SAVING THE EMPIRE

Why is it that during the past few years most of the newspapers and a large number of orators in towns and villages scattered throughout Canada have been worrying themselves into premature old age in their endeavors to shape the destiny of the British Empire? Why is there such a fear that things are all going wrong and that the Empire is liable to break up at any moment? Who ever suggested that Canada and Australia and India and New Zealand and half a dozen more of the overseas dominions were about to break loose and start out on their own hooks? What is all the excitement anyway? The British Empire has gone along for thousands of years ago. It is a greater power today. Some of us can trace our ancestry, if we try very hard, back for two or three hundred years and we find that at that time things were conducted in a fairly satisfactory manner, that those who guided the ship of state were competent pilots and indeed there is nothing in the present condition of the Empire to indicate that they followed a mistaken course. It is true that during a period of temporary insanity on the part of the home government the American colonies revolted and formed the United States of America. That was a very happy occurrence. The people of the United States would have demanded separation anyway and it is lucky that it came at such a time when its effect was not nearly so serious as it would be if delayed until now. Britain has got along very nicely during the past eight or nine hundred years and will no doubt struggle on in a sort of a way for a few days longer. There is no apparent evidence of a break up of the constituent. Old age has not made itself felt, nor in the colonies—although some people do not like that word—are there any serious indications of discontent. There is not one portion of the Empire now in a condition to stand as an independent nation. Yet some are clamouring for a more generous representation in the Council of the Empire and this without contributing anything towards the administration. When their colonies are in a position to bear their share of the expenses of maintaining an army and navy, or consular services, and all those other branches of government which benefit the whole Empire, Britain will no doubt be more inclined to meet the requests of those colonies. As a matter of fact we are being treated very generously just now. It would pay Canada and others much better to solve some of their home problems rather than to exhibit such great anxiety over the affairs of an Empire the condition of which does not demand any worry.

THE FAILURE OF WOMEN.

In Appleton's Magazine Mrs. Mary Newell, over whose signature articles frequently appear, discusses in a most reasonable way the failure of women in professional life. She apologizes for her sex because of this failure but explains it very simply and declares that if women received as much mental assistance from husbands and brothers as men receive from wives and sisters, it is their success, and not failure, of which she would be writing. Mrs. Newell declares that she has thoroughly studied her subject, and her conclusion is that professional and commercial life is entered by three classes of women, namely those who marry, those who are permanently discontented and nervous, and those who become desexualized. The thoroughly feminine women, Mrs. Newell contends, achieve brilliant but temporary success. They all get married. If they did not do so they would become degenerate and as the marriage habit is a popular one, the numbers of this type of women engaged in business are not increasing. But there are others upon whom the duties of commercial life fall more heavily, who are not sufficiently vigorous mentally or physically to properly perform the tasks to which they set themselves, and who are consequently always worn out and nervous. Those who really attain a measure of success are the women who undergo a certain evolution, who become mannish in their habits and appearance, go everywhere, see everything, and endeavor to keep upon all conditions from the masculine point of view. Men regard these women as good fellows, but at the same time are thankful that they are only exceptions among their sex. Yet even this class in Mrs. Newell's estimation have failed to make good. There is not in the world today, she asserts, one woman who has reached the highest point in her profession, other than among those rare artists who are by nature specially endowed. There are good female lawyers, good doctors, good jour-

THE KING SNUBBED THREE LABORITES

Hardie, Grayson and Ponsobly Not at Garden Party. They Weren't Asked, Perhaps Because They Opposed Royal Russian Visit —British Volunteers Scare.

LONDON, June 29.—Feeling is running high among the Liberal Labor members of the House of Commons over the exclusion of Keir Hardie, Victor Grayson and Arthur Ponsobly from the invitation list to the recent Windsor garden party.

Mr. Ponsobly was the private secretary of the late Premier Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman. He and the other two were with the minority in a protest against the king's visit to Reval, where he met the Czar, and this is assumed to be the only reason why he did not receive an invitation, though the fifty-six other members in the Parliamentary minority on that vote received invitations.

Keir Hardie was invited last year, but did not go and it was well known that he would not have gone this year if he had received an invitation. Nevertheless the Laborites resent the discrimination and it was discussed at a party meeting, which addressed a letter to Lord Knollys, the King's secretary, asking for an explanation.

The Liberals talk of signing an address to Mr. Ponsobly, who is in receipt of letters from his constituents expressing regret and indignation.

Great efforts have been made all over the country to induce old volunteers who have not yet joined the new territorial force to do so by Tuesday, when the force should be complete. That it will not be complete is certain. After three months' existence the territorial army has less than 200,000 of the 315,000 men required. The number of units required is 897, each of which must have 30 per cent. of its establishment before it is recognized by the War Office. Many units, especially in large towns show a heavy deficit. Essex has only 245 of the 475 required and the City of London 432 of the 1071 necessary. Middlesex has less than half the required number.

HER OPINION.

A father whose looks are not such as to warrant the breaking up of all existing statues of Apollo, tells this on himself: "My little girl was sitting on my lap facing a mirror. After gazing intently at her reflection for some minutes she said: 'Papa, did God make you?' 'Certainly, my dear,' I told her. 'And did He make me, too?' 'Taking another look at the mirror,' 'Certainly, dear. What makes you ask?' 'Oh, I don't know. Seems to me He's doin' better work lately.'"

HIS EXCUSE.

The Rich Father—"Why don't you go to work? If you only knew how much happiness work would bring you you'd start in at once." His Son—"Dad, I'm living a life of self-denial. I'm denying myself all happiness."

A POETIC FACE.

Bess—"He said my face was a perfect poem." Jess—"It is like one of Browning's. Bess—What do you mean? Jess—Some of the lines are so deep."

ON LEAVING HIS STUDY.

In leaving his study, which is in the rear of the church, the pastor of a church in Brooklyn saw a little boy, a friend of his, talking to a stranger.

THE FIRST FARMER.

"What was he saying to you, Dick?" asked the divine, as he came up to the youngster.

A COMMERCIAL TRAVELER.

A commercial traveler is on a friendly terms with the porter of a sleeping car that he uses frequently.

WELL, GEORGE.

"Well, George," announced the salesman one morning gleefully. "I have good news for you. We've had a birth in our family—twins."

DAT AM NO BIRTH, SIR.

"Dat's a section." "In ten minutes the battle would begin. The enemy outnumbered them five to one."

WE HAVE HARD WORK BEFORE US.

"We have hard work before us. See that you are all armed to the teeth." Far down the line little O'Flarity nervously held up his hand.

PLEASE, CAPTAIN.

"Please, O'Flarity?" "Well, O'Flarity?" "I—I haven't any tath."

SURE ENOUGH HOGS.

Moss, the darky cook of a party of survivors in eastern Texas, was greatly annoyed by the razorback hogs that roamed around the camp. One evening while he was at the spring a particularly ravenous band of these "piny woods rooters" raided the cook tent and ate up everything that was edible and some things that weren't.

FRENCH MINISTRY JUST WINS OUT

Nearly Beaten on Measure to Buy Western Railway. Premier Clemenceau Had Declared the Government Would Stand or Fall on This Bill.

PARIS, June 27.—The debate on the question of the State purchasing the Western Railway, which has been occupying the Senate ever since Parliament reopened, reached a critical vote this evening. The government was sustained by a majority of only three, after Prime Minister Clemenceau had declared that the purchase was a measure by which the Ministry would stand or fall. He added: "We have taken power for a time and we have chosen reforms which seem to us to be the best for the country. We would not to the ideas of justice and liberty. The purchase of the Western Railway gives the State security against abuses by companies. It is said there are Senators here who are desirous of voting against the purchase who would be unwilling to cause our fall from power. We cannot give them satisfaction without weakening our dignity and authority. If you believe negotiations can effect anything vote in all liberty. Whatever may have been said you are free. I exercise no pressure."

The first vote was not taken on the direct question whether the State should purchase the Western Railway, but on a proposal by the Senate Railroad Committee that the question should be postponed until October in order that negotiations might be resumed between the Western, the Orleans and the State systems for partial purchase by the State instead of complete purchase. This proposal was refused by a vote of 128 to 125 and the first clause of the bill authorizing the purchase was passed by a vote of 15 to 116.

M. Clemenceau in his speech, declared the idea that the State could not manage the Western Railway. He said the Senate already managed 4,000 kilometers of railway and why could it not manage 9,000? It manages all great public services and why not this railway? He did not believe M. Rouvier's objection that the State could not control expenses satisfactorily.

"That is not saying," he added, "that I am a partisan of State ownership. I do not agree with putting the State everywhere. I am convinced that every society the existence of common interests exacts the constitution of a central power. This power, which is force proportionate to its action. At the point where we are in social evolution the hour has not come, if it ever does, when we should weaken the State. The State is not in a position to make it well in regard to these great organizations when the general force is not sufficient to demand from them certain acts or concessions."

The Figaro says that the feebleness of the majority will be recognized when it is remembered that three of the ministers are senators. M. Clemenceau confesses that in the purchase of the Western Railway he sees means for bringing pressure on other companies so as to make them adopt the methods of working which the State proposes to apply to its own system. Consequently all sorts of election bids, like increased wages and diminished hours of labor, may be expected.

NEED OF PREVENTIVE MEASURES.

So in spite of the response of the public there are serious problems ahead, both for the women and for the community, which in the end must care for them. The profound impression left by the situation is the awfulness of every effort to prevent the result of which cannot be evaded by gifts of money or by sympathetic interest. These mines were supposed to be models and the coroner's jury were unable to determine the exact cause of the explosion. In one month over 450 men were killed in four various mine explosions in this country.

If this terrible waste of productive power is to be avoided, mine legislation and the means of enforcing it must be more adequate. But above all, more definite knowledge is needed of the cause and means of preventing such explosions. The fact is that no one can measure the cost of such a disaster in terms of human suffering, but there can be no question of the need of better methods of preventing its repetition. Only when the horror roused by such a catastrophe and the sympathy felt for the sufferers is enforced into better methods of safeguarding the living can we feel that these men did not die in vain.

He points out that the call boxes are dark, dirty and dusty, suitable for the harboring and breeding of dangerous bacilli. POURED OIL ON MEAT. TO SKIM NIAGARA Women Fought Butchers in Section of Brooklyn.

Used Kerosene in Their Crusade for Lower Prices--Hundred Kosher Shops Forced to Close.

NEW YORK, June 29.—A band of determined women, armed with cans of kerosene oil, marched through the streets of the Brooklyn section of Brooklyn yesterday, and walking boldly in upon the kosher beef sellers who had taken a stand against them in their fight for lower meat prices, dashed the kerosene fluid over the meat in the stores.

One of the meat sellers, Isaac Sneider, of No. 1183 Prospect Place, was piously beaten when he resisted the women's action. This brought on a free fight between friends of the butcher and persons who sympathized and soon a mob of two thousand persons filled the street in front of the place.

STORIES OF TRAMP STEAMERS SAILING THE SEVEN SEAS

Don't laugh at the battered appearance of the crasy looking old tramp steamer which wallows clumsily in the wake of the speeding ocean liner. To do so would be to confess ignorance of a stirring business of the sea—that of ocean freighting by steam. The dilapidated hulk on which one always looks with curious interest may have been twenty thousand miles since she weighed anchor from her home port.

WHY THEY ARE BUILT. The majority of tramp steamers are built in the United States. When a new one is to be constructed the company owning others takes in additional stockholders.

THE TRAMP STANDS ALONE. Passenger steamships will come and go, sensationally heralded occasionally in the daily papers telling graphically of a broken shaft mended in heavy seas or of a fire in the hold of which the passengers were kept in ignorance until the vessel was safely in port.

HEROISM OF CAPTAIN. The annals of shipping circles are replete with stories of the heroism of these roustabouts of the ocean, and all of them would be well worth the telling. No greater heroism or devotion to duty was ever displayed than that of Captain Cremonini of the Italian steamer Jupiter, which like the Eolo, ran out of coal.

THE TRANSACTION. The broker is daily in touch with the owners of tramp steamers abroad, through means of a list showing those at present disengaged. When he receives Smith's order he consults the broker, who is the middle man between the two.

ROUGH LIFE. There was a moment's hesitation and the crew slowly dispersed. A short while later the Captain of the Ivanhoe, who still lingered curiously in that vicinity, saw the smoke belching from the funnel of the Jane while she swung lazily into her southern berth.

CAPTAIN'S PERSONALITY. One hundred and sixty thousand bushels of grain can be loaded in a fifteen-hour day. A case of one hundred bushels is used in Philadelphia in seven hours. Sometimes as many as eight outfits are used from the elevator to the vessel, and the grain thunders into the hold with the speed and noise of an avalanche.

DID HIS DUTY. With his chief engineer and steward he remained for forty fearful days and nights, deserted by his crew, without fuel and practically without food, facing death in every wave, heartick and despairing, yet thrice refusing succor when it came.

TRAMP STEAMERS. Tramp steamers, irrespective of duty, do things that seldom talk of. This is all that has been the case of the tramp steamer Juno, bound from West Hartlepool for Pensacola, about June 19th, when she was taken over by the Citta di Messina on February 11th.

THE ENGLISH TRAMP. One hears and reads much regarding schooners, brigs, barques, ships, and in a general way can discern them and their business; but when it comes to the craft popularly known as the "tramp," many of those whose interests are centered in shipping circles plead ignorance.

MUTINOUS CREW. That the captain felt full security in the knowledge of the power that they have a right to exercise was never better illustrated than in the case of the Jane Burrell, whose story has been permanently identified with the annals of Philadelphia shipping in this case.

but his supreme self-confidence allowed him to start on a six thousand mile voyage to the Argentine Republic, when through the refusal of the man to work he actually was obliged to have his ship towed into deep water.
