book. In it he carried his bank books and the bulk of his letters. Whenever in his reading he wished to preserve an idea he jotted it down on an envelope or stray piece of paper, and placed it inside the lining. Afterwards, when the memorandum was needed, there was only one place to look for it.

Fashions and Fads.

Some charming dance frocks have skirts as full as hoop-skirts.

A low-necked ball gown of black broadcloth is embroidered in gold.

Duveltyns are shown in bright colors for tailor dresses and wraps.

Some sleeves are long and tight fitting, and with fullness at the top.

Tulle sashes and trains are featured by the winter evening frocks.

A black serge dress, cut on princess lines has heavy black lace panels.

Belts of narrow black moire ribbon have large jeweled and composition buckles.

One smart suit is cut on Chinese lines and developed in squirrel girl vel de cygne.

Evening gowns show one-sided effects with ribbon or rhinestone shoulder straps.

Not only in tailored dresses, but in sheer frocks, has the long sleeve been reinstated.

Street frocks are being trimmed with heavy laces dyed to match the color of the frock.

A long streamer of black tulle falls from the right shoulder of a cerise velvet gown.

Suit coats have narrow shoulders, tight sleeves and an uneven edge at the bottom.

Stiff qualities of satin will be worn for evening, especially in three colors—fame, copper and coral pink.

Evening gowns have strings of pearls hanging from the shoulder and looped under at the waistline or knee.

Margin Trading!

The great advantage of an account on margin is this: You can control at least three times as many shares of the stocks you desire as is possible by buying outright, and you thus have the opportunity of netting considerable profit on any advance in the value of the shares.

Take McKinley-Barragh for example. $20 buys outright about 33 shares on which the yield is approximately 20 per cent., but on margin, $20 controls 100 shares on which the income yield is 60 per cent.—and all from a 12 per cent. stock.

We are fully equipped to execute your orders on any stock or bond listed in New York.
