It has too many new ones, while some of the old ones are what singers would style heavy tunes. After reading some very flattering notices of this book, we must confess to some disappointment in examining its char-acter. It has however some excellencies. There are no fugue tunes here. It may be that those slow plain and simple compositions for for the standard addition to the usual subscript in suitable Ministers and in a happy middle slow plain and simple compositions, free from solos, duetts, and repetitions, are the best adapt-ed for public worship. Certainly they are as far men kindly proposed to give a Concert of Vocal removed as possible from anything like operatic singing. Is it not also a fact that the oldest tunes we now sing are all of this style? Take the following with their respective dates. "Old hundred," 1563. Tallis, evening hymn, 1565. Windsor, 1592. This tune was probably sung before Hall in Newcastle and was a decided the coming of our Saviour. Such tunes also success. The large Hall was crowded to its utare more easily learned than others, thus congregational singing might be facilitated by their introduction. And are not all the churches at present moving in this direction ? One man in America, has done much to circulate tunes of this kind. Any modern tune book would be considered wanting if it contained none of Lowell March?" multiple and another the concord of sweet sounds" " Lowell Mason's" melodies. God Bless the Little Children God bless the little children, We meet them everywhere We hear their voices round our hearth, Their footsteps on our stair ; Their lootsteps on our start of o'er Their kindly hearts are swelling o'er With mirthfulness and glee ; God bless the little children, Wherever they may be.

We meet them 'neath the gipsy tent, With visage swarth and dun, And eyes that sparkle as they gland With roguery and fun ; We find them fishing in the brook For minnows, with a pin, Or creeping through the hazel-bush The linnet's nest to win.

We meet them in the lordly hall. Their stately father's pride, We meet them in the poor man's cot-He hath no wealth beside ; Along the city's crowded street They hurl the hoop or ball ; We find them 'neath the pauper's roof-The saddest sight of all.

For there they win no father's love. No mother's tenders care, Their only Friend the God above, Who hears the orphan's prayer. But dressed in silk, or draped in rags, In childish grief or glee, God bless the little children, Wherever they may be. -Youth's Temperance Advocate.
