The Picnic

Woodall Forest

CHAPTER XLIII.
A pink flush mounted to her pale cheeks, and she looked at him questioningly.

"Sir Charles is very anxious about you," he continued, then added, gravely, "and I am anxious about him. He does not improve so well as he ought to, and a relapse at this stage might terminate fatally. Get well quickly, for I am sure that he misses his favorite nurse! Good-by."

For an hour Ada lay perfectly still, having dismissed the nurse, and reviewed with terror the events of the past few weeks. She had bound to her the man that she loved, but at what a awful sacrifice! He had promised to marry her, but she had extorted that promise from him by unfair means. Her whole conduct had been wicked and despicable. She leathed herself for it, and she knew that one day he must hate her for the deception she had practiced. His hatred, his contempt, even, would be worse than the lash of the knout—it would wither her to death! His condition was not improving, he was regretting his new bonds, he was drifting for love of Gladys! He would die rather than be a disloyal to her!

Ada raised herself on one elbow to get her strength. She must see him, and perhaps reveal to him her wickedness! The nurse thought thrilled here with misery—she would then be desolate; indeed!

She touched a hand-bell that stood near her, and the nurse came in. "I want you to assist me to dress," she said, and her tones brooked no denial or argument. "I am strong enough to walk. The doctor says that Sir Charles will not recover while he is doubtful about my fitness. I am not ill now; I will see him!"

When her feet pressed the carpet, she tottered, ready to fall, her senses reeled, and she feared that she would faint; but, with a magnificent effort of will, she clutched at the bedclothes and steadied herself, saying:

"I shall be all right presently, nurse. Get a warm bath ready, please."

When she was dressed, Lady Hastings, looking pale and worried, came to see her and kissed her almost hysterically.

"I have had no rest since you became ill," she murmured. "And Sir Charles is worse, I am sure. He never speaks, and seems to have lost interest in everything. It is very thoughtful of him, but, of course, I know that he is worrying about you."

"Have you written to my mother?" asked Ada.

"No, I forgot," confessed Lady Hastings. "All this trouble quite upsets me."

"I am glad that you have not; it might have bothered mamma and Flossie, and you see that I am really not ill after all."

"How sweet and kind you are," Lady Hastings said, weakly. "How proud my son ought to be of such a wife as you will make."

"Don't! Lady Hastings, never say such words again!"

Ada covered her eyes with her hands, and a bitter sob escaped her, but she quickly recovered herself, saying:

"I will see Sir Charles now; I am sure that my presence will cheer him. You may help me to his door, please." And, when the old woman came near, she whispered: "And the other matter, we will attend to, also. I will write to Mr. Gardner—I will tell him all to-day."

The nurse's mouth twitched, and a look of fear came into her eyes, but she nodded and muttered:

"Yes, miss, it will be better so."

Lady Hastings was a trifle puzzled by Ada's strange manner and half-inclined to resent it by a show of childish petulance. What right had any one to be ill and cause so much inconvenience? It seemed that her life was to be never without its disappointments and crosses. Like all people of weak natures, she took offence at the most trivial actions and words which did not exactly please her, and when Ada looked round again my lady was gone.

She was glad of this, for if Sir Charles was in her eyes a king among men, his mother did not even command her respect.

"I shall write all to Mr. Gardner to-day," she again told the nurse, "and you have nothing to fear. I ought not to have delayed until now."

A servant met them in the corridor with two letters for Miss Craythorne. One was from her mother—the other bore the crest of the Stanhopes—and she was so shocked with sudden dread that she nearly fell.

The handwriting was bold and flowing—evidently masculine. Whose could it be? She put both letters into her pocket, and, dismissing the nurse, guided herself carefully with a fierceness that almost suffocated her.

The baronet was lying still, his eyes closed, and when she spoke to him softly, tremulously; he started murmuring:

"Gladys! Gladys!"

At the mention of that name Ada sank back with a half-stifled sob. It was ever that name! It was always Gladys! Oh, how he must love her! He had no thought for Ada Craythorne. He had promised to marry her—but he would learn to loathe her yet! The mad, hopeless passion that she felt for him blazed for an instant in her eyes. Why should she renounce him? Was he not hers alone? The struggle was bitter, and had he not opened his eyes full upon her she would have crept from the room to pour out her misery in tears where no one could hear or see.

"Ada," he exclaimed, "you here? I am glad that you are not very ill. I feared that you were. I feared that they were keeping something from me. I have reproached myself for demanding so much of your attention. For my sake you have sacrificed yourself."

There was a listlessness in his manner that filled her with pain. He looked and talked like a man whose interests in life were dead.

LADY IRIS' MISTAKE;

Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER II.

He was sad and silent all the rest of the day. The motto of his race embossed everywhere struck him with fresh force: "Held with honor." Was it always so easy to follow?

"After her last conversation with the earl, Iris went once more to the gallery to look at her mother's portrait. She wanted to study the face, to find out from it the traits of character which had won such deep worship from her father. She formed a fair picture as she stood before the portrait, with her long white dress trailing on the floor, the sunlight falling full upon her fair hair and upon her lovely face and white throat, her hands clasped, and her earnest eyes riveted on the painted lines. She did not in the least resemble the noble, stately-looking lady who had been Countess of Caledon.

Lady Iris was tall, with a slender graceful figure. There was something queenly in her careless ease and proud bearing; and every movement was perfect in its beauty. She had an oval face, fair as the whitest petal of a lily, with the exquisite color that one sees in the heart of a wild rose. Her eyes were of the color of a wood violet, shaded by long lashes; and her mouth was simply perfection, with the proudest and faintest of curves. Straight dark brows and a mass of fine fair hair completed her beauty.

The face in the picture was dark, having the hues of a damask rose, with dark hair and eyes. There was something almost melancholy in the face, as though the shadow of early death lay there. One white shoulder was covered with crimson velvet and ermine, the other rested lightly on it.

"No child could ever be less like a mother than I am like mine," said Lady Iris to herself. "My eyes and hair are quite different. Why am I so unlike you, mother?" she asked, addressing the picture.

As she stood there, she thought how different life would be for her if that dear mother were still living.

"I may not talk to papa about her—and perhaps no one else cares to hear; but every day I shall come here and see her."

A footstep in the gallery disturbed her, and Mrs. Bellow came up to her. "My dear Lady Iris, I could not find you. What are you doing here?"

"I am talking to mamma," was the answer, which somewhat startled the good chaperon, who laughed a little surprised laugh.

"You are so strange—you have such peculiar ideas! Lady Clyffarde is here and is very anxious to see you. Will you come?"

"Certainly. Of all people, I long most to see Lady Clyffarde. I will go with you now."

"She is in the drawing-room, and the earl is with her."

With quick light footsteps Lady Iris quitted the gallery and hastened to the long drawing-room. A lady rose to greet her, a tall handsome woman of noble presence, dressed in a dark gray velvet. She held out her hands with a kindly smile.

"Lady Iris!" she cried. "Why, when I saw you last you were a child—and now you are a beautiful woman!"

"The beautiful woman" is very pleased to see you, dear Lady Clyffarde," said Lady Iris, laughingly, "I have been longing to see you ever since I came home."

Generally Ancestors.

They were sight-seeing in Boston, and had reached the Old South Church of Revolutionary fame. A darky custodian who looked as though he might have survived from Revolutionary days, showed them about. His shabby black finger pointed the empty pews with Boston notables of long ago. He could tell just who sat where.

"Yes, but do many people come to this old church nowadays?" some one asked.

"Oh, yess, str, yass str. Dis heah church is well filled every Sunday. As' mos' of dem dat comes is ancestors."

The Earth as a Star.

Although it is possible for an aviator to be invisible from the ground and yet for the ground to be visible to him, it is equally true that while an aeroplane can be seen from below, the ground cannot be seen from the aeroplane.

The condition of this latter phenomenon arises when a large part of the sun's rays are prevented from reaching the ground by a low-lying mist.

Of course, the machine, being above the mist, is lighted by the full blaze of the sun, but the sunlight which is reflected upwards from the top of the haze overpowers the feeble rays of the less brightly lighted ground.

It is astonishing how much glare really can be reflected from a cloud—for a low-lying mist is but a cloud resting upon the ground.

If, for example, we were transported to some other planet in the Solar System, we should see the earth as brilliantly illuminated as Venus or Jupiter, owing to its cloud-laden atmosphere, the sunlight being thrown back into space by the clouds.

Hence, it is not surprising to learn that the reflected sunlight from a thick ground-mist is bright enough to overpower the feeble rays issuing from the less brightly lighted ground. The effect, as has been pointed out by a high authority, is similar to that of a lace curtain over a window, which enables the occupants of a room to see out, while the interior cannot be seen from the outside.

Earliest Known Loan Negotiated 430 B.C.

Two thousand and more years ago there were creditors and debtors just as there are today. Originally the loans were not of money, but of actual commodities.

The earliest loan safeguarded, according to modern investment standards and of which we have any record, was made in 430 B.C. It consisted of 30 bushels of dates secured by the land of the debtors. The clay brick on which it was recorded was dug up in the ruins of Myppur, Mesopotamia, by an archaeological expedition of the University of Pennsylvania.

Translated, the inscription on the brick reads as follows:

"Thirty bushels of dates are due to Bel Nadin Shun, son of Marasuh, by Bel Bullitau and Sha Nabu Shu, sons of Kirebt, and their tenants. In the month of Tashri (month of harvest) of the 24th year of King Artaxerxes I. they shall pay the dates, 30 bushels, according to the measure of Bel Nadin Shun, in the town of Bit Balasau. Their said, cultivated and uncultivated, their set estate, is held as a pledge for the dates, namely, 30 bushels, by Bel Nadin Shun. Another creditor shall not have power over it."

Note how carefully the loan is recorded and how the time and place of payment are named. The creditor is, in fact, given a first mortgage on the land of his debtors, for the document declares "another creditor shall not have power over it (the land)."

The brick was found with 730 similar clay tablets in the remains of a room that had once been part of the business establishment of a wealthy firm that would have, according to the parlance of to-day, been known as Marasuh Sons, Myppur, Mesopotamia.

The fact that the first loan of this kind was of dates testifies to the antiquity of dates as a food and to their lasting popularity through the centuries.—Baltimore Sun.

Black Magic.

The native of Africa is a simple soul. Before his existence was complicated by the arrival of the European his wants were few and his thoughts were strictly regulated by his surroundings and the beliefs of his father, so far as they had been translated into things material.

Among the beliefs which came from the east, the most cherished of these is a life beyond and that the spirits of those who have passed over can guide the destinies of the living. The African is a spiritualist.

In the midst of a Western civilization Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his friends seek to probe the future for the benefit of the present. With medium and seance, a touch of mystery and a deal of propaganda, they seek to revive interest in a new faith by trying to prove an age-old hope. The African has never heard of Sir Arthur but the latter could tell him nothing.

A woman, the daughter of a European settler in the Nandi district of Kenya, had her curiosity aroused one day by signs of unusual excitement among some of the native squatters. Inquiry elicited the information that there had arrived among them one who could speak with dead friends.

The woman was frankly sceptical, but Western scepticism is of little use against a simplicity of faith which has its roots in the past.

Ultimately the native said, "If you don't believe, come and see." She followed into the low grass but, and when her eyes had become accustomed to the darkness and the smoke from the open fire on the floor, she discerned a circle of her father's labourers around one who sat in the centre of the hut.

There was nothing unusual about his appearance, and it may be that imagination, or a leaping flame from the fire, placed a strange light in his eyes. In front of him, on the earthen floor, stood an ordinary native gourd.

Presently the silence was broken by low moanings and strange mutterings and the circle of natives swayed inwards to listen. The woman was thoroughly conversant with the Nandi language, and she was amazed to hear the sounds form into words and the words into sentences, giving forth details of the worldly goods and transient things of those around her, and, most astonishing of all, the past history of those who had died and their fathers before them.

Still unbelieving, she watched the lips of the guardian of the gourd for signs of motion, but there was no movement visible. Ultimately, she brought her Western knowledge to her aid again and charged him with being a ventriloquist.

The fire flared up fitfully and she saw that he was indignant. He protested most earnestly, and finally suggested that he would leave the hut altogether. He went outside and squatted some distance away, where it was impossible for his voice to carry.

But in the silence of the hut the words still came from the gourd.—Daily Mail.

ON A PINK SASH.

It is wrong to feel a tenderness that is almost an affection for one's most cherished possessions? Is it foolish to care so much for immaterial objects? I do not know. But of this I am sure that if it is, it is a kind of sin which the youngest child, at least the youngest girl child, comes naturally by.

Did you ever have a pink sash when you were a child? A pink sash was the motive power that started my thoughts traveling in this direction: I saw one in a window and it carried me back to the days when I had a pink sash, and awakened the memory of my love for it.

Sunsets and Pink Ice Cream. It was a very broad sash of the loveliest shade of pink, a pink that suggested pink ice cream and sunsets and roses. It was somewhat unusual, having checkerboard squares of silk and satin, and it was finished with a fringe. Mother kept it between tissue paper in the lower drawer in the spare room bureau. I can see that drawer now with its layers of tissue paper and its little treasure trove of pretties. My best gump was kept there, and the handkerchief with a bit of real lace on it that my aunt brought me from New York and that I was allowed to carry only to parties.

The Second Drawer. Later, as I grew to years of discretion, the little treasure trove of pretties was removed to my own room and kept in my second drawer. (Don't you think the second drawer is almost always the depository of the dearest things: the top drawer for gloves, hair-ribbons, handkerchiefs and such like, the lower drawers for underwear and prosaic daily needs; but the second drawer for the dainties.) The pink sash had passed on by this time but there were other treasures to receive its need of tenderness—a red chiffon scarf with one's coat, tied in a bow; a little white feather-fan with pink and blue flowers painted on it, a grown-up corset cover with yards of blue ribbon woven through it. How vividly they come back to me out of the past, what tenderness they can call forth even yet!

Can it be wrong to feel such affection? SHIRT STOCKINGS. Of course it can't. Or if it is, then are we all wrong from the child that was I, watching with eager eyes the pink sash being lifted from its tissue paper nest in the spare room bureau, to the old lady who showed me her pretties one day not long ago—the lavender scarf and the bit of old lace, the collection of best handkerchiefs and the three pairs of grey silk stockings.

One can let the love of pretty things dominate, and crowd out other natural loves, and that, of course is wrong. But so long as the love of our pretties—the solace we get from visiting the little nest, where in tissue paper and sachet our dearest pos-

Me and Conan Doyle.

Conan Doyle is a friend of mine. He tells me lots of funny things. But when I die, I'll still live on. Without no clumsy angel wings. I'll be a spirit, up on high. And have a wild time, when I die.

There ain't no Hell, says Conan Doyle. No sorrow and no pain up there. No brimstone and no bollix oil. That sounds to me like pretty fair. Well, if that's Heaven, let's all die soon.

And fly to mansions past the moon. No debts up there, they won't take notes. But give you all you want to eat. No politics, there ain't no votes—No coal to buy to furnish heat. A motor car for every man—More fun than since your life began.

There ain't no prohibition there. There's lots of good cigars to smoke; No critics howl at what you wear. And livin' high don't make you broke. Hurrah for Conan Doyle, I say. Let's go to Heaven right to-day.

I'm tired of life upon this sphere. My wife and I, we don't agree. Now, up above, your wife's a dear. There's no divorce, 'cause love is free. So drink my health in Home Brew Eye. I'll off with Conan, up on high.

Millionaires May Rent Palace on Bosphorous

CONSTANTINOPLE.—The Sublime Porte is considering seriously the note from the Allied High Commissioner regarding the reduction of government employees, and it is expected that action will be taken which will make good the monthly deficit of 500,000 Turkish pounds in the wages to government servants. In addition the Sublime Porte has decided to abolish the Legations and Consulates in various neutral countries. Orders have already gone out for the closing down of Legations and Consulates in Madrid, Berne, The Hague and Stockholm. Several government buildings of secondary importance will be evacuated and rented to private concerns. Some palaces on the Bosphorus will be rented to millionaires. The economy measures provide also for the reductions in the salaries of schoolmasters, hospital nurses, and office boys; the abolition of superfluous government offices and the retirement of a large number of army and navy officers. The Finance Ministry has decided to withdraw worn paper money notes from circulation. The government, together with two delegates of the Ottoman Public Debt, is devising a plan to this end. Worn paper money of one, two and a half, five, 20 and 25 palstras notes will be withdrawn from circulation and replaced by metal pieces of equivalent value. No more metal money than the amount of paper money withdrawn will be struck.

Shooting Out Fires With a Pistol.

For certain kinds of fires that are known as "dry extinguishers" are preferable to water. They operate, of course, by liberating some gas, such as carbon dioxide which prevents combustion. These extinguishers, however, require a considerable strength to maintain a steady stream which is absent in a new device which is attracting attention in Germany. It is a "pistol" which is light enough and simple enough in construction to be readily handled by a woman or even by a child. When the trigger is pulled the extinguishing powder (usually sodium carbonate) is projected against the blazing area and the flames are at once extinguished, providing the area is not unduly large, in which case the shots must be repeated. The powder is packed in a tight cartridge provided with percussion caps, similar to those used by hunters. Experiments with this new apparatus have been highly successful. Even the dangerous fire caused by benzine is instantly put out if it has not spread to too great an extent. It is especially noteworthy that the pistol is effective against vertical as well as horizontal surfaces. Thus it can be used to extinguish burning curtains or draperies.

Ships Won't Call.

IF NO RUN OBTAINABLE.

CHARLOTTE AMELIA, St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.—The Virgin Islands are now officially "dry" and the Volstead Act is in force, but Rear Admiral Kittelle, the naval governor, by official publication, has announced that there are no funds provided by law for the enforcement of the Act, and that the police officers in the island will have to watch out for violations which will be punishable in the local courts. The period of time granted for the disposal of liquor stocks on hand expired July 30. A commission is now in Washington urging modification of the law to permit the sale of liquor as ship's stores in order to prevent foreign ships giving up St. Thomas as a port of call.

By ONLOOKER. In some five minutes, which was kicked behind. The game was fairly even, and the ball up on several occasions in a way like their old style, but three chances they had were missed, the shooting for the goal being high and wide. The Cadets also paid several visits to the other end, but failed miserably in front of goal. The play all through the half was fairly even, and the whistle sounded time without further scoring, thus adding two points more in favor of the K. A. C. Referee—F. Maynard. Linesmen—T. H. The Rose M. Enquiry.

Finding of the Court into the loss of the schooner "Rose M" at Feleiras in the Island of Fayal Azores, on January 15th, 1922.

The schooner "Rose M", a wooden ship of 189 tons gross and 147 tons net, was built by the Norris Arm Shipbuilding Co., Ltd., at Norris Arm, Nfld., in 1918, and was registered at the Registry of Shipping at St. John's on the 23rd October, 1919. (Certificate of British Registry is attached hereto). Her crew consisted of seven men; master inclusive.

On arrival of ship off the Island of Fayal in the Azores I find from the evidence that the captain passed the Semaphore Station at Capelinhas on the Western end of Fayal at 11 a.m. on Friday, January 13th, 1922. Although passing this station at a distance of two miles in a ship with damaged sails and in a leaky condition the captain apparently took little notice of the station; he certainly made no attempt to communicate with those in charge and did not even trouble to hoist the ensign or recognize the station in any way.

Has It Come to This?

It is not often that the Telegram features sensational articles printed in Canadian and United States papers, but today we make a departure from custom and publish on this page an article taken—headlines and all—from the Montreal Standard of recent issue. The Standard is known widely and is regarded as a thoroughly reliable source of information and news. That gives the more color to the truth of the story which it tells of the discovery of a Society Opium Ring, with ramifications extending from Montreal to St. John's, Newfoundland. The revelations made in the article are more than surprising; they are astonishing. Compared with the "Opium habit" all the social and moral evils that we have in our midst are trivial indeed, but once the dope habit begins to spread utter demoralization sets in. Cocaine, Morphine, Heroin, and all the "snow" drugs are the concomitants of opium, and the degradation which follows their use is unspicable. It surely cannot be true that there are addicts to these drugs in St. John's; that opium orgies are the rule rather than the exception; that men and women who stand on the upper rungs of the ladder of society in this city have indulged themselves in this vile habit, no less than in the immoral trafficking with Chinamen who are willing to cater to their depraved tastes for profit. Surely such a deplorable condition of affairs cannot exist in our midst. But yet the story as told by the Standard does not attempt to cover up anything. Names of men and women in St. John's have been found entered upon the pages of a small book found on the celestial who was arrested in Montreal with thirty pounds of raw opium in his possession, and who gave his destination as St. John's, Newfoundland to the Montreal police. He may have given this name as a blind to conceal his real objective, or a mistake might have been made and St. John's, New Brunswick, confused with St. John's, Newfoundland. Only the names entered in the "black" book of the smuggler, as purporting to be domiciled in this city will produce the proof, and in the interests of morality, in the interests of sociality, in the interests of the church, for the good name of the whole population of this city, for the sake of the youth and innocence of the growing generation; we recommend that our police authorities get in touch with those of Montreal, and ascertain if possible the names recorded in the book taken from the opium runner. This is as necessary in the interests of the law as it is in clearing the names of those alleged to be social leaders in our midst from an accusation which will besmirch their characters

The Humber Proposition

NEGOTIATIONS NOW FINALIZED. The Humber Proposition has now been finalized to the extent that it can be by negotiation. It is learned that the Prime Minister has appended his signature to the agreement, and all that now remains is to bring it before the Legislature. Whether the agreement will be made the issue of a general election in the near future is still in doubt, but it is believed that it will form part of the Government plank whenever the election takes place. It is unlikely that there will be an undivided House when the measure comes up for ratification, as it imposes a financial burden on the Colony which cannot, under present conditions be assumed. An announcement of the Government's policy is expected from the Prime Minister returns at the end of the present month.

That Open Letter to the Opposition.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—Your correspondents "Pink, White and Green" and "E.B." have hit the nail on the head in those letters of theirs wherein they call upon the Opposition members to declare themselves without delay. The whole country, as far as an expression of opinion can be gleaned, is anxious for a declaration and a line-up against the party of incomparable political charlatans. This is no time for dickerling over leadership. All the country demands now is that the gentlemen who compose the Opposition give us a chance to see this thing through, by either coming before the people as a party or—as an alternative—resigning. The people are prepared to put political bunglers such as Messrs. Squires, Coaker and Campbell where they belong, and cannot long tolerate temporizing. We are face to face with calamity. We are face to face with very grave problems and it is time we took matters in hand. The present government has had three years of office and what has been accomplished? The country is sinking deeper and deeper in distress, and there does not appear to be any effort put forth to remedy the case. Relief works that are nothing but costly makeshifts have been set afoot, but each such effort but adds to an already intolerable burden and does not ameliorate the condition. The secret put forth by the Government may be likened to stirring the vitiated air of a room with a fan instead of opening the doors and windows. You get no extra oxygen by agitating the air of a closed room. The moment your fan ceases to stir you feel the oppression: the moment hand to mouth labor ceases you feel the pinch of want, while your burden has been increased by the waste of effort. We are facing a winter of want, and nothing is being considered by the pliant Prime Minister or his associates. No, these are playing politics, fiddling while Rome burns. They are using this Humber scheme to boost their political fortunes, as they foolishly think, as if the full development of that pet project were any more than a drop in the bucket, beside the ocean of want. Better that the country feed in their homes the few hundred men who might be employed on the Humber than that we overwhelm ourselves with an added liability of nine or ten millions. We must fight this nefarious plot and crush out before too late the traitors and simpletons who are trying to impose it upon us, but we must organize, for "united we stand, divided we fall."

Not Doing any Work on Carbonear Road.

NEEDY MEN THERE MAY HAVE TO GO TO DEER LAKE. The following message was received by Sir Michael Cashin yesterday from Carbonear: "Sir M. P. Cashin, St. John's. Dear Sir—Please interview Dr. Campbell, or whoever is in charge of the Government, with regard to employing some 50 or 60 men here. Some of them returned from Badger, and have absolutely nothing, and are in a starving condition. Our roads and the Bay de Verde railroad need repairs badly, and could not some of the men be given employment on this very necessary work. Please give an early reply and oblige, Yours truly, JAMES MOORE." The following reply which speaks for itself, has been despatched by Sir Michael: "James Moore Esq., Carbonear. Have interviewed Government and their reply is that they have instructed Mr. Penny to employ fifty or sixty men for Deer Lake Road, and have them sent out immediately. CASHIN."

Charged Under Inflammable Oils Act.

DEFENDANT FIRM FINED. In the Police Court to-day, Messrs. Job Bros. were charged under the Inflammable Materials Act with leaving oil in the harbor within 48 hours after the time when the ship started to discharge. The defendant firm said the oil was sold from the ship, and any left on the wharf after 3 o'clock in the afternoon was immediately sent to the oil store. No oil was left out overnight. H. A. Winter, B.A., for defendants said the offence was an involuntary one. The oil was safer on the ship than anywhere else and every care had been taken to see that none was left on the wharf. The Act was badly in need of amendment, said Counsel. The Judge said there was no malicious intent. He inflicted a fine of $100. MEAN THIEF. MADE OFF WITH SWEETPAKE. Charged with the larceny of $150, a returned soldier was remanded in the Police Court until this afternoon. Accused pleaded not guilty. The theft with which he is charged is of a deplorable nature. A small girl entrusted with a sweetpaek and a regatta sweetpaek so that he might find out if she had won a prize. Accused later said the ticket was not the right one, but that one which he had held was worth a $150 prize. Information was laid against accused who was arrested on the charge of the larceny of the value of the ticket.

Exciting Sport.

HORSE MACKEREL HARPOONED. Mr. John Butler of Topsail engaged in an exciting sport last evening when he went out after horse mackerel and succeeded in harpooning one of these monsters of the deep. The fish, harpooned by Mr. Butler weighs over 500 pounds. It will be cut up and part of the fish, which is very good eating when dried, will be used as food.

Prime Minister.

CABLED SYMPATHY FROM FRANCE. Sir Richard Squires, Prime Minister of this Colony, who was in France attending to certain matters in connection with the Imperial War Graves Commission, and its relation to Newfoundland graves, at the time of the death of Lord Northcliffe called his personal sympathy to Lady Northcliffe and that of the people of Newfoundland to the late Viscount's Secretary in the following messages: "TO LADY NORTHCLIFFE. 'Let me assure you that the whole people of Newfoundland join with me in expressing to you our sincere sympathy in this your hour of loneliness and sorrow.' "TO THE SECRETARY. 'On behalf of the government and people of Newfoundland I pray you to accept an expression of the Colony's sorrow at the death of Viscount Northcliffe, whom we have long recognized as a great Imperialist and world statesman, and to whom Newfoundland is so greatly indebted for his personal interest in our development and welfare.'"

Our Local Peppys

HIS DIARY. Aug. 31st.—I learn from Major Cotton how there is a strike of his workmen in Hawke Bay and like to be trouble, so needs must there be an armed watch. Anus to the Customs and Mr. LeMessurier would have me urge the City Council to remove the obstacles that grow by King's Bridge. I did tell him of divers people in the town who would make a nabal of these same thistles, did they but follow their natural inclination. My wife is today gone to the country and would have me go also, but I tell her I may not leave my work, and indeed women have small thought for such things, and believe that men need do little but minister to their wants. I did have the pleasure of meeting the Right Hon. Sir R. Bond, of White-bourne, and did have much pleasant discourse with him.

Picture Delayed.

TOO LATE IN YEAR FOR OUTDOOR WORK. At a special meeting in the Board of Trade rooms this morning, the directors of the lately-organized Newfoundland Films, Ltd., voted to suspend the production of the picture, "The Strikers," until next summer. Newfoundland's first big photoplay production, "Rip Tide," will be filmed about the 15th of the month. The decision came as the result of a conference with Kenneth O'Hara, who arrived on the Rosalind, on Thursday, to make a picture of the men with supplies unless they return to work. Major Cotton will fly to Hawke Bay this afternoon to confer with his manager, Capt. Olsen. He will persist in his refusal to meet the strikers until they resume work. None of the men from the West Coast, employed in the Hawke Bay pit prop industry, have joined the strikers. These men are fully satisfied with the terms on which they are working and although among the first to go up to Hawke Bay, they have not made a complaint against their treatment by the Company or the conditions of their employment. Many of the strikers are men who have been at Hawke Bay for only a few weeks and had no intention of staying anything but easy money. Having found that they must try to live, they attempted an agitation similar to those which men of the same stamp have tried on other companies and when employed on relief work. The strikers have demanded that the Company or the Government must send them home. Major Cotton states positively that their passengers will not be provided by the Company and if the men attempt to make trouble, he is fully prepared for them. The best proof of the fact that the Company's terms are satisfactory, is found in the willingness of the West Coast men to continue work. It is therefore concluded that the strikers are from that class who do not want to work and attempt to demoralize those who do. Constable Bursley is still at Hawke Bay and three constables from Bay of Islands will arrive by the Home to-morrow. No attempts have yet been made by the strikers to prevent those at work from continuing, nor are they likely to interfere as the non-striker greatly outnumber those who still refuse to work.

Labrador Boundry.

CASE WILL BE HEARD IN SPRING. The Labrador boundary dispute which for many years past has been an El Dorado for Newfoundland and Canadian lawyers, will come before the Privy Council in the spring. Hon. W. R. Warren K.C., Minister of Justice and a representative of Canada, are at present in London, preparing the cases of their respective countries. Mr. Warren is not expected to return to Newfoundland until late in the year and several matters still require his attention. Eat Mrs. Stewart's Home-Made Bread.—apr11,5m

Sensational Arrest Promises to Reveal Society Opium Ring.

Chinese Arrested at Canadian National Station Carried Thirty Pounds of Raw Opium and Book of Names of Men and Women Socially Prominent in Montreal and St. John's, Newfoundland. (Montreal Standard, Aug. 19.) Sensational revelations of the existence of wide circles of socially prominent Montrealers, men and women whose names are listed in a "black" book as customers of Chinese opium traffickers, are hinted by the police this evening as a result of an arrest made at 3.30 this afternoon. Staggering under the strain of a heavily weighted black bag, a furtive looking Chinese was halted by Detectives Lemaire and Barrett at the Canadian National Station. When asked his destination, the Chinese curtly replied—"St. John's, Newfoundland." When asked for his name the celestial flitted refused to comply.

FIND "BLACK BOOK." Taking the suspect to police headquarters the detective searched the bag and uncovered 30 pounds of raw opium. At underground market rates this supply represents a small fortune. In addition to the opium, the bag yielded a little book containing a lengthy list of names of men and women, of both Montreal and St. John's, which are said to appear regularly in society columns. Police do not attempt to conceal the fact that they are actually engaged on a wide crusade to shred the elaborate distributing fabric which the underworld purveyors of the criminal narcotic have built up within recent years, particularly since 1918.

POLICE SPREAD NET. A dragnet has been spread into its tentacles are steadily falling the unwary. Up till now, however, arrests have been almost entirely of the individual peddlers who accept their court punishment, usually a fine, with stoicism, complacently aware that the individual peddlers who accept their illicit traffic will within a short period offset the amount of the fine. Not one of these peddlers has yet been induced or forced into disclosing the central source of supply and while the existence of a more select circle of addicts has long been suspected by the police they could not secure any direct evidence of it. This has been due to the fact that the peddlers heretofore arrested have usually pandered to unfortunates of the underworld and the lower side of Montreal and not to the wealthier addicts.

Figures prominent around the police court are definitely known by the police to occupy places high in the control of the traffic but despite this knowledge no definite evidence can be gathered which will warrant prosecution, owing to the loyalty of the distributors. Only recently several of these suspected traffickers were reported to have left for Europe to arrange for fresh shipments of drugs and their return is being eagerly awaited, although it is known that these men do not carry the drugs themselves but have them smuggled in by ships' crews and passengers.

The police refused to disclose any of the names found in the confiscated book. Chief Lepage, the head of the local detective department, is making a special effort to rid this city of narcotic peddlers and it is largely due to his efforts and foresight that terror is being spread among the addicts of the drugs and the peddlers. The chief personally directs his men on these quests and is doing very valuable work in this connection.

Hawke Bay Strike.

STRIKERS WHO NUMBER 159. The strike situation at Hawke Bay remains unchanged, according to a report received from Capt. Olsen today. The strikers, who number 159 men, are still located at Mundy Cove on the southern side of the Harbor. Many of them are hungry but the Company has naturally no intention of providing them with supplies unless they return to work. Major Cotton will fly to Hawke Bay this afternoon to confer with his manager, Capt. Olsen. He will persist in his refusal to meet the strikers until they resume work. None of the men from the West Coast, employed in the Hawke Bay pit prop industry, have joined the strikers. These men are fully satisfied with the terms on which they are working and although among the first to go up to Hawke Bay, they have not made a complaint against their treatment by the Company or the conditions of their employment. Shooting Accident.

BOY INJURES FINGER. Mr. Don Meaney, son of Mr. J. T. Meaney, suffered a painful accident this morning when a revolver with which he was toying, discharged a bullet through a finger of his right hand. A message was sent to his father who immediately drove to Topsail in a taxi, talking Dr. Fallon with him. First aid was rendered and the injured youth was taken to Suburban Hospital where an X-Ray examination was made. Mr. Meaney bought the revolver to shoot at house mackerel, which are now plentiful near Topsail, and his son in exhibiting the weapon to some other lads had no knowledge that it was charged.

The jewels from the Iberian icon alone were estimated to be worth nearly $5,000,000.

The Blue Peter.

NOW IN CLUB ARMOURY.
Thousands of citizens lined the North Side of Quill Lake last night to see the fitting ceremony which attended the removal from the scene of its many triumphs, of the race-boat Blue Peter. In a brief speech Secretary Noonan of the Regatta Committee, congratulated the C.L.B. Old Comrades on the manner in which they were going to perpetuate the memory of the famous boat. President Chate briefly replied. The boat was then hoisted on the shoulders of a party of Old Comrades, and, headed by the C. L. B. Band, the parade moved off to the Armoury. Arriving at the Armoury, short addresses were made by Rev. A. Clayton, J. L. Noonan, E. Chate, and N. J. Vintcombe, all of whom expressed the hope that the friends and supporters of the Old Comrades Boat Club would see that she is replaced on the shoulders of a party of Old Comrades, and, headed by the C. By EDGAR A. GUEST.

INJUSTICE.
My boy, when you shall older grow, There's much which you shall come to know.
You shall discover, as you learn, Strange things at every twist and turn. And you shall hear, as on you pass, Class bitterly denouncing class. And find all forms of discontent Supported well by argument; Nor will the truth be very clear In all the heated speech you'll hear.

You'll see the strong oppress the weak The powerful trample down the meek And dreaming that the world is fair, With good men smiling everywhere, You'll wonder, as you older grow, Whether this life is good or no. You will be torn from side to side, Find reticence decaying pride, And see ingratitude destroy The very fountains of its joy.

For ages long all human thought This constant strife of class has fought. Injustice reveals rancor here And difficult is thinking clear. For in the tumult and the shout At times your best of friends you'll doubt.

For they will very often do What seems a vicious thing to you. But you will note that every plan Is to reform the other man.

Be true yourself, my boy, and give Your neighbor every right to live. Be fair, be honest, brave and strong And certain that you do no wrong. For laws, nor force, nor argument, Will end the storm of discontent. The hope of justice lies with you, In all you are and all you do; That is your purpose and your trust, That you shall never be unjust.

Co-partnership With Employees.

BASE OF BUSINESS SUCCESS.
LONDON (Associated Press).—At the mammoth establishment of "Lever Brothers, Port Sunlight, Lord Leverhulme has long demonstrated to the commercial world that it pays to treat employees well. The co-partnership idea has been the foundation of his gigantic business. He has just carried that idea a long step further. His insurance policies will be taken out by the company for every co-partner in the firm, from laborers to directors. The policies of ordinary members of the staff will be worth from $100 to a maximum of $1,000; those of foremen from $200 to $2,000 and those of managers from $400 to $4,000. A system of grading is to be instituted to determine the amount of the policy allotted to each person. Devotion to duty and efficiency will lead to promotion to a higher grade and an increase in the amount of the policy, while for insufficient or careless work an employee may be graded down. Should an employee retire, with the company's consent, the company will try to arrange that he continue to pay the premiums. In the event of an employee leaving in any other circumstances, the company will try to secure that the assured person, if he so desires, shall continue payments of the ordinary rates without medical examination.

ADOPTED WITH ENTHUSIASM.
Under the unemployment scheme the firm will pay a co-partner such a sum as, with all allowances from other sources, will equal half wages. Benefit will be paid on a similar basis in the case of sickness extending over a week. This benefit will be for four weeks, and its continuation will be considered. Lord Leverhulme explains the scheme to

Haitian Crafters Won't Quit Without Fight.

PORT-AU-PRINCE — The recent attempt to shoot Edouard Mangones, the Mayor of this city of 150,000 people, followed within 24 hours by the slaying of the Mayor of the city receiver, have created a sensation unusual for Haiti. The resort to firearms, together with tales of a mystery car with three gunmen operating at night, are new symptoms for Haitian politics. In the past, crimes of violence were usually accomplished by the secret use of poison or other methods. Since the occupation there have not been more than six murders and what may prove to be a crime wave is an unusual manifestation. Absolutely unknown in a century of Haitian local government is the determined campaign of Mayor Mangones, backed by the influence of President Borno and the American officer, gendarmes, to prosecute local officials, charged with shortage of funds, falsification of tax receipts, and graft. Mangones, a man of

Soviet Government.

CANCELS ORDER FOR LOCOMOTIVES.

STOCKHOLM.—After having ordered 1,600 locomotives from an engineering firm here, and having received 300 of them, the Russian government has intimated that it is now unable to pay. When the contract was made it was agreed that the engines were to be paid for as they were delivered, and the manufacturers obtained a guarantee for their money. It is now considered probable that the Soviet government will cancel the balance of the order, and that the present financial state of Russia and the future of the Genoa and Hague Conferences is responsible.

Mormons Building Big Temple in Canada.

Mormonism in Canada will centre around the town of Cardston, in Alberta, where a large temple is being constructed by people of this faith. Here has been the greatest gathering place of the immigrants from Utah, who have established themselves in a land that is wonderfully fertile and promising. The temple, according to an illustrated article in the Popular Mechanics Magazine, will cost $1,000,000, is built in the form of a Maltese cross and from a distance gives the impression of a huge pyramid, being 118 ft. square and more than 100 ft. in height. On closer inspection, however, the beauty of the structure becomes apparent, with its light-gray granite and concrete outer walls, etc. in thickness and its simple straight lines.

This temple has been under construction for several years and sometime during next summer, will be held the dedication services. After these rites, entrance to the edifice will be denied to all non-believers and even to those of the same religion who do not totally abstain from the use of tobacco, coffee, tea and alcoholic stimulants, which abstinence is among the requirements of those desiring to be in good standing among the Mormons, according to their iron-clad rules.—Popular Mechanics.

The Best Policy.

Little Dorothy, with her mother, was paying a visit to Uncle Silas. Now, Uncle Silas was wealthy—very wealthy—and little Dorothy was vastly interested in the heathen black. So one morning she appeared in front of uncle, and asked:—

"Uncle, dear, will you please give me something for my missionary box?"

The incident took place immediately following a particularly satisfying lunch, and Uncle Silas playfully threw on the dining-room table a threepenny bit, a two-shilling-piece, and a five-pound note, remarking:—

"There, dear, you can have which you like of the three."

Then he watched to see what little Dorothy would do.

That young person approached the table and studied the situation for fully three seconds. Then she suddenly burst out:—

"Mummy's always told me not to be greedy, so I'll take the littlest one. But will you please wrap it up in that crinkly bit of paper, uncle, so as I shan't lose it?"

And uncle did.

"Bullies" and "Humbugs."

Animals, birds, insects have "bullies" and "humbugs" among them just the same as people.

One of the greatest "humbugs" in the bird family is a pretty top-knotted fellow commonly known as the "pee-wee." When any one approaches the nest of this bird, he flies up with a whirring sound and drops to the ground a few yards distant. There he flounders and flutters as if he was wounded. He keeps on repeating this stunt until the trespasser is led a sufficient distance from the eggs or the young, and then the deceitful "pee-wee" flies straight back to the place from which he came.

There are several other birds that feign broken wings and legs when they want to decoy hunters from their nesting-places. The robin and mocking bird also belong to this set of "humbugs."

The garden caterpillar is a "bully." He has no poison, no spines, and nothing with which to defend himself, but the instant anything approaches, he rears up, shakes his horned head like an angry bull and looks so fierce nothing will touch him.

The opossum is one of the worst kind of pretenders. He plays dead at the slightest provocation, but as soon as he knows he is left alone loses no time in getting out of sight. There are several varieties of opossum, some as small as an ordinary rat, and others as large as a good-sized dog. Whether big or little, they all have the same sly habit.

There are snakes, too, that have the pretending habit. One known as the "snout" snake is an expert in the line. When he is pursued, he writhes his body as if in convulsions, rolls over, shakes slowly, and then remains perfectly motionless. He has been known to "sham" hours at a time.

The porcupine is a "bluffer," and it is well that he is. He turns himself into a bristling ball and rattles his quills together, making a big noise for a small animal. He is always afraid himself, but with his noise and quivering spine, he "bluffs" the other fellow into letting him alone.

Leif Erickson Was Here About A.D. 1000.

More and more people are coming to understand that Christopher Columbus was not the discoverer of America—that he may have been a rediscoverer so far as the people of Central and Southern Europe were concerned, but he was not the "first" discoverer. Of course our continent may have been discovered before Leif Erickson discovered it, but Leif was here more than four hundred years ahead of Columbus. It has been established to the satisfaction of all scholars who have concerned themselves with this subject that Leif was really and truly here. A recent writer on this matter has said: "The evidence that Leif Erickson came to the North American coast in the year 1000 and that he returned to Europe making his discovery known to the world, is clearly authentic."

Leif is defended against the charge of being a "barbarous Norse adventurer," though he might have been all that, and also the discoverer of America. It is maintained that Leif represented the highest type of the Scandinavian civilization of that time which had risen above the decadent Roman culture of Southern Europe.

The Sagas say that Leif was a large, powerful man of most imposing bearing, "a man of sagacity and just in all things." Before his discovery of America he had been converted to the Christian faith and had been commissioned by King Olaf to proclaim the faith to the people of Greenland, which the Scandinavians had settled a considerable period before that time.

It is quite reasonable to believe that the Norsemen who had settled in Greenland had made voyages to America in advance of Leif Erickson, but that Leif was there in 1000 or nearly 100 years before Columbus there is no doubt.

Enquiry Into Manuel's Tragedy.

WALTER SMITH, SWORN—I reside at Manuels, South Shore, C. B., and am 25 years old and am single. I am the son of William Smith at Manuels and my home is situated about a quarter of a mile from Manuel's Beach. I am a farmer by occupation and I never go fishing, and have no experience with boats. I was home on Saturday, August 19th, last, I was cutting hay in my field about 10.30 a.m. (Anderson's time) when I noticed a small boat coming down the shore from the direction of Kelligrews. My father William was also in the field cutting hay at the time. The field is about a quarter of a mile from the beach and immediately opposite. The boat appeared to be small and was painted white, but I am not able to tell her build as I was not near her. She had one big sail. There were two men in the boat and they landed at Manuel's Beach and then went up the road towards the railway station. They were gone about time enough to go to the Railway Station when they returned again and got in the boat. I did not know the men as they were strangers to me but I learned the next day that their names were Mr. F. L. Southgate and Mr. Thomas Anderson. The two men made no delay at the beach but got in their boat and put off from the beach. The motor started the full sail on the boat as they left the beach and the little boat looked to be covered right over with canvas. At this time the sky was cloudy but the sun used to shine out sometimes, and the wind was blowing strong from about S.S.W. right off from the shore. When the boat got about 100 yards off the beach she was nearly capsized by the wind. She was then carried whole sail. The occupants of the boat then hauled down the sail and reefed it and held the sail up again. After the sail was reefed it appeared to be a good bit smaller but in my opinion there was still too much canvas on the boat for the amount of wind that was blowing. After the sail was reefed the boat started on her course towards Kelligrews and I followed her course all the time. The boat appeared to be making bad weather and to be making considerable leeway. When the boat was about a mile and a half from Manuels Beach I saw her go over on her side on the starboard side and about a second later she righted herself again and then went suddenly down again and the sail went down flat on the water and the last thing I saw was a part of the sail rise a couple of times like there was wind under it and then it disappeared from view, and that was the last I saw of the boat or sail. The wind was blowing strong at the time and appeared to have increased since the time they put off from Manuel's Beach and the Bay was white with foam from the breaking seas. What I mean by the breaking seas was the lops were breaking. As soon as I saw the boat disappear I said to my father, the best thing for you to do is to go right away and report the matter to Constable Forsey. My father harnessed the horse to the express right away and drove on to Constable Forsey's house. There were several small children around the place and I sent one of them to Mrs. Martha Smith's for a spy glass and in a few minutes the child returned with a pair of binoculars and I looked through the glasses at the spot where the boat disappeared, but I could see nothing of the boat. As the boat was white and the sea was white at that place it was impossible to see anything at that distance. George Smith who came into the field just after the boat went over, also looked through the glasses and said that he could not see anything. There was but one boat on the collars, a small two handed fishing boat and was owned by Edward Smith but my opinion is that the boat would not be large enough to go to the rescue at that time. There were three or four small boats hauled up on the beach. There were a couple of pieces of cars in one of these boats but no cars at all in the others. These boats had been lying on the beach since caplin time and would be somewhat dried up with the sun. I do not know if there were any boats in the pond at Manuels or not. George Smith or myself did nothing as regards getting one of these boats ready to go out to the scene of the accident as we thought the wind was too high and the water was too rough. In my opinion even if George Smith and myself had to put out in the boat that was on the collar or in either of the ones that were on the beach, we would never have reached the scene of the accident as the boats were not large enough to go out in at the time. I did not take any steps as regards going to the Telegraph Office to report the accident as my father was attending to that. I do not know of anything else I could have done that day to try and save the men's lives or render assistance as I would be endangering my own life and the lives of others if I put out to sea in one of these small boats. When the boat went over she was standing up for about N.W. and was evidently trying to beat up for Kelligrews. So far as I know there was no effort made by any person to put off in a boat from Manuels. On account of having no experience with boats I am not able to say whether a boat could have been rowed to the scene of the accident or whether it would have been necessary to use sails to beat there. I cannot give even the approximate time when my father returned or how long he was away. When he came back he told me he had reported the matter to Constable Forsey but he did nothing else as regards rendering assistance as it was impossible to do anything on account of weather conditions. The wind kept up all afternoon but veered further Westward about 4 o'clock and kept on blowing as strong as it was all day until night when there was a lull. To my knowledge there was no one who went out at nightfall to the scene of the accident. I have never crossed from Manuels to Bell Island or from Bell Island to Manuels in any boat but a steamer. Looking back at the scene of the accident I do not think that myself or anybody else could have done anything as regards rendering assistance. I have no idea of the depth of the water where the boat went down. When the accident occurred the boat would be about half way from the mainland and Kelly's Island, and was about South from the Island when she went down. I saw a motor boat crossing from Fox Trap towards Bell Island on the morning of the accident about fifteen minutes before I saw the sail boat turn over. The parties in the motor boat must have seen the little boat as they passed within a few hundred yards of each other. At that time there would not have been too much wind for that motor boat as it was a large boat, and was running before the wind. The day after the accident, Sunday, was a fine day and so far as I know no person went out from Manuels to search for the missing boat. About one or two o'clock on Sunday I heard the little boat had been picked up at Portugal Cove and in my opinion the Westerly wind would have driven the boat in that direction. I think there would have been too much wind and lull for the occupants of the boat to hold on for any length of time, even if they succeeded in getting on to the bottom of the boat. I have since learned that the motor boat that crossed towards Bell Island was owned by Harold Tilley of Kelligrews.

HAROLD TILLEY, SWORN—I reside at Long Pond, South Shore, C. B., am 28 years old and am married. My work is running from Bell Island to Kelligrews and other places along the shore carrying passengers and freight. The boat I use is a motor boat owned by myself. On Saturday August 19th, I boarded my boat at Long Pond about 12.30 p.m. (Anderson's time) I was bound for the beach at Bell Island and was accompanied by my brother John and had two packages of freight. About fifteen minutes before I boarded the boat at Long Pond my brother John arrived from Kelligrews in my boat by himself. The wind was fine but it was blowing a good breeze from about S. S. W. There was no lull near the shore, but after we got out some distance there was a good lull. I understand a little about the compass, enough to get around Conception Bay, and after we left Long Pond we steered about half a mile on our course when a small boat with a white sail crossed our bow about two or three hundred yards distant and was going close to the wind and steering about a North West course. I sighted the boat first about five minutes before she crossed our bow. When the boat crossed our bow I did not know the occupants of the boat or who owned her as I had never seen it before. The boat appeared to be small, but I do not know what color she was. She had one sail, what is generally called a mainsail, and that was reefed and still appeared to be large for the hull of the boat. When that boat crossed our bow, she was going along alright. I could see two men in the boat, both were sitting on the windward quarter. We were near enough to speak to them but they did not speak or signal. They would be able to hear us if we spoke to them but we would not be able to hear them as our engine was running. We saw the boat for about five minutes afterwards and she still appeared to be alright and that was the last I saw of her. We were running before the wind and our boat was going at the rate of six miles an hour and in an opposite direction and besides the wind was in our favor which would make the boat go faster. When I saw the boat first she was clear of the land about a half or three quarters of a mile and about two miles to the South East of Kelly's Island. When I last sighted the boat the wind was increasing and was still blowing from the same point and there was a good lull outside. When I sighted the boat last it was about 12.45 p.m. The reason why we did not see the boat longer was that we ran out of her sight. We arrived at Bell Island alright and came back to Fox Trap that evening, having left Bell Island at 7 o'clock and arrived at about 8 o'clock and then went up the shore and arrived at Kelligrews at about 9 o'clock. At the wharf someone called out and asked if we had a man by the name of Anderson aboard and I said no, and then they said a little boat containing Mr. Southgate and Mr. Anderson was reported missing. Constable Forsey was there and Rev. Mr. Forsey and they asked me if I saw any sight of the boat, and I told them I had seen her, and that she appeared to be alright. Assuming that the boat turned over about a mile to the South of Kelly's Island, which would mean that she turned over about 20 minutes after crossing our bow, it would be possible for a good boat to go to the assistance of the two men if they had a good crew that is a good row boat or sail boat. It would be possible for two or three men to go in a motor boat. I would be able to go in my boat any time that day. My boat is some where between 30 and 32 feet on top and fitted with a 7 h.p. Mianus engine. I do know that there was a small size fishing boat at Manuels that day but she would not be large enough to go to the scene of the accident as there was too much wind and lull at that time. I do not know anything about any boats that were on Manuel's Beach. I do know that there are motor boats and other boats at Long Pond large enough to go to the scene of the accident but I do not know whether any of them went out or not.

For years I have never considered my stock of household remedies complete unless a bottle of Minard's Liniment was included. For burns, bruises, sprains, frostbites or chilblains it excels, and I know of no better remedy for a severe cold in the head, or that will give more immediate relief, than to inhale from the bottle through the nasal organ.
And as to my supply of veterinary remedies it is essential, as it has in very many instances proven its value. A recent experience in reclaiming what was supposed to be a lost section of a valuable cow's udder has again demonstrated its great worth, and prompts me to recommend it in the highest terms to all who have a herd of cows, large or small. I think I am safe in saying among all the patent medicines there is none that covers as large a field of usefulness as does Minard's Liniment. A real trust-in-good for man or beast.

A young and untired German was serving at his first fire, and the chief rushed to him and shouted:
"Shin up that ladder to the eighth story, crawl along the cornice to the fourth window, drop down three stories, and catch that wooden sign you see smoking there. Then swing yourself along to the second window that the red glare is coming from, break the glass, and go in and see if there's anyone about. Well, what are you waiting for?"
"For pen and ink sir," said the new man. "I want to hand in my resignation."

WARSAW.—The enormous forests of Hielowiana, containing many thousands of acres of magnificent timber, are engaging the attention of British concerns, who are negotiating for leases. Very Awkward.
During the trial of a very important case it became necessary to call witness a lady's maid.
She entered the witness-box, and faced the stern-visaged counsel.
"Where were you at 7.30 on the evening in question?" he asked.
"Dressing the hair of madam," was the timid reply.
"Now," said counsel impressively, "I want you to think very carefully before you answer this question, or was not your mistress in the room at the time that?"

Dear Sir—

It is my duty to ask you please to publish the following testimonial re Dr. F. G. Kinsman's Heart Tablets in the local newspapers so others can read it for themselves, and oblige

Yours truly I am

(Signed) E. J. ROBERTS.

Dr. F. G. Kinsman's Heart Tablets are a wonderful medicine, and I wish all to know what they have done for me. Before I commenced taking them I could not lie on my left side at night; I had such a choking sensation in my throat that I could hardly breathe. I would have to sit up in bed at night and my heart would beat so much and so hard that I would think that my end had come. My left arm and side pained me. When I would walk any distance my heart would flutter terribly and I would have smothering spells. I have felt none of these symptoms since using Dr. Kinsman's Heart Tablets. Now I can lie on my left side with ease and can enjoy a good night's rest. I can walk for a long distance without being tired or exhausted.
