CHAPTER XLIV.

"Mr. Milner is going to sing," said Lady Knight's pretty gay voice. "He sings so well, and with so much pathos, that I always feel inclined to cry."

"You stop at the inclination, I suppose?" Stephen interrogated languidly, glancing over at his wife, who was talking to Mr. Daunt as he bent over the sofa on which she sat.

A soft sweet melody in a minor key was stealing through the room, and the gay chatter had ceased. Even in a mixed company people were always silent when Lloyd Milner sang or played even those who professedly disliked music in general could not fail to like his; and the room was very still as his tender tenor voice rose, singing some pathetic passionate lines which he himself had set to music.

"As the last tender chords died away there was a little rustle of silken skirts and the sound of a closing door. "I am afraid Mrs. Daunt is ill," Lady Knight said, in a subdued tone. "She looked so white as she left the room. Shall I go to her?"

"I will go," Stephen answered hurriedly. "I will go to her."

"I will go," Stephen answered hurriedly. "I will go to her."

"I will go," Stephen answered hurriedly. "I will go to her."

CHAPTER XLV.

There was a little sitting-room opening on to the hall at Lambwood which was Dolly's exclusive property, a pretty dainty room paneled in light-colored shining wood and full of the pretty trifles with which girls like to surround themselves. There was a profusion of china, of photographs, of pretty brackets and ivory frames, and the furniture was upholstered in pale-colored chintz dotted with flowers.

It was hither Sidney Daunt came when she escaped from the drawing-room at the close of Lloyd Milner's song; she had hastened out of the room fearing lest her self-command should forsake her, for the words, even more than the music of the song, had touched her keenly, and she felt that she might give way and cry aloud.

She had not been there long when Stephen entered.

"You are better?" he said gently, bending toward her.

"Yes," she answered, faintly.

"Will you go back to the drawing-room?"

"Not yet," she said, raising her eyes

CHAPTER I.

Mrs. Lexton stared.

"To you? To you? The whole village!" exclaimed Mrs. Lexton.

"Yes," said Claire, calmly. "Every house; a great many of the boats themselves; those donkeys may be mine; certainly every inch of the land is. I do not know whether the vessels pay a toll to the pier, but if they do, it is mine."

"Oh, I cannot realize it, Claire."

Claire smiled.

"And now you can understand how I fall to realize it," she said gently.

They walked on, and presently they came to another clearing from which they could see prosperous farms dotted among the neatly-hedged fields.

"And these?" asked Mrs. Lexton.

"Are mine, also," said Claire. "That large farm is Westcott, and that Low Barton, and that one over there Fallby. The farm near the house, just beyond the stables, is the Home Farm. It supplies us with butter and cream and eggs, and it costs a small fortune to keep up."

"Those woods over there in the distance, surely those are not yours?"

"Indeed, yes!" replied Claire. "The estate stretches farther than you can see."

Mrs. Lexton drew another long breath.

"I am growing bewildered, Claire," she said. "I cannot take it all in at one view. I must come up here and look steadily at one part of it, and when I have realized that, that belongs to you, I must turn to another part, and so on."

"We will go down this way," she said, "and look in at the stables; you will not have time to see the whole, but we will just walk through."

They went down by a winding path, similar to that by which they had ascended, and, passing under a lofty arch of stone, entered the paved stable yard. Grooms and stablehands touched their caps and stood expectant and ready to obey Claire's command. With a word to one and the other, she led Mrs. Lexton into the stables. They were lofty, and constructed on the most scientific principles and the horses of Court Regna were better housed than many a human being.

Mrs. Lexton marveled at it all, and marveled still more at the familiar and fearless way in which Claire went from stall to stall and patted and caressed the horses.

"This is my special mare," she said, drawing the sleek head of the beautiful animal down to her cheek.

"You ride—but, of course?" said Mrs. Lexton.

"I spend most of my time in the saddle," said Claire; "or driving this pair of cobs. I will take you for a drive to-morrow, and you must learn to drive yourself, you shall begin with that dear old pony there; he has been petted so much that he is almost human, and indeed, he is more trustworthy than most humans."

As they passed out by a door at the lower end of the stables, a gentleman came toward them, as if he had just left the house. He was an oldish man, tall and gaunt, his broad shoulders stooped slightly, and his long arms swung in a peculiar manner at his side; his face was big-featured with beetling brows, from under which gleamed small and cunning-looking eyes. The mouth was huge and coarse, though the lips were thin. He was dressed in dark and sober clothes, and looked every inch a professional man. At sight of him, Mrs. Lexton was conscious of a feeling of repugnance, and as the small eyes darted straight from Claire to her, she drew back timidly.

"Yes," said Claire, calmly. "Every house; a great many of the boats said, in a subdued, but harsh voice. "I have driven over to see you about the lease of Westcott; but you are engaged, I see."

"My friend, Mrs. Lexton, has but just arrived," said Claire.

He raised his hat in acknowledgment of the introduction.

"I will come over to-morrow," he said. "Oh, perhaps, Mordaunt will come; he knows all about the lease."

"Very good," said Claire. "But will you not stay and dine with us?"

"Thank you, no, Miss Sartoris; there are one or two things I wish to see to, and I want to get back; thank you all the same. There is nothing I can do for you? No? Then I will wish you good-evening. Good evening, madam."

And, raising his hat again, he bowed and stood aside to allow them to pass.

"What was that, Claire?" asked Mrs. Lexton, when they had got out of hearing.

"Mr. Sapley, the lawyer and agent."

"What an odd-looking man!"

"Odd?" said Claire.

"Yes," said Mrs. Lexton, reluctantly, but as if she were forced to explain. "Don't you think he has a most unpleasant face?"

"Did it strike you so?" asked Claire.

"Yes," said Mrs. Lexton. "It reminded me of a serpent's; it was so broad at the top, and his eyes glittered so. But, forgive me, Claire, it is like my presumption to criticise your friends so harshly—and within a few hours of my arrival, too."

Claire smiled.

"I don't know that Mr. Sapley is exactly a friend of mine, Mary," she said. "The Sapleys have been agents to the estate for ever so many years, and Lord Wharton placed the fullest confidence in him—though he never made a friend of him. But he made no friends of any one. And you did not like Mr. Sapley's face?"

The Bicentenary of Robert Clive

Rarely has the occasion more significantly produced the man than was the case with Robert Clive, the bicentenary of whose birth occurred this autumn, writes Hearn Law in the Sunday Observer. Born September 29th, 1725, the son of an old established, but impecunious Shropshire squire, he went to India at the age of eighteen as a writer in the civil service of the East India Company. His boyhood had been turbulent and unpromising, but he had already shown among his school fellows that natural capacity for leadership, that high courage, and that daring originality of design which were to make him the founder of the British dominion in India.

He arrived at Madras in 1744, after a voyage which had occupied nearly twelve months. The time was a critical one. That very year the formal entry of Great Britain into the War of the Austrian Succession had involved the French and English East India Companies in conflict. The English were not prepared for the struggle; the French were. They had as their leader the great Duplex, whose genius had foreseen the coming clash, and whose consummate administrative abilities, had made ready for it. Already Duplex had enjoyed fourteen years of authority—eleven as Governor of Chandernagore, three as Governor of Pondicherry. He had clearly perceived that the condition of India was such as imperatively to call for the establishment of European control.

The Mogul Empire, seated at Delhi, which for two centuries had maintained some sort of order in India, had broken up. Invaders were pouring over the North-Western passes. Immense hosts of mountain bandits and marauders were holding the peaceful inhabitants of the plains to ransom. Everywhere was chaos, violence, and misery. The only question was whether the task of restoring good government and security to the distracted peninsula should be undertaken by the English or the French. This question Duplex had realised could ultimately be determined by the sword alone. Hence he had quietly devoted himself to the task of accumulating a fighting fund, fortifying his company's factories, and training a native army in the modes of European warfare.

Clive was not destined long to remain in ignorance of the meaning of the great Frenchman's activities. In 1745 Madras was attacked and captured, Clive himself made prisoner, the English East India Company extinguished in the Carnatic. Clive, fortunately, soon succeeded in making his escape. He had learned the secret of Duplex, and in order that he might put his new knowledge to the proof he at once sought and secured transfer from the civil to the military service of the East India Company.

His military career, brief, but within its limited sphere of a Napoleonic brilliance, fell into two periods. First, he played the leading part in establishing the English as the dominant power in the Carnatic. Secondly, having been called to Bengal by urgent necessity, he brought that great province (with a population five times as large as that of England) under the Company's authority. In the Carnatic his chief enemy was the French East India Company, together with the native rulers, or pretenders, subsidised by the French. If it be asked how a young Englishman with a handful of extemporised forces could secure success against an experienced and well prepared veteran like Duplex, the answer is twofold. On the one hand, Clive had the genius of command and his troops had none; on the other hand Clive was cordially supported by the Company at home, while Duplex, whose activities swallowed up all the dividends of his Company was recalled in disgrace by the French Government, to whose exhausted treasury the Company was expected to contribute, and under whose direct control it performed its functions.

The most striking event in this first period was Clive's defence of the citadel of Arcot for seven weeks (1751), with a force reduced to 230 efficient men, against a besieging host numbered at 10,000. In Bengal, although the French continued among his enemies, it was the native ruler, Suraj-ud-Dowla, against whom Clive was called upon to direct his skill and force. This man signalled his accession to authority in 1756 by attacking, under French inspiration, the English Company's settlement at Calcutta, carrying off £2,000,000 worth of booty, and causing 123 English captives to perish in agony in the notorious "Black Hole." Clive was sent northwards from Madras as soon as news of this appalling tragedy reached the Carnatic. He speedily restored matters by his spectacular victory at Plassey (June 23, 1757) in which, with a force of 3,200 men, he overthrew a native army of some 68,000. This victory not only drove the guilty Suraj-ud-Dowla from power, but also led his long-misgoverned province of Bengal (to the dismay of the Company) in the hands of the English for protection and administration. Almost greater than Clive's conquest of Bengal was his organization of its Government during the years 1765-1766.

On his final return to England in 1766 he had to face a trying ordeal of vilification and impeachment, not unlike that which his disciple Warren Hastings had to suffer a quarter of a century later. From this ordeal he emerged triumphant, but with broken health and shattered nerves. In a fit of profound depression he ended his days on November 23, 1794. He was at the time a Member of Parliament for Shrewsbury, and a peer of Ireland since 1762. If you seek his monument, behold the British Empire in India.

BOUNDARY BILL BEFORE DAIL.

DUBLIN, Dec. 7. The Boundary Agreement recently entered into with the British Government at London, having to do with the line between Ulster and the Irish Free State, came up in Dail Eireann and the Bill to amend the Anglo-Irish treaty to conform with the new agreement received the first reading. LONDON, Dec. 7. Guarantors of the British Empire Exhibition are being called upon to pay seventy-five per cent. of their guarantee, that is, fifteen shillings for every pound guaranteed, according to to-day's official announcement. PILOT'S DISAPPEARANCE A MYSTERY.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7. The disappearance of Pilot LaChane from the steamer Airedale, after the freighter grounded on Coude Island, below Quebec, Saturday night, remains a mystery and the Marine and Fisheries Department is investigating. Meanwhile, the cargo of cement, etc., carried by the steamer is being taken off. The vessel, which was bound for St. John's, Nfld., and other North Atlantic ports, will probably be a total loss. The head of the Pilot's Association declared that navigation conditions were such that the tragedy was expected, and indicated that he will make a statement covering the situation later.

LIBERAL RETURNED IN BAGOT BY REVERSED MAJORITY.

ANTONVILLE, Que., Dec. 7. G. D. Morin, Liberal, was elected in Bagot to-day over Hon. Andre Fataux, Conservative, in the bye-election rendered necessary through the death of J. E. Marcille, Liberal, elected at the General Elections of October 29. Morin's majority was 473, compared with 774 for Marcille in the General Election.

GENEVA, Dec. 7. Greek representatives displayed unexpected resistance to-day to the special commission's recommendations against Greece in connection with the recent flare up between Greece and Bulgaria, not only objecting to payment of reparations to Bulgaria as fixed by the Commission but demanding that Bulgaria pay 750,000. Greece gave notice of appeal to the World Court, affirming the Commission's finding shows partiality.

STEAMER AND CREW FEARED LOST.

KEY WEST, Dec. 7. Hope is abandoned for the steamer Colopel which left Charleston Sunday, Nov. 29th, for Havana, with coal, and has not been heard from since Tuesday, when a S.O.S. was received from the crew of 30 men.

WHEAT BELT EXTENDED FURTHER NORTH.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 7. A special from Ottawa to the Free Press says that the first effect of the discoveries which the Agriculture Department announced is that the northern limit of agriculture would be forced back 40 to 75 miles and a vast new area opened for productive purposes. Tests in these northern limits this season have proved that wheat can be planted and harvested safely between frost.

A Mayflower Descendant

A NEWFOUNDLANDER CONNECTED WITH A DESCENDANT OF ONE OF THE 23 WHO LANDED AT PLYMOUTH ROCK IN THE "MAYFLOWER" IN 1620.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

Strange things in this world, and Newfoundlanders are to be found in every land and every clime. We all know of the history of "Pamela," the wife of Lord Edward Fitzgerald and afterwards the pet of the nobility and even of Royalty in France. She was a Newfoundland and the daughter of a fisherman. We know also of another Newfoundland who years ago married a Maori princess, and became the owner of a large plantation. He visited Newfoundland, and the Cashier of the old Union Bank of this city, and was asked by the late Mr. Pilsent, "How much do you require, Mr. —?" He was very wealthy. And now we have a Newfoundland lady, a native of Foggo, who is the wife of William W. Coney, of Beaumont, son of the deceased Mrs. Coney, a descendant of one of the passengers on the Mayflower. Young Mrs. Coney, wife of William W., was Miss Martha Gard, sister of Mrs. Benson, wife of the District Chief of the East End Fire Station, this city, and thus her little son is a lineal descendant of one of the Pilgrims who landed on Plymouth Rock, as stated below:—
GRANDFATHER'S DIARY PROVES HER ANCESTRY.
 Mrs. Elzira J. Coney, of Ware, who Died To-day, Direct Mayflower Descendant.

George Soule. In reality there were more than 23 men aboard the Mayflower, several youths of minor age and numerous servants who bound themselves to the Mayflower passengers to have the opportunity of reaching America, also being aboard, but to consider one person of Mayflower ancestry it had to be conclusively proved that descentancy was from one of the 23 men.

The diary mentioned is now in the custody of the society at Boston and the Coney family has a copy of the contents, the work of copying being done by Mrs. Coney and her daughter. Mrs. Coney had enjoyed good health until recently. In October she was taken ill while visiting her son at Beachmont, returning home a week ago. She was a daughter of Samuel B. and Harriet (Bailey) West, both natives of Connecticut.

She was a charter member of the Social Science Club, first president of the writer was with him and member of the East Congregational church.

Mrs. Coney leaves two daughters, Miss Clara M., a teacher in the Ware schools, and Miss Harriet M., a teacher in Classical High school at Worcester, and a son, William W. Coney of Beaumont, also two grandsons. The funeral will be held at her home Monday afternoon at 2.30, with Rev. David E. Addison of East Congregational church officiating. Burial will be in Aspen Grove cemetery.

The Whale Industry of To-Day

NEW USES OF PRODUCTS ADD TO ITS VALUE.

VICTORIA, B.C., Nov. 30.—Science is finding almost as many uses for the whale as Chicago packers have found for the hog.

As a result, the whaling industry is not a thing of the past, as the majority of people seem to think. As the various branches of production are expanded and new uses are found for the carcass of the big mammal the industry is entering a steadily widening field and those engaged in it foresee a future as profitable as the past, if perhaps not quite so picturesque. The old days of the greasy schooner, away from port for months at a time, with hand harpoons and other primitive equipment, are gone; but such things as these would never survive in this modern age when whaling is carried on under an entirely different setting.

The whale is no longer caught only for the oil it yields. In fashionable London and Paris gay hats with egret and osprey plumes might, if they could, tell of their affinity with the finely shredded fibres of the so-called right whale.

On the dinner table of Far Eastern merchants, when company is to be treated with special honors, salted whale tails are served.

The changing shape of milady might be said in part to owe allegiance to the useful and pliable qualities of whalebone. Hard-fibred brushes to sweep the obstinate corners of the home, "Ivory"-backed brushes with initialed monograms, toilet soaps and many other articles of household use may trace their origin to the plunging monster of the North Pacific. The rice fields of Japan and China, the truck gardens of British Columbia and other parts of the coast owe the richness of their crops to the fertilizer bloods and bonemeal of the whale.

Victoria is the headquarters of the whaling industry of the North Pacific, although United States whalers operate on a smaller scale out of several Washington and Oregon ports.

Some 10,800 barrels of oil were put up by the Consolidated Whaling Company of Victoria, as a result of the operations of four stations from May to October this year. The higher grades of oil go into the manufacture of toilet soaps. Grade three is used for tanning purposes and for tempering steel. Number four grade is used for fruit and other sprays, while blood and bonemeal are also used for the culture to flowers and fruits. The fertilizer field has opened up a new line of development recognized as of enormous importance, for it will eliminate all waste from the various reduction and manufacturing processes.

Compared with the methods of the old days, the whaling plants leave very little for the sharks and beagulls.

Twenty-three years ago the whaling industry was established in Victoria by the late Dr. Rissmiller, formerly of Newfoundland, and Capt. Sprout Balcom, one-time famous as a sealing skipper. Eight vessels now comprise Victoria's whaling fleet, each carrying a crew of eleven men, including one gunner who mans the harpoon gun.

Embroidery either almost covers the gown or is carefully used to make an interesting spot.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC HAD RECORD GROSS.

October Net Second Only to October 1923.

(From Boston News Bureau, Nov. 30.)
N. Y.—In its annual peak month, Southern Pacific reached its highest gross revenues in the system's history, $29,118,645, a gain of $468,978, or 1.5 p.c., over last year, but net operating income of $7,482,541 was second to the record of $8,214,737 in October, 1923, because of higher taxes and equipment rents than two years ago.

Freight revenues were 3.5 p.c. above a year ago and passenger receipts were slightly higher, but decreases in revenues from express and incidental transportation reduced this increase to 1.5 p.c. in gross revenues. Expenses were $77,153 above last year, giving net revenue from railway operations of $10,533,645, or $391,825 above last year, a gain which was reduced by increases of $66,987 in taxes and $214,716 in equipment rents, leaving the gain in net operating income at $147,673, after all adjustments.

Transportation expenses took 34.1 p.c. of gross revenues compared with 33.5 p.c. in September and 33.1 p.c. a year ago, but less than the 36 p.c. average for the first nine months. Maintenance expenses took 23.9 p.c. of gross, compared with 25.2 p.c. in September and 24.1 p.c. a year ago, but less than the 26.5 p.c. average for first nine months. Ratio of operating expenses to gross was 63.7 p.c., compared with 64.3 p.c. in September, 64.8 p.c. a year ago and 65 p.c. the first nine months.

Cumulative earnings for the 10 months were improved slightly by the October showing. Gross revenues of $243,004,234 were $58,339 behind last year and net operating income of $39,279,401 was $3,890,212 behind last year. On a seasonal basis, 10 months' net operating income indicates 1925 earnings equal to 9.6% on $349,051,600 capital stock and for 12 months ended Oct. 30, 9.3% compared with actual earnings in 1924 of 10.2%.

November earnings are expected to show a greater percentage of gain than those for October. Shipments of fruit this fall have been the largest in the history of the system, grape tonnage having been particularly heavy. Passenger business has developed signs of continuing improvement.

Current increase in traffic and earnings was recently referred to by William Spruille, president, as promising continuance into 1926. Without making an estimate of 1925 earnings, he said: "We have reason to believe the return from operations in the closing months of this year will be very satisfactory. Decline in net operating income, which stood at 15% at the end of the first seven months of the year, had been reduced to 7.7% at the end of October."

Jellicoe Says Canada Should Give Four Cruisers

Thinks Dominion Should Contribute $26,000,000 Towards Cost as Well.

(Canadian Press Despatch)
LONDON, Dec. 1.—Viscount Jellicoe suggests that Canada should contribute £7,200,000 ($36,000,000) a year for the next few years towards the cost of the imperial navy, and should provide a squadron of four cruisers within the next four years at an annual cost of approximately £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) during the four-year period of construction. He also suggests a cruiser in reserve. He estimates the cost of the maintenance of four cruisers at approximately £850,000 ($4,250,000).

The suggestion as to Canada's contribution to the navy is made in connection with an appeal by Viscount Jellicoe in Brassey's naval annual publication to all the British dominions to "face the situation" and assist the motherland, each portion of the empire sharing the naval burden in proportion to its population.

SAINT JOHN IS AWARDED BIG MEET.
National and International Skating Championships to be held in January.
PITTSBURGH.—The International Skating Union awarded the national and international championship events for the coming season to Saint John, N.B., New York City, Detroit, Chicago and Pittsburgh.
The places and dates for the different events follow:—
International world's outdoor amateur speed skating championship at Saint John, N.B., under the New Brunswick Skating Association, January 26, 27 and 28, 1926.
National silver skating derby, by the Mid-Atlantic Skating Association at New York, January 31.

United States national outdoor

H. J. Duder, Thos. Hallett and Sergt. M. G. Winter (Fr.), M.M.
Auditors—F. W. Bradshaw and J. J. Bates.

A very pleasing feature of the meeting was the conferring of Honorary President on Mr. A. Robertson, one of the Old Guard, who has been curling since 1874 or 82 years. To two young curlers came the honor of thus honoring a real curler, and Hon. Mr. Bennett, in supporting the motion spoke in flattering terms of Mr. Robertson's curling qualifications. "For he's a jolly good fellow" was sung in the real curling spirit. Mr. Robertson appreciated the honour very much, and the wish of all present was that he may be spared many years to chip the Winner and to Draw the Port.
The new committee will meet at an early date to arrange for the season's games. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Angus Reid for conducting the election and general business of the meeting.
Congratulations are being offered to Mr. A. H. Salter, who was unanimously elected President of the Curling Club last night. The new President, who is best described as a live wire, has been an enthusiastic and energetic member of the club for many years, and under his able and optimistic influence the Curlers will look forward to a successful season.

WELL FIGHT FOR EXPENSES.
NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Lucien Vinez, of France, lightweight champion of Europe, is willing to fight for nothing if he can win a title. His extraordinary proposition was accepted by promoters of the Christmas Fund bouts December 23, and he will meet Jimmy Goodrich, of Buffalo, recognized as world's champion, in a 15 round engagement. Vinez will take only a crown back to Europe if he wins and if he loses his reward will be a mere one thousand dollars for training expenses. Goodrich will receive about ten thousand dollars if he wins and slightly more if he loses, under the agreement.

BOU FOR SOLDIER JONES.
TORONTO, Dec. 1 (Can Press)—Arrangements have been completed between Soldier Jones, light heavyweight fighter of Toronto, and Paolino, heavyweight champion of Spain, for a contest at Barcelona, Spain, on December 8, states a message which has been received here. Paolino was matched to fight Marcel Nilles, the French heavyweight, at Paris, on this date, but the French fighter withdrew from the contest when the promoters shifted it from the French capital to Barcelona. TO THE FRONT ONCE MORE.
TO THE CIVIC ELECTORS OF ST. JOHN'S.

LADIES & GENTLEMEN—As you were kind enough to give me your valued support on the many previous occasions I sought election at your hands, I have decided to again solicit your esteem and confidence for four years more as one of your civic representatives.

During the several terms I have had the great honor of being a member of the Municipal Council Board I have consistently practised the policy of conforming to your desires in so far as the civic revenue permitted.

I shall be very pleased indeed to again do my utmost towards bringing about many more essential improvements that are still necessary, and, therefore, feel that as you have so highly approved of my civic record in the past you will be pleased to again remember me on polling day.

A SPECIAL WORD TO THE LADY VOTERS.
You may have many friends to choose from ladies, but as a special favor will each one of you please be kind enough to record a vote for me.

Old Colony Club

At the Old Colony Club on Saturday afternoon, a large gathering of members heard from Miss Morris the romantic story of Pamela Fitzgerald. In the latter part of the eighteenth century, a child, described as "the prettiest girl in all England" was sent, through the offices of a secretary at the British Embassy in Paris, to be a companion to the children of Philippe, Duke of Orleans, for the purpose of helping them to learn English. This child, grown to womanhood, and famous for her grace and beauty, became the wife of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, son of the Duke of Leinster. The register of the marriage gives the name of the bride as Pamela Simms, born in Fogo in the island of Newfoundland.

The parentage of the lovely Pamela had always been a mystery, and people were not wanting who declared that she was in reality the daughter of the Duke of Orleans and of Madame de Genlis, governess of his children. A book of Pamela, written by two of her descendants, and recently published, support this view.

Now for the other side Miss Morris read an article by the late Canon Piate which may uphold the proverb that truth is stranger than fiction. At Fogo, in 1876, Canon Pilot heard from the lips of an old fisherman-plant, named Simms, certain facts which the latter had been told by his father. This older Simms had a sister named Nancy, who, without benefit of clergy, became the wife of an English captain, stationed at Fogo, in connection with some coast defenses. After the birth of a little daughter, the mother and child were taken to England, landing at Poole and going on to London. Here the captain later deserted his wife and child, and the woman earned her livelihood by working as a seamstress. It was during this period that the striking beauty of the little one attracted notice, that she was sent to France and adopted. In subsequent years letters came from the mother to her relatives in Fogo, telling of the welfare of the child. A letter was also received at a later date from Louis Philippe, asking for information regarding the Simms family of Fogo, but this was never answered, because, as the narrator explained, his father was not a "knowledgeable man."

The hundreds of people in Newfoundland who knew the late Canon Pilot will agree that with his particularly alert and penetrating mind he was one of the last men likely to be imposed upon by a concocted tale, yet he was convinced, and published his conviction, that Pamela was born in Fogo. Similarly it will be recognized as extremely improbable that a fisherman in a northern outpost, in those remote days when communication was difficult and news of the outside world very limited, would know anything of affairs at the court of France, or even of the name of one of its kings.

A warm vote of thanks was accorded Miss Morris for her most interesting address, after which teas were served by Mrs. H. Outerbridge and Mrs. L. C. Outerbridge. For next Saturday Miss Ada Horwood has kindly promised to give a talk on "Wembley", illustrated by lantern slides. The Club programme will then be suspended until after the Christmas season.

Should Christmas Presents be Taxed?

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I wish to draw your attention to a great hardship under which many poor people suffer at Christmas time. In olden times small Christmas presents came in duty free. Many servant girls in the United States make an effort to send their widowed mothers a small Christmas present—perhaps a pair of boots or stockings or other small article. These parcels are ripped up and overhauled and the poor widow is charged as much for her pitiful present as a wholesale merchant in the shoe trade. All parcels for business men should be taxed, but the pitiful little presents sent by absent children to their parents and relatives should be let in free. The few dollars collected do not half compensate for the misery and inconvenience caused poor people at the festive season, by having their poor little gifts torn about and in many cases damaged. With the glowing accounts of super-revenue collected this year, is it possible to make some arrangement whereby packages containing small presents, calendars, etc., should come in duty free at Christmas time?

Shipbuilding in Ulster

Ten vessels, with an aggregate of 57,600 tons have been launched this year from Belfast shipyards. This number has been shared equally between Messrs. Harland and Wolff and Messrs. Workman, Clark and Co. the tonnage respectively being 31,400 and 26,200. At Queen's Island there are at present five vessels on the stocks, while Workman, Clark & Co. have three. However, fresh orders are slow in coming forward, and the prospects for the winter months are not very encouraging.

THE HOUSING QUESTION.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Mr. Editor,—To-day, with your permission I will deal with the housing problem, and one or two other matters. St. John's is not alone in this housing difficulty, for it is well known that more pretentious cities are up against the same trouble. It has been felt here for a number of years, but was accentuated during the war and after, when building was at a standstill, and many of our soldiers returned with young wives or serious intentions of being married. Houses were not to be had for love or money, and consequently rents soared. The scarcity was such that the rents offered for houses was in not a few instances double and treble their worth.

Ex-Mayor Gosling, Hon. John Anderson and their associates helped to some extent to relieve the situation and because of their efforts forty or fifty houses were built. The cost, however, was so great that the project could not be continued. It is a well known fact that one of our large business firms who guaranteed the cost of eight houses found in the end that instead of costing them $1500.00 each as they understood the cost was $3000.00 and by the sale of them they dropped $11000.00. In view of this, unless we have some similar philanthropic and generous citizens in our midst I fail to see how the problem will be solved in the near future. It must be apparent, too, that if workmen's houses are to be built they must be erected in close proximity to Water Street. To erect them in the back of the city is non-sensical, for these men have to be out early in the morning and to walk from say Merrymeeting Road to the water front on a stormy day, or have dinner and get back to work in an hour is out of the question. No, Mr. Editor, the houses unit for water and sewerage, within easy distance of Water Street, will have to be removed and replaced by others and this will mean such a colossal expenditure that I am afraid no City Council can grapple with it, at least not for years.

It is only right, I think, that before concluding my letters I should say something about taxation. Many improvements are needed I will admit, but unless citizens are prepared to be taxed heavily, alterations are out of the question. Personally, I am strongly opposed to any increase, for the majority to-day are only able to make two ends meet. I do not wish to be unduly pessimistic but I am convinced that there are hard times ahead and the present winter will be a severe one. One of our large importers told me the other day that his firm has not made a cent profit for four or five years. A local fisherman, for whom I endeavored to secure employment a few weeks ago made only $64.00 at the fishery last summer, and he has a large family to support. Another, fine strapping young man, a War Veteran, too, told me only on Saturday that for the last two years he has not been able to get steady employment, while another has averaged only $10 per week during the last twelve months. These are cases that I can vouch for; no doubt there are many similar and I feel the public will agree with me, in view of what I have written, increased taxation on these at least is out of the question.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the city, at the present moment, needs men who will jealously guard expenditure. It is not a good policy to run into debt, and I for one favor the idea of cutting the garment according to the cloth.

Thanking you for all your kindness, I remain,
Sincerely yours,
REG DOWDEN.

GROWING WISE.

The day I reached sixteen I thought No question, could arise To baffle me, and that I ought To offer counsel wise. I marvelled much at each mistake The other fellow used to make.

At twenty I was clever still At least I seemed to be, I thought no other one could fill The place assigned to me. But I admitted, now and then I blundered, too, like other men.

And when I'd come to twenty-two More carefully I walked, I'd lost that faith in what I knew, Especially when I talked, I'd learned that wiser men than I Were slow to state or to deny.

At thirty I had come to see Where I'd been blind in youth I'd found it difficult to be Full-certain of the truth. I thought I knew, which I grow I seem to me the less I know.

Now should I reach three-score and ten With faculties still clear, I know I shall not know off then, What in my sixtieth year, I thought I knew, which I surmise, Is what is meant by growing wise.

M. Connors wishes to acknowledge receipt of $5.00 conscience money, through Rev. Father McGettigan.—dec8,11

The purse most used is a beige antelope pouch bag, gathered into a tortoise shell frame and hung over the arm by antelope straps.

The woman who is well dressed pays much attention to the coilure.

"Look, bunny boy," cried Lady Love, the little rabbit's pretty mother, pointing to an evergreen tree, as she and her bunny son hopped up the Old Cow Path. "There's a Ruby-Crowned Kinglet among the branches."

Sure enough, when the little rabbit turned his head, he saw a plump little grayish, olive green bird, smaller even than Jenny Wren, and not very much larger than a humming bird. Yes, here and there about the evergreens fluttered the beautiful bird.

"Let us hop over to see him," said Lady Love. "Perhaps he will show us his ruby crown." So across the old log that spanned the Bubbling Brook, now frozen over with a thick coat of ice, hopped the two little bunnies. I guess Kinglet saw them coming, for the next minute he perched on a twig, now and then lifting and flitting his wings. He had seen very few rabbits, having been hatched out so far north that until he had arrived for the winter in the Shady Forest, he had never met a bunny boy nor a lady rabbit.

"Won't you show my little boy your ruby crown?" asked Lady Love, with a smile.

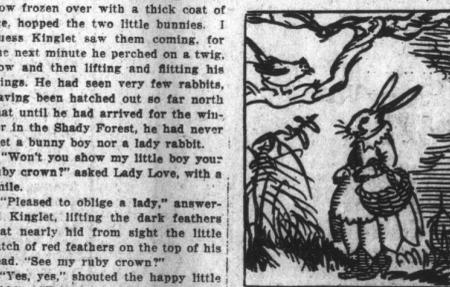

"Pleased to oblige a lady," answered Kinglet, lifting the dark feathers that nearly hid from sight the little patch of red feathers on the top of his head. "See my ruby crown?"

"Yes, yes," shouted the happy little rabbit. "But, do you know, I once saw a golden-crowned Kinglet."

"Oh, yes, he's a relative of mine," answered Kinglet, and with a chattering scold away he flew, probably provoking that little bunny should have mentioned another king in his presence.

"Where has he gone?" asked the bunny boy, wondering why Kinglet had left so suddenly.

"To the Kind Farmer's orchard, I imagine," answered Lady Love. "He will condescend to join the Nuthatches and Chickadees in search for grubs and insect eggs hidden in the fruit trees' bark. These birds are good friends to the farmer. Yes, indeed. They destroy many eggs that otherwise would hatch into grubs and insects to feed upon the leaves of the fruit trees."

Then, turning about, the little lady rabbit hopped across the Pleasant Pasture and up the hill to Cousin Cottontail's neat little bungalow under the Big Brush Heap. All of a sudden the bunny boy spied Tree Sparrow. He had made no mistake, for on the centre of this winter chippy's gray vest was a faint black spot. Besides, the upper half of his bill was black, while the under side was yellow with a black tip.

"There's Tree Sparrow, Mother," shouted the little rabbit. "He must have just come down from the North."

"Pleased to oblige a lady," answered Kinglet.

He will find plenty of seeds on the crab grass and fox tail grass.

"Oh, yes, he'll never starve," laughed Lady Love. "Even when the snow is ankle deep he'll get a comfortable living from the weed stalks that lift their heads above the snow."

Pretty soon the two little bunnies reached Cousin Cottontail's bungalow without a mishap. I'm glad to say, for all the while your Uncle Dave has been writing this story he has feared that Danny Fox in his tuptoe sox might be hiding behind a tree. And in the next story you shall hear whether anything disagreeable happens to our dear little rabbits.

In English history Charles II has only one peer among Kings in the evil-living to which he devoted himself that Charles II was not so completely contemptible as George IV. He had brains, he had good humour, he certainly had wit.

In his "A Short History of England," Mr. G. K. Chesterton says of Charles II:—

He was rather an eighteenth century man, a seventeenth century man. He was as witty as a character in a comedy; and it was already the comedy of Sheridan and not of Shakespeare. He was more modern yet when he enjoyed the pure experimentalism of the Royal Society and bent eagerly over the toys that were to grow into the terrible engines of science.

The New Chrysler Six, with Startling New Results.

Startling new results are attained in the new Chrysler Six—results made possible by the kind of engineering and manufacturing genius which never rests satisfied.

Walter P. Chrysler and his staff of brilliant engineers, with the fine Chrysler manufacturing facilities, had every excuse—every reason, some might say—to rest on the laurels their cars have won. Inevitably, the great tide of public approval would have carried the Chrysler Six to still more conspicuous success.

But Mr. Chrysler, his producing organization and his engineers have never relaxed for a moment their labors to emphasize and enhance its wonderful performance qualities.

The most surprising thing about the greater Chrysler Six is not its new lower price—remarkable though THAT achievement is.

Its most impressive feature is the amazing ability which succeeded in improving the quality and the performance of a car that everywhere had met with overwhelming public acclaim—AND WHICH MARKED A REVOLUTIONARY ADVANCE OVER ALL PREVIOUS PRACTICE AND RESULTS.

In this new Chrysler Six, the power is increased approximately 10 per cent. The 70-mile speed is more easily and quickly attained. The breath-taking get-away and acceleration are still swifter. In smoothness, this new Chrysler actually exceeds the former super-smoothness introduced by Chrysler.

The beauty, originated by Chrysler—and which still belongs to Chrysler alone—is re-expressed in refined and attractive body lines and new body colors, with Chrysler-designed closed bodies built by Fisher.

THE JUVENILE COURT A BUSY PLACE.

The working of the Juvenile Court is increasing every day as the number of young delinquents seems to be growing at an alarming rate. The present quarters are far too small, and the Provincial Government will have to find more suitable quarters.

Judge Lacroix sentenced six boys to jail for robbing a store. They were present with their parents and appeared sorry for their offence, but as they were all over sixteen years, and as the leader of the "gang" had a previous record of a jail sentence, the judge had no other alternative but to send them to jail as they were too old to be sent to the Reformatory. One got eight days, a second fifteen days, a third and fourth a month each, a fifth two months, and the sixth three months. All will rest at Bordeaux.

PETTY THIEF GETS A HEAVY DOSE.

A sentence of 2 years and 20 lashes to be administered on two separate occasions, ten lashes each time, was handed out by Judge Enright to Joseph Wortimer on a charge of theft with violence. The sentence was accompanied by a stinging indictment from the judge on the class of petty criminals who prey upon travellers and transient visitors to the city.

Mortimer was arrested by C. P. R. constables McKinnon and Bludeau in the month of May last, in the act of attempting to secure from the baggage checking office at the Windsor Station, two grips, previously reported to the C. P. R., as having been stolen from a passenger, George Crawford, en route from the West to England.

Mr. Crawford declared that on landing here, he had got into conversation with two men and had gone to a saloon near the Windsor Station, for a few drinks of beer. On leaving the place he was accompanied by the pair and in a dark lane he was suddenly attacked and relieved of his money amounting to about $50, some small articles and two checks for his baggage. The prisoner had six previous prison records against him and denied having any part in the robbery, saying that he got the checks and $100 from a friend to go to the station to get two bags. Judge Enright found him guilty. "You swoop down on some poor visitor, who comes to the city after working hard and putting away some money and you get into conversation with him and, after a few drinks of beer, clean him out of all his valuables," said the Judge.

"I want to discourage you and others of your class from crime of this nature. It is a serious offense to commit theft with violence and I warn you that, if you ever come before me again on a similar charge, you will get more than twenty strokes of the cat-o-nine tails. I hope that this will be a warning to you and to those other vultures of the same class, who follow such nefarious livelihood!"

STOLE CAR FOR JOY RIDE TO NEW YORK.

Convicted on a charge of stealing an automobile valued at $9,000, two youths, John Harrold and William Storey were sentenced to 18 and 12 months in jail respectively by Judge Cusson. The pair were arrested in New York, where they had driven in the car in the month of May last and, in view of the fact that they have spent the interval under detention, the prison term will date from that time.

The two prisoners were arrested in New York in consequence of a police description broadcast at the time of the disappearance of the car, which belonged to Dr. F. E. McKenty, 643 Union Avenue. The two accused youths admitted that they had taken the car from a Montreal garage for a joy ride, that ended in New York.

CANADA'S ENORMOUS DEBT.

Canada's debt at present stands at $2,360,022,809. During the past twelve months a reduction of $16,326,266 took place. The Montreal Herald, under the heading of "Decreasing the Public Debt," says editorially:

Since Confederation, more than half a century ago, there have been but ten fiscal years in which there were decreases in the net debt of Canada. Two of these ten decreases occurred during the tenure of office of the Mackenzie King Government. During the fiscal year ended March 1924, the decrease was $25,993,593, and during the last fiscal year the decrease was $25,539. As the entire capital cost of the war was paid by the Conservatives out of borrowed money these two recent decreases appear all the more remarkable. They form a tribute of careful, prudent financing.

"As one example of how Liberals bring about decreases in the net debt, reference should be made to the balance sheet for the last fiscal year as issued by the Department of Finance in June. Capital expenditures to the amount of $16,550,510, were paid for out of current revenue.

ESKIMOS FIRST CONTACT WITH CIVILIZATION.

Four Eskimo seamen volunteer crew of the Jean Revillon an Arctic fur trading schooner experienced their first contact with civilization when they visited Montreal lately. The quartette came to Montreal with Capt. W. H. Robertson, commander of the vessel when the vessel was brought from the far north for repairs. Retaining the Eskimo custom the four men follow their leader in single file, through the streets of the city. They have visited theatres and other places of amusement and have ridden on street cars, none of which they had ever seen before but they accept the lot with characteristic stolidity.

Although they had never seen it before, the four have taken enthusiastically to the modern man's tobacco and smoke continuously, either pipe or cigarettes. According to Capt. Robertson, none of the men had ever been more than twenty miles from land prior to the present expedition from Baker Lake, near Chesterfield Inlet.

THE KU KLUX KLAN INVADE CANADA.

"The Nightgown Brigade," has invaded Canada. They started in the West and are marching East. They have had processions in several parts of Ontario, notably, Toronto, Kingston, London and Hamilton. Hark! The Klan is at the gate—they are in Montreal. It will be very interesting to see them march along some of our principal streets here. Well, the A.P.A. and P.F.A. had their day, and then went into oblivion. Now comes another disturbing, bigotted, unpatriotic and uncharitable organization. And to think, that in this age of enlightenment, civilization, and progress so many people are still blind to the ways of peace, goodwill, fellowship and unity.

The record of their murders, kidnappings, and other atrocities in the United States, should be ample warning for all decent minded people to spurn every effort made by evil-minded people to fan the flames of bigotry, either through racial or sectarian cries. "A bigot is a person whose brains are too small to think and whose heart is too hard to feel." I wonder who the Kluxers are organized in Terra Nova? Just now they are having trouble in British Columbia with the "Hooders". In the Legislature, Francis A. Browne, Labor member spoke against the Klan.

At the risk, he declared, of being waited upon by hoodlums in nightgowns. Mr. Browne moved an amendment to the reply to the speech from the Throne urging the Provincial Government "to take all necessary steps to restrain this seditious movement and bar it membership from all elected or official positions under the crown."

The Klan, argued Mr. Browne, appealed to the mentally deficient. He thought it well for those who would contribute the $10 membership fee to know that the field kiegales who organize the Klan receive $4 and the king kiegale $2. As high as $5,000 a year is made by these officials, said Mr. Browne.

From the legislative viewpoint the most serious thing about the Klan was that it had itself above the law and its record in the past had included murder, kidnappings, brandings and floggings, said Mr. Browne. It was important that the legislature should not permit any organization to exist in British Columbia that was against Catholics and Jews he said. There was no need for it and the government should see that it was not brought into existence.

CAMP DE MARS BEING REPAIRED.

More than half of the Champs de Mars has been resurfaced and, with favorable weather, the remainder of the famous square will be repaved within a couple of weeks, according to a statement made by Ald. Deroches, of the Executive Committee. The old level of the place was seriously pitted and broken to such an extent, that it marred what is probably one of the most sightly views in the city—the city hall, the court house and other buildings fronting on Notre Dame and Craig Streets.

It was also announced that the area between Bleury, LaGauchetiere Craig and the Mala will soon be brightened by the installation of 65 new street lamps.

BOTH RINKS IN FULL SWING.

The Mount Royal Arena and the Forum Rinks are in full swing for over a week, the artificial ice being the main factor for such an early season. Hockey practices and hockey matches have begun, and 1925 is the record, in starting operations so early.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN YOUR WORK?

Dear Readers,—To make your work a success you must be interested in it. If you have not that zeal, that accuracy, that determination to do your best, then failure and discouragement are bound to come.

"Always on the Job" is a good slogan to adopt. When you're always at your work, it shows that your heart is in the right place, and that you mean business. Collier's Weekly in an editorial, under the heading of, 'A Job is Life,' illustrates the beauty of persons being interested in their work as follows:

When William H. Monahan, seventy-seven years old, rounded out his fiftieth year's work for a Kansas City coal company the president gave him $500 and a gold watch and retired him to his home on both pay.

But Monahan showed up for work Monday morning as usual. Pay or no pay, the job was essential to his peace and well-being. Too much pity is wasted on able-bodied old men. No one dies happier than an old man in the midst of a busy morning.

"But listen, son, your capital is—you. Your honesty, intelligence, and reason. Two ready hands and then the nerve to buck. There's nothing on earth could ever stop you. If you'd just put a 'p' in that word 'luck.'"

—R. J. LOUIS CUDDHY.

The Sceptered Pall

When Milton wrote, "Sometime let 'gorgeous Tragedy in sceptered pall 'come sweeping by," he was thinking of some ancient Greek drama or some (rare) ennobling of the "buskined stage" of a later age. But the solemn pageantry of Queen Alexandra's funeral service, as reported in yesterday's Times, surpassed the presentation of the Dramatist of Pelops' line or Thebes. It had a wintry setting, as was befitting: the burial of this aged Queen Mother, sometime "Rose of the orth," whom words borrowed from a tragedy of Thebes have but little need of change to describe:

"Fortune loved her and the folk that saw her turned and looked again."

The procession passed through swirling snow that pushed in and laid its pall above the sceptered pall. Nature, "vicar of the Almighty," took precedence of the great prelate of England in the service and did not change its course or temper its wind to the grief-stricken Sovereign, or the three tall Kings of the North that followed in his train. And when the great doors of the historic Abbey were closed after the procession had entered and the candles lifted their yellow flames about the dead and upon the face of these surviving monarchs, among the few remaining Kings of earth, the storm still beat upon the myriad panes as if mourning, too, at the passing of this Daughter of the Sea Kings, who, when the royal cortege departed, was left in "gloomy silence" with the memorials of England's great. It was a scene which even the most democratic of theorists will recall with a deep sympathy for the "noble King" whose filial grief makes him kin to all mankind.—New York Times.

"Two heads are better than one," so vote for FANNIE McNEIL and MAY KENNEDY.

Diatoms of Antiquity Turned to Useful Account

Vancouver, B.C.—Discovery of the valuable commercial material, known as infusorial earth or diatomite, has been made by George H. Turner, near Queenel, in the Caribon country. The material is really "fossil meal," which is little known except to the trades that use it. The presence of diatomite in the locality is also a tribute to the weather, for scientists say this form of shell life settled only in agreeable climates, judging by the places in which it has been found.

Diatomite keeps heat in and cold out and is the best and cheapest material for lining cold-storage rooms and refrigerators. It is indestructible by fire and is also very light, weighing only seven pounds per cubic foot. It is particularly valuable for the sound-proofing of modern buildings, as it can be mixed directly with plaster or cement. This remarkable material also finds many uses in widely varied industries.

The British Admiralty, during the war, worked out the diatomite deposit of the Isle of Skye, the material being used for submarine construction. The only deposit being worked in the United States is in Florida, where a suction dredge pumps it from the bottom of a lake.

Before the dawn of modern times, according to a scientific description of the material, myriads of two-cell forms of life, known to science as

 Aged Missionary GOES BACK TO THE WILDS.
 KAMLOOPS, B.C., Nov. 30.—Rev. Dr. John Pringle, one of Canada's best known Presbyterian pastors, who was once in charge of Old Kildonan Church, near Winnipeg, and latterly serving a parish at Sydney, Cape Breton, following his return from overseas where he was a chaplain, has arrived here to spend the autumn of his years in the way he loves best—as a missionary in the wilderness. Dr. Pringle is now established at an obscure mission post north of Kamloops, his field embracing 35 small groups of miners, ranchers, fishermen and lumberjacks. Life in the primitive wilds of Western Canada, however, will be no new experience for Dr. Pringle, for he labored for seventeen years in the Yukon and it was while there that he won for himself the sobriquet "Pringle of the Yukon." Dr. Pringle, who is 73 years of age, has a rugged constitution and attained much of his early vigor. "I have never entered a new work with greater enthusiasm," said. "I believe that out here I am able to fulfill my greatest ambition in that accomplishment I will be extremely happy."

Burial Rites Over M-1

MOVING SERVICE ON WILD SEAS.

(Daily Mail Correspondent)

We left Plymouth at 2 a.m. and were back when the morning was still grey, after dropping the tributes of a sorrowing nation over the grave of Submarine M. 1.

We were the leaders of the middle of three lines of vessels. On one side was the Burelem, a minesweeper, and behind her the submarines H 22, 30, 29, and 34. On the other side was the anti-submarine Raider, and following her the submarines L 22 and 23 and H 32 and 44. Behind us followed the minesweeper Ross and the destroyer Wolfhound.

With the flash of a signalling lamp from our bridge the ensigns of the fleet were simultaneously half-masted. And then white-jerseyed sailors crowded the conning towers of the distant submarines and overcoatless sailors lined the gale-swept decks of the other ships.

Congregation of 1,000.

On to the after-deck filed sailors and Marines until, when the white-surplised chaplain arrived, his great congregation, spread over many square miles of restless ocean, numbered a full thousand.

It was a beautiful idea that we should approach from the east the buoy marking where the submarine is believed to be, timing our service so that our wreaths were dropped along the line between where she disappeared and where she is thought to lie.

It was a service typical of the sea and all who are born to love the sea. The words "For those in peril on the sea," were hurled into the gale that pointed the ensign rigidly from the stern towards the smokeless funnel.

The hymn was sung with the vibrant fervour of sailors, but in such weather it was as a bird's song beside a waterfall.

The last words of the hymn were sung at 7.38, the exact time M 1 disappeared.

Following the proud singing of the National Anthem, a score of rifles were pointed to the sky. They threw hot powder into our faces with the cold spray. Bugles sounded the Commodore's salute and the rifles spoke again. Once more the bugles, once more the louder tribute of the rifles, and then the Last Post from bugles.

Dropping the Wreaths.

Nearly a score of wreaths, carried—so large were some of them—by a procession of 30 burly sailors, were borne towards the ensign. Gently two bluejackets took the first, sent by the Rear-Admiral of Submarines on behalf of all relatives and friends, and tossed high over the first wave

Farewell to Alexandra

A SQUEAL TO "A WELCOME TO ALEXANDRA" MAY 7, 1863.

Sea-Kings' daughter from over the sea.

Alexandra, Gone is the poet who welcomed thee. But all who are left are mourning thee.

Alexandra, Fire your salutes, O Fort and Fleet. Lower your voices, I crowds in the street.

Think of her youth so joyous and sweet. Think of her life with good repute.

Scatter to-day your loveliest flowers, Sing, English birds, your choicest songs.

Sing of her deeds of charity, Sing of her great simplicity, Sing, and make of your song a prayer That joy be awaiting her "over there."

Flags of England wave for her now, Wave at half-staff as you waved on high;

Flames on the headland rise higher and higher, Make her a mighty funeral pyre. Moan, O bells, in the Autumn air; Gone for aye is the Royal pair

That once ye greeted with joyous clang As through all England your music rang.

She came, and she conquered us, one and all, Sea-Kings' daughter from over the sea.

Saxon and Norman and Dane though we be, But she in turn became one of us— An English queen of Royal grace Who added new lustre to our race.

And although in her passing we are sad, There's an undertone in our hearts that is glad; For she gave us memories rich and rare, The Sea-Kings' daughter and bride of our heir,

A gift to the people, a gift to the Throne; She came to us, loved us, and made us her own.

And Saxon or Dane or Norman we, Teuton or Celt, or whatever we be, We are all alike in our grief for thee, Alexandra.

—Grace Davis Vanamee, in New York Times, Nov. 21, 1925.

and then a green-grey sea swallowed it.

Germans' Sympathy.

At this moment the ship's wireless was receiving a message that very profoundly impressed the crew:

The German divers on the South-down wish in spirit sincerely to join in the service that is being held in memory of those departed in Submarine M. 1.

A feeling reply was sent, and after that these frozen bluejackets said, surveying the battling seas and white-crested waves, that they were glad that the weather had been of the right kind.

Famous Admiral

OFF ON A TREASURE QUEST.

VICTORIA, B.C., Nov. 30.—The lure of Spanish doubloons, pieces of eight, gold from the temples of the Incas—in short, buried treasure is luring to the tropical seas one of Britain's most picturesque adventurers.

Vice-Admiral Sir Guy Grant, who played a daring role during the war as British secret service agent and incidentally exposed one of the most dangerous spy conspiracies in New York, is in Victoria outfitting a 174-foot schooner for what he expects to be his most romantic exploit of all—the quest for buried treasure on Cocos Island.

This attraction of Cocos Island has been a will o' the wisp in the past to many dauntless mariners and explorers, but Sir Guy Gaunt is ready to throw his fortune with that of those who have gone before him. The failures of his predecessors does not convince him that the Spanish doubloons and the Incas' gold are not to be found. Only his own attempt will satisfy him, and so he is going about the outfitting of his craft with the firm resolve of a veteran sailorman answering his nature's first call.

But Sir Guy has more than Cocos Island in view. If he fails to find treasure there he will at least have enjoyed the first part of what seems destined to be a long and extremely interesting voyage, for he plans to sail from the treasure island across the Pacific to Papua, the land of the head hunters.

Unlike Joseph Conrad, Jack London and others who sought adventure in the South Pacific, Sir Guy intends to carry with him at least a little bit of civilization. He is sparing no expense to equip the vessel luxuriously and the space formerly used for the accommodation of freight on the craft chosen for the voyage will be laid out in palatial saloons, library and workshop. There will be a radio set and auxiliary engines for use in calm weather.

After a distinguished career in the British Navy, Sir Guy Gaunt was appointed naval attaché at Washington, serving there from 1914 to 1918.

The necessities of dress mean so much that a glove near a toilette, even the handkerchief cannot be neglected.

Sings Praises of Newfoundland

Dear Prim Rose—I like reading, travel and adventure stories and sketches of other lands; and letters from members give me a glimpse of different localities and thereby broaden one's knowledge of geography. An old European proverb has it that there are people just beyond the hill and it lies with us to find out about them. How many readers know that in Pennsylvania where I live we have no winter, the rivers are open throughout the year, and there are just two seasons—summer and fall. It is I should say the greatest productive, wealthiest State in the Union with over eight million population, yet the climate is very changeable and unhealthy. Summer too long, and when it should be frost and snow why it is cloudy, mild with lots of rain even in January and February. Just imagine last winter's coldest day was only six below. I suggest for the coming winter the chief topic should be Newfoundland and England's oldest colony, and yet the one least known; some in fact, a majority of people think Newfoundland is all rocks, and that the people live only by fishing. How many know that Newfoundland's iron ore output is over a million tons a year and that there are lots of saw mills, paper mills as well as good salmon pools and hunting grounds? The people are the most sincerely religious and the climate the healthiest in the face of the globe. I should know for I lived in Newfoundland for twenty-five years of my life.

B.C. a Land of Honey

Vancouver, B.C.—The value of the honey crop in British Columbia for the 1925 season, based on a price of 22 cents per pound, is $140,530, according to a report furnished by the Minister of Agriculture.

The capital value of the bees, hives, supers and other equipment, reckoning 15,305 hives at $25.00 each, is placed at $387,625.

There are 428 apiaries in the province, working 15,505 hives, which produced a total honey crop of 638,319 pounds, averaging forty-one pounds to the hive.

Curious Skull Dragged From the Sea

Prince Rupert, B.C.—A curious skeleton of what seems to be the head of a huge bird was hauled out on a halibut hook recently by two fishermen in thirty fathoms of water off the Queen Charlotte Islands. No one knows what it is. The skull is nearly twelve inches long from the back of the head to the end of the bill. The bill, the upper part only remaining, is six and a half inches long and three inches wide. The head is seven inches across from eye to eye. An Indian who saw the skeleton declares it to be the remains of a seal that once inhabited these waters but which is now extinct.

Besco Inquiry

Major Chorna Cross-Examines Mr. McLurg—Some of Company's Houses Not Habitable, Besco Chief is Told.

(Sydney Post.)

The Royal Commission, investigating the coal industry of Nova Scotia, will conclude its Sydney sessions by to-morrow at the latest, according to an announcement made by the Chairman, Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, during the course of this morning's session. He added that hereafter the headquarters of the Commission will be at Halifax. A visit will be made next week to Montreal for the purpose of investigating the markets and obtaining additional information from the books of the corporation. No evidence will be taken at Montreal and on the return to Halifax additional witnesses on behalf of the men from the Pictou and Cumberland fields will be heard and the cross-examination of President R. M. Wolf is conducted. An opportunity will also be afforded at Halifax for members of the general public, feeling they have something to contribute, to be heard. The findings of the Commission would be available, the Chairman thought, before the end of the year.

McLurg Examined.

At the opening of this morning's session Vice-President J. E. McLurg was examined by Major Hume Cronyn on behalf of the Commission. Additional evidence was adduced regarding credits at the company's stores, housing conditions and the manufacture of coke.

On the subject of housing conditions Major Cronyn drew from the witness the statement that owing to the policy introduced last year by the witness of spending nothing on repairs, the annual loss sustained by the corporation in the operation of its houses had been wiped out and a balance on the right side of the ledger achieved.

Major Cronyn: "I must confess, Mr. McLurg, that we visited houses that I can only describe as being in a shocking state of repair."

The Witness: "The rents are very low."

Major Cronyn: "Low rents or no low rents, do you not think it is incumbent upon the company to keep its houses in a habitable condition?"

The witness suggested that no doubt the Commissioner was referring to the shacks which had been built for construction purposes and had never been intended for permanent habitation.

Major Cronyn: "I am not referring to the shacks."

Unprofitable Business.

The witness, continuing, testified that in his judgment the company should go out of the house renting business and admitted it would pay the company to dispose of the houses at 25 per cent. of their appraisal value instead of the 40 to 60 per cent. named by the Superintendent of Industrial Relations, a previous witness.

Examined by the Chairman regarding the authority of mine managers, the witness testified that an effort was being made to have each conduct his operations "of his own bat," and that he did not believe the miners were justified in assuming that these officials were not vested with sufficient authority to decide the great majority of grievances coming before them.

Mr. McLurg: "You know, Mr. Chairman, we Canadians are very democratic."

The Chairman: "So are we British."

Mr. McLurg: "Perhaps I should say independent."

The Chairman: "Is that not because you have so many Scotsmen among you?" The witness agreed and added he thought it also explained why his officials were not in the habit of "passing the buck."

B.C. Mystery Valley to be Explored

TROPICAL VEGETATION ON VERGE OF ARTIFICIAL CIRCLE.

Victoria, B.C.—The "tropical valley" reported to exist in the trackless wilderness of Northern British Columbia will be investigated by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. It is stated here, in order to ascertain in greater detail the characteristics of this strange land.

Two reports have been received from prospectors who have visited the district, hemmed in by glaciers and snow-capped mountains comparatively close to the Arctic Circle and where vegetation grew rank as it does in the jungle of equatorial regions; where game was plentiful and of unusually wide variety; where lupins and orchards grew in a riot of color and steaming hot springs shot shafts of boiling water skyward.

Following these reports people began to be interested and now the mounted police will probably start next summer on an exploring expedition.

The Provincial Government already has considerable data on the subject, brought back unobtrusively during the early stages of the war by Major E. B. Hart, F.R.G.S., who was commissioned by the late Sir Richard McBride, then premier of the province, to explore and report on that hitherto unknown area lying south of the Liard River.

Major Hart, after a series of misadventures, got as far as the Toad River valley, known to the Indians as the Tsaleh-chest. After passing along this river through narrow canyons, stagnant marshes and swamps, the party reached an open plain of 300,000 acres where the climate was found to be much milder than that of the surrounding territory because of the presence of hot springs. They found luxuriant pine grasses, pea vines, vetches, lupins and even orchids, although nothing to suggest what has since been described as "a tropical valley."

How I Make Cakes Perfect Every Time

(By Miss Olive S. Allen).

Approved by Good Housekeeping Institute

ARTICLE 4.

By adding fruits and nuts before the milk and flour you ensure even distribution, no nuts and raisins at the bottom of the cake. If fruit is washed, it should be thoroughly dried before using.

To have your layers even and of uniform thickness, divide your batter in equal parts and spread evenly over the bottom of the pans.

Correct Baking Temperature Important

If you are an experienced cake-maker and have never used a thermometer, you of course, have your favourite way of testing your oven for the proper heat. If not I advise you to buy an inexpensive oven thermometer. It will be a great help. No matter what kind of cakes you are making you will find Crisco the best shortening to use. All the competent housekeepers that I know, use Crisco exclusively. Always add one teaspoonful of salt to every cupful of Crisco used.

If you follow these suggestions and use Crisco all the time, you will soon have a reputation for good cake.

The Projected Establishment OF AN AUSTRALIAN NEWSPRINT INDUSTRY.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., (Can. Press)—The subject of newsprint has suddenly come to the fore in Australia and is now being made a live political question in view of the Elections for the Commonwealth Parliament which takes place on November 14. It is therefore, interesting to Canadians to know something of the history of the matter, for the Canadian newsprint industry is vitally affected.

About a year ago a huge concern, The Amalgamated Zinc Proprietary, Ltd., having a considerable amount of money at its disposal, set out to find profitable avenues for its investment. It hit upon the idea of manufacturing newsprint and approached the directors and managers of several Australian newspapers with the object of getting them to join in the project.

The newspaper interests held a meeting and turned down the proposition. Thereupon, the Amalgamated Zinc Proprietary applied to the Tariff Board for a duty of £6 a ton on all imported newsprint, in order to protect their industry. It is the Tariff Board's duty to inquire into all such applications, to hear evidence for and against, and to make its recommendations to the Government through the Minister for Customs.

Two or three months ago this application was heard and, it is presumed, a recommendation was made. The nature of it has not been disclosed. However, no reference to newsprint was made in the new tariff schedule brought before the Federal Parliament last month.

The public hearing of the subject again when it was announced that the Government was prepared to give Amalgamated Zinc a bounty of £4 a ton on all newsprint produced in Australia, but had definitely decided against the proposed duty of £6 a ton. This action very definitely showed the Government's attitude in regard to the proposed treaty with Canada for a preferential tariff and is an evidence of its good faith. Had the duty been allowed there is no doubt that the position would have had to be reviewed and Canada would have been justified in asking some very pertinent questions. However, the next move was with Amalgamated Zinc and a Sydney morning daily announced last week that, in view of the Government's refusal to grant the duty and, believing the suggested bonus to be inadequate, Amalgamated Zinc had decided to abandon its effort to establish the newsprint industry.

It was at this point that the question became actively political. The leader of the Labor Party in the Federal Parliament, Matthew Charlton, in delivering his political speech in Sydney last Friday, used the position to attack Mr. Bruce and the Nationalist Government. He said there was a 40 per cent. tariff protection for the internal production of all paper except newsprint. The annual consumption of newsprint is 100,000 tons, and the money sent abroad for its purchase is more than £2,000,000.

An Australian company (Amalgamated Zinc), he said, offered to manufacture newsprint in Australia and had been granted cutting rights over 600,000 acres of forests in Tasmania by the Government of that State. In September last the Company's options over the forests expired, but were renewed at a cost of £14,000.

But, said Mr. Charlton, the Government had, for two years persistently refused to grant any support to the proposed new industry. Recently it had announced that it would grant a bounty of £4 a ton, the bounty to be reduced if profits exceeded 10 per cent.

"The very day this bounty was announced," said the Labor Leader, "Mr. Bruce's treaty with Canada came into operation. Under it the £3 a ton duty on Canadian newsprint disappears. This £1 a ton advantage to Australian industry is equal to about five per cent. on the value of produc-

MOSCOW'S EX-CHIEF a Watchman

COL. ALEXANDER MARTYNOFF, ESCAPED DEATH BY RUSS.

The brilliant, blue-white rays of the lofty street lamp at the northeast corner of Forty-seventh Street and Fifth Avenue, illumined, like a theatrical spotlight, the uniformed figure of a Holmes patrolman standing at salute in the shadow of the home of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard. The visored cap threw a shadow over heavy brows and high cheek bones; by contrast causing a close-cropped mustache and tiny goatee to appear with startling distinctness.

To the reporter, turning at the corner, 100 feet away, to wave a last farewell, it was not surprising that the cap seemed to have turned into the tall astrachan headgear of a Russian officer; that the silver buttons of the double-breasted coat had changed to cross belts studded with brass cartridges and that the polished black shoes appeared to be fur-tipped boots. For the home of the former Helen Gould is guarded nightly by no less a personage than Colonel Alexander Martynoff, late of the Imperial Russian Army, and for five years before the revolution the Chief of Police of Moscow, Russia.

Colonel Martynoff is the figure of an athlete, six feet tall and approximately 185 pounds in weight. The blue-gray uniform of a Holmes patrolman stretches without a wrinkle over arms, back and chest, that would appear huge were it not for the symmetry of the man's physique. His sense of humor is as well developed as his muscles as he exhibited when a reporter asked him if he were really Colonel Martynoff.

Smiles at Former Rank. "Not now, once," he laughed. "Once a Colonel, now a patrolman, who knows what to-morrow?"

How had he been found out, the Colonel wanted to know. He phrased his question with difficulty. English is hard for him, though to the reporter it seemed wonderfully good considering that he has been away from Russia only since 1923. An American who had seen him at State functions in Moscow, before the revolution had recognized the Colonel when he passed him the other evening and had stopped for a chat.

Born in the Crimea of a well-to-do Russian family, Colonel Martynoff said he had been trained for the army but had shown a talent for police administration and had been detailed to this work, first in various smaller places and finally in Moscow. For five years he had held this post, and was driven from it only when the revolution overthrew the Czar's government. Then, with his wife, Eugenia, he had gone into hiding on the estate of a friend near Moscow, and for eight months had passed under an assumed name and had disguised himself by growing a heavy beard.

The Bolshevik succeeded the earlier revolutionists and Martynoff said the hunt for him was redoubled. Friends decided he would be safer in Petrograd and he got there under the guise of a doctor's assistant, his wife traveling as a Sister of Charity. In Petrograd he was arrested and led before a Bolshevik Commissar.

"I had, how do you say, wrong? Yes, false papers. Papers for an older man which my friends had got from the Bolsheviks," said the Colonel. "And so I showed this to them, to the very men who were hunting for me high and low, and they let me go."

The Colonel and his wife lived eight months in Petrograd, anxious all the time to reach their home in the Crimea, and doubly so when General Denikin wrested this territory once they got within reach of them. He was made Chief of Police in Kiev and an active soldier on Denikin's staff.

"I had money once more," said the Colonel, "and we were happy again. We were going to win back Russia. But then came Denikin's defeat and I and my wife and little boy fled to Constantinople."

The average production of paper over the period of five years necessary to establish the industry was estimated at 30,000 tons a year for five years from January 1, 1927. This production is 100 tons a day and would mean the employment of 800 men at a wages sheet of, say £200,000 a year.

"The Government then determined that a bounty of £4 a ton, with a deferred duty, would be sufficient assistance to establish this new industry. "This would amount to the payment of £120,000 a year and over the five years would mean an offer to pay £600,000, by the commonwealth for the establishment of the newsprint industry.

"The capital expenditure necessary for the production of 30,000 tons of paper a year would be under £1,000,000 so that the offer of the Government was equal to a bounty of £120,000 a year for five years."

And there the matter rests at the present.

MOSCOW'S EX-CHIEF a Watchman

COL. ALEXANDER MARTYNOFF, ESCAPED DEATH BY RUSS.

The brilliant, blue-white rays of the lofty street lamp at the northeast corner of Forty-seventh Street and Fifth Avenue, illumined, like a theatrical spotlight, the uniformed figure of a Holmes patrolman standing at salute in the shadow of the home of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard. The visored cap threw a shadow over heavy brows and high cheek bones; by contrast causing a close-cropped mustache and tiny goatee to appear with startling distinctness.

To the reporter, turning at the corner, 100 feet away, to wave a last farewell, it was not surprising that the cap seemed to have turned into the tall astrachan headgear of a Russian officer; that the silver buttons of the double-breasted coat had changed to cross belts studded with brass cartridges and that the polished black shoes appeared to be fur-tipped boots. For the home of the former Helen Gould is guarded nightly by no less a personage than Colonel Alexander Martynoff, late of the Imperial Russian Army, and for five years before the revolution the Chief of Police of Moscow, Russia.

Colonel Martynoff is the figure of an athlete, six feet tall and approximately 185 pounds in weight. The blue-gray uniform of a Holmes patrolman stretches without a wrinkle over arms, back and chest, that would appear huge were it not for the symmetry of the man's physique. His sense of humor is as well developed as his muscles as he exhibited when a reporter asked him if he were really Colonel Martynoff.
