The "In-Law" Problem.

By RUTH CAMERON.

When the average person talks about the mother-in-law problem, what does he mean? Why, he means the difficulties which arise between a man and his wife's mother, doesn't he? Now of course since the masculine line is the more important sex, this must naturally be considered the more important phase of the question. Nevertheless there are two parties to most marriages, and the wife does acquire some relatives-in-law as well as the husband. Therefore I don't really see why a little attention shouldn't be paid to the mother-in-law problem from the wife's point of view.

And yet, since the world began, the word "mother-in-law" has primarily called up the other phase of the question. I have just laid down a paper in which there was a joke about Adam's good-luck in not having a mother-in-law. Needless to say, the fact that Eve had as much reason for rejoicing is not commented upon.

And so it goes everywhere. Someone may suggest that this is because wives get along better with their mother-in-laws than husbands. If they do, it is simply because women are more in the habit of patiently enduring all sorts of crosses than men. It certainly is not because the husband's mother is less apt to interfere than the wife's.

My own observation—I want it most emphatically understood that I am not referring to any personal experience—has certainly shown me far more cases in which the husband's mother made life miserable for the wife.

And isn't it more natural that the husband's mother should interfere? There are more points of contact and hence of disagreement between two women than between a woman and a man. The husband's mother sees a woman ministering to her son's material comfort, managing a home for him and holding first place in his heart, three things which she used to do, and consequently she is likely to give advice about the first two things, and be jealous of the third.

The wife's mother, on the other hand, has never supported her daughter nor stood at the head of her daughter's home, nor been her daughter's ideal man. And hence she is not likely to try to show the son-in-law how to try to do the first two things, or to be jealous of his place in her daughter's heart.

Mind you, I am not attempting to say that husbands' mothers are always disagreeable, interfering creatures, and wives' mothers always sensible and kindly. Of course there are classes just as there are everywhere in the world. I am merely trying to point out that wives have just as much of a mother-in-law problem as husbands, and that they deserve just as much sympathy. In fact, since such large arrears are due them, I think they deserve a great deal more.

Household Notes.

Paint and varnish can be easily removed from the hands by first rubbing well into them some grease or lard; then washing with soap and water.

Stale macaroons, which can be bought cheap at the baker's, make the tastiest addition to puddings and custards if pulverized and sprinkled over the top.

A frying basket should be dipped in boiling water or heated in the oven before being put in the hot fat. It will thus not reduce the temperature of the lard.

As water evaporates from the plum pudding, more boiling water should be added, so as not to check the cooking, which must go on steadily all the time.

Stood The Test.

Dr. McTavish, of Edinburgh, was something of a ventriloquist, and it befell that he wanted a lad to assist in the surgery, who must necessarily be of strong nerves. He received several applications, and when telling a lad what the duties were, in order to test his nerves, he would say, while pointing to a grinning skeleton standing upright in a corner, "Part of your work would be to feed the skeleton there, and while you are here you may as well have a try to do so."

A few lads would consent to a trial and received a basin of hot gruel and a spoon. While they were pouring the hot mess into the skull, the doctor would throw his voice so as to make it appear to proceed from the jaws of the bony customer, and gurgle out, "Br-r-r-h-u! that's hot!"

This was too much, and, without exception, the lads dropped the basin and bolted. The doctor began to despair of ever getting a suitable helpmate until a small boy came, and was given the gruel and spoon.

After the first spoonful the skeleton appeared to say: "Gr-r-uh-br! that's hot!"

Shovelling in the scalding gruel as fast as ever, the lad rapped the skull and impatiently retorted: "Well, blow it, can't you, yer ould bony?"

The doctor sat down in his chair and fairly roared, but when he came to be engaged the lad on the spot.

They Boom Kings.

Monarchs Have Their Press Agents as Well as Music-Hall Stars.

It may be difficult at first to imagine what possible use royalty can have for a press agent, Kings hardly stand in need of advertisement, and even the most skilful of Royal press agents could hardly succeed in getting his Royal master's salary raised. But it is a fact that practically all the sovereigns of Europe have, under one guise or another, men whose work is exactly that of the press agent. The Royal press agent is never called by that name. Often he is the court photographer, while a great deal of the work may fall also to the sovereign's private secretary.

The reason of the Royal press agent's existence is simply that, for various private or state reasons, Kings may want to be regarded in a certain light by their subjects. The only way to secure this is by skilfully booming the king's doings in that line and the distribution of photographs representing him in that light.

For instance, some years ago the rumor spread that the pale, stooping King Alfonso was excessively delicate, and was, indeed, dying of consumption—an idea borne out by most of the photographs that had till then appeared in the press.

Now the Spanish throne is not a very safe one. The rumor that Spain was governed by a weakling was doing the Royal prestige immense harm, and might, indeed, have endangered the existence of the throne. The rumor was doing harm, too, to the King's chances of a good marriage. Plays Polo, Drives Motor Cars.

So the king's secretaries and photographers started booming him as an athlete. Newspapers all over Europe were flooded with pictures of the king playing polo, driving a high-power motor car, shooting, riding, and fencing, while innumerable paragraphs began to appear telling stories of his physical prowess. This campaign still continues. Most of the photographs you see of Alfonso represent him in this light. Others are discouraged.

Much the same kind of booming has been done in the case of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. His lack of inches is his greatest annoyance, and his fierce and military mustache is his pride.

Photographs by Royal photographers have been reprinted in thousands showing the King at the head of his military escort. He looks very impressive, the precaution having been taken to choose some of the smallest men in the Army to act as the Royal guard. By contrast he shows up well.

Another photograph boomed by the king's press agents show him in a motor, with sides so low that his Royal occupant's height seems well up to the average.

The Kaiser has two great principles deeply at heart—one, that parents have a duty to the country to have large families, the other, the booming of the German Army. So most of the photographs on public sale represent him surrounded by his family—a very large one—or in military uniform, on horse back.

The Kaiser supervises his own press-agent work. He has been known to have his photograph taken twenty times during one year's manoeuvres, and, if he thinks he is looking rather well at the moment, he will send for any press photographs he sees in the neighborhood.

Great care is taken to keep from the German nation the fact that their military Emperor has a defective arm.

Part of the work of Colonel Roosevelt's secretaries, too, when he was President, was to boom the "large family" theory. In one day, fourteen separate photographs of the President surrounded by his family, were taken. They were made public at intervals throughout the President's term of office.

The Tsar of Russia is said to be the best-boomed man in Europe. He is peculiarly fond of being represented as a man of muscle. Photographs showing him rowing on the Neva were distributed all over Russia a few years ago, by his own order.

The late King Edward particularly favored those photographs and paragraphs which showed him in the light of a democratic and amiable sportsman. The photograph showing him leading in Minora, the Derby winner, being typical of what he liked.—P.W.

The Servant Problem.

In view of the ever-increasing difficulty of obtaining and retaining satisfactory domestic servants, it is highly important to adopt every means which will reduce the work of the house.

It has been proved by the experience of many that the use of gas for cooking, heating and hot water supply, makes it possible to do with fewer servants, easier to keep those you have, and a less serious matter to have none.—Inlet, eod. 11

SATURDAY, July 5, 1913.

Notes and Comments.

The organ of the Hon. M. P. Gibbs continues its attack on the neglect of the Government to do its duty to the District of St. George's. It will be remembered that there is an effort being made to displace Mr. Downey who has represented the district in the House of Assembly since the fall of 1908, in order that the Hon. M. P. Gibbs may take his place. 14 names are to be credited, this is not the only difference in the Morris ranks, the members of which are said to be fighting hard among themselves. In face of all the boasts of public improvements and the extraordinary expenditure of public money, the Gibbs organ declares "With the exception of poorly constructed public roads, this district may be said to be roadless," and so. "We know that our district has not been receiving its due proportion of public expenditure. We know it has been neglected in the matter of public buildings." This declaration appearing as it does from the organ of one who is in the Executive Council of the Government, is clearly a confession of negligence and inability to do what is conceived to be a patent duty. As these things are confessed to be so, then the remedy is equally clear: The electors of the district should do their part by turning down that negligent Executive by refusing to support any candidate whose return will help to keep that Executive in power.

The Fishermen's Advocate to-day tells of a number of foreign mechanics being taken on at the Reid Shops, and declares that even the Evening Telegram has been silent about it, and insinuates that the newspapers had been silent because of the Reid advertising. The fact that the Evening Telegram sacrificed the publishing of the Letter List worth $300 a year, rather than publish an apology at the request of a departmental head, should at least have put the editor of the Advocate on an enquiry before publishing this unkind reference. The fact of the matter was that our first information of the matter came from the editor of the Advocate himself to us personally, and that we refrained from making any reference to it as we felt in courtesy bound not to butt in before he had a chance of using the material that had been placed in his hands. As to the strictures against the Reids for matters of a public nature, we have been making them ever since 1898, and we think we have directed more criticism against them during that time by far than any newspaper in the Colony. We agree that it is an outrage to take in foreigners so long as local men are available to do the work equally well. It is up to Sir Edward Morris who is not only the Premier of the Government, but the senior member of the West End, to be up and doing and take some effective steps to give his constituents the work which the establishment of the railway shops in the West End was intended to give them.

THE RIGHT HOUSE.

The Roseville Tragedy

Yesterday some private messages gave some further particulars of the fatal explosion at Roseville, Alexander Bay, on Wednesday last. The details were given by one of the Whealan brothers before he died and are as follows:—

"James Rose who had been instructed to do so did not fill the boiler with water Tuesday night, and Wednesday morning shortly after seven work began at the mill. When a fire was put in the furnace to get steam up, the glass, strange to say, recorded water in the boiler, and after the fire had been in near an hour the lad Rose remembered he had not put the water in the boiler. Rushing to the valve which controlled the inflow to the boiler he turned the cock allowing the cold water to run into the boiler at full force when there was an instant and terrific explosion." That was all that Whealan remembered until he regained consciousness after being picked up and taken to the hospital where he fatally injured. Young Rose was several yards away. In his hand was found the valve which he had held after turning on the water. All the bodies were terribly mutilated and stripped of much of the flesh which was thrown promiscuously about. The sound of the explosion was heard in a radius of many miles.

The Glorious Fourth Celebrated.

Last evening the glorious Fourth of July, or the Declaration of Independence, was celebrated by the Americans on board the Red Cross Liner Florizol. The affair took place in the saloon which was artistically decorated, the Stars and Stripes being shown conspicuously. Hon. C. H. Mills, of Texas, U. S. A., presided. A large number of guests from the shore were present, including the American Consul. At 6 o'clock dinner was served under the direction of Chief Steward Kercher. The menu was:—

- Clam Chowder.
- Salted Almonds, Pearl Onions.
- Boiled Fresh Codfish, Egg Sauce.
- Braised Ox Heart, Fine Herb Sauce, Macaroni au Gratin.
- Corned Beef and Cabbage, Roast Prime Ribs of Beef, Roast Chicken with Dressing.
- Lima Beans, Mashed Turnips, Boiled and Roast Potatoes.
- Apple-Tapioca Pudding, Peach Meringue, Ice Cream, Cake.
- Nuts, Figs, Raisins, Preserved Ginger, Assorted Fruit.
- Roquefort and American Cheese.
- Tea, Coffee.

A brief but comprehensive toast list was then taken up and the chairman gave an excellent address on "Our Declaration for Independence." The rendition of patriotic songs added to the enjoyment of the celebration.

C. C. C. Boat Club Meeting.

The Cadet Boat Club met last night in the Mechanics' Hall, when 25 applicants were added to the roll. President Collins informed the club that he had received a cheque of $10 from the Reserve Company towards the fund. The announcement was greeted with applause as was several other substantial amounts handed in since last meeting from friends. The meeting appointed a sub-committee who will work with the executive in carrying out all details regarding "Our Derby Day." As far as the racer Guard is concerned, it was unanimously decided to build a temporary house at the Lake side, carpenter James Pidgeon being given the contract, and who with the committee will meet at 3 o'clock this evening so as the erection of the house will commence on Monday morning. Several applications were received for the use of the Guard and Pink-Uh, for Regatta Day. The Collegians will row the Guard and the Star the Pink-Uh in the Pootball Race. Other applications were deferred for next meeting. Mr. Thos. Ryan (King's Road), was unanimously elected Secretary of the club with the Treasurer, Mr. Joseph Perez, are empowered to receive donations towards funds. Votes of thanks were tendered to Messrs. Maigne, Reid Nfd. Co., and Mr. Taylor, owner of the racer Nima, for courtesies extended. The roll call now numbers one hundred. The Telegram wishes the Cadet Boat Club every success which it deserves on behalf of aquatic sports.

The Regatta.

There appears to be lack of enthusiasm and interest in this year's Henley. Of course the weather has been a great drawback so much so that practice has been hampered.

In some of the races only two boats will compete. The Torbay and Outer Cove crews are the only intending contestants to date for the set race.

All the practice boats will be in use on the Lake on Monday night. Next week the man with the stony watch will start practicing.

At present it looks as if there will be no Juvenile Race; only one crew is practicing.

Kosciusko.

Thaddeus Kosciusko was a Polish patriot who backed the Russian bear against the ropes several times with a handful of men, but who finally ran out of a standing army and had to give it up. If there had been about two more Kosciuskos in Poland at the time, the chances are that the aforesaid bear would have lost one of its valuable dependencies and most of its claws.

Kosciusko was born in Warsaw, which at that time was producing a very durable grade of misery and patriotism. In 1794, his family was noble but hard up, and after taking a military course he came to America and hired out to G. Washington, who was loaded up on brigadier-generals but was short on privates. Kosciusko served the younger republic with great gallantry, and in his spare moments designed the fortifications of Bemis Heights, which General Burgoyne assailed with great fluency but was unable to uproot.

At the close of our debate with England Kosciusko returned to his native country and found a very low order of Russian infantry camped on the neck of Poland and distinguished to move. Kosciusko did not waste any time getting up a petition or asking for a writ of habeas corpus, but attacked the Russian army with a branch of the Polish militia and caused it to back water in several spots. It was nothing uncommon for Kosciusko to sail out with a few men who were strangers to fear and a hair-cut and open a wide lane in the invader's left flank.

This could not last, however, and finally Russia conquered everything but the Polish valor and Kosciusko was thrown into a dungeon, where he remained for two years, saddened by bitter memories of the sciatic rheumatism. On being released, he again visited this country, where he could see freedom sitting around on the dry goods boxes and cussing Schedule K.

Kosciusko passed his declining years in France, and died in 1817 by being thrown from a horse unintentionally. He was one of the purest patriots in history, assaying fully 98 per cent in the clear, and his memory is cherished by all who can distinguish patriotism from publicity.

McMurdo's Store News.

SATURDAY, July 5, '13.
Here is a bit of good news to those who find that the drinking of ordinary tea brings on indigestion and flatulence—which is not surprising seeing that ordinary tea contains tannin in greater or less proportion. We have just obtained a stock of Py-Shan Points Tea, made exclusively from the leaf-edges and young shoots of the plant, and no midrib or coarse leaves. These, even with delicate stomachs will find no ill effects from the habitual use of Py-Shan Points. Py-Shan Points will go much further in use than ordinary teas, and the flavour will delight the most fastidious. We invite all who want a tannin free, and so healthful, tea to try this new product. Quarter and half-pound sealed packages 15 and 30 cents each.

The address was beautifully engrossed in colour. The Governor received the deputation in the most gracious manner, thanked them for the words of welcome, and emphasized the great good which resulted in the community from the work of the churches, both in religious and educational matters.

SLEEP.
How sweet to sleep, when the day's tasks are done,
When nature bars the golden gates of light,
And all the world, lulled with the breath of night,
Lies hushed to dreams! By some Lethæan shore
Man sinks to rest, nor asks one blessing more:
His freighted bark of memory, in sight,
Of port, furls all her storm-torn sails, and bright,
Loved faces greet him, as in days of yore.

But sweeter far their hallow'd sleep,
On whom
Life's sun has set, who bravely strove to keep
The single path of Right; and thro' the gloom
And shine dispersed rich seeds of love to reap.
A full, ripe sheaf, beyond the empty tomb;
How blest their visions! Oh, how sweet to sleep!

THE OBSTINATE KETTLE.
"The kettle was aggravating and obstinate. It wouldn't allow itself to be adjusted on the top bar; it wouldn't hear of accommodating itself kindly to the knobs of coal; it would lean forward with a drunken air, and dribble—a very idiot of a kettle on the hearth. It was quarrelsome, and hissed and spluttered morosely at the fire. To sum up all, the lid, resisting Mrs. Peerybingle's fingers, first of all turned topsy-turvy, and then, with an ingenious pertinacity worthy of a better cause, dived sideways in, down to the very bottom of the kettle. And the hull of the Royal George has never made half the monstrous resistance to coming out of the water which the lid of that kettle employed against Mrs. Peerybingle before she got it out again. It looked sullen and pig-headed enough even then; carrying its handle with an air of defiance, and cocking its spout pertly and mockingly at Mrs. Peerybingle, as if it said 'I won't boil. Nothing shall induce me.'"
—From the Cricket on the Hearth by Dickens.

ADVICE TO ARTISTS.
"Ask yourselves what is the leading motive which actuates you while you are at work. I do not ask what your leading motive is for working—that is a different thing; you may have families to support, parents to help, brides to win; you may have all these, or other such sacred and pre-eminent motives, to press the morning's labour and prompt the twilight thought. But when you are fairly at the work, what is the motive which tells upon every touch of it? If it is the love of that which your work represents—if, being a landscape painter, it is love of hills and trees that moves you—if, being a figure painter, it is love of human beauty and human soul that moves you—if, being a flower or animal painter, it is love, and wonder, and delight in petal and limb that move you—then the spirit is upon you, and the earth is yours, and the fulness thereof. But if, on the other hand, it is petty self-complacency in your own skill, trust in precepts and laws, hope for academical or popular approbation, or avarice of wealth—it is quite possible that by steady industry, or even by fortunate chance, you may win the applause, the position, the fortune, that you desire; but one touch of true art you will never lay on canvas or on stone as long as you live."

—"The Two Paths" by Ruskin.

A LITTLE LEARNING.
"A little learning is a dangerous thing; Drink deep, or taste not the Pterian spring; There, shallow draughts intoxicate the brain, And drinking largely sobers us again. Fired at first sight with what the Muse imparts, Th' fearless youth we tempt the height of arts; While from the bounded level of our mind Short views we take, nor see the lengths behind; But, more advanced, behold, with strange surprise, New distant scenes of endless science rise! So, pleased at first the towering Alps we try, Mount o'er the vales, and seem to treat the sky! Th' eternal snows appear already past, And the first clouds and mountains seem the last; But, those attained we tremble to survey, The growing labours of the lengthened way; Th' increasing prospect tires our wandering eyes; Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise!"
—From the "Essay on Criticism" by Pope.

NEW DOCTRINES.
"The imputation of novelty is a terrible charge amongst those who judge of men's heads, as they do of their perukes, by the fashion, and can allow none to be right but the received doctrines. Truth scarce ever yet carried it by vote anywhere at its first appearance; new opinions are always suspected and usually opposed, without any other reason but because they are not already common. But truth, like gold, is not the less so for being newly brought out of the mine. It is trial and examination must give it price, and not any antique fashion; and, though it be not yet current by the public stamp, yet it may, for all that, be as old as nature, and is certainly not the less genuine."
—Essay on the Human Understanding by John Locke (1632-1704).

THE LIE.
First, somebody told it,
Then the room wouldn't hold it,
So the busy tongues rolled it,
Till they got it outside;
When the crowd came across it,
It never once lost it,
But tossed it and tossed it,
Till it grew long and wide.
From a very small lie, sir,
It grew deep and high, sir,
Till it reached to the sky, sir,
And frightened the moon,
For she hid her sweet face, sir,
In a veil of cloud-lace, sir,
At the dreadful disgrace, sir,
That happened at noon.
This lie brought forth others,
Dark sisters and brothers,
And fathers and mothers,
A terrible crew;
And while heading they hurried,
The people they hurried,
And troubled, and worried,
As lies always do,
And so, evil-boded,
This morning the goaded,
Till at last it exploded,
In smoke and in shame;
While from mud and from mire,
The pieces flew higher,
And hit the sad liar,
And killed his good name!
—Mrs. M. A. Kidder.

A ROSE FROM HOMER'S GRAVE.
The nightingale's love for the rose pervaded all the songs of the East; and those silent starlight nights the winged songster invariably brings a serenade to his scented flower.
Not far from Smyrna, under the stately platan trees where the merchant drives his laden camels, which tread heavily on hallowed ground, and carry their long necks proudly, I saw a blooming hedge of roses. Wild doves fluttered from branch to branch of the tall trees, and where the sunbeams caught their wings they shone like mother of pearl. There was one flower on the rose hedge more beautiful than all, the rest, and to this one the nightingale poured out all the yearning of its love. But the rose was silent, not a simple dew-drop lay like a tear of compassion upon its petals, while he beat his head towards a heap of stones.
"Here rests the greatest singer the world has ever known!" said the rose. "I will scent his grave and strew my petals over it when the storms tear them off. The singer of the Iliad returned to earth here, this earth whence I sprang!—I, a rose from Homer's grave, am too sacred to bloom for a mere nightingale!"
And the nightingale sang till from very grief his heart broke.
The camel driver came with his laden camels and his black slaves; his little boy found the dead bird, and buried the little songster in Homer's grave.

The rose trembled in the wind. Night came; the rose folded her petals tightly and dreamt that it was a beautiful sunny day, and that a crowd of strange Frankish men came on a pilgrimage to Homer's grave. Among the strangers was a singer from the North, from the home of Iliad and northern lights. He broke off the rose and pressed it in a book, and so carried it away with him to another part of the world, to his distant Fatherland. The sun rose and the singer withered away from grief lying tightly pressed in the narrow book, till he opened it in his home and said, "here is a rose from Homer's grave!"
Now this is what the flower dreamt, and it woke up shivering in the wind; a dew-drop fell from its petals upon the singer's grave. The sun rose and the day was very hot, the rose bloomed in greater beauty than ever in the warmth of Asia.
Footsteps were heard and the strange Franks whom the rose saw in its dream came up. Among the strangers was a poet from the North. He broke off the rose and pressed a kiss upon its dewy freshness, and carried it with him to the home of mist and northern lights. The relics of the rose rest now like a mummy between the leaves of his Iliad, and as in his dream it hears him say when he opens the book, "here is a rose from Homer's grave!"

Real Romance Found at Home.
A happy domesticity is the best thing for a girl; next to that, the hope of it, the chance for it, the belief in it. The stage is not the safe route to this kind of life. A girl may not want it at eighteen; by the time she is twenty-five she learns that there is nothing else so good. She may despise it for two or three years, and pay up for her mistake with forty years of regret. It is better at eighteen to accept a life which is not highly romantic than to seek after romantic life on the stage, and find before many years that you pursued a will-o'-the-wisp. Real romance comes only by way of a man; and that romance knocks at the door of a girl's home and not at the door of the stage.

The sight of a young man waving an American flag in the faces of a returning regiment started a riot here. The flag was trampled under feet of the marching soldiers. Several of those who took part in the free-for-all fight which followed received black eyes and cut faces. The young man escaped with serious injury. The incident occurred while the regiment was returning from camp at Moose Jaw, Sask. Two American flags on the Main Street were set upon by a score of youths and the Stars and Stripes soon trampled in dirty rags. Then a man was rolled in mud. Immediately afterward an American attempted to raise the flag on the top of a lamp post. It was torn down and a free fight ensued. Earlier in the day fifty Americans waving flags attempted to march up Main Street. Fearing a riot the police turned them back to the hotel where they had been celebrating the Fourth of July.

There still has been no formal declaration of war, although it is reported the Bulgarian Minister to Greece has been recalled and has not yet departed for Athens. Premier Venizelos announced to the Greek Parliament that Greek forces won a victory at Kilkis and captured sixty guns. The Bulgarians completely surprised the Servians claim a victorious advance to Kitchana, but the Servian invasion of Bulgaria has been repulsed. Bulgaria reported executing a turning movement which nullifies the Servians advance.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, To-day.

Complete anarchy prevails here as a result of a strike which started a few days ago. The strikers were obliged to order troops to fire on the rioters who applied the torch to the Star newspaper office, another large building in the centre was burnt, as well as to the Bramfontein Station. Mob rioters attacked Werner Blew's headquarters, where the police fired upon them and compelled them to retreat. They soon renewed the attack, however, whereupon dragoons charged and dispersed of them. Intermittent firing took place in several parts of the city, and up to midnight thirty persons had been taken to hospital. Four civilians were killed and fifty wounded in a midnight riot connected with the miners' strike. The cavalry made repeated charges against mobs and wild confusion continued throughout the night with most streets in darkness. The lamps being destroyed by rioters. The situation which arose here last night was never equalled in the history of this country. The mob which seized the railway station at Johannesburg and the Bramfontein siding a half mile away were unrestricted masters of the situation and had the railway officials at their mercy while troops and police were engaged in other parts of the city. Rioters held up all the outgoing trains. When the police got the upper hand an attempt was made to disperse the southern mobs. This was a signal for a savage onslaught by the mob with stones and sticks. Police within the building overpowered them and in the meantime enormous crowds had gathered outside. Mounted troops were called in three times and the rioters retaliated with stones and bullets. By nine o'clock the situation was extremely grave. Park Station was in flames as first troops and police refrained from using their firearms but later fired over heads of the rioters; reinforcements of dragoons by continuing charges finally scattered the rioters.

Narrow Escape From Drowning.

Yesterday afternoon two boys were romping on the landing place at the King's Wharf when suddenly one of them, an eight-year-old boy, fell into the water. The boy was unable to swim and began to sink gradually. His chum with great presence of mind ran quickly and gave an alarm. Mr. George Morris, of the Customs Boat House, heard his cries, rushed to the water's edge and with the aid of a boat hook rescued the boy who on being brought on shore was unable to stand up he was so much exhausted. Somebody should be put in charge of the pier referred to and prevent children from playing there.

Public Enemies.

If you build a line of railway over hills and barren lands, giving lucrative employment to about a million hands; if you cause a score of cities by your right of way to rise, where there formerly was nothing but some rattlesnakes and flies; if, when bringing kale to others you acquire a little kale, then you're surely robbed the people, and you ought to be in jail. If by planning and by toiling you have won some wealth and fame, it will make no odds how squarely you have played your little game; your success is proof sufficient that you are a public foe, you're a soulless manufacturer, to the dump you ought to go; it's a crime for you to prosper where so many others fail; you have surely robbed the people and you ought to be in jail. Be a chronic politician, deal in super-heated air; roast the banks and money barons—there is always safety there; but to sound the note of business is a crime so mean and base that the fellow guilty of it ought to go and hide his face; change the builder's song triumphant for the politician's wail, or we'll think you've robbed the people and well pack you off to jail.

Naughty Boy.

Angelina had invited her young man to tea. Everything had passed off harmoniously until Angelina's seven-year-old brother broke the blissful silence by exclaiming: "Oh, ma, you oughter seen Mr. Light the other night when he called to take Angi to the fancy-dress ball; he looked so nice, sittin' beside her with his arm—"

"Fren!" screamed the maiden, whose face began to assume the color of a well-done broiled lobster, quickly placing her hand over the boy's mouth.

"You oughter seen him," continued the persistent informant, after gaining his breath, when the embarrassed girl's hand was removed; "he had his arm—"

"Freddie!" shouted the mother as in her frantic attempt to reach the boy's left ear, she upset the contents of the teapot in Mr. Light's lap, making numerous war maps over his new grey trousers and causing him to emit a yell of agony as the boiling fluid coursed down his legs.

"I was just goin' to say," the frightened boy pleaded, between a cry and an injured whim, "he had his arm—"

Hundreds of them jumped into the river, in which many were drowned. About 2,000 wounded Greek soldiers arrived to-day at Saloniki, furnishing evidence of heavy fighting taking place. The Greek authorities complain that the Bulgarians looted some Greek villages and have tortured those of their inhabitants who refused to sign a petition asking that the Bulgarians continue their occupation of the districts.

Special Notice.

We take pleasure in announcing the appointment of Mr. Richard G. Power as our Newfoundland Representative for the sale of one of the most attractive securities that we have marketed during the long period of forty years in which we have served the investing public.

We refer to the 7 per cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock of the Maritime Mail Company, Limited, a prosperous corporation operating at St. John, N.B., with the largest output of any single mill of its kind in Canada.

This issue is unusually well secured by assets appraised at $100 for every $100 share of Preferred Stock, exclusive of the amount covering the Bonds outstanding. The earnings record of the issuing Company is alike exceptionally strong and rapidly expanding under the present efficient management. Two other desirable features are the 50 per cent. Common Stock Bonus and the alternative plans of payment, cash or installment.

A fully descriptive circular has already been mailed to our many Newfoundland patrons. We advise these friends of ours and all other interested persons to immediately get in touch with Mr. Power, from whom additional copies of the circular and other particulars may be had. His office address is given below.

Regatta Meeting.

At the meeting of the Regatta Committee held last night there was again much enthusiasm. The following were present:—Pres. Hiscock; Treasurer Ellis; Secretary Noonan; F. W. Hayward, L. G. Chubb, P. J. Hanley, C. E. Hunt, N. Andrews, E. W. Taylor, Dr. Scully, T. D. Carew, R. Dowden, T. J. Foran.

The Secretary's minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The President, Mr. Hiscock, presided. The Secretary read a letter from the C. C. C. Reserves who stated that they contemplated entering crews for the Naval Reserve-cummen's Race and asked if they were eligible. They will be written that they are not under the provisions of Rule 12 which expressly states that only Naval men, Reserves and Firemen can compete in that event.

The President was very pleased to announce that the cups ordered for the winners of the Society and Swimming Races had arrived as well as the Cup ordered by His Excellency the Governor for the Brigade Race. They are beautiful and well worth winning and are certainly superior to any ever heretofore offered. They will be on exhibition in the window of Mr. Charles Ellis's clothing store.

A letter was read which had been sent through Mr. W. J. Higgins from the operatives of Parker & Monroe's, the Avalon Boot & Shoe Factories, asking the Committee to give a race between them and a place on the programme. The Secretary was instructed to inform them that they must, if they wish to now, run in the Factory Race, it being impossible to place them elsewhere on the schedule.

Mr. R. Dowden having announced that the Herald crew could not row this year in the Press Race, general regret was expressed. It was also stated at the meeting that the Telegram had dropped out, the only crew at practice being the news. Mr. Carew stated that he thought it was the intention of the Telegram team to enter, and the committee will meet for definite information before this race.

in this rule applies to social clubs only.

Treasurer Ellis intimated that the Methodist Guards had kindly offered the C. C. C. the race boat for the Regatta with one stipulation and that is that the boat be not put forward in the Fishermen's Race. The boat club now being formed for the C. C. C. were very grateful to the Guards for their generous action and will abide by their injunction. The committee think, however, it is a pity to have such an excellent boat out of the Fishermen's Race and will ask Mr. Blackwood, representing the M. G. B., to reconsider this decision.

The furnishing of the medals were again awarded Mr. Alfred McNamara whose designs are the prettiest and cheapest in the three tenders received. None of the Medals Committee except Mr. Hiscock knew the names of the tenderers and he kept them a profound secret. The selection was made on the merits of the samples of goods and designs submitted and the best were selected. These were Mr. McNamara's. He will therefore, as in the past, be the official timekeeper, this year.

The meeting then adjourned until Friday night next.

At the City Hall.

The weekly session of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. A vote of thanks proposed by Councillor Myrick was passed to Capt. Smith of H. M. S. Cumberland for allowing the ship's band to give a concert in Bannerman Park. The defect causing the flooding of Miss Bremner's house on Military Road will be attended to by Engineer Ryan.

Mr. George Best's letter re distribution of award for land taken on Thomas Street was referred to the Solicitor.

Regarding the G. P. Cemetery, the Mayor announced that he and the Premier agreed that the proposed plans of the Engineer and the Cemetery Committee would greatly improve Topsall and Waterford Bridge Roads. The Mayor said the Premier stated his willingness to advance the money necessary for improvements at four per cent. interest. It was decided that the plans be adopted and the amount to cover arbitration be borrowed from the Government.

Mr. Reid suggested that the City Engineer go over the places complained of with the Company's foreman.

P. M. and A. McDonald asked the reason why they could not build a stable on Central Street. Dr. Brehm has advised against its erection and Messrs. McDonald will be written to that effect.

Harvey & Co. offered $50.00 to cover cost of laying of water service from Forest Road to Factory Lane to connect with factory. Offer accepted.

Plans of T. J. Allan's houses were referred to the Engineer.

Councillor Ryan's motion for extension of certain streets was deferred.

A letter of report with reference to the conduit was received from City Engineer Ryan and Government Engineer Hall. It read: "We have the honor to report that, as requested, we visited the main conduit, near No. 2 screen house, on the 25th ult., and made an examination of the leakages in same. While we are of opinion there is no immediate danger of any interruption in the water supply of the city resulting from these leakages, we consider that the work of repairs should be undertaken at once. It is necessary for this purpose that a by-pass be constructed around the affected portion of the conduit, entailing the erection of a flume about 250 feet in length. The portion of the conduit, so far as can be seen, that is affected, is about 70 long. There are some cracks that are probably due to changes of atmosphere causing contraction and expansion, as this portion of the conduit was insufficiently pro-protected by covering. There does not appear to be any appreciable subsidence of the foundation of the conduit, but its exact condition cannot be safely ascertained until the water has been diverted.

Councillors Ryan and Martin made a motion that repairs commence immediately. The meeting then closed.

53 YEARS AGO

By Rev. Canon Smith.

This date brings us back to A. D. 1860, a year memorable in the annals of Newfoundland for the first and only visit paid to this country by our late Majesty King Edward VII, who was then Prince of Wales. What excitement that visit created throughout the whole community! With what eager expectation we waited for the coming of the Prince, and how determined we were to give His Royal Highness as a right royal welcome when he did come.

A week before the expected arrival of the Prince the population of St. John's was increased ten per cent by visitors from the outports, all come to town to see the Prince. The exact time that he would arrive we knew not, for there was then no Atlantic cable whereby we might hear when the Prince left England, and certainly no Marconi telegrams to let us know how he was getting on the voyage, and at what time he was drawing near to Newfoundland. We had no railroad, no coastal steamboats, no electric tram cars, no motor cars to smother us with dust and contaminate the air with stinking gasoline odours. Communication with St. John's by land could only be had from places situated on the Peninsula of Avalon, in Conception Bay, and on the south side of Trinity Bay. And this travelling had to be done either on foot, on horseback, in carts, or in two-wheeled gigs or square-bodied open cabs.

Throughout all the rest of the island communication with the capital could be made by water alone, and that too sailing craft. In 1860 only two steamers were owned sailing in Newfoundland. One was a small paddle-wheel tug-boat called the "Blue Jack," employed in towing craft into and out of St. John's harbour. The other was a small screw boat of about 100 tons burthen, called the "Ellen Gishborne," which plied on the waters of Conception Bay carrying mails and passengers to and from Harbor Grace, Carbonear, Brigus, Port de Grave, Bay Roberts and Portugal Cove.

The "Nellie" was an old boat and had long before our party done the best work she was capable of doing. Under a full head of steam she could cover five knots in a single hour. But to make this extraordinary exertion she was compelled every now and again to rest, to "take a spell," as the fishermen say, and to smoke her pipe, for she was a great smoker. While resting, no persuasion on the part of the most seductive engineer could induce her to "move on."

The last trip I made in the "Nellie" was on August 24th, 1860. The day was bright with sunshine and the water smooth, we had a light breeze from the W. S. W. We left the wharf at Harbor Grace at nine a.m. sharp, and having cleared the harbor headed straight for Portugal Cove, distant 18 miles. When about two miles out in the Bay the "Nellie" had a rest and smoke for about 20 minutes. She had another for about half an hour when we were off Lance Cove, Bell Island, and a third for about ten minutes when we were within a quarter of a mile of the public wharf at Portugal Cove. Nevertheless we arrived at the said wharf at two o'clock p.m., having, to the surprise of everybody, covered the 18 miles in just five hours. Coughlan with the mail coach and pair was not there to meet us. For although the time of our departure had been duly telegraphed to St. John's, yet Coughlan never dreamt of our reaching Portugal Cove before 4 p.m. at the earliest. If we had been much later than that in the time of our arrival, nobody would have been much surprised thereat. At four o'clock Coughlan arrived at the Cove and took us therefrom to St. John's in just one hour. In 1867 the old "Nellie" was replaced on the Conception Bay service by an entirely new boat, the steamer "Lizzie," which did her work well. In due time the "Lizzie" was superseded by a smart boat, the s.s. "Lady Glover," in the autumn of 1869 the "Nellie," having received an overhauling and repair, was sent to St. Anthony to engage therefrom in the following March the seal fishery. She sailed for the fields but did not return therefrom, but quietly sat down to take her final rest at "the bottom of the deep blue sea." Fortunately no lives were lost in her, all the crew being saved from drowning. This is the latter part and the close of the biography of the famous "Nellie."

Much more sad was the closing of the career of the tug "Blue Jacket." In 1862 while crossing Conception Bay she caught fire and burned down to the water's edge. She sank in the neighbourhood of Bell Island. Unfortunately her only passenger, an old woman, perished in the flames.

When in January 1866 I took charge of the Parish of Portugal Cove, some people there told me that when a severe storm was impending they had seen the "Blue Jacket" racing down through the Tickle a mass of flame. What I myself did see, between eight and nine o'clock on an evening late in the autumn about twenty-six years ago was a ball of fire hovering over the water at the western end of Bell Island. This light passed east down the Tickle and near the Island until it reached a point a little more than half way down the said Island when it suddenly disappeared. I took this appearance to be an electrical phenomenon of some kind attracted to the island by the presence there of iron ore. Its appearance was followed before midnight by a great storm of wind and rain which lasted throughout the next day.

I ask your readers' pardon for this digression. 'Tis but obita dicta. I am an old man and am afraid that I am getting a bit garrulous. In this letter I am but writing from memory, and shall be obliged to any of your readers who will kindly supply correction of any error as to event or date that may appear in this article. The Prince landed in St. John's on (I think) Tuesday, the 24th day of July, 1860. This event may have happened on the 31st day of July, but I rather think that it occurred on the 24th. However, that may be, I have a perfect recollection that we sailed out of Trinity Harbor passing the Fort Point at five o'clock p.m. on the Thursday previous to the day the Prince landed at St. John's. Nearly all the sailing craft at Trinity were then either engaged at the Labrador fishery or in the foreign trade. With difficulty about twenty of us were enabled to hire the small schooner "Brothers," of about 40 tons burthen, owned and commanded by Captain George Christian, to take us to St. John's to see the Prince. The small cabin had six lady passengers, but as it was odorous of bilge water, three other ladies, my sister among the number, preferred lying in their beds on deck, covered with tarpaulin to keep off rain and wet.

In those days all travellers for any distance in sailing craft had to provide themselves with bedding as well as prog for the journey. We took just enough cargo in the hold to put the craft in ballast. On this clean boards were laid down as a resting place for all the middle passengers. I would not be bothered with taking a bed, so laid down upon the boards, wrapped not in a martial cloak like Sir John Moore's corpse, but in a fine old-fashioned green blanket, with my knapsack for a pillow. During my long ministerial life I have, on occasion, had worse couches than that. We sailed with favourable, though light, wind and smooth water, but as we drew across Trinity Bay the wind increased to a smart breeze and was dead ahead, and we met with, not a heavy sea, but what the fishermen call a "smart tumble," which accompanied us all the way to St. John's. Then Lord Neptune paid us a visit and imperiously demanded from most of us the payment of toll in the shape of "mal de mer." While paying this toll we (none of us) appreciated "a life on the ocean waves," as the considered even a temporary "home on the rolling deep" to be anything but a pleasant habitation. Nevertheless we bore the discomfort cheerfully, for wine we not going to see the Prince of Wales, our good Queen Victoria's eldest son. The "Brothers" was a poor sailor in a wind and it was past noon on the Friday which was a wet day, as we got well into Conception Bay. Then in the distance we saw the s.s. "Nellie" going her daily rounds, except -

Sundays, and taking her usual rest and smoke on her way. At eight o'clock on the Saturday morning we reached the "Narrows." As we passed by Fort Amherst the sentry there hailed us, "Ship ahoy! What craft is that and where from?" To which hail one of our passengers, who had not suffered from mal de mer, fractionally replied, "The schooner 'Brothers' from Trinity with a number of sea-sick passengers on board." Then the sentry shouted after us the "Let pass" thus - "Pass schooner 'Brothers' from Trinity with sea-sick passengers." In this manner I made my first entrance to the harbor of St. John's. Shortly after I landed at Brookings' wharf - now the premises of A. Harvey & Co. - I made my first entrance to the city at the same place that our present King did in 1901. After landing we went our way to lodgings, which we had taken care to secure some time beforehand. But before doing this my sister and I were taken up to the house by Mr. Hepburn, then a partner in the firm of Brookings & Co. Here we had a good wash, and Mrs. Hepburn gave us a nice cup of tea which, it is needless to say, we enjoyed much after our fasting on board ship. Mr. Hepburn also kindly sent our luggage to our lodging house. On the Sunday afternoon, my brother, then an accountant in the office of the well-known and highly esteemed firm of Cliff, Wood & Co., hired a cab and took me for an hour's drive into the country at the West End of St. John's.

This was my first carriage drive, for at that time there was no spring vehicle of any kind north of Heart's Content. The first spring carriage did not come to Trinity before 1865.

About sunset on the Monday evening, H.M.S. Hero, of 91 guns with the Prince and suite on board, steamed majestically through the narrows and came to anchor in the harbor. She was accompanied by the Ariadne, a powerful steam frigate mounting 26 heavy guns, all either 68 or 84 pounders.

The next morning the Prince landed in due state, amidst the thunder of cannon from all the ships of war then in the port, and from the guns at Fort William and Fort Townsend and from the batteries on Signal Hill. When the Prince landed we just went mad with joy at having him with us. And didn't we cheer! We knew how to cheer in those days, and rolled out our r's and rah's with a volume of sound that made the welkin ring. We did not give utterance to the feeble "Hurrah," heard in these days, which sounds as if we were politely telling some lady that a certain genus of fishes was her property, "hey rray."

That night there was a big dinner at Government House to which of course I was not invited. On the next night there was a big ball in a large wooden shed erected at the west end of the Colonial Building and with entrance from it to that building. The interior of this shed was suitably decorated for the occasion. My brother went to this dance but I did not, for I was then too young to be entitled to engage in such festivities. I solaced myself by viewing the fireworks let off from the summit of the Colonial Building and the Court House, and also the illuminations. There were in the streets of St. John's quite a number of triumphal arches. These were lit up with Chinese lanterns, while thousands of candles placed in the buildings and smart every private house in the town. There was a string of lanterns, showing lights of many colors, hung between the two towers of the Roman Catholic Cathedral and reaching down on either side to the ground, and the joy bells rang out merrily.

On the Wednesday morning I went down to Quidi Vidi Lake to see the great Regatta. The last that was held there for eleven years. The Prince honored the regatta with his presence. The winning boat was built by Samuel Loveys, and I think, but am not sure, that her name was the Undine. On the Wednesday afternoon, the Prince was to have visited Portugal Cove and great preparation was made there for his reception. A part of this preparation was the erection of a great flag-staff on the summit of "Gray Man's Beard," which has since been known as the "Prince's Mount." But the Prince did not visit the Cove. He rode out as far as Windsor Lake and then returned to town.

We had delightful weather during the whole of the Prince's visit, sunshine and heat every day. On the Thursday morning the Prince left for Halifax. The late Mr. Stephen March, sr., showed me some little attention by taking me to the gate of one of his stores, where I had an excellent view of the embarkation and of all the ceremony attendant thereupon. Mr. March was one of the few persons that could sequence some voting.

A day or two after the Prince left I returned home. I sailed back to Trinity in the same craft which I came to town. We had a quick passage of only twelve hours' duration. As part of our cargo we carried a heavy machine which was to be used in brick making at the brief yard in Smith's Sound, T.B. I was told that this machine was the property of a Mr. Campbell. It was the first machine of the kind used in Newfoundland.

During his visit His Royal Highness did not confer upon me the "guinea stamp," and thereby make me a man. This was not possible seeing that I was then but a boy fifteen years old. But what a mingling with the crowd at St. John's viewing the illuminations, etc. I did catch the measles and developed them immediately after my return home. So you see, that after all I receive some marked impression from the Prince's visit to Newfoundland. I would ask you to request Sir

Ralph Williams to put this story into his next book on Newfoundland, but that this story is true, while most of the yarns told in Sir Ralph's present book are not. It is evident that he who told those stiff yarns to Sir Ralph was not taking his usual rattle, knight out for a pleasant walk. Will Sir Ralph enjoy the recollection of the walk when he realizes, as he must do some day, that he has actually been taken in? His remembrance thereof will not be thereafter as pleasant as mine is, of the first drive I had in the suburbs of St. John's. There is nothing remarkable in the fact that Sir Ralph has written a book since "of the making of books there is no end." All that Sir Ralph has done is to seek "the bubble reputation," not in the cannon's mouth, certainly - but in a mass of printers' ink. Like many another tyro at that work he has just blackened himself accordingly. The worst of it is that he has scattered spots of ink upon the bright tan gloves and shining boots that we Newfoundland boys were to wear at the Garden Party. But worse than that, he has put ink stains upon the spotlessly white muslin dresses beautifully ironed and laid out on the bed ready for our girls to wear at the aforesaid party. But our sweet mother, good old Terra Nova, who is a skilful housewife, polished again the boys' boots, and with her salts or lemon and sorrel (pungent criticism) wiped off the spots upon their gloves, and removed every vestige of Sir Ralph's ink stains from the dresses of the girls. So that we were all able to go to the Garden Party and see the Prince with credit to our appearance there.

Ah! well - any son of good King George is well worth going to see any day - for like his august father, his grandfather, and his great grandfather the late Prince Consort, he is sure to be in heart and mind, in speech and manner, a Perfect Gentleman.

Have not with us as our own very possession, more precious to us than refined gold, the gracious message expressive of his esteem, and affection for us recently sent to us by our Sovereign Lord the King. His Majesty knows us well for, he has been with us on more occasions than one. This message is therefore "a feather in our cap," of which we may justly feel proud. Having it, why need we trouble ourselves a jot about what decidedly minor and only semi-intellectual people may say about us?

George Wyndham.

An appreciation of Mr. George Wyndham, attributed to Lord Curzon, appears in the Times.

"As the years go by," it says, "and his comrades recall the past, there will always emerge from it this young and debonair figure, like a 'reek hero in the range of his attainments and perfections, possessing the physical beauty of a statue, and endowed with the chivalry of the knight errant, the fancy of the poet, and the deep tenderness of a woman. If his spirit wanders to-night in Elysian fields, it can only be with spirits akin to and compatible with his own."

Turnips are liked better by many persons if they are parboiled and drained before the final cooking. A little potato added to mashed turnips is a pleasing variety.

Cured Diseases of the Kidneys

And is Depended On to Right Stomach and Liver Disorders. Once Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are introduced into the family and their efficiency becomes known they are usually found too valuable to do without. For everyday ailments arising from liver and bowel disorders they bring relief promptly, and when complicated diseases of the kidneys and liver develop they often prove a successful cure after doctors have failed. As an illustration, you may read the following, which was received a few days ago: Mrs. John Wright, 53 McCee street, Toronto, Ont., states: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for ten years, and would not be without them. My husband suffers from kidney trouble, and after taking treatment from several doctors without receiving any benefit, tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which worked a complete cure. Since that time we have used them for all stomach and liver disorders."
