Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its natural color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or itching. Its universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-dressed man.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my hair from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to testify to this statement before a justice of the peace.
H. H. HUBBARD, Lowell, Mass.
"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used several remedies recommended by doctors, but all alike failed to produce a new growth of hair. I then tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, and in a few weeks I began to see a new growth of hair in my hair. I think I used eight bottles in two years, and now my hair is as abundant as ever, and I feel it is a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor is the best preparation for restoring hair to its natural color, and for preventing it from falling out."

A MATRIMONIAL LESSON.

From London Truth.

"Yes, old fellow, I ought to be a happy man," said Frank Cooley to his boom friend Jack Spigot, as they sat chatting together in the smoking room of the Waterloo Club. "I've got just what I want—a wife to look after my interests, and to be a sort of gentle check upon my propensity to make money fly, and I'm settled down, and have no more and another worth making a better about."

"I suppose she does perform those duties admirably?" said Jack Spigot, in a rather sneering tone, which his friend was not slow to note.

"Rather! I'd always heard that no new world money and keep up a position on one hundred a year. Fellow has told me all sorts of yarns about what women want and what they must and will have. I went to work carefully, and after a long look about, found my girl of great price, and so far as I've got, she's been rather a cheap jewel."

"Glad to hear it," remarked Mr. Spigot. "She certainly does as well as any woman I know, and I'm not talking idly when I tell you that your little Thursday dinner is the most complete affair of its kind in town. Mind, I'm going to respond for young Francis at the feast, and the old Collier bowl shall go with my blessing."

"All right! You're a good fellow, Jack, and I appreciate it. By the way, the dinner is not on a Friday dress ball for some time next month, and I rely on you to bring some good men; none of your stuffy old-deckers, but fellows who can dance, and anybody else you like."

Whatever Jack Spigot thought of the gift of a new dress ball, among the entertainments, compatible with the position of a young married couple with 200 a year to live on, he said nothing, and an irrepressible elevation of his eyebrows was all that his friend did not notice it.

Frank Cooley had spoken the truth when he said that in his search for a wife he had gone to work carefully, and when it was announced that Emily, fifth daughter of Rev. Job Farthing, had been selected as a bride, he was not surprised to find that she was a perfect lady, and that she was a perfect lady.

and was, therefore, regarded as an oracle by the young Benedict.

He saw at once that the thing was impossible—exactly as any man, that it could not be possible for long—and an incident at the time made him realize to presume upon the influence he had over his friend and gently hint a few words of warning to him. So, at the club one afternoon he said to Frank: "Old fellow, I always speak to you openly and plainly, and you're generally so far from resenting it that you're a sort of gentle check upon my propensity to make money fly, and I'm settled down, and have no more and another worth making a better about."

which a year before she would hardly have gone disguised and after dark.

A young Semitic gentleman of the usual type inquired her business in the off-hand fashion peculiar to men of his calling, who, having to deal with customers who to a great extent are at their mercy, accommodate their deportment accordingly.

"About a month ago," said Mrs. Cooley, "I pawned a silver goblet here for £10. I am very anxious to have the goblet, but I have, unfortunately, lost the ticket, but I am willing to pay what is required."

"No ticket, no goblet," he said, "it's against the law. Can't be done. Must produce the ticket. Lastways, if you don't produce it, you must go before a magistrate and make a affidavit that you have lost it, and that the article belongs to you. Unless you do that, whoever gives the ticket, gets the article."

"Mrs. Cooley's sense of being in a desperate plight alone prevented her from resenting, not only the substance of this speech, but the familiar, almost insolent, tone in which it was delivered. She felt that it would be better to make a clean confession to her husband than to publish her trouble by going before a magistrate."

"But if I were to give you references?" began the poor lady; but stopped short when she considered how impossible it was to refer Mr. Methuselah to any of her acquaintances.

"A reference to the Harchbishop of Canterbury wouldn't be no good," said the youth; "but I'll tell you what I can do; I won't give up the article until I have communicated with you."

"Very well, that will do," said Mrs. Cooley, clutching at the straw. So she wrote down the address of her green-grocer, and desired the letter to be forwarded there. Then she went out hopeless and dazed. Suddenly a thought struck her; she hailed a hansom and told the driver to take her to Fleet Street.

Now just about this very time the authorities at Scotland Yard were severely exercised over a daring burglary which had been committed at the town residence of a nobleman with such admirable secrecy and success that not the faintest clue could be obtained as to the whereabouts of the perpetrators, who had departed with a large and valuable booty of gold and silver plate. Of course the police were furnished with a complete list of the stolen articles, and, in accordance with usual practice, a sharp watch was kept upon all pawnbroking establishments.

One morning there appeared in the agony columns of two or three of the morning papers the following advertisement:

"Lost, a pawn ticket with Messrs. Methuselah & Co., for a silver goblet, Pledged for £10. A handsome reward will be paid to whoever will give information leading to the recovery of the above ticket to X. care of—"

It need hardly be said that Mrs. Cooley had inserted the above advertisement, in the desperate hope that she had dropped the ticket in the street. Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday morning passed: each day she had called at the address she had given, in the hope that she might gain some information concerning the miserable piece of pasteboard, but without success. Three weeks remained open to her—she said nothing about the goblet to her husband, and to trust to its reappearance on the table escaping his memory; to tell him about it, and to make a full appeal to Messrs. Methuselah. She decided on trying the last course first, and accordingly she went to the shop of Messrs. Methuselah.

The young man recognized her and smiled, just as he would have smiled at the reappearance of one of his habitual clients.

"I've come again to ask you to let me have the goblet about which I spoke to you the other day, and the ticket for which I have lost."

"The ticket has been presented," replied the young man, "and the core presenting it has been run in. He's at Bow street now, and the goblet with him."

"But how was that?" asked Mrs. Cooley, agitated so that she could hardly speak.

"Well, he wouldn't give his name, and he couldn't give a satisfactory account of his possession of the cup, so he was took off. I rather think they have an idea it has something to do with this 'ere burglary. But if you go to Bow street they'll let you see him."

"I thought you were going to communicate with me before you paid with the goblet?" said Mrs. Cooley.

"Ow could I? Here was the copper, and there was the core. The law's the law, and it ain't for us to go against it."

Of went Mrs. Cooley to Bow street, meditating as she went, over the irony of fate which would lead her, the religiously and strictly brought up daughter of a clergyman, and the wife of a well known barrister, to visit in the same day a pawnbroker's shop and a police station.

Arrived there, she stated her mission to the inspector.

"Well, mum," he said, "we're waiting here for the butler from Lord Penge's house to recognize this goblet as belonging to his master; but if you like to give me your name and address—"

Mrs. Cooley, after a moment's hesitation, wrote down her name and address. The inspector looked at it, smiled, and said:

"It seems all right. But—here comes his lordship's butler. Won't keep you a moment, mum?"

He went to a safe, brought out the goblet, and held it up for the inspection of a florid man who had entered.

"Is that one of yours?" he asked. The butler after carefully examining it, shook his head and went out.

"Now then, mum," said the inspector, producing a card, "perhaps you can tell me what you know about this gentleman?"

"My husband's card!" she exclaimed. "What's the meaning of this?"

"The meaning is that the gent who has just given that card presented the ticket for this goblet at Methuselah's. He declined to answer questions as to how he came by it, and he is now detained, pending inquiries."

"Oh, let me speak to him, please!" cried Mrs. Cooley.

After a moment's reflection the inspector left the room, and returned with Frank Cooley.

"Oh, Frank! Frank!" exclaimed the poor woman, throwing herself into her husband's arms. "This has been such a lesson to me! Such a humiliating lesson! Can you—will you forgive me?"

"Of course, I do, my love," replied her husband. "And I do hope it is a lesson!"

The goblet duly appeared on the dinner table when Jack Spigot came that day, and he very soon divined that the affair was about to take a turn for the better in the little household when Frank Cooley told him that they had decided not to have the fancy dress ball.

FAMOUS YET UNKNOWN.

WIVES WHO ARE HIDDEN BY THEIR HUSBANDS' FAME, YET WHO ARE WONDERFUL WOMEN.

The wife of a famous man will often be completely hidden by the dazzle of her husband's fame, and it is astonishing how little is known of those women whose husbands' names are household words throughout the country. While the newspapers teem with the names of Thomas A. Edison, nothing is comparatively known or heard of Mrs. Edison. Every newspaper reader knows the name of Chauncey M. Depew, but of Mrs. Depew only the most casual reference is made. Even in England no one ever hears of Lady Tennyson, or of Mrs. Gladstone. And the same is true of the wives of such men as P. T. Barnum, Will Carleton, John W. Wainwright, Spurgeon, W. D. Howells, Dr. Talmage, Mark Twain, and James G. Blaine. Often these very wives have been the makers of their husbands' careers. Their portraits are even less known than their lives. A splendid series to be called "Unknown Wives of Well-known Men." The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, will, during next year, sketch all these women and others, presenting their portraits, in many cases, for the first time to the public.

Temperance.

A TEMPERANCE PARODY
ON "JOHN ANDERSON, MY JO."

(From the "Clarion.")

John Alcohol, my foe, John,
When we were first acquainted,
I'd silver in my pockets, John,
Which now, ye ken, I want;
I spent it all in treating, John,
Because I loved you so;
But, mark ye, how you've treated me,
John Alcohol, my foe.

John Alcohol, my foe, John,
I've been o'er lag together,
Sae ye mair than auld, John,
And I'll tak' another;
For we mair tumble down, John,
If hand in hand we go;
And I shall have the bill to pay,
John Alcohol, my foe.

John Alcohol, my foe, John,
Ye've bleared out a' my een,
And lighted up my nose, John,
A fiery sign aften!

My hands wi' pulsy shake, John,
My locks are like the snow;
Ye'll surely be the death o' me,
John Alcohol, my foe.

John Alcohol, my foe, John,
Toss love to you I want,
That gart me rise so early
And sit so late at e'en;

The best of friends must part, John,
It grieves me sair, ye ken;
But we'll mair mair to you town,
John Alcohol, my foe.

John Alcohol, my foe, John,
Ye've wrought me muckle skith;
And yet to part wi' you, John,
I can't but weep with sigh!

But I'll join the temperance ranks, John,
Ye needna say me no;
It's better late than never to well,
John Alcohol, my foe.

A BUSINESS MAN'S OPINION OF PROHIBITION.

BY S. A. KEAN.

[A. G. Wollenberger, Esq., of Nebraska.]

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

ka, wrote to Mr. S. A. Kean, banker of Chicago, asking his opinion upon several points regarding the effect of the success of the prohibitory amendment upon business. The answers are so good and of such wide applications that we have secured them to give our readers.—[Ed.]

In answer to your first question: "What is your opinion based upon the experience and?"—a business man, as to the in prohibition upon general business, on now, and always have been of the view, on that the influence of prohibition upon business is good. I do not see how it could be otherwise. Business based upon the liquor traffic, especially as now conducted, is immoral and dangerous, and will in the end enfeeble the moral foundations of business in this country if permitted to continue. Business not founded upon moral principles must fall of its own weight in due course.

Second question: "Do you believe that prohibition of the liquor traffic will result in the decreasing of real estate values, stopping immigration, and decreasing the deposits in banks?" No, it will increase the value of real estate in the long run. There are even many drinking people who prefer a prohibition state, because of the better surroundings, and hence, the safety of their families; but those who are determined to carry on the liquor traffic, and the allies of the saloon, would have a prohibition state, or keep away from it, but this number is comparatively small and their places would be more than filled with a more desirable class of citizens. If the whiskey traffic was out of the way, the same property, money and energy would all be used in other business, and a larger number of men would be employed, which would increase rather than decrease values. Men who waste their money in drink, do not use a rule have money to deposit in banks. It is true that the brewer and saloon-keeper would also have money which they could deposit in the bank. I give the following incident by way of illustration:

Sometime ago a certain manufacturer in the East paid his men $1,000 on Saturday night, but before parting with the money marked it in order to ascertain where it would bring up. On the following Tuesday it was found that $800 out of the $1,000 had found its way into the hands through the saloon-keepers and brewers. If these men had spent that money in buying clothes and provisions for their families, it would have gone into the bank all the same, through the merchants, and the clothing and provision interest, as well as the farmer, would have advanced to that extent less the very small amount of grain which might have been "rotted" for the purpose of furnishing drink for these men.

Third question: "Do you consider prohibition an injury or help to business in cities where the same has been tried?" A help, in proportion as the law has been enforced. Atlanta, Ga., is a good illustration of this when they enjoyed prohibition there.

Fourth question: "If you were purchasing bonded securities, would the fact that the state in which these securities were issued, was under prohibitory policy in relation to liquor, have a tendency to depreciate the value of such municipal paper?" No; other things being equal we should consider the fact of prohibition an advantage rather than a disadvantage. You say an Omaha paper has used the name of our firm in connection with our refusal to take certain securities in Nebraska on account of prospective prohibition. This is the first intimation I have had of any such use of our name, and it is certainly as far from the truth as possible. We purchased some bonds of your city a while ago, and there was some delay in our taking them up on account of some legal difficulties. As soon as your city officials were able to correct these points, we took up the bonds. I certainly hope the prohibition amendment will pass, not only for the interest of your state but morally and financially, but for that of the entire country.

Drunkennes is a fearful thing. It robs human life in a thousand ways. It fills the agony of hell upon those who are as innocent as heaven. It fills the jails and the penitentiaries, and furnishes victims for the gallows. It blasts friendships, kills love, paralyzes hopes, it fosters and transmits disease. It is the guardian devil of prostitution, of gambling, of all the lusts of flesh and spirit. Since the world began it has never made one man better, one woman purer, one home happier. It has never made a church member. It has never made a benefactor. It has never made a poet, or a statesman, or a scholar, or an inventor, or a musician. It has never assisted one devotee to wealth or luxury, or the smallest comfort of surroundings. It has never given birth to one good impulse. It has been, and is, and will be an unmitigated, awful curse. For every good thing it has failed to accomplish, it has furnished a bad thing. It has been an active force—no, most incessant—active force of civilization, and it has always, in its crime, to misery, to tears, iron and chains, and dungeons, to degradation, remorse, degradation, injustice, death.—Omaha World.

classes are employed. Indeed, the necessity of immediate work in the distressed districts has been so great that the usual preliminaries have been dispensed with and the construction of several lines has been begun without statutory power. In several cases only 24 hours having elapsed between the signing of the contract and the breaking of the first ground.

LEPROSY IN CIVILIZED LANDS.

According to Dr. Morell Mackenzie, leprosy, the scourge of the middle ages, has not become practically extinct among Europeans, but is really spreading. It has between 1,000 and 1,200 victims in Norway, is found also in Portugal, Greece and Italy, and is rapidly spreading in Sicily, in the Baltic provinces of Russia and in France, while the British Islands are not exempt from it. In the United States cases have been found in California, in some of the states of the north-west, in Utah, and in Louisiana. Many cases exist in New Brunswick. In the Sandwich Islands the disease first broke out in 1833, and there are now 1,100 lepers in the Molokai settlement alone. The disease is extending in the West Indies. In Trinidad there were three cases in 1885, 866 in 1878 and probably more than 1,000 now. Leprosy exists in Australia and New Zealand, and is estimated to have more than a quarter of a million victims in India.—New York Telegram.

NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE.

Gladstone does not know what to do with them all and though he fears the result he will surely justly resist the people.

On New Year's Eve at Halifax, fire destroyed the Globe hotel, valued at $75,000; insurance, $35,000. The destruction was rapid and there were many narrow escapes.

Peter the Great, at the head of a few followers, has been drawn and threatens to cut off everybody's head who does not obey his mandates. He threatens secession unless he gets leadership, terrible!

Two patients, who were being treated by the Koch system, died in the St. Petersburg hospital, Monday, after receiving the third injection. The first two injections were successful. Both patients suffered intensely.

Week before last a child was born in Sackville with two teeth already to discuss its Christmas dinner. It is rather an unusual occurrence as was also the fact that a well-known citizen had been presented with additions to his family on succeeding Christmas days.

A quite remarkable though sad occurrence transpired at Sackville on the 26th inst. Mr. John Fawcett had kindly donated a bell to the new Baptist church, and the first occasion on which it was tolled was at the funeral service of the donor.

DUBLIN, Dec. 28.—The Right Rev. John Healy, Bishop of Clonfert, was shot at last evening while sitting in the parlor of a parish priest whom he was visiting. The shot was fired through a window directly in line with the bishop. He missed him and buried itself in a picture in the opposite wall.

MONTREAL, Dec. 28.—There is said to be no truth in the statement that Hickson's resignation from the general management of the Grand Trunk is on account of ill health. He is in good health and retires from the management simply because he feels his work is completed and he wishes rest.

OTTAWA, Jan. 2.—It is reported that a despatch was received to-day by the government from the colonial office stating that Lord Salisbury will permit no change in the status of the Behring sea question, and that there will not be any until the United States consents to arbitration, and that in the meantime British subjects will continue to be protected in lawful pursuits.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Over 800 deaths from disease of the respiratory organs occurred in London last week and the death rate continues to increase at an alarming figure. This is due to the unusually cold weather, to which this region is wholly unaccustomed. Ten degrees above zero here, with the dampness of atmosphere, makes a dangerous condition of things. In the towns of Halifax, Manchester and Preston, since the severe cold set in, the death rate has reached 40 in the 1000. At Bolton, Bristol, Liverpool, Salford, Sunderland and Wolverhampton 30 in the 1000 have died from the same hastening cause.

On the 22nd December, a young Acadian settler in the 18th December, and became separated from them while following the tracks of a caribou. His gun fired and he fell into the snow near him. It is thought he fell into the water of a running brook which empties into the Du Loup, and having his clothes wet through was the more easily frozen to death in the bitterly cold weather then prevailing. The deceased leaves a young widow in a critical condition.

"Sitting Bull," says a western man, "is one of the shrewdest and most cunning Indians that ever lived. He had every Indian prejudice to contend against in his early life. He was not a fighter, but by his natural ability and indomitable will he gradually overcame great chiefs and outstripped them in the race for tribal superiority. In the end he became the undisputed leader of the people, but he was always regarded as a usurper by the less fortunate chiefs. He had many enemies among them and it is doubted if any of the more powerful chiefs of the Sioux will grieve much over the sudden and tragic end of the famous old rascal, for he was a rascal of the most treacherous and cruel stamp."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Gen. Schofield this morning received a despatch from Gen. Miles dated Pine Ridge, Jan. 1, saying that 3,000 Indians, men, women and children and including about 600 bucks are now encamped in a section of the Bad Lands, 15 miles from Pine Ridge agency and there is almost a cordon of troops around them. The spot where they are encamped he describes as somewhat like the lava-beds of California, where the Mohees made their final fight. It is an excellent position from an Indian's standpoint, but there are no avenues of escape, all having been closed by troops. Gen. Miles says that the Indians have gathered some cattle and provisions and appear to be determined to make their fight for supremacy at this point. He says he will make another effort to get them back to the agency without bloodshed, and in order to do so he has established a regular siege around the strong hold.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 2.—A blizzard set in Wednesday night with great severity over Northern Missouri and Kansas. Kansas is covered with a blanket of snow from four inches to a foot thick, in many places has drifted. Despatches from different places in Kansas indicated the almost entire cessation of all but local railway traffic as a result of the storm. The Burlington coast-bound passenger train is blocked on the prairie 18 miles north of Atchison and the Missouri Pacific east-bound train is stalled north of Hiawatha. Relief trains have been sent from Atchison to the blocked trains, but they too may be unable to plow through the high drifts. The east-bound Rhode Island passenger train is tied up at Salina, Kansas, and the west-bound Union Pacific trains have been unable to get beyond Brookville. Trains were sent out from here at 6 p.m. yesterday and the passenger trains were all equipped with two engines and snow plows.

The Empire

has done its share in holding on this movement, by awarding a handsome flag to one school in each county of Ontario, but the number of enquiries from all parts of the Dominion as to how flags can be obtained by other schools has determined the publishers of THE EMPIRE to offer a Canadian flag.

Let those who are interested in getting a flag for their school join in getting a flag, and while subscribers will value for $1.25 money in the best newspaper in the Dominion, the school obtains a flag for $1.25.

THE WEEKLY EMPIRE has recently been enlarged to twelve pages, and is now, without doubt, the best weekly newspaper in Canada, while the reputation of THE DAILY EMPIRE as the leading morning journal of the Dominion is well known.
