The other day, a man who is a mighty good judge of human nature was telling a few friends how he had just recently had a narrow escape from being done out of several hundred dollars. In the course of the conversation he said that one of the ressons why he judged that his man was not what he had represented himself to be and that he was very hard up was the fact that the fellow in question had worn the same suit from the first time he came to town. Clothes count, don't they?

FEW phetographs of foreign scenes tacked on the walls; a Roman blanket hung as a tapestry over the mantel; a portfolio and traveler's writing materials distributed about a table produced for the purpose, and additions to the meager bookshelf—a line of Baedekers, a pocket atias, a comprehensive American railway guide, several volumes of German and French poetry—and the place was not so bad. Armitage slept for an hour after a simple luncheon had been prepared by Oscar, studied his letters and cablegrams—made, in fact, some notes in regard to them and wrote replies. Then at 4 o'clock he told Oscar to saddle the horses. FEW photographs of for-eign scenes tacked on the Occur and his horses were a redit to the training of the American army and would have passed inspecion anywhere. Armitage watched his adjutant with approval. The man served without question, and, quicket if wit than of speech, his buff gamaleted hand went to his buf behn whenever Armitage addressed him.

They sought again the spot whence Armitage had first tooked down upon Storm valley, and he opened his pocket usap, the better to chaffy his ideas of

"We shall go down into the valley, Oscar," he said, and thereafter it was be that led.

They struck presently into an old read that had been an early highway across the mountains. Above and below the forest hung gloomity, and passing clouds darkened the slopes and occasionally spilled rain. Armitage drew on his cloak, and Oscar enveloped himself in a slicker as they rode through a sharp shower. At a lower level they sent in a sucker as they rous invogen a sharp shower. At a lower level they came into fair weather again and, crossing a bridge, rode down into Storm valley. The road at once bore marks of care, and they passed a num-ber of traps that spoke unmistakeby of cities and relars whose mounts knew.

The hotel loomed massively before them and beyond were handsome es-tates and ambitious mansions scat-tered through the valley and on the lower slopes. Armitage paused in a clump of trees and dismounted.

"You will stay here until I come back. And remember that we don't know any one, and at our time of life, Oscar, one should be wary of making new acquaintances."

He tossed his cloak over the saddle and walked toward the inn. The size of the please and the great number of and walked toward the inn. The size of the place and the great number of people going and coming surprised him, but in the numbers he saw his own security, and he walked boldly up the steps of the main hotel entrance. He skepped into the long corridor of the inn, where many people lounged about, and heard with keen satisfaction and walked the disk of a the steps he in. about, and heard with seen saustraction and relief the click of a telegraph in-strument that seemed at once to bring him into contactionth the remote world. He filed his telegrams and walked the length of the broad hall, his riding crop under his arm. The gay banter and laughter of a group of volum men and women that returned young men and women just returned from a drive gave him a touch of heart-ache, for there was a girl somewhere in the valley whom he had followed across the sea, and these people were of her own world—they undoubtedly knew her; very likely she came often to this huge caravansary and mingled

At the entrance he passed Baron von Marhof, the Austrian ambassador, who, by reason of the death of his royal chief, had taken a cottage at the Springs to emphasize his abstention from the life of the capital. The ambassador lifted his eyes and bowed to Armitage, as he bowed to a great many young men whose names he never remembered; but, oddly enough, the baron paused, stared after Armi-tage for a moment, then shook his head and walked on with knit brows. Armitage had lifted his hat and passed out, tapping his leg with his crop.

He walked toward the private hor the waited toward the private houses that lay scattered over the valley and along the gradual slope of the hills as though carelessly flung from a dice box. Many of the places were handsome estates, with imposing houses set amid beautiful gardens. Half a mile from the hotel he stopped a passing negro to ask who owned a large house that stood well back from the road. The man answerd. He seemed any.

171 Barrington St. The man answered. He seemed anxious to impart further information, and Armitage availed himself of the opportunity.

"How near is Judge Claiborne's place?" he asked.

The man pointed. It was the next house on the righthand side, and Armitage smiled to himself and strolled

He looked down in a moment up a pretty estate, distinguished by its formal garden, but with the broad acres of a practical farm stretchng far out into the valley. The lawn terraces were green, broken only by plots of spring flowers. The walks were walled in box and privet, The house, of the pillared colonial type, crowned a series of terraces. ped over the wall and strolled away through the garden, the smell of warm earth, moist from the day's light show-ers, and the faint odor of green things growing, sweet in his nostrils. He walked to the far end of the pergola, at down on a wooden bench and gave himself up to reverie. He had been desounced as an impostor, He was on Claiborne soil, and the situation re-guired thought.

It was while he thus pendered his affairs that Shirley, walking over the soft lawn from a neighboring estate, same anddenly upon him.

Vastly disappointed.

Mr. Bourassa is vastly disappointed and proclaims himself a-weary of fishing in troubled waters for power and for fame. He says he has sacrificed all personal ambition in the Nationalist cause, but only to find himself deserted by those his former bounty fed, and that he will not again attempt the organization of a third party. But he is continuing to make revelations regarding the relationship between the anti-British and anti-Imperialistic movement led by him and the Flag-Flappers of Ontario. These Imperialistic jingoes financed fully and generously the Nationalist campaign in 1911. But the roaring Nationalist lions when elected to Parliament and pleaced in office became at once cooling doves, and ordinary Tory partisms. London, Aug. 7.—Gol. F. S. Cody, the famous Anglo-American syriator, was killed in an aeroplane accident at Aldershot to-day. Cody was trying out a new aeroplane when he met his death. In the machine with him was a passenger named Evans. They were flying over the open country, most of which is government, land, in the Aldershot District, and had just reached Government House when their seroplane was seen to be trayelling badly and finally to fall with a crash to the ground. Clearance. badly and finally to fall with a crash to the ground.

Some people rushed to the spot and found the dead bodies of Cody and Evans lying among the ruins of the aeropians.

Cody was one of the most inference figures in aviation, more especially in the British Isles. He was a real soldier of fortune with a very varied career behind him. He was well-known to the public in England, as he attracted general attention by his peculiar make-up. He wore a sombrero, a long moustance, and an imperial with long hair, and was almost an exact copy of "Buffain Bill." He came to England a number of years ago from the United States, where he had been a cowboy in the West.

POLICE TAKE CHARGE Of little girl seated in cage with snakes at a show.

STAKES At a show.

St. Thomas, Ont., Aug. 7.—A pretty fair-haired girl, eight years of age, was taken in charge yesterday by the Eigin County authorities at Alymer, where the child had been on exhibition as the "Mamie Haha Show," which has been in that town all week, and the spectators were shocked when they paid their fee to see a frightened looking child sitting in a cage surrounded with big snakes including rattlers and copperheads.

The usual position of the child was a crouching one, as she had been told to keep her gaze on the reptiles. The two men in charge of the show were William Ford, father of the child, of Eating, near London, and Chas. Cox, her uncle, of London, she child have the sentenced on Saturday.

The child has been travelling on the road for six weeks and was compelled to sit in a canvas bed about five feet deep and five feet square for ill hours a day with the reptiles. The little girl was brought to St. Thomas and placed in the Children's Shelter.

THE NEW FRONTIER As agreed upon between war-

Strums Valley to the Belish Mountains, and thence Easterly in almost a straight line to the Mesta River, thus leaving the town of Strumnitza, the port of Lagos and Kanthi to Bulgaria, and the port of Kavala to Greece. The new frontier is a deep disappointment to the Bulgarians, who still nurse hopes for its eventual revision by the Powers.

55,000 TO STRIKE. 253 factories to be closed in MADRID, Aug. 7.—Conde DeRomanones, the Premier, called a Cabinet Council yesterday, to discuss the Barcelons strike. A communication was read from the Governor of Barcelons, informing the ministers that a general strike will be called to-day and 252 factories will be colosed. The number of workers on strike will amount to more than 55,000.

Several anarchists known to the police have left Madrid, and it is feared they are on their way to the Capital to take part in the strike. Machine guns have been mounted in the principal factories of Barcelona, in expeciation of attacks by the strikers.

The "Chocolate Soldier" will come to the Academy of Music for four nights and twenty-four years ago, and has twice. ATG. 7. Wednesday matines, commanding Monday, August 11th, when the master were of Oscar Straus will be interpreted by the Whitney Opera Company, practically the same organization as gave the opera for a whole season in New York. Not since Gilbert & Sullivan's days has a comic opera achieved the success of "The Chocolate Soldier." An entirely new investiture of scenery and costumes has been brought from Bulgaria for the production here. The dresses, with their rich embroideries, were all made by hand by the peasants in the Dragoman Pass, where the scene of the opera is laid.

Miss Lelia Hughes heads what has been called the best-balanced cast seen in comic opera in some years, Lucille Saunders, one of the best dramatic contraltos in this country to-day; Lottle Collins, Cora Williams, Harry Fairleigh, J. F. Boyle, George Tallman, and Sylvan Langills, completes the list of principals, besides whom there is the Whitney Ohorus and a special orchestra, under the leadership of Signor A. DeNovillis.

Orlandos Orchestra and vocal selections y Sig. Mosseau and a gentleman never efore heard in this city. Tuesday, August 12th, 8 p. m. While the C. B. of R. B. committee decilined to talk at the conclusion of yester-day's conference, at Moncton, with General Manager Gutelius, yet it is stated that an understanding, eprecing about all the innities in dispute the peep received a greed to. Precident Monte may good progress has been made, and the expects everything will be settled by this evening. The basis of agreement, so far as the increases are concerned, it is understood, is the same as previously announced in the press. The lower paid clerks get an increase of ten per cent.. and the higher paid men five dollars per month. Laborers will receive the minimum amount in the treatmen's schedule, namely, seventeen and eighteen cents per hour.

An understanding was also reached with regard to the confidential men. As a result of the decision arrived at, it is stated, that something over one hundred clerks employed in different departments, including the superintendeste offices, will be taken out of the schedule. This latter class of clerks, while not, governed by the schedule, are to receive, practically the same rate of increase. The increases are in harmony with what was agreed to by the old board of management, and will date from March 21, 1918.

of society. But while a healthy and clean upbringing coupled with a more or less utilitarian and thorough education can and does accomplish a very great deal towards maintaining a desirable social state, the question of questions is this: Is every child well born? The expression is not used in its usual acceptance, since there is evidence enough to prove that the son of duke may be as ill-born as the offspring of a desperado; but it is bere used to suggest the idea born in health. The answer is a decided negative.

Cold Water Was Condemned.

Cold Water Was Condemned.

In contrast with our present belief in cold water, an Enlgish herbal published in 1529 says that "many folke that hath bathed them in colde water have dyed or they came home," while the danger of drinking nature's beverage is pointed out in the assertion that "it is unpossyble for them that drynketh overmoche water in theyr youth to come to ye aege that God ordeyned them." Condemned alike as a beverage and a bath, cold water held a very meager place in mediaeval domestic economy.

Buperlatives.

Dr. Johnson says in his "Grammar of the English Tongue," "The comparison of adjectives is very uncertain and, being much-regulated by commodiousness of utterance, is not easily reduced to rules."

Then he quotes passages from "Paradise Lost" in which the words "virtuousest" and "powerfulest" are found and a passage from "Samson Agonistes" which contains the word "famousest."

"While there are many causes which militate against some children being well born," said Dr. Smith, "one of the principal, if not the chief cause, seems to receive scant attention. Our universities and colleges turn out numbers of men and women yearly who, in one way or another, are directly responsible, in virtue of their training and attainments, for the betterment of their kind. In no university or college in this province are students brought face to face with what is generally admitted to be the greatest curse of the day, since bad in itself, it is the indubitable cause of crime and disease and tends more than all else to bring ill-born children into the world, who, in after years, become millstones hanging on the neck of progress. It will be argued that all this is quite well known and that a special series of lectures would do no appreciable good. To this I merely answer that all this is not well enought known."

An example, he continues, will suffice to prove the urgency of a more than superficial knowledge of the direct effects of inebriety. It is generally conceded that the office of the preacher ought to be most fruitful in the direction of elevating the burdens of men. If this is so, does anyone the direction of elevating the burdens of men. If this is so, does anyone think a merely nodding sequaintance with the fearful and appalling effects of drink is sufficient to equip him for the task of inducing the inebriate or potential inebriate to drink water in-Specifications and conditions governing the letting of privileges may be seen at the Exhibition Office, City

FIGURES TO SET YOU THINKING. me of the Daily Happenings In the

Some of the Daily Happenings In the Metel's Greatest City.

Statistics of London life are, generally, speaking, dry, dull and uninteresting. They fail, more often than not, to appeal to the imagination, and we simply regard them in a casual manner as the many units, tens, hundreds and thiosands. There is, however, one subject at least which figures help us to understand better than pages of descriptive matter, and that is the immensity of the descriptive matter, and that is the immensity of the descriptive matter, and that is the immensity of the sound in the London one sees, and knows nothing and cares nothing for what is happening round the corner. One lives in a small and superficial London, not in the London in which 190 people die every day."

And while 190 people die every day, 325 households are invaded by, 325 households are invaded by, 325 households are invaded by 325 households are World's Greatest City.

34,000 men and women in the work-houses, 560 being admitted to the cashouses, 560 being admitted to the casual wards every night.

This works out at a cost to London of $20,000 a day. It is, however, but a fraction of the sum spent on amusements, for every day Londoners expend no less than $150,000 in going to theatres, music halls, picture palaces and concert halls.

Dog's Artificial Eye. Dog's Artificial Eye.

A patient at Ruislip Log Sanatorium, a little King Charles spaniel, has just been provided with an artificial eye. The spaniel had had a battle with a cat and came off badly in the encounter, for she lacerated his eye so terrily that it had to be removed.

Mr. Hamilton Kirk, M.R.C.V.S., who is in charge of the sanatorium, had the eye removed under an anaesthetic and a glass eye inserted. He had a little trouble in making a perfect match, but eventually he succeed in cetting a fine however the fect match, but eventually he succeeded in getting a fine brown eye, the very counterpart of the natural one, and no one would suspect it was not very counterpart of the natural one, and no one would suspect it was not real.

There are many canine and feline patients at the Ruisiip Sanatorium. In the surgery many operations are conducted. A cat recently had her fractured leg set. Here, limbs of conine and feline patients are amputated when there is no hope of saving them. Recently a little dog who had been run over by a motor-omnibus had two toes cut off, but he is now quite well and running about as lively as ever. At the sanatorium there is a special dog's bath-room and an isolation ward for infectious cases.

A Secret of the Peerags.

Those men has the carl, his heir upon attaining base the earl, his heir upon attaining the age of twenty-one, and the factor or steward of the estate. That secret is the best kept in history. Whatever the weird meaning, the burden of knowing it is never sought by the head of the family. When the present earl was nearing manhood he begged his father to spare him knowledge of the secret, and Lord Glamis, the heir of to-day, when he came of age eight years ago, was most reluctant to share the hated story.

A stage-Struck Curate.

A stage-struck curate was among the applicants the other day for a position in the chorus of Daily's Theatre, in London. Apparently there was no room for him in the church, for he told the chorus-master that "the country is very, very quiet, and now that the theatre has improved so much I feel that I could adopt the career without loss of dignity." But, also for his aspirations, he sang one verse of "There is a green hill far away," after which he was gently but firmly conducted to the sunny street and told that his voice was hopeless.

Safeguarding a Harbor.

One of the most influential men in Ireland at the present day is Sir James Long, chairman of the Cork Harbor Commissioners. His personal popularity may be judged by the fact that he has occupied that position for thirteen years, whereas none of his predecessors have held office for so long as two. Moreover, he owes his election to men of divided political opinions, but all unite in agreeing that Sir James is the best man for the post. Safeguarding a Harbor.

"When we were youngsters together at home," he said, "dad used to occasionally put on the gloves and rough-house with us — teaching us some of the rudiments of the manly art, and incidentally knocking some of the conceit out of us.

"To till the time I left home to pursue my studies at the University of Toronto, dad was still the wearer of our household boxing belt. I cherished at that time a secret determination that it should be mine by the time I completed my college course. To further that end I clandestinely took boxing lessons in Toronto, with the result that I was undisputed champion of my year when I graduated. When I got home I challenged him.

champion of my year when I graduated. When I got home I challenged him.

"Come on up stairs,' he replied, 'and I'll take the presumption out of you.' I tried to dissuade him, but there was nothing for it. He was insistent. As I laced my gloves, I determined to box very circumspectly. The pater was getting up in years, and while hale and hearty, was none the less hoar? I did not want to do him bodily harm, nor yet to hurt his feelings, for he was secretly proud of his ability as a boxer.

"So we started in, I sparring and doing everything I could to preclude 'mixing it up,' but dad's spunk was up. Somehow he got in under my guard with a left to the law that stretched me on the boards. I got up quickly enough, but my preconceived notions of being gentle had been given their knock-out. I sailed into dad. I'd show him where his antiquated methods got off at. I'd show him what scientific handling of dukes, balance and footwork meant. Well—the next thing I knew dad was bending over me with a self-accusing and anxious look in his eyes. I wiped the water be had thrown over me out out of mine, and grinned sheepishly. "Gad; you seared me, boy. I thought I had hurt you,' he said, tears welling in his eyes."
