J. D. Isaacs Believes Traffic School Board Votes 6 to Bulk Will Be Diverted to Against Abolition of Central Highway.

J. D. Isaacs, managing director of Middlesex Motors, Limited, elected second vice-president of the new highway tourist board, believes that the new organization will accomplish its object and attract the bulk of tourist traffic to the central highway within two years.

The aim of the board is to divert tourist traffic which at present travels along the southern route in Western Ontario to the highway which passes through London on the way from Windsor to Niagara Falls. The blue water route, as it has been poetically christened by the advertising men in the southern counties, has been getting a large share of tourist traffic in the last three or four years, and the east and south collegiates in near-the central highway men are now out to make a bid for a greater share of

HUMOR BRIGHTENS REPLIES TO BOARD

Many Ignore Simple Answers to Collegiate Course Queries.

Many amusing replies were received by the board of education in answer to its manual training and huosehold science questionnaire.

The question addressed to the parents of students attending the London collegiate institute, to be answered by "Yes" or "No," was simple enough, as follows: "Do you consider the manual training and household enough, as follows: "Do you consider the manual training and household science courses in the collegiate, in-stitutes of this city of sufficient bene-science courses in the collegiate, institutes of this city of sufficient benefit to your child to warrant the continuing of them in the collegiate institutes?"

Donald Soper declined to answer either "Yes" or "No," and instead wrote: "When we elected the present board of trustees we thought we were electing men big enough to stand on their own feet and to decide the questions which came before them without having to ask every Tom, Dick and Harry what to do."

Snappy qualified "Yes" verdicts were as follows: "Emphatically, yes": "Yes, by all means"; "Yes, thank you for your kind attention, keep the change"; "Yes; would rather pay extra than have the courses taken out."

"Absolute Nonsense."

There is also a great need for the establishment of a school of economics to teach value, good judgement, what are the most things in life, how to get the most for the least cost and how to enjoy the abundance of life.

How to Save Told

"If your object is to save me why not establish a municipal fire why not establish a municipal free insurance company and save 40 per cent of the premiums? Another thing you can do is to abolish the payment of interest on debentures and save from 50 to 75 per cent of the cost of building school houses. Still another greater savingf can be made by stopping the useless advertising duplication in business, w amounts to more than twice as much as all we spend on education, so why

Other communications tabled at the meeting either favoring the re-tention or else very serious consider-ation before eliminating the courses Mr. Cairneross asserted that it was 'all nonsense' to argue that the board could not build new collegiate units in the east and south sections of the city and not put manual training and household science units in them, at the same time leaving the central the collegiate three years ago.

Describing himself to be "in a compromising mood," Mr. Copeland collaborated with Mr. Cairncross, and the two of them then brought in a motion along the lines of Mr. Cairncross, remarks.

The vote on the original motion, introduced by Mrs. Hunt and secondintroduced by Mrs. Hunt and second-ed by Mr. Mess, stood the same way, with the division reversed. Both Mr. Mess and Mrs. Rose expressed their willingness to have voted in favor of making use of public school centers for the east and south collegiates, had the "elimination" motion been voted on first and defeated and then electric system.

Hobby Fair Collections Worth More Than $5,000

Conservative Estimate Placed On 150 Exhibits by W. E. Kelly.

COMPETITION HIGH

Cabinet of Coins Alone Valued At $500—Huge Stamp Display.

The lad whose hobby complex takes and household science units in them, at the same time leaving the central collegiate equipment as it is at present. Mr. Cairneross suggested that the central manual training and training and the central manual training and tacitly ignored the board voted six this year's Hobby fair. A survey to five to continue instruction in just completed by Walter E. Kelly. household director of the collections department, discloses the fact that the 150 exhibits were worth $5,000. And, according to Mr. Kelly, this is a conservative estimate.

WHEABLE IMPRESSED Competition in the most valuable Competition in the most valuable section of the show reached its peak in 1925, the director says. The distinction peculiar to a collection of coins, stamps, birds' eggs, buttons, coins, stamps, birds' eggs, buttons, cigar bands or anything that leads itself to the gathering instinct of youth radiated well from the 1924 fair. The result was a big jump in the number of new exhibitors this year. Most of the old ones were back stronger than ever stronger than ever.

$500 Coin Display. "Wonderful," is one of the few audatory adjectives Director Kelly uses in telling about the collections ne browsed amongst a couple of weeks ago. One youngster brought along cabinet of coins that would make many an older enthusiast jealous. It was easily worth $500.

And then there was the album of 12,000 stamps, This also reflected much study and more patience on the part of the boy philatelist. But if he needs $400 in a hurry he won't have much trouble in raising it.

Postcard Blanket.

Mr. Kelly was quite enthused over the premier postcard collection. It contained 3,500 different views, neatly classified and artistically arranged One enterprising 1-year-old thought a postcard blanket would suit his fancy. So he gathered 350 cards and made it. He won an award.
Arrowheads, buttons, medals and lantern slides had their own niches among the aristocrats. All were among the aristocrats. All were valuable, as boy wealth goes, and added their little bit to the magnetism that drew hundreds to the haute monde of the Hobby fair.

Three thousand Londoners witnessed a performance of gymnastics and dancing in the arena last night by the pupils of the Y. W. C. A. The big arena was filled with eager watchers who were amply rewarded in the brilliant program offered and performed by the girls of the gymnasium classes.

Two pupils of the South London collegiate institute brought honor to London last night in winning the finals of the Wossa boys' oratorical contest. Following a keenly-contested debate between Archie Knapp and Arthur Hill, representing London, and Stanley Weber and Robert Boehmer of Kitchener, at the auditorium of the London South collegiate, the London team was declared winner following a consultation of judges. stamped the finals of this year's contest as an improvement on those of former years.

London chose the negative for argument. The main point brought out was that the Dominion of Canada as a whole is not in favor of deepening the Great Lakes waterways. For this reason disinterested sections of the country should not be burdened with the expense of such a great undertaking, they said. The east coast would gain nothing from the venture and consequently would not lend their co-operation. The middle provinces look chiefly to the Hudson as a result are not directly affected. Alberta and British Columbia depend on a Panama Canal route for the exportation of their wheat. In the exportation of their wheat. pend on a Panama Canal route for the exportation of their wheat. In short, a venture which would short, a venture which would not receive the indorsation of the whole dominion would not prove success-

Dr. Pratt, who is well known in Canada as a poet, gave numerous interesting readings of his own works following the debate. He recently published a volume of Newfoundland verse, which is creating great interest among the lovers of poetry. He de-lighted a large audience at the South collegiate last night with readings of some of his more familiar places

The Engineering Masterpiece of the Year ~ ~ ~ The most talked of Car on Four Wheels

Not since the days when automobiles were curiosities has the public showed such interest in a car as they are showing in this beautiful and powerful new Overland with six cylinders.

Everybody instantly admires this great car's refreshing newness. Its sensational power performance is the main topic in automobile circles. People say it is away ahead of all other cars of its class in power . . away ahead in lightning pick-up and getaway . . away ahead in beauty . . in luxury and comfort . . away ahead in economy. And it is away ahead in all these things because it is so far ahead in progressive engineering. Its low price is all out of proportion to its great advantages. Don't fail to see the new Overland Six. Timely Suggestions.

Make certain that your lightning arrester is in good condition. Take special care of storage battery in summer, keeping the solution level well above top of plates. Hot weather causes rapid evaporation. If on extended vacation taken away from the city or home, take the battery to a reliable battery dealer or have the battery fully charged and placed in the basement, where it will be cool and comparatively dry. Also, if away from the house for any length of time, disconnect aerial from the set and coil up as near as possible to lead-in insulator. In some types of sets it would be advisable to disconnect A and B batteries from the set, placing the B batteries in a cool place.

The above pertains to those who

The above pertains to those who are away from their radio set a week or more at a time—it is not to be taken as the thing to do in summer if you remain with your radio. This is especially true for the coming summer days. The usual summer static will not be noticed as much this summer, due to the number of super power stations practically ready for operation. By means of these super power stations the static ratio will be considerably lowered at night, and daytime reception will be much better. This means that in the near future there will be programs available any hour of the day or evening, and with good volume in any location. There will be many surprises awaiting you on your radio this summer.

V. H. of London writes: Will a few dry batteries increase the wave length of my crystal set? If so, please tell me how to connect them to it.

Ans.—The use of dry batteries or any other battery will not affect the wave length range in any way. The only manner in which this can be done is to use either series or shunt condensers on primary coil or by means of tapped inductance. Your radio dealer will help you more fully on this.

J. M. of Chatham writes: We have a good home-made set in our office, which is situation on one floor. We have a 3 horsepower Kimble variable speed motor on one of our presses. Whenever the motor is running all you can hear in the speaker is a steady roar. We also have a ½ and ½ horsepower Kimble motors which do not seem to affect radio reception, also two other small motors. I have tried a loop aerial so I could get market reports, but with no better results. I discovered that today I could hear the motor running when the aerial and ground were disconnected, which would seem to point to sparks at the motor going direct to set. Do you think that a shield placed around the motor and grounded would help any? If you can give me any idea as to how this trouble can be overcome I would be very grateful to you.

Ans.—The trouble you are experiencing is common and is due to sparking of brushes and possible poor connections to the motor from power lines. Sometimes this lies within the conduit leading to motor and is extremely hard to locate. Build a good shield that will entirely enclose the motor and ground to a special ground outside building. Also ground conduit leading to motor using the special ground wire for this also. This will eliminate as much as one is able to do without rewiring plant. Have plant electrician pay particular attention to this motor and have brushes kept in best of condition, speak of in the fifth tube is quite a common trouble in neutrodyne set, it being the lack of proper care as to assembling, use of C battery and of ill-designed transformers. There is considerable power coming to the last stage in a neutrodyne receiver and cost over $250. Our set worked fine at first but gradheard from several of my friends that this is common to some neutrodyne receivers. Is this so? Is there any way to fix this neutrodyne that the satteries will last a weasonable length of time? I also find that when using three or four tubes the music is clear, but when using the fifth tube the set starts to howl and at times when howl is not so bad the music is very much distorted. Is there any way to fix this? Would it cost much to change this neutrodyne to a regenerative sets.

Ans.—The use of small B batteries in your set might point to their short life. However you will experience difficulty as to upkeep of your set if set is not properly adjusted. Unless care is given to each individual ast many people have found out. This in part is due to the fundamental circuit and not to any particular.

VIAY DAY QUEEN HAS WIDE CHOICE

This Season's Beautiful Clothes Seem To Play Into Her Hands.

New York, May 1 .- You may be sure that anybody who announced to mother her desire to be awakened early yesterday because she was to be "Queen of the May," had laid out a lot of new undles for the occasion and that they were practically a mass of billowy lace, Valenciennes, Calais, Venice, Irish or even Chantilly combined with satin, crepe de chine, georgette or radium. Among the spring colors daffodil, rose petal, flesh pink, beige and peach are popular.

With spring foliage staring from every side, what wonder that the leaf has been adapted to the spring costume One of the latest designs brought here from abroad has a per fectly plain upper part of rose colored satin, while the skirt is entirely composed of tiny green chiffon leaves posed on a satin background. The frock has no other adornment except a border of the leaves around the neck line.

Savage Head Dresses. Evening coiffures are becoming more elaborate every day. One designed for Mile. Regine Flory of Paris is of silver cloth completely covering the head, brow and ears and emproidered in topaz. From the neck at the rear depends long, flame-colored and black ostrich plumes. There is almost as great a variety of scarfs today as there are individual women to wear them. One of the newest is hardly larger than a goodsized handkerchief, and is much the same shape, although it is oblong rather than square. It is worn folded quite tightly about the throat and tied in a plain double knot at the back of the neck without a bow.

Collars and Cuffs. Collars and cuffs are about as important a dress adjunct to a woman these days as they are to a man. They seem to go with almost any character of costume, and give an air of individuality to even the simplest little gown. The most fashionable collar and cuff sets are of embroidered Irish linen, edged with Valenciennes lace, or of organdy trimmed with a little picot edging.

Normal school students were entertained delightfully to a recital aranged recently by Charles Percy, nusical director of that institution. The visiting artists included Miss Adelene Mooney, soprano; Miss Gladys McEvoy, contralto; Miss Laura Kirkwood, pianist, and Master Laura Kirkwood, pianist, and Master Billie Bending, violinist. Miss Mooney's numbers were "The Spring Has Come" (White), "My Paradise" (Grandiola), "A Song of Gladness" (Sanderson), and "The Song That Reached My Heart" (Julian). The last mentioned was the general favorite with the student-teachers, and insistent applause drew forth an encore.

Master Billie Bending, violinist, proved to be the revelation of the evening. The Glimpse

High is the fence around my neighbor's garden.
In Spring a corner's glimpse of fluttering leaves,
Then hurrying toilers, with such fleeting moments
For beauty-gathering, pass beside the high barricade
Wondering and very wistful for the hidden pictures.

But Winter, witch of wind-tidiness and frost, Sweeps at the corner where were once green leaves, And lo, through gleaming boughs of ebony and silver, Through intricate network of tight-budded twigs, Are snow-edged ways of little winding paths-Sudden irregular steps of stone down hillsides-And garden seats that grew as did the trees-

Now, smiling, when comes the gray fence-barricade, The tired pass with eyes where dreams have dawned-Winter has rent the curtain of the Spring-Remembered joys the coming leaves will hide And the blank, rude fence be forgotten.

It takes so many eyes to love a garden, Who tries to hoard its beauty finds instead Encumbering wealth—and paling loveliness for need Of much more loving-and glad answering looks.

JULIA HOYT ANALYSES GIRL WHO BOASTS OF NEW FRIENDS

Generally, however, if the man has any self respect, the moment that he discovers that he is being exploited his opinion of the girl not only changes but he is apt to leave her severely alone thereafter.

Certainly no one can respect or admire a girl to whom anything that wears trousers is worth while, provided she can claim him as her Pretty Hard Up. In addition, the girl who derives satisfaction merely from the fact that a man is attentive to her, regardless of whether she likes him or not, and who is willing to have him attentive to her under these conditions, shows that she must be pretty hard up for friends. It should not be the fact of a man's attention that gives one pleasure, but the individual who is attentive. In such a case it seems to me that one of the great charms of receiving the attentions of someone we like, is that the fact that he is attentive to us, is not public property but is something between us only.

The girl who takes a proprietory attitude towards a man does two things which are unquestionably harmful to her. In the first place, she lays herself open to ridicule arrons her friends and acquaintances.

she lays herself open to ridicule among her friends and acquaintances. She gives them the chance to say, "Goodness! Jane is excited at having a beau," and, in addition, as I have already said, she will probably so irritate and offend the man that her friendship with him will very quickly cease. Consequently, it seems to me that a girl shows lack of intelligence in boasting, either verbally or by her in boasting, either verbally or by her actions, of a newly acquired "scalp" From Observation I have so often seen men attracted to a girl on first acquaintance, start-ing to pay her attention and shortly being disgusted by her behavior in being disgusted by her behavior this way and, dropping her that I make the foregoing statements from observation and not from theory. Another point to remember is that there is nothing much more boring than the girl who insists on entertaining other people with the name taining other people with the name and charm of her latest male acquis-

Jimmy, the Unafraid, Is Frightened By Red Terror Near the Forest

By THORNTON W. BURGESS. That automobile behind Jimmy Skunk didn't frighten him in the least, for he had discovered that it wasn't alive, but had something to do with those two-legged creatures called men, and he never had met one of the latter without a terrible gun that didn't treat him with the greatest respect. automobile was afraid to run over him and afraid to try to crowd him out of the road. Jimmy knew it.

So he ambled along in the rut, and now and then turned to look back. Finally as he did this he was just in time to see the man throw something off to one side of the road. where it fell in the dry leaves. Now there are times when Jimmy has quite as much curiosity as Peter Rabbit. This was one of those times. Could it be that that man had thrown away something good to eat? Jimmy away something good to eat? Jimmy had known these two-legged creatures to do that very thing more than once. So now he stepped aside and allowed the automobile to go bast. It went past in a hurry. I should say so! It was quite clear that that man a hurry to nut a safe distance was in a hurry to put a safe distance between himself and Jimmy. Jimmy grinned and turned back to look for that which the man had tossed to the

that which the man had tossed to the leaves by the roadside.

As he drew near the place he kept sniffing. He smelled something that he didn't like at all, something that gave him a feeling of uneasiness. The nearer he got to the place where that thing had fallen the greater became his uneasiness. He didn't know gave him a feeling of uneasiness. The nearer he got to the place where that thing had fallen the greater became his uneasiness. He didn't know just what to make of it. That uneasiness became a vague sort of fear, yet what there was to be afraid of Jimmy didn't know. It was a new and strange feeling, for, you know, that, as a rule, Jimmy is afraid of no one and nothing. That unpleasant odor grew stronger, and then Jimmy saw something that there is account it, not a thing. So he turned and hurried back across the road and into the Green Forest, heading straight for home under the hen-house in Farmer Brown's fa"myard, and for once Jimmy Skunk hurried. Yes, sir, he did just that. He couldn't get there fast enough. You see, he would be safe. At last Jimmy Skunk knew fear.

And as he hurried on he kept puzzling over the sudden appearance of the Red Targon. that, as a rule, Jimmy is afraid of no one and nothing. That unpleasant odor grew stronger, and then Jimmy saw something that made him pause and stare with something like real fright in his eyes. It was a little thread of smoke rising above the dead leaves. Yes, sir, that is what it was, a little thread of smoke! Jimmy knew now why he had felt so queer. He knew what smoke was and what it meant. It meant that the Red Terror, which men call fire, and which all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows fear more than anything else in all the Great World, was abroad.

Jimmy stared hard at the place from which that little thread of smoke was rising. A tiny yellow flame suddenly reached up and touched a brown, dead, dry leaf. All in a second that brown, dead, dry leaf turned black, then a glowing red and disappeared, and the dancing little yellow flame danced to another brown, dead, dry leaf, and it, too, disappeared. Jimmy Skunk didn't have to be told what was happening. The Red Terror was loose and was beginning to

While the average man, no less than the average woman, wants to keep young looking a; long as possible, he would throw up his hands in horror at any suggestion that he employ cosmettes for the purpose. Although Life Has Changed Since Dad's Day, Old Human Nature Isn't a Bit Different.

Through the death of a daughtern-law two grandchildren of tender age were recently committed to the care of a friend of mine. Having brought up a family of fine sons and daughters, this intelligent and energetic woman naturally thinks that she knows something about rearing children. But her ideas do not meet with the approval of the undisciplined and pampered modern youngsters.

"Why, grandmother," they exclaim continually to her, "you have such old-fashioned ideas about things! You are trying to raise us like children were raised in dad's day!"

To them dad's day is archaic and grandmother's time is pre-historic, for in those dim, be-nighted ages children were made to mind. They were expected to be humble-minded and self-effacing, and not to speak until they

No-Nobody had thought any more then body then expected a child to monopolize the conversation at dinner any more than they expected to talk to Europe by wireless. Nor had it entered into the mind of man that you would break a self-willed child's spirit and develop the inferiority complex in it by making it behav and inculcating a respect for law and order in it.

Parents still put their faith then in spanking instead of moral suasion as a means of regeneration, and fathers and mothers still ruled their families instead of the household be ing bossed by a babe in arms or girls and boys in their 'teens. A strange state of offgirs. truly. Vastly different from now, when parents frankly admit that they can do nothing with their 10 or 12 year old children, and that they have no authority over them; when the children monopolize the conversation; when mother and father only have the use of the automobile at sech times as Johnny and Susie are not joy-riding in it; when mother can only weep when Mamie takes off most of her clothes and goes to a dance, because she can't stop her from doing the things that shock her; when callow boys and girls tell their fathers and mothers where to get off, instead of listening to their advice; and when youth doesn't even pretend to have any respect

But what the modern child and modern parents do not seem to realize is that, while we have many new mechanical inventions that have changed the outward mains the same and we have the same old human nature. We haven't improved on that and we haven't altered the immutable law of cause and effect.

In dad's day he had the trotting horse, and the side-bar buggy, and the lancers, and the church sociable, and only the more prosperous had electric lights, and we gasping over the marvels of the telephone and phonographs were wheez cars, and jazz and cabarets, and allnight clubs, and petting parties, and vireless telegraphy, and the radio. But what we sow we still reap, and the wages of sin is death.

There is no modern invention that saves the boy and girl who go wrong from being punished just as bitterly as they were in dad's day or grandma's day, or great-grandfather's day. The boy who drinks prohibition booze gets even more soddenly drunk and descends even more quickly to the gutter than did the sot of pre-Volstead days. Despite these dire predictions, the local officials went ahead and completed every arrangement for firing the opening gun. If the gunpowder shows tights of keeping dry this morning before the Terriers board a train around 9 v'clock, there will be nothing to do but let the former champs make the journey and gamble on what will happen in between that time and 2:30, when the came starts.

Lags night the locals were issued with their uniforms, following a short skull irill, an optimistic enough procedure, or therwise there would have been de-tachable fur linings and hipboots is-ued as well. Gait has practically the same roster that has played its way into four previncial finals, and which for three straight years carried off the provincial championship. In many ways the Terriers are stronger than ever. They still have Friendy Graham and Wilber Kress, two of the smartest amateur kress, two of the smartest amateur hurlers in the business, and with all the boise and control that four successive years of crucial struggles have given them. However, everything points to a close same whichever way its goes. London, presenting one team instead of two, theoretically at least, adds about 40 per cent more strength. Orients last year battled St. Thomas to the ninth inning of the final game of the season before taking the count, and the Tom Cats weren't given any harder battles in the play-offs with Sarnia and the Terriers than the local team gave them all through last season. In Down, Quick, Pring and Bus Baker, Braund has a stronger pitching staff than ever represented London on one team before.

The infield with the two veterans. Reilly and Doherty and young Mu.hall between them, makes the right side of the inner works unusually strong. Armstrong, another veteran, will be at third today, it is expected. He has been converted from a catcher to a second baseman, and now to a third sacker. Armstrong's hitting has always been consistent, and he has learned to handle himself agilely at the danger sack.

Manager Braund has had practically no outfield problem to solve at any stage. He has heavy hitting outfielders to pit against any sort of flinging. There are enough players this season to give London free use of strategical batting orders to meet opposition pitchers, and that will be a big advantage from the hecinairs.

It is hoped that this will not be taken as a crack at some of Knotty's ball players, nor as an inference that they are somewhat spavin-ed.

MAGIC IN SPORT.

It's almost a sure bet that the Indians who ran against Nurmi in California used their own special magic against Nurmi. Failure to beat the Finn with it will not loosen their faith in its power.

Every tribe of Indians have their own pet magic, which is no more a relic of paganism than are the thousand and one superstitions which hedge the supposedly Christianized Anglo-Saxons. It was often said that Longboat had some rare concoctions which he used before a race, and they were not for internal application, though Thomas had a penchant for the white man's magic, preferably that which came in sealed bottles.

The writer not so far from London has personally seen a welleducated Indian boy prior to a soccer game rubbing a burnt mixture of rabbit's foot and portions of a porcupine's antamony on his boots and forehead. The rabbit's foot was not a tribute to Lady Luck as the white man or black man would pay it, but for speed, and the remains of the well-roasted porcupine were to lend a touch of deep wile to the proceedings.

The fact that a rabbit while he may be covering a good deal of ground in very short time also is apt to confusedly cover the same ground in circles didn't seem to enter into the idea at all

White athletes have their pet superstitions. Though no authentic case has been found of an amateur athlete cultivating "moles upon the neck, because they meant money by the peck," there is widespread suspicion that it does go on.

Denmark used to be the malodorous state, but now it's Finland, Bluebonnets track has taken all the colorful steeplechase events off its meetings. Apparently things are "jumpy" enough around there without seeing the horses do it.

WATCH WESTERN.

The acquisition of Bill Marsden by Western University step forward in the program to put Western in the first flight of athletic competition. The building is being done slowly but surely.

Marsden has played nearly every other game but hockey, but it is as a hockey coach that Marsden has achieved his most noteworthy He has an uncanny instinct for the games which call for competition by teams and as a foundation for his coaching, he emphasizes

Usually, successful coaches have played the games they teach. But there have been some notable exceptions. Connie Mack never was an outstanding professional baseball player, yet he was one of the first of the "miracle men." Hugo Bezdek, who played little baseball, managed the Pirates at one time and had some success.

There have been many cases of capable fight managers who had never donned a glove, yet knew how to handle fighters from the corner. Marsden apparently adapted his knowledge of soccer to hockey-a. perfectly logical proceeding and in his case a successful one.

THE SEADON

During all the years that the track game has held a prominent place in the world of sport there have been two blue ribbon running events-the 100-yard dash and the mile run.

For a long time track fans have been looking for a sprinter who can cover the century route in nine seconds flat. They are still looking. The chances are that ten years from now they will still be looking. The present crop of sprinters is generous in quantity and quality, but it is extremely doubtful whether it contains the wished-for 9-second man. None of the rising generation of speedsters looks like a superman. The achievement belongs to the far-off and unknown future.

For just as many years the followers of the cinder path have been talking about the possibility of there being a runner who can cover the mile in four minutes. Until the last few months they have been considering this possibility without the slightest hope of ever seeing that sensational performance recorded.

Then came Paavo Nurmi, the wonder Finn. He came leaping into the limelight and has changed the 4-minute mile from a vague and misty possibility into a sport dream that may very well come true. It has taken 43 years to clip 11 seconds off the mile mark of 4 minutes 21 2-5 seconds set by George, the great English runner. Later Tommy Conness reduced the record time to 4 minutes 153-5 seconds. Sixteen years later Paul Jones of Cornell "U" sliced off a fifth of a second, and the year following he lowered his own record by a full second. Two years later Norm. Taber set the mark at 4 minutes 12 3-5 seconds, and this stood until Nurmi made the present world's record of 4 minutes 10 2-5 seconds in 1923,

Perhaps it will be objected that as it has taken 43 years to lower the record 11 seconds, it is foolish to suppose that Nurmi will be able to lower it another 10 seconds in what remains of a competitive life that has already covered several years. The answer to that is that Nurmi is a wonder man-an athletic genius who cannot be measured by the ordinary measure of track ability.

Jackson Putting Real Life Into Cleveland Americans' Infield.

Special to The Advertiser. By JOHN B. FOSTER.

New York, May 1.—Baseball fans who peruse the minor league records for some line on Spurgeon, the current third baseman of the Cleveland Americans, won't find any-unless they look in the J column. His minor league name was Jackson, and he was transferred from New Orleans to Cleveland in July, 1924.

But whatever the name, Cleveland's third baseman is contributing considerably to the team's success, and has thrown something of a scare into Lutzke, the player who started the season at third for the Indians.

Looking over the record which "Jackson" made at New Orleans it "Jackson" made at New Orleans it is not so hard to understand his present speed. Last summer, as shortetop, for the southern team, he whacked the ball for .278, and fielded .940. Shortstops never get such high figures as other infielders, and .940 looks pretty good. New Orleans I HARD LUCK CHAMPION.

Lil Stoner, Detroit pitcher, yesterday qualified for the title of Lady Luck's most abused devote. In the tenth inning he went into the box after the Cleveland Indians had combed twelve hits off Wells, Holloway and Cole. The score was tied 7—7. Stoner threw just one ball. It was wild. There was an Indian on third. Figure it out. looks pretty good. New Orleans begged that Jackson be permitted to stay, as the Corescent city had a chance. Eventually Memphis captured the Southern association cham-pionship, and New Orleans had to be satisfied with third place.

Jackson didn't accumulate any re-cord with Cleveland last season. He merely looked them over, under the name of Spurgeon. He got his chance when Lutzke became temporarily incapacitated, and showed himself possessed of everything requisite to a good third baseman. He has batted around .300 and has fielded admirably.

With a winning combination now ing, it is a question whether Lutzke will get his job back-at least until break comes in which Spurgeon Lutzke isn't likely to hit .300 unless he amends the errors of his swing at hat. When it is figured what Lutzke might do for some other teams, the Philadelphia Nationals for instance, there seems to be no ustice in baseball. It's just an old pin cushion with the points sticking

Jim Tunney of the Giants' pitching staff has been released to Rochester, and Howard Baldwin of the same crew has been captured by Joe O'Brien for the Toledo club. Baldwin was with the Giants all of last year, and came originally from Newark.

Hamilton Spectator: "Every now and then some fan comes out with the suggestion that Hamilton should be given a berth in the International league, but judging from the opening games at Toronto and Buffalo yesterday it will be some time before this city can hope to have class AA rating. About 16,000 saw the game at Buffalo, the crowd being enlarged through the mayor declaring it a half holiday. At Toronto the attendance was over 12,000, so that the combined paid admission at the two games was nearly as high as the total attendance for the season at the Michigan-Ontario league games here last year. "Patsy Donovan, who piloted the team which was moved from Syracuse to Hamilton toward the close of the season of 1918, has not forgotten the treatment he received from the fans here, when they presented him with a purse of gold during the last game of the season. Patsy is manager of the Jersey City team, and judging by what his athletes showed at Buffalo yesterday, he has mustered a real smart team. FAST-RECUPERATING MINT LEAGUE ACQUIRING HEALTHY COMPLEXION

All Indications Point To Better Season in Circuit.

OPTIMISM RULES

Fans of London and Hamilton Showing Greater Enthusiasm.

The Mint league has changed its com-The Mint league has changed its complexion many times since the close of last season. At the end of the 1924 season and until about February the Mint league wore a pallor with which all leading undertakers and morticlans are very familiar. The temporary removal of a threat of an all-Canadian league brought some color back to the old Mint league dial, and if the complexion of the circuit is not precisely ruddy half a week before opening day, it is at least showing signs of healthful color.

The splotch at Flint, which was in violent eruption a week ago, is returning to normal. Flint may be depended upon to carry on through the season, once it starts. Flint is a good ball town, but Powell's strange eccentricities as owner have allenated the fans from the ball club to some extent. Industrial conditions in Flint indicate that, with a new management, the Vehics will again be one of the largest drawing clubs in the new circuit Kitchener which was surgically removed from the original Mint league several seasons ago, is to be rebuilt into a professional baseball center, according to the cherished plans of President Tom Halligan of the league, and Manager Knotty Lee is the born trouper among the baseball pilots. No long runs for this comedian. Lee might have fallen into many soft jobs in baseball, with his wealth of experience as the background, but apparently he gets more kick out of pioneering leagues and ball clubs than he would by going in for certainties.

Evert here a goog deal of confidence

Knotty has a good deal of confidence in Kitchener as a baseball town, and, after three weeks of training there, is more optimistic than ever.

The Lee brand of optimism is not quite so blind that it doesn't know a forlorn hope when it sees one. This same store of optimism has been tempered more than once by setbacks.

Knotty Lee has seldom been backed up by bulky bank-rolls—in fact, Knotty probably has a suspicion that bank-rolls exist only in fiction which deals with minor leagues. So he'll produce a team somehow and from somewhere for the edification of the Kitchener fans, and, from the start he has made already, it will be a team that will justify some backing. Lee Is Optimistic. backing.
The withdrawal of the Kitchener Wolves from the amateur race should help Kitchener make the grade on high.

Greater Enthusiasm.

Hamilton and London both showed unmistakable signs last season of coming back. London especially, with an increased attendance of almost 50 per cent over the year before, in the face of the worst western Hamilton fans seem normally enthusiastic over the long-distance reports from their nomadic crew, now slowly nearing the Mint league area in Michigan, after much wandering and many defeats.

Wednesday's game should usher in a successful season in the somewhat shrunken but still virile circuit presided over by Migther Halligan.

session the board of education last night passed a resolution to erect the new high school on the site of the present building. It was decided to hold a meeting on May 4 at which consideration will be given to the problem of purchase of adjoining property to secure acreage as stipulated by the department of education.

When this motion was presented Chairman Dunfield refused to submit it to a vote so Russell Kirkpatrick was asked to preside and the motion was then passed.

The vote for the motion was Dale, Sanson, Clubb, Truan, Pete and Kirkpatrick. Chairman Dunfield, Wilson, Smith and McDonald refused to vote claiming that the action of the board was out of order.

Following the vote the chairman refused to act and soon left the meeting. J. B. Dale was voted to the chair and a rather warm debate followed in which W. B. Wilson led the constituent to the property at the followed to the constituent to the property at the followed to the constituent to the const the opposition to the present site. It is stated that the question is not settled and those opposed to the present site say they will seek legal advice.

A motion was passed that no money in the treasurery should be used for the new school except such money as is set aside for the building. Another motion asked the council to provide $3,000 to be used for paying the teachers and meeting other expenses. The council at the last meeting refused the money because the board was evenly divided on the site question and on other resolutions are question and on other resolutions pro-

Bay City, May 1.—Manager Dick Breen's entourage of Wolf ball players returned to the home lair late tonight after more than two weeks of spring training at Springfield, Illinois, where the new pilot practically shaped his 1925 entry in the Mint league.

The paramount problem concerning the club this year came as the result of selling the leading pitchers, but the new manager feels that in securing Miller, an ex-college star of the east, and Rose from the Terre Haute club, he has enough raw material to build a good staff around two veterans, Lahaie and Hendee. Kimpling, a third veteran, recently bought his release from the team. The likeliest looking new hurier is Weatherington, a boy, sent to Breen from Des Moines.

George Tomer and Bob Prysock will be back at first and second bases respectively, with Knothe, another farmout from Des Moines, almost sure to get the shortstop assignment. The third base argument will be settled within a few days between Rawline and Garrity, both inexperienced but fast looking players. Rawline holds the edge because of his heavy stick work. In the outer gardens George Hughes, who will be in the middle, is the only veteran.
Cline, a third boy from the Des Moines team, is a sure bet for one of the fields, while Blackstock undoubtedly will take the other. He was with Reading in the International in 1924.

The Wolves have their official inaugural here Saturday afternoon, meeting the local Kaysee club in the first of

For their pitching staff they have three of last year's team, Evans. Rumble and Young. Miles is another of the hourlers. Bennett and Hendry will do the receiving. Judgment has been reserved by County Judge Stanworth in the case of Roy Truax of Blenheim, charged with stealing a quantity of caps, mufflers and nosiery from the car of R. H. Soron, travelling salesman.

Fred Marshall of Blenheim pleaded guilty when arraigned in police court on the theft charge, and was released on suspended sentence. At the trial of Truax he gave crown evidence that Truax hed left the garage door unlocked so that he could steal the merchandise. Judge Stanworth reserved his decision so that the counsel in the case might submit legal authorities as to how far the evidence of an accomplice can be taken into consideration if the circumstances are not corroborated.

A Brewery Is a Cross Between Modern Engine Room and Ancient Abbey's Vaults -Very Old and Very New Picturesquely Interwoven--Ontario Breweries All Very Juch in Action

By GREGORY CLARK

EBRUARY 10, Premier Ferguson announced Four Point Four.

May 15 is announced as the date of sale. The interval is three months-just the right time to brew and mature a supply.

Pon can be raw materials one day and in your innards the next. Not so beer. Beer consists of barley malt, hops, water and time-time being the important ingredient.

What has this three months meant in the breweries of the province? And what, asks a generation of ten years, is a brewery? How is viewpoints, to nearly everybody-how is beer assembled and shellacked. made?

The very new and the very old are interwoven amidst the gorgeous flash of burnished copper, the dim, chill shadow of cooling rooms and cellars; the newness of great electric devices, the oldness of oaken casks of gigantic size, bound with beams like the ribs of an ancient ship, reposing in remote and cavernous catacombs.

For beer comes out of the very oldest times. As the modern bakery ovens are complicated methods of doing with wheat and yeast what fardistant ancestors did with ovens of clay, the modern brewery, with its electric power, its refrigeration plant, its gravity system of production, evolves practically the same thing from the same ingredients which the Egyptians, with their primitive tubs, used 1300 years B.C.

Despite the advance of science in the manufacture of everything men use, the employment of these new and modern factors in the brewing of beer has to be handled with skill and care. For the principles which the ancient monks in the abbeys of England developed long, dim centuries ago stand unaltered. Temperatures and times, proportions and weights, have to be respected even in this arrogant age of discovery. The modern brewery, with its huge copper kettles-the bottoms of which are in one storey, there and hustle out as if time was money are the middle of which pass through a second storey, and the tops of which protrude through into the third storey where the men work at itvats, filters, cleansers, coolers and array of upto-the-minute looking machines of imposing aspect, all seem to be standing respectfully and deferentially in the presence of something very old and fundamental, out of the past. Brewing is about the only process out of which modern scientific methods have not chased all respect for the methods of the ages.

past. Despite the fact that the power turning not seek comradeship, but food, fast food at all these mashing tuns and boiling caldrons is a that. They are not aiming at jolly little lunmysterious force undreamed of by the abbots of cheon parties where they may talk shop or sport Burton-on-Trent, there is something medieval in or lighten the burden of business care by midthe huge burnished kettles with their swan day relaxation. Beer came out of Egypt. The Greeks brought it to Europe, though they deemed it a drink for slaves and barbarians, as also did the Romans. Yet the Romans brought to England with them the improved methods of the East. The great day of beer in England began with the twelfth and thirteenth centuries when the monasteries began its manufacture on a business basis. About the time America was discovered the first charter was granted the brewers of London, who times even to the very present, the squires and lords of the old country have had their own breweries on their estates, and brew own and their tenants' use. The beer of those olden days was not the a heavy, bitter, hoppy brew, usually cloudy and certainly high in alcoholic content. The whole the past two hundred years has been to develop lighter and lighter beers. The manager of O'Keefe's Brewery, who permitted a view of the processes in that huge plant—which was only refitted in the most modern style a couple of years before prohibition was enacted-made the significant statement that in the past twentyfive years prior to prohibition the manufacture set up opposition to the monasteries. But from of beer had turned over from an 80 per cent. production of fairly heavy stock ale to, at the last, an 80 per cent. production of light lagers

So Four Point Four is after all only in keep- ing with the change and evolution of taste for

A Foaming, Fermenting Lake

ARLEY MALT, hops and water are the con-B stituents of beer. The hops—which are only injected into the process for a very short tendency of the brewing art and industry for time, during the boiling in the picturesque big copper kettles-serve to give a little bitterness, an aroma and a certain preservative acid to the beer. In past times, other substances than hops were used. The ancient Britons used the tamarisk shrub. Beer, save for this, is barley malt, soaked at certain precise temperatures, called "mashing," boiled, cooled, fermented with the addition of yeast, then cleansed and racked and stored to mature and age. To go through a brewery the size of O'Keefe's renders it hardly conceivable that a lot of water, ground malt and the necessary dose of hops are

It is in this secondary step in the making of beer that the kind of malt and the mashing temperature decide to a large degree the type and quality of the beer that will result.

After the boiling, and the introduction of the hops, the "wort" or liquid, from which all the malt and hops and other solid matter has been strained, is run to the cooler, which is perhaps the most spectacular incident in the whole manufacture of beer. The cooler is a little Niagara of beer! A high series of pipes, twenty feet high and thirty feet long, has a thin stream of the beer-still tasteless and flat-constantly pouring and trickling down into a huge copper pan into a smother of suds. These pipes contain a flow ater, and the beer, hot from the kettles, is cooled by the time it trickles to the huge pan There, a great lake of foaming beer, hundreds of gallons, pausing on its way to the fermenting tuns below.

In the fermenting tuns, huge oaken vata strapped and bound with beams like a sailing ship, cold water pipes in coils keep the ferment ing beer at a constant temperature-which fur ther determines the strength and quality of it It froths and bubbles noisily, throwing off car bonic acid gas as it develops its alcohol.

It has been asked, during the recent discus sion of Four Point Four, at what stage the al cohol is "put in," as if it were poured in like the yeast. The alcohol enters the beer at this stage as part of the process of fermentation. As a matter of fact, there is alcohol in all sof' drinks. In ginger ale, it totals .81 or a little less than 1 per cent. weight, as compared with the 4.4 of the new beer.

Until the beer has passed over the Niagara like cooler, nothing has been determined in i but its future alcoholic content-and that largely by the amount of malt and the temperature of mashing. It is in the fermentation that the beer is changed into ale or lager. If it is to be ale it is a warm fermentation process and the yeas rises to the top. If it is to be lager, cold fer mentation is used, and the yeast falls to the bottom of the tun.

Bottling is Automatic

HE froth is skimmed, and the beer is drawn off, by means of pumps of fire-hose dimensions to settling vats to cleanse itself and then is "racked" or pumped to storage tuns, also of oak, where it ages and matures before being character of the brew is determined, whether it is to be heavy or light ale, and so forth. The barreled or bottled.

This one brewery through which we were shown can produce sixteen hundred barrels of 25 gallons each of beer a day—as far as the fermenting tuns. From there the beer, depending on whether it is light or heavy, has to mature from six weeks to three months before being sold. In one respect, brewing has always been modern: cleanliness. Even the ancient Britons knew that the slightest atom of dirt or foreign matter in the brew would spoil it completely. Fermentation has to be most carefully gauged, and any foreign bacteria of "wild yeast" will sour a whole ten thousand gallon vat of the nearly finished beer. Thus brewing consists of two main operations, brewing and cleaning-up. In one department, where the operation has been finished, a crew of men with hoses and brushes and swabs is hard at the task of making the burnished copper shine like fire. This crew follows from mashing tun to filter, to kettle and cooler, and the jealous eye of the brew-master follows them lest they spare a little speck of dirt that will ruin his brew and his reputation. The barrels and bottles receive the same close attention, for if these are not sterile, the finished product will ferment again and sour.

Both barreling and bottling is automatic. After passing over most ingenious automatic systems of water-jets and brushes, scalded and scoured. the barrels and bottles pass under faucets to be filled. The bottling machine automatically fills and caps the bottles, which are then passed through a slow process of pasteurization, not so much to purify as to preserve the beer at its proper and lawful strength, for once it has been pasteurized the bottled beer can no longer ferment. Barreled beer is bunged by hand and is not pasteurized, as it is largely for immediate consumption in hotels, but it will keep a reasonable length of time without increasing its strength through secondary fermentation.

Four Point Four is made in the ordinary process of brewing, in no way tampered with. and its low strength is controled and determined by the quality and amount of malts used, plus strict attention to temperatures during mashing and fermentation. With modern cooling systems these tricky temperatures can be well controled so that beer to within a fractional point of the legal requirement can be turned out with almost complete certainty. If a brew, by some miscalculation, comes to the end of the process and is above the legal limit, it cannot be sold.

Four Point Four, however, is not an altogether new problem to the brewers. The Encyclopedia Britannica gives the strength of American lagers before the Volstead Act as being from 2.68 to 4.12 per cent. volume. The new 4.4 is, by volume, 2.50 per cent. So that it will approximate the lightest American lagers of before the war.

THE differences between restaurants do not lie in the food and fixings as much as in the people who patronize them.

Take the chair lunches and the whole battery of quick lunch counters. One thing you notice right away. The men who hustle in not high executives whose time is money and it is essential that they hurry back to their offices. Rather are the patrons men who have a whole lunch hour to kill and all sorts of time to kill it in. It seems that the more time they have the faster they want to eat. Of course, some of them are hurrying to pool rooms and bowling alleys. But that is another story.

Another thing you notice about the chair lunch places is the fact that the eaters in the main come in singly. Here is the very anti-But in the brewery we make touch with the thesis of the Rotarian principle. These men do solitude and brood ruminatively over their eat-

Of course even in these degenerate days a few men may be seen occasionally who will order a cut from the roast in a cafeteria, but they are rare birds indeed. Eating habits have certainly changed. At least the places where one might eat have changed. In fact, they are all the time changing. Some little time ago the roast beef sandwich made its appearance in a popular type of restaurant where it had been hitherto unknown. This is not roast beef, as in the old days with potatoes and vegetables. But roast beef placed hot on bread and rich brown gravy spread over it. You'd be surprised at the man it seemed to have brought out of hiding, wraiths of the past who welcome them as reminders of

S TILL another kingdom has toppled and one more monarch has laid his sceptre on the shelf. The kingdom in question is Bardsey Island, a monarchy about the size of a western ranch, lying in the Atlantic just off the coast of Wales. Though it had a population of only 60, is is the reputed burial ground of 20,000 saints.

King Love Pritchard is the abdicating narch. His predecessor, King John II., left in 1911 and died in a Welsh poorhouse. Though King Pritchard possesses, or did possess, an imposing crown, he preferred to wear a fisherman's cap and use a large pipe as a sceptre.

He is abdicating because he is fed up with the job. His 60 subjects are quitting the kingdom because they find it too lonely. The king himself has no plans for the future except that he would rather enjoy taking a few dancing ssons for mere amusement.

Though Bardsey is only two miles from Wales as the crow flies, the rough seas often make unication impossible for weeks. Recently there was a six weeks' hiatus in the country's relations with the outside world. This caused a tobacco famine and the famine, in turn, was the nediate cause of the kingdom's downfall.

Being aware of the captain's very limited knowledge of the French language, his clerical companions jokingly reminded him that without their aid he would have some difficulty in securing his morning

But Captain Hezzelwood's command of French was more extensive than his two friends were aware. He knew two words of the language, to wit, "garcon" and "beaucoup." Confident that by the aid of these two words he would be able secure the much desired breakfast, he entered the dining room of the hotel, seated himself at table, and then in the deep stentorian tone for which he is noted, called: "Garcon." It worked fine, for a waiter was at his side almost instantly. The next step was to indicate that he wanted something to eat, and this he essayed to do by the aid of the second French rord he knew and the sign language. Accordngly, turning to the waiter he exclaimed: coup," and then the resourceful captain. throwing his head back, opened his mouth as ride as possible, thrusting at the same time an dex finger into the aperture, hoping thereby to convey to garcon that he wanted much to eat. Out, messieur," responded the waiter with a gracious bow. And the breakfast that Captain Hezzelwood obtained made his clerical comalons, who were watching proceedings from convenient distance, green with envy.

O one is safe from Will Rogers' jests, from the Prince of Wales to his own family. The cowboy comedian's latest bon mots have been broadcast at the expense of Charles M. Schwab, the steel king, who has just published an autobiography.

"It seems he was born," says Rogers, referring to the book, "and the next thing it said about him was that he was driving a stage-coach. There's a blank after that and then Schwab was a clerk in a grocery store. He ate all the profits in that and was let out. The autobiography skips to the time he was driving stakes for a steel company at $1 a day. Then the next thing was that Schwab was president of the company. That's the longest leap in autobiographies I ever heard of.

"How did he get to be president. I've been thinking it over and I think I have the truth of it. The stake drivers weren't organized in those days and Schwab told them to organize and he'd tell them how to hit the stakes. One day Captain Bill Jones came along and saw a gang of men driving stakes and one standing by and telling them when to hit. 'There's a genius, said Jones and that's how Charley Schwab became president of the company."

You have to have a chaperon of some kind with them, and it costs money. Sargent Man of Moods, A Prodigious Worker

Born in Italy, Educated in Europe, Lived in England-Was the Great American Painter

OHN SINGER SARGENT, the man of many moods, the modern old master, the focal point of many an artistic uproar and the vortex of many an esthetic tornado, is dead.

Sargent, we are told by reliable volumes of who's-who nature, was a great American portrait painter. He was born in Florence, Italy. He studied art in Germany, France and Spain, and lived most of his life in England because he preferred London to almost any other city. But he was born of American parents who came from Gloucester, Massachusetts, a little fishing village which is famous for two things, first, that it smells bad in summer, and second, that it smells bad in winter. Sargent, however, remained an American all his life.

He made his first noteworthy appearance in Paris as a young student. While he was gaining for himself an artistic education, he did a portrait of his master which was exhibited. This brought him fame overnight for the simple reason that this portrait of the master by the student was very evidently better than anything the master had ever done himself.

Sargent was always a prodigious worker. In fact, his last canvases, a set of murals, were only completed eleven days before his death. He painted portraits of all kinds of people everywhere, and, as a result, was roundly criticized on the score that money was his chief aim. He worked on the theory, however, that as portrait painter his business in life was to paint portraits and that he should not refuse a sitter simply because that particular sitter presents a difficult task.

He had an uncanny habit of getting below the surface and painting the character beneath. There are several stories of Sargent portraits being taken home by sitters, examined carefully and then destroyed because they would betray secrets which the persons in question wanted kept hidden. There is the famous story of a portrait which revealed to a doctor the fact that the sitter was insane after he had been vainly trying to diagnose the case for some time.

Sargent's death has resulted in the release of a veritable flood of these anecdotes. They will keep on coming, true and incorrect, accurate and exaggerated, for the next decade, no

Schoolgirl Friends Recall Younger Days of Famous Canadian Singer, Now in Straitened Circumstances

ANADIAN music lovers are now preparing to offer some financial aid to Madame Albani, the dominion's greatest songstress, now living in somewhat straitened circumstances in London. The present generation will not remember her, though it has heard of her on plenty of occasions, as she made her debut in 1870. Her early life was spent in Prince Edward County.

It was in the early sixties that Joseph Laieunesse with his wife and six children, came to Prince Edward county through the persuasion of an English gentleman named Wingfield, a man well remembered by the older residents of the locality. The Lajeunesse family landed at Bongard's Corners but eventually settled in a house near Cressy. Later they removed to "The Maples" a cottage that still stands adjacent to the residence of Mr. George VanVlack. The Lajeunesse family comprised three girls and three boys-Capel, Smith and George, Alice, Cornelia (Pidge) and Emma, who being the youngest was called "Babe."

Mr. Wingfield set sail for England and was lost at sea. The Lajeunesse family were handicapped by hardships and environment. Joseph Lajeunesse was a gentleman of culture, very retiring in manner, and seldom met in converse with the rural people.

Miss Charlotte Chamberlain, adopted daughter of Mr. Elias VanVlack, has often told of her almost daily association with the Lajeunesse family. "Albani," was a girl of sixteen, when I knew kitchen. In fact the girls spent much of thei time at Aunt Sally's. The evenings were spent at "The Maples" in practising their songs, and listening to their father play on his violin, in readiness for an entertainment to be given at Picton, Wellington or Milford. Emma informed me one day that she had traveled much. Once I heard her say to Gilbert VanVlack, "You must listen for my 'Indian Whoop' that I will give you soon as I have reached home.' Albani was fond of maple sugar. I remember once when we sat eating cherries beneath a tree, Albani looked with sudden and assumed animation: said she, "Oh-if you only had a little lump of sugar to drop in where the pits come out." I took the hint, and away we ran to Aunt Sally's great pantry, just near the old fire place. We gazed upon the row of maple cakes high above our heads; few words were spoken. The not yet famous singer held down the chair, while I placed my feet upon the back and reached forth my trembling hands to chip off the longed for lumps of sugar.

Emma Lajeunesse sang in the little historic church of St. John's that was demolished thirtyfive years ago. She sat far back and watched the blue flies buzzing on the painted window-panes. Rising with the congregation to sing "Oh, for a Thousand Tongues" her voice was heard above all the others. They called it "screeching."

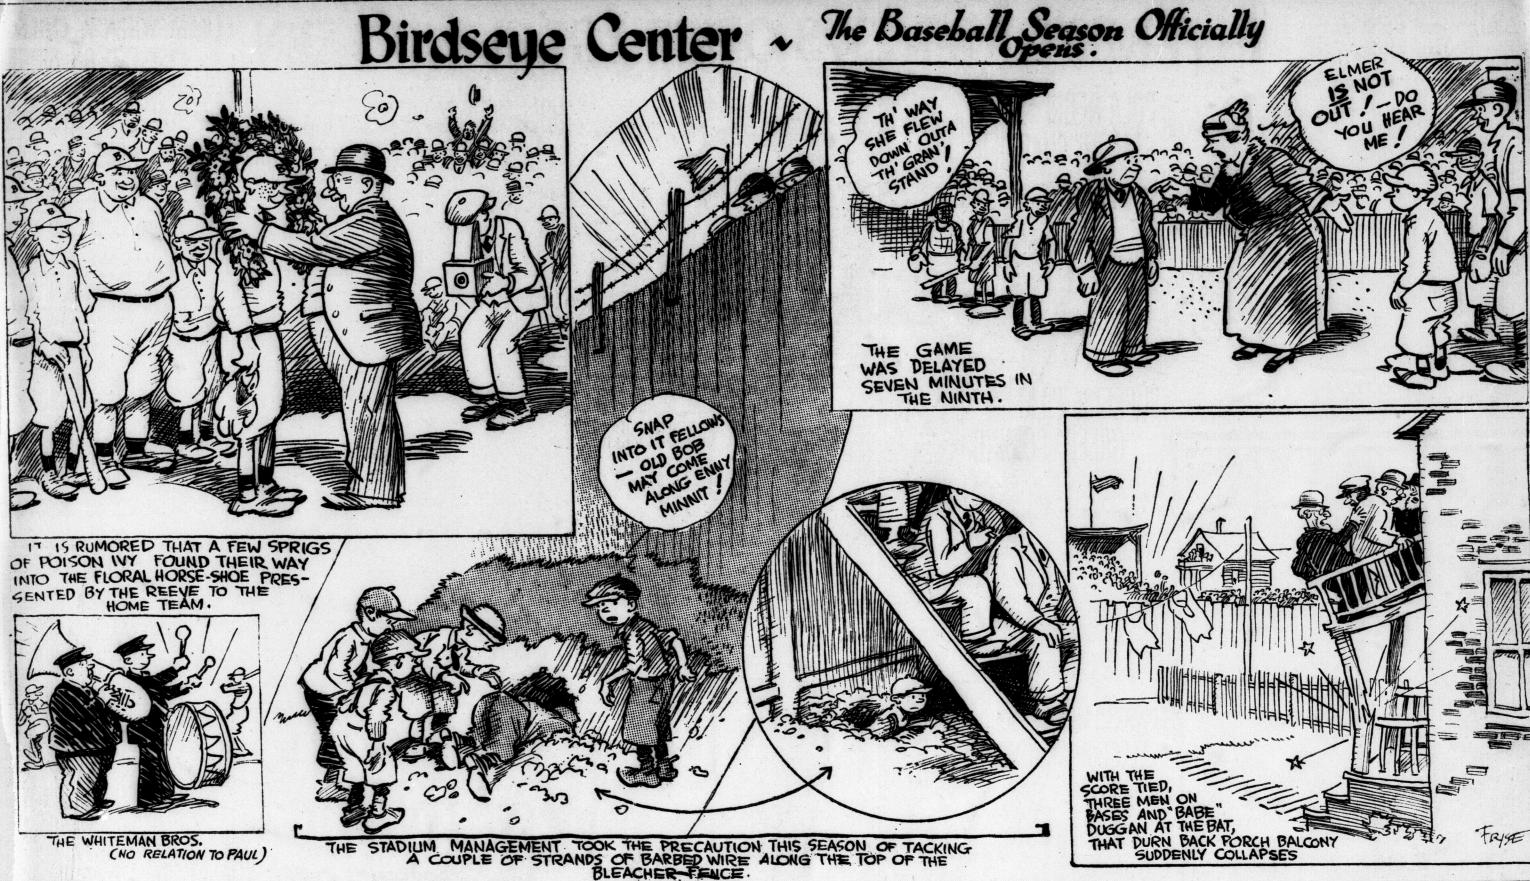

Emma was in those days seeking every op pertunity to play and sing. The violin was the only musical instrument in their home and she trudged on foot to Greenbush, where she received tuition from Miss Amelia Carson on the melodeon. Sometimes she went on horse back, wear ing a plaid skirt and a velvet cap.

At this time of her life Albani was slim of figure, with fair complexion and blue eyes and was gentle and kind in her ways. For a brief period in the life of the famous prima donna, Albani, the queen of song, resided in a humble home in Prince Edward county. In after years she sang, "Home, Sweet Home," with emotion so tender that upon one occasion 20,000 souls were bound as with a spell.

A LESSON IN THRIFT

No one, according to popular opinion, knows more about saving than Sir Harry Lauder. He gave his views on the subject to a gathering of Scotsmen in Hong-Kong recently, when he told of his first big engagement. "I pawned my watch to pay my train fare," he said, "and then looked out for cheap lodgings. I went to the theatre, took off my tie and collar, took out a muffler from my bag, and then went round back streets looking like a working man. So I got a room for 7s. 6d. a week. If the landlady had known that I was from the theatre, she would have charged me 12s., so I was 4s. 6d. to the good on the first week."

H, lovely spring! Season of gentle sighing OH, lovely spring! Season of gentle signing zephyrs, blue skies, unfolding verdure! Birds nesting and twittering, brooks babblingand poets wreaking their roundelay! What a reputation to have, considering the character behind it! For spring may be all these things, indeed. but her outstanding attribute makes these seem insignificant. The skies may be blue, but so is the housewife, and her sighing is tempestuous, not zephyr-like, and her unfolding is a woeful tale of mud.

The hired man sweeps quantities of unctuous mud from his boots, and leaves it on the door mat for the next comer. He enters righteously and sits down at the dinner table—and the mud on his garments dries and falls in little scales about him as he eats his victuals. The boss enters. Being a mighty man of valor, he does not feel constrained to bother sweeping his boots, and so brings in his share and the share his man has left on the door mat for him. Mud!

The milk pails come up to the house with a fair ballast of it around the bottom where they have been set down for a minute at the gate. The wood comes in from the pile weighed down with it, because the wintry winds have blown a iot of loose soil upon it, and the balmy zephyrs aforementioned have cast more on top of it, until the rains came and reduced the whole to a juicy mess whereof the name is mud.

The hens, mannerless and shameless marauders, take advantage of the fact that the dog is absent hunting squirrels and groundhogs, and they come right to the very door and scratch devastatingly. What one hen can do to a flower bed in three and a half minutes! She stands on one foot and scavenges with the other. and lays bare the roots we bought in other happier days with hard-earned coin. We had a hard fight with her and her tribe when we planted that flower bed. She found our delvings a great aid to her in the hunt for grubs, and now she loves the feeling of the rich, moist, sheltered earth, and jabs everlastingly through it with her javelin beak. The goat, mud to the knees and full of frolics, comes bouncing across the soft surface of the lawn, and with every stroke of his sharp hoofs he punctures the turf. The housewife never letting the broom get far from her hand, is alternately scudding the intruders away from the door, or sweeping out the dirt they bring

June Bride Has Wings But Alas Just Now They're Flour-Laden

Later, we can be sorry for the June

But right now, the brides of coming June need all our commiseration and our full sympathy. If a girl ever feels her shortcomings, and there are those who say they do, it is when she is to be a bride in eight weeks.

Sewing, embroidering, fitting and refitting; folding up and packing away, unpacking and unfolding again, and laying them all out on the bed and the top of the cedar chest; showers, farewell receptions, good-byeeces.

Good-byeece the parlor! Hello the kitchen. Good-byeeee golf! Hello dishpan.

Some folks think that a June bride just flutters like a butterfly all through April and May and then-swish-its all over!

Not so. The thoughts a June bride thinks are long, long thoughts. How do we know? We went to the - Technical School and saw the June brides learning to cook.

Some girls are lucky. They have strongminded mothers. They not only taught them cooking. They made them cook. And wash dishes. And clean the stove. And scrub. These are the lucky brides. They aren't worrying. Like butterflies, they are fluttering happily all through April and May, unmindful of the im-

But there are only about six of these amongst the two thousand June brides. The rest of them are astonishing their mothers and making their fathers feel not so sure of their gladness at being relieved of the strain by showing, just about now, a peculiar interest in the kitchen.

For George must eat. That's a thought that never enters a girl's make! head until about ten weeks before George faces his first connubial breakfast.

The courses the ___ . Technical School, with its magnificent series of kitchens, offers in cooking are three-year academic processes, by which a girl may start at the beginning and learn the first rudiments of the art as they were practise! to beguile the cave-man, up to the uttermost twentieth century refinements of dietetics, in-> serve a king. Then there are short courses for nurses and specialists. The bride who wants to learn to boil an egg without burning it and to fry bacon so that it will lie down flat on the plate can, however, take short one-term courses in limited phases of cooking, such as flour mixing, or cooking meats, or salads and dessertsseparate and distinct, one morning a week. By going two or more mornings a week, she can obtain an intensive course in two or three phases.

> "The great majority of our classes," said one of the lady instructors in cookery, "are young girls taking cooking as a part of their ordinary schooling and a few specialists concentrating on the preparation of diets. But we have the brides. . .

At the Technical School

"HE most helpless of them," said one I teacher, "are those girls from well-to-do homes who have never had to go into the kitchen. One comes in an afternoon tea frock, to the morning class, and attempts to do everything with the tips of her fingers-even to washing up the dishes—so as not to soil her hands! Another comes in a beautiful dress with fur at the wrists what a pretty mixture dough and fur

"Girls who come to the evening classes, some of them business girls who have done no housekeeping for several years, are quick to pick up the art and the trick of cooking. They are alert and attentive. But of the other sort, the ones 'spared' housework at home, often face what must be very real difficulties when they take

One girl was a B.A., and while engaged in winning that scholastic honor had somewhat neglected the domestic arts. Picture her in the cookery class, earnestly trying to boil some asparagus. The asparagus being too long to fit into the sauce pan she has selected to cook it in, she drapes the succulent vegetable across the pan, shoves the middle of it down into the water, with the white and green ends suspended in the air over the sides. And she is puzzled that it takes so long to cook. They are making tea biscuits. Ah, what an elusive thing is a tea biscuit! If it is too light, it rises up and topples over with a peculiar rowdy air. If it is not light enough, it is the most sodden, stony, dejected article the culinary art can produce. Each girl has to make her

"Do not knead and rough-handle the dough," warns the teacher. "Handle it lightly, daintily." On one end of the long pupil's bench, a brideto-be is throwing her biscuit dough up into air and letting it fall with a sickening thud on the

"The recipe book here," says she, in explanation, "says to 'toss the dough lightly'." Some girls take the course without there being the faintest ray of hope that they will ever be able to cook anything. "The husbands of such girls," said the teacher, "will just have to make a big success in life. If they can't afford a cook, he will either starve or be poisoned." They will sit beside a girl who has the mysterious knack or sense or touch, and measure out, spoon for spoon and cup for cup, exactly the same ingredients, go through the same motions and put it in the oven the same way. The girl who has the gift will bring forth a pie cooked to perfection. The other will produce a gummy thing that adheres to the ple plate. "But the rule of the school is," said a teacher, "that they have to eat their own work. That is perhaps the strongest educational factor of all."

Thus the June brides are toiling and fretting, wearing themselves thin with apprehension, killing themselves by trying to eat the things they cook. Is it any wonder that sometimes a man wonders if this girl at the altar rail beside him is the same one he engaged himself to marry some months ago? Perhaps it is just as well. This is a sort of ecstasy of April and May.

Butterflies, aye, with needles in their fingers and flour and baking powder on their diaphanous process of humility to keep June brides from fluttering away into space altogether, in the wings, and such tired, tired little wings!

And soon it will be June.

HOLLINGER MOVES

Early Settlement of Power Difficulties Foreseen at Toronto.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, May 1.—Heavy buying of Hollinger shares was associated with the withdrawal of the Northern Canada power appeal case, which was slated for hearing before the privy council in May. The date for this hearing has been postponed, and the probability is that with the signing of an agreement for purchase of the Island Falls Power Plant by Abitibi Power and Paper Company power difficulties affecting these three organizations will be ended. ANOTHER VIEW OF FRANCE.

That the optimistic view of French finances held by John Moody of Moody's Investment Service is not London's view, is demonstrated by the remarks of Sir George Paish in a recent number of the Wall Street Journal. Paish is, of course, called a pessimist by some, but his opinion in this respect seems to be shared by other well-informed international economists.

"France," says Sir George Paish, "must discard her food and other tariff laws and do more manufacturing and selling, as well as redress her public finances. She must, as Caillaux proposes, raise what little more she can in taxation. Her taxes, after beling helatedly trehled, take now a fifth of her income. Raising tax rates above a given level always tends to mean less rather than more yield. She must reduce the army and convert the debt, through restoring confidence and credit. But she can't do it alone. The only solution I can see is for the other nations to cancel the war debt France owes them. I put it as an economic necessity—and benefit."

CANADA'S FIRE LOSSES.

Upward Trend Covers Whole List With Canners at Front.

New York, May 1.— Stock prices showed more strength today than at any other time for the last two weeks. Revival of speculative activity in the railroad shares was the feature of the day's trading, which showed a marked expansion in volume. A few wear spots dropped out here and there, but they failed to halt the upward trend is other parts of the list.

The announcement that the Delaware and Hudson had leased the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg for a long term of years stimulated the buying of the rails. Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg, which soared 37 points to 85 yesterday, moved up to 90 today, and then fell back to 86½. Delaware and Hudson closed a point higher at 150%. Trade news was rather colorless, The weekly mercantile reviews reported further irregularity, although Bradstreets stated that a slightly more cheerful note is sounded in the business situation this week."

Winnipeg May 1.—The wheat market fere today was reminiscent of the heccinc session of several weeks ago, with rices at the extreme bulge jumping ½0 above Thursday's finish, although a mild reaction shortly before the close that the wind of the close that down to $1.68%. July thowed even greater strength at 1.64%, a jump of 7%c. October was twent upward in the general bullish fwing to $1.57.

Coarse grains also advanced materially, with rye in the lead, 6%c above festerday's quotations.

Today's strength was due largely to builish reports of U. S. crop conditions, which indicated the winter wheat crop if the continent at 427,000,000 bushels, gainst 590,000,000 bushels a year arooff the continent at 427,000,000 bushels, gainst 590,000,000 bushels a year arooff the continent at 427,000,000 bushels, gainst 590,000,000 bushels a year arooff the continent at 427,000,000 bushels.

Trade volume was fairly large, and while offerings were light during the fairly part of the session, they increased in the bulges and were readily absorbed by strong interests.

The large reduction in the estimated lield of winter wheat is regarded by ince grain trade that the United States will be practically on a crop basis for the year 1925.

Cash wheat continued to be a duit ffair, with demand negligible. Cash wheat may be a continued to be a duit of the continued of business reported in the ligrades. Cash bariey was also fairly fotive. There was no interest shown in cash rye or flax.

Scarcely anything but the kittarordinary adverse character of the monthly crop reports issued today from arious well recognized private sources (vas given the least attention. May delivery, representing wheat already in hand, scored an even sharper advance than he new-crop months, including Sentember, but reacted to a moderate extent in the final dealings.

According to the crop figures, which loday took the wheat trade by surprise, the exportable surplus of wheat in this limited States would apparently be reduced to nearly the vanishing point the coming season. In some quarters the assertion was made that if the estimates were correct the new crop year, beginning July 1, would start with this country practically on a domestic basis. A feature of the domestic cash grain

FINANCIAL REVIEW

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, May 2.—Great Britain's decision to restore the gold standard, which was immediately reflected in the establishment of the highest price in ten years by sterling exchange, was the outstanding event in this week's financial markets. Bond prices week's financial markets. Bond prices stiffened in response to the easy money rates, but stock prices generally fluctuated within a narrow trading area, although bullish demonstrations were successfully conducted in a selective list of rails, motors, public utilities and specialties. Shrinkage of steel mill operations to 75 per cent of canacity, comties. Shrinkage of steel mill opera-tions to 75 per cent of capacity, com-bined with preliminary estimates of another huge decrease in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, had a depressing effect on the steel shares, which sagged to around the year's low levels.

On account of the steady upward tendency of wheat prices of late, the tone of the market for winter wheat grades of flour was stronger, and rrices were marked up at the close of the session 20c a parrel. A moderate trade was done.

Prices for all grades of milifeed were well maintained under a steady demand. There was no change in prices for standard grades of rolled oats, but the undertone to the market was stronger, in sympathy with the strength in the raw material and the indications were that values will be marked up in the near future. New Merger Developments and Dividend Rumors Are Strengthening Factors.

ner lb Associated Press Despatch.

New York, May 1.—Bond prices shot forward today under the active leadership of the railroad issues. Stimulated by new merger developments and favorable dividend ramors, trading in securities of the carriers assumed broad proportions and gains of one to two points were registered by a score or more of the popular issues.

The proposed lease of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg railway to the Delaware & Hudson on a rental basis guaranteeing six per cent dividends provided the signal for a renewed accumulation of the railroad obligations. The deal had been foreshadowed by yesterday's brisk spurt in the prices of road's stocks and bonds, which was extended today.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, May 1.—The raw sugar market was steadier in tone today, and while spot prices were unchanged at 4.27c, duty paid, shipment sugars were higher. Sales were 5.000 bags of Porto Rigan for prompt shipment at 4.27c, 16,000 bags Cuban, second half May shipment, at 4.30c, and 21,000 bags of Philippines, June-July shipment, at 4.52c road's stocks and bonds, which was extended today.

Other rail bonds, which responded to accumulation by new interests, included the Norfolk & Southern which advanced to 76 and closed at 75, a gain of 1½ points. A large block of the road's stock passed into the hands of a new group, understoed to represent the Duke Tobacco interests.

The activity in the rail lieus was reflected in an anusually large volume of sales and one of the sharpest gains of the year in the railroad averages.

United States government obligations supplied the principal feature of trading outside the railroad list. The treasury issues rose to new peak prices for the year, and Liberty bonds worked irregularly higher. Sugar company bonds continued to drift lower in reflection of declining commodity prices. Raw sugar futures were lower, out after declining 3 to 7 points on trade selling, prices rallied partially on covering and Wall Street buying.

Refined sugar was unchanged to 16 points lower, with two refiners now accepting business at 5.60c and others at 5.70c. No improvement in demand was reported.

Refined futures were nominal.

Protecting the Customer

A section of our repair shop, showing the motor Remanufacturing Department of the Middlesex Motors, Limited, which is always open for inspection by customers.

We have several rules which are strictly enforced in our repair shop, which are exclusively for the protection of our customers.

1st-No new part is given out by our stock room to a mechanic until he turns in the old part, tagged with the repair order number. This insures the customer that no new parts are charged for unless they are actually used. It also gives an opportunity to examine the old part and decide if it is replaced, through wear and tear, or should be subject to guarantee replacement. Parts are retained for inspection of owner until car is released.

2nd—We use nothing but genuine Ford parts, manufactured by the Ford Motor Company. These parts are sold according to the price in the Ford parts price list.

3rd—We carry at all times a complete stock of Ford parts and accessories.

4th-We supply all our repair men with tools, and do not allow them to have any tools of their own in the place. This insures the customer of several things. No work need be left undone for lack of tools, as we have tools for everything. No work need be done improperly on account of worn tools, as there are no restrictions on our part in the replacement of a worn tool. There is also no advantage for a repair man to use any tools out of the customer's kit.

5th—All our repair work is inspected twice—first by the shop foreman, and second by the service inspector, who is entirely independent of the shop foreman, and responsible only to the Service Manager.

6th-We repair only Ford products.

Everything possible is being done to protect our customers against errors and improper charges.

Our repair shop equipment is more complete than the equipment of any other Ford repair shop in Canada. There is no repair operation that need be slighted by us on account of not having the proper equipment. Our equipment and tools represent an investment of $10,000, and insure a good quality of workmanship.

We invite your inspection of our premises and methods.

Ford Dealers Started Business in London On May 1,

POLICY IS SOUND

Middlesex Motors, Limited, London's Ford dealer, this week celebrates its third birthday. It was on May 1, 1922, that the company, headed by Joseph D. Isaacs, opened a sales and service station in this city. A year later Middlesex Motors, Limited, moved to the present spaclous building at Talbot street and Queen's avenue.

Since the first day of opening complete and satisfactory service has been given and thousands of Ford owners have found it a pleasure to transact business with the company. The policy of sound, honest effort, jealously guarded at all times and constantly improved, has resulted in building up an organization second to none and one which is a pattern or others to follow.

Two people have to be satisfied pefore a deal is complete at the Middlesex Motors. First the customer has to be pleased with the work, secondly the firm has to be satisfied that such is the case. That olicy is the reason for the success of Middlesex Motors.

When the concern was organized policy of honest effort to satisfy customers in the full sense of the word was put into practice. Work had to be turned out mechanically correct. The charges were to be cair, and more than that, they had to be as low as possible.

The idea was carried out, and with it came the expansion of the business which has enabled the Middleness which has enabled the Middle-sex Motors to render a greater ser-vice by putting in the up-to-date equipment which is used by the motorists of the district.

The increased number of motorists are being rendered better service every day. It is the aim of the firm are being rendered better set were severy day. It is the aim of the firm to constantly devise new methods for meeting the requirements of the customer. As quickly as one method becomes obsolete a new and better one takes its place.

Efficient and flawless work is carried out in the new building, which has a floor space of 24,000 feet. It is equipped with the most modern improvements in the automotive world. Anything in the form of apparatus that could be purchased to do accurate and satisfactory repair work on any portion of a Ford car, truck or tractor has been installed. has been installed.

The coil-testing machine and the starting motor and generating ma-chine are simple in their operation, yet they constantly detect trouble. The old hand method of grinding valves is done away with. To take its valves is done away with. To take its place, a valve-grinding machine has been put to work. It grinds a true seat all around and concentric with the valve stem. The new way takes but half the time and insures a correct job. It is more satisfactory for the customer since the work executed is mechanically perfect and the cost is low.

Middlesex Motors mechanics are not of the here today and gone tomorrow variety. They have been trained to carry out the firm's ideas of service. They are skilled men who, through satisfactory working

THEN—perfect lubrication for the Ford transmission

Through our long years of selling and servicing Ford cars, we know the unique lubrication problems that confront the Ford owner. The motor and transmission are combined in one housing. Both must be lubricated by one oil.

Unless the oil you use in your Ford is purposely designed to do both these lubrication jobs, it will fail at one or the other. Failure in the engine leads to excess carbon, burned-out bearings and unnecessary repair bills. Failure in the transmission results in jerky chatter when you start, stop and reverse. This causes frequent and wearing vibration of the entire car. Prematurely worn-out brake bands and more frequent overhauling of the entire car are costly penalties of chatter.

No Ford owner need pay these penalties unless he deliberately wants to. By using Veedol Forzol, the economy oil, made for Fords exclusively, you insure your Ford against oil failure.

Hundreds of Ford owners in and about London have tested Veedol Forzol quality and proved all the claims made for it. Many of our customers use it exclusively. Veedol Forzol gives them these eight economies in operation.

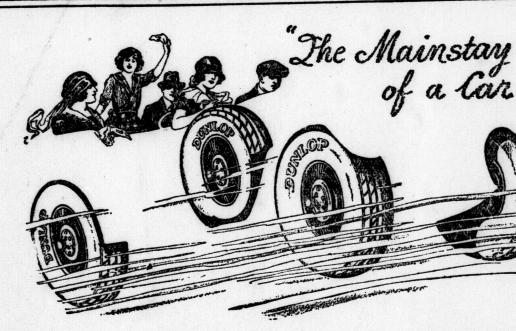

- 5.—Resists heat and friction.
- 6.-Increased ability to coast.
- 7.—Resists fuel dilution. 8.-Reduces repair bills.

You, too, can enjoy these economies in Ford operation. Drive in any time and we will gladly drain your crankcase and refill with Veedol Forzol.

As a Ford dealer we have too much at stake to sell a car which will prove a disappointment.

Therefore, we will sell you a good used car, carrying our regular ser-

All cars are guaranteed to be free from liens.

If a car is not satisfactory and in the same condition as when purchased it may be returned within seven days and the full price paid for it will be credited on the purchase of any model, new or used, Ford car or truck of equal value.

BUSINESS

In the month of April, 1925, we delivered more new automobiles than have ever been delivered by any dealer in the City of London in any month of any year.

On April 25, 1925, we made a record in our business for deliveries in one day, of 15 new and 8 used cars.

We are trying to make Ford service better and better. and always better. That is what the personnel of this firm have been doing for nineteen years, of which three have been spent in London.

We are trying to eliminate perfunctory service, un-gracious service, every kind of unsatisfactory nonsatisfactory service, from any Middlesex Motors employee to any Ford owner.

We are trying to build up in all Middlesex Motors employees a realization of the literal fact that good service to Ford owners is the one and only way to success for anybody in this organization.

We have made progress along these lines. We never expect to make humanly rendered service 100 per cent perfect, 100 per cent of the time. But we do guarantee you satisfaction in these terms:

Europe's Capitals Report Quiet and Absence of Strikes.

MONTREAL PARADE

Associated Press Despatch.

London, May 1.-May Day appears to be losing, if not its one-time importance as a labor festival, at least its reputation for disorderly demonstrations by the working classes. Advices from all the great capitals of Europe tonight are to the effect that May Day passed quietly and almost entirely without disorders, although everywhere demonstrations of more or less importance were held, some of them of an imposing char-

In France the demonstrations were comparatively orderly. The same may be said of Vienna, Budapest, Oslo (Christiania). Copenhagen, Madrid Moscow and Rome. A feature of many May be said of Christiania). Copenhagen. Madrid (Christiania). Copenhagen. Madrid Moscow and Rome. A feature of many of the demonstrations held in these cities was a demand for putting into force the Washington 8-hour convention.

All autos in time need replacements of one kind or another, and it is always to the advantage of owner to consider both quality and price in securing new ones. It is in this sphere that the auto wrecking trade saves the motorist much money.

At the plant of the White Auto Supply Company, at 749 Simone street, can be found every auto part known to the trade, from cotter pins to bodies and engines. This concern is able to sell goods at remarkably low prices, due to its extensive purchasing system. A car which has passed its days of usefulness always has many parts in it which are as good as new, and many others that are as a sood as new, and many others that are as sood as new, and many others that are as a sood as new, and many others that are as a sood as new, and more only slightly won. When this machine is bought by the White concern it is taken apart and all such good parts removed, thoroughly cleaned and stored in bins with other similar parts.

In many ways they are far superior to the old style tires, which had to be inflated to a greater extent. The doctor said I could not have children unless I went under an operation. I read testimonials of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the papers and a friend recommended me to take it. After taking three bottles I became much better and now have a bonny baby girl four months eld. I do my housework and help a attle with the chores. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and am willing for you to use this testimonial letter."—Mrs. A. A. ADAMS, Box 54, Provost, Alberta. C Doctor Said An Operation

Itchy. Cuticura Healed.

"My trouble began with black-heads and pimples on my face. The pimples were large, hard and very red, and some of them festered. They were terribly itchy causing me to scratch and the right side of my face was disfigured. The irritation kept me awake, and my face was a sight.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I purchased more and before long I saw a wonderful change. I continued the treatment and now I am healed." (Signed) Miss Louise MacDonald, Box 172, Mary St., Newcastle, N. B.

ALL CANADA HAD VOICE IN APPROVING POLICIES OF KING GOVERNMENT

Independent Thought From All Parts of Dominion Backs Premier King in Crisis—Analyzed Majority of 37 Takes On Deep Significance.

POLICY OF "NATIONAL UNITY" WINS FAVOR

By E. C. BUCHANAN. necial to The Advertise

by a Staff Correspon Parliament Buildings, Ottawa, May 1.-The political situation assumes decidedly more definite shape in consequence of the budget division, with its unexpectedly-gratifying majority of 37 for the government. The administration has received a vote of confidence that is much more significant than even the numerical extent of it indicates, and that must be taken into account in a gauging of the political outlook. It has not merely brought the situation into focus; it has very clearly modified it.

The deeper significance of the vote of confidence lies in the fact that it is contributed by every province in the dominion that is outside the control of the Liberal party. The Progressive, independent and Ginger group vote that gives the government its mandate for pursuing its policies comes from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and New Brunswick.

All Provinces Have Say. That is to say, from all provinces where the government is either in a minority or entirely without representation, the voice of approval has come. The "national policy" of Mr. Mackenzie King, the policy of national unity, of government for the country as a whole, of seeking to harmonize conflicting interests, has been confirmed by representatives from all parts of Canada. Also it endorsed the government's record of administration during its three years of

Under examination, the victory of the government is truly remarkable. Its meaning is clear. Those of in-dependent thought in the House, whose avowed aim is for broad policy in behalf of all classes and efficient administration, have upheld the gov-

It is acknowledged that Mr. Mackenzie offert last evening is King's great effort last evening is alone responsible for the size of the vote taken from across the floor. His vote taken from across the floor. His clear-cut presentation of the government's financial record and of its policy gave thought to a considerable number of those whose concernators and the control of does not lie alone in sectional in

Whether or not the mandate received from the house will cause the premier to abandon for the present his thoughts of a general election remains to be seen. The question is to a larger extent than ever in his own hands. Mr. Forke is in a somewhat more uncomfortable position than ever. He has abandoned his support of the government for reasons that he must now have some easons that he must now have some difficulty in defining, and, as a result, has lost control over a further

Plan For International Structure Advanced Considerably by .Conference.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, May .- The international bridge project, by which it is proposed to link Windsor and Detroit with a huge single span that will extend across the Detroit river without interfering with navigation, was advanced a substantial stage this afternoon when a conference of the mayors and councils of Windsor and its sister municipalities with Mayor Smith and the common council of Detroit was held at the city hall here.

Following the conference the De-troit aldermen were escorted to Windsor by Mayor Mitchell, and an ade along the river front of weary members answered the with a view to choosing a suitab landing site for the Canadian end of week-end. If many of them dozed in their seats there is ample reason to excuse them.

The plans, as outlined by Mayor Mitchell and indorsed by Mayor Smith, provide for a self-financing proposition, whereby the toll charges of the bridge traffic will take care of the sinking fund requirements, and eventually defray the entire cost of construction without imposing upon the taxpayers of either side of the river a penny of expense.

A joint committee was chosen, with Mayor Smith of Detroit as chairman, Mayor Mitchell of Wind-sor as vice-chairman and M. F. Brian Windsor city engineer, as secretary, to formulate plans for the financing of the proposition. The committee will meet within the next few weeks, by which time it is expected the project will have taken definite shape. Meantime Corporation Coun-sel O'Neil of Detroit, under in-structions from the mayor, will communicate with the United States approval of the project.
