The Chairman's Remarks.

Amid cheers the chairman, V. Cronyn, president of the Liberal Association, arose esident of the Liberal Association, arose open the proceedings of the evening. He said it had become the duty of Liberals to meet again within twelve months to a standard-bearer to represent nominate a standard-bearer to represent them in the House of Commons. Mr. Hyman had proved himself during the past year to be worthy of the confidence reposed in him. He was indeed a credit to his native city. (Cheers.) The session of Parliament he had attended had been one of the most trying and eventual ones since Confederation. His usefulness and his fealty to the principles of reform had been such that it was not to be wondered at that such that it was not to be wondered at that his opponents want to get rid of him. Hence it has been that after a most vindictive prosecution the standard-bearer of a year ago has been unseated. The duties of chairman being formal, his remarks would necessarily be few, and he took pleasure first in calling upon who was received with cheers. He said it was less than a year ago when he was privileged to nominate their popular representative, Mr. Hyman — (prolonged cheers)—and since that time great changes have taken place. The honorable leader of the House had passed away, and recently the Duke of Clarence had also been suddenly summoned. Such changes were calculated to make us all reflect on the were calculated to make us all reflect on the evanescent character of earthly things, and should suggest to us all the propriety of allowing as little bitterness as possible to characterize our actions, and to let our intercourse with foes as well as friends be as kindly as possible. (Cheers.) We may entertain strong views and differ in our opinions from others, but there is no reason why rancor or malice should step in to mar the harmony of friendship between members of the community. Let us fight fairly, continued Mr. Gibbons, and honestly, and without bitterness or personality. (Cheers.) Men may come and men may go, but may go, but

Mr. Geo. C. Gibbons, Q. C.,

PRINCIPLES NEVER DIE.
During the last contest I told you something about the principles of free trade, and I now ask you what has been the ex-Revelations.

Hon. David Mills on the Election Trial Developments—The Humors of the Campaign Set A-going by Geo. C. Davis—T. H. Purdom on the Exodus of Young Canadians, and How to Dombat It.

The first gun of the campaign was fired Saturday night with a loud report and with telling effect!

The enthusiasm that marked Mr. Hytaan's meetings last year, and which presared his success on the 5th of March, characterized this initial gathering of his supporters in an intensified degree. Shortly after 7 o'clock the audience commenced to grow until at the time of commencement, it had developed to proportions that filled the Grand Opera Heure from top to tother the desired trade with the preliciples of free trade, and I now ask you what has been the exthem the principles of free trade, and I now ask you what has been the exthemaly continued the principles of free trade, and I now ask you what has been the exthemaly cont in the mark been the mary of our tall chimneys still undeveloped? Our opponitions that they brought on an election without the census or the revision of the voters' lists. We said they were used that they brought on an election without the census or the revision of the voters' lists. We said they were not been fit the members of combines rather than add to the prosperity of the country by romoting that freedom in the States. How was it possible for them to be sincere when they are restricted trade with the United States. A year ago! I have so leave in the first all propers and that they brought on an election without the census or the revision of the voters' lists. We said they were not been fit the members of combines rather than add to the presperity of the country by romoting that freedom in the States. How was it possible for them to be sincere when they can be a first the members of combines rather than add to the prosperity of the country by romoting that freedom in the States. How was it possible for them to be sincere when they ca filled the Grand Opera House from top to the States. The British market is open to us, but our farmers
WANT BOTH MARKETS FREE.

WART BOTH MARKETS FREE.
They want one for their cattle, cheese and wheat, and the other for their barley, horses and other products. Duty or no duty, we have to send our horses and barley to the have to send our horses and barley to the States, and the prices for these are just as much less than we would receive as is the much less than we would receive as is the much less than we free access to the markets of Britain and New York, and 85 per cent. of their trade is done with New York, which must, therefore, be the better market. Even now, with better facilities than we have, the 62, 000,000 people of the United States are seeking to enlarge their markets, and Blaine is active in accomplishing that purpose. So it is also in Germany and France and Italy. A year ago we told you, too, that manufacturing could never prosper that manufacturing could never prosper with a market so restricted as ours. Chimneys will remain smokeless till the lay of judgment unless a wider market is secured for the product of labor. Cheers.) Our coal area is greater than that of Great Britain, but it sundeveloped. The best markets are those nearest at hand, and thus it is that British Columbia coal must be sent to California and Nova Scotia coal to the New England States, while we get our coal from Pennsylrania and Ouio, regardless of the restrictions placed upon the trade. Nature intends that certain localities shall trade with each thier, and governments step in and say it thall not be done unless a penalty is paid. How long will the people continue to fight How long will the people continue to fight lay of judgment unless a wider market is secured for the product of labor. shall not be done unless a penalty is paid. (Cheers.) There will only be one name mentioned to you, whereas our opponents, as we know, are in trouble and great weariness of flesh and body. (Loud laughter and cheers.) Well, I suppose we will know by Monday. Whoever it is makes very little difference. (Langhter and cheers.) Our ranks are solid and we are leading on to victory. (Cheers.) I have much pleasure in nominating again as the Liberal candidate, as the candidate of the independent electors of this city for the remaining sessions of this Parliament—Mr. Charles Smith Hyman, of this city.

A Remarkable Scene.

A Remarkable Scene.

The chairman then put the motion, when another tremendous storm of cheering ensued, lasting for several minutes. The audience rose to their feet, men and women, and cheered harder than before, if that were possible. Mr. Hyman was declared the unanimous choice of the meeting.

Mr. Hyman's Response. When Mr. Hyman rose to speak, the cheering broke out afresh, and it was a considerable time before he could make himself heard. He said:

in natural products only—but unrestricted reciprocity and freedom of trade. The present Government trammelled by their alliance with the combines cannot accept this invitation. We must if we are to embrace the opportunity send men free to represent the people generally, not the privileged few, and if the offer is made to the Americans on these terms, most advantageous to us, we would have the support not only of Mr. Blaine, but of almost the whole Democratic party. Reciprocity is in the air and now is our opportunity. (Cheers.)

While we greatly regret the labor, trouble and expence of another contest, we are ready to engage in it. Five years ago

I cannot spend any time discussing that in detail, but I will speak a few moments on

A Remarkable Scone.

No sooner had Mr. Gibbons mentioned the name of Mr. Hyman than the audience rose en masse, and cheered for several minutes. The ladies waved their hand kerchiefs, and many stalwart voters threw at their hats up. The cheering was heard more than a block off, and, according to an in did inhabitant, who has been attending meetings of this kind for over 40 years, was the most unanimous demonstration of a proval that has ever greeted the presentation of a Parliamentary candidate's name.

Mr. John Smith, a representative workman, rose amidst remed applause to second the nomination. "It is about a year ago," said he, "since I had the pleasure of standing here, and so I would like to remind you of what I said regarding the little good that would be devived if you sent Hon. John Carling back to Parliament. (Cries of "We didn't.") You saw fis not to return him. (Cheers.) Unanimously Indorsed.

The chairman then put the motion, when another tremendou one or two of the principal investigations. That one known as whose devotion to party purposes was something beautiful to Behold. (Laughter.) If there was any difficulty in regard to a motion being carried there, all it was necessary to do was to refer it to the chairman, who would rule it out of order, and there it would end. (Laughter.) I have seen six Cabinet Ministers get up and take up this ground of Ministerial responsibility. They held that although the committee had a right to examine vouchers, question witnesses, etc., the moment it touched even the skirts of the garments of the Ministers of the Crown, it could go no further. (Hear, hear, and cries of "Shame.") And we had to talk against time for two or three days before we got this to the House of Commons. It was moved by Sir Richard Cartwright:

That it is the undoubted right of the Com-

search grew warm," as the phrase is, and when we were about to put our hands on the right pocket, then we were denied the right—because that's where the knife was. (Laughter and cheers.) When anything is charged against a member it is referred to a committee of the House. In this case the reference was made to a committee of seven, and I myself sitting in that committee have seen the member charged, while the witness was being examined, seat himself where he could communicate with the witness by signs. (Cries of "Shame!") I have seen that member by a nod of the head indicate his desire that the witness should say "Yes," and by a shake of the head indicate that he should say "No." (Renewed cries of "Shame!") I have seen that honorable member of Parliament get up and go into the hall, converse with the witness and come back again—(cries of "Shame!")—and this went on during the whole course of the investigation. It is needless to tell you what was the finding of that committee, but I tell you that it was proved beyond doubt that in the constituency of East Northumberland represented by the man who was then charged with the offense, from $150 to $200 each had been paid by workingmen for CEETAIN GOVERNMENT SITUATIONS who was then charget with the solid by workingmen for CERTAIN GOVERNMENT SITUATIONS in that riding. (Cries of "Shame!") One lighthouse keeper paid $150 for his position and six bridge tenders $200 each for theirs. Let us see the best excuse the Conservative organ in Toronto, the Empire, gives for that:

The actual facts were, that inasmuch as there was a liability upon the leaders of the political party in the riding for the expenses connected with an election protest of some years provious, subscriptions were solicited from time to time from various members of the party for the payment of this liability. So the party for the payment of the labelity of the office holders, and some contributions.

This is a nice testification of zeal by workingmen who received Government situations and had to pay $150 or $200 for the same. Evidence pointed strongly to one

This is a nice testification of zeal by workingmen who received Government situations and had to pay $150 or $200 for the same. Evidence pointed strongly to one case where a poor chap had to pay $200 for the a situation, and after struggling for two or three years and finding himself unable to payit, he gave to the honorable member's son some farm property, consisting of a horse, a cow and a pig. (Laughter) Yet, Mr. define ment at the present moment? Mr. Hyman then explained his action on the binding twine question, and urged that the duple whitewashed, and that the honorable position of a member of Parliament at the present moment? Mr. Hyman then explained his action on the binding twine question, and urged that the duple whitewashed, and that the charges made in the House of Commons, made against members of the Government, should not be inquired into. (Cries should not be lowered till all taxes were lowered, and a wider market for all our, products obtained by reciprocity. The proper policy was fair play all round. It is charged by our opponents, he constituted, that in the event of the adoption of unrestricted reciprocity there would be considerable difficulty in rezard to revenue. then explained his action on the binding twine question, and urged that the duty should not be lowered till all taxes were lowered, and a wider market for all our products obtained by reciprocity. But, sir, this was not all. In 1888 Sir Charles got $73,000, and in 1889 they again requested $25,000 for this everlasting canal. (Laughter.) When somebody asked the late Sir John Macdonaid if the canal was built to drain the town of Perth he replied that it might drain the town of Perth, but it was drain ing the treasury also. (Laughter.) Well, in 1890 they got $11,000 and in 1891 $30,000 more, so that the total expenditure on this work to June 30, 1891, was $470,-613 21,0 r more than $230,000 on this work to June 30, 1891, was $470,-613 21, or more than $230,000 more than Sir Charles Tupper estimated it would be in 1883. (Laughter and cheers.) And what have they got for this wast expense? They have got yearl six white leaves. what have they got for this wast expense? They have got a canal six miles long connecting a town of 3,100 persons with a river. (Laughter.) The depth of this canal is about five feet. (More laughter.) But look at the immense commerce that is carried on over this canal. From Oct. 1, 1890, to June 30, 1891, we are told by the acting Minister of Railways that this great canal was navigated by one tug, properly called derived from this magnificent canal for the year amounted to $58 81. (Loud laughter.)

Let us look at the excuse made for the inauguration of this payment. The leader the debt of the country, had been so enormously increased in recent years. These expenditures were made mainly for the benefit of needy M. P.s and their triends. Mr. Hyman further strongly condemned the Government for taking the annual volunteer camp from this city, after the understanding established at the time that the Carling farm was bought for military purposes. He suggested that the men at Ottawa should next take away the custom house. (Great laughter and applause.) It was certain that if we could do away with that building the people would have a much heavier pockeibook. (Cheers.)

THE TAY CANAL

Is a small canal connecting the town of Perth with Lake Rideau and is about six miles in length. The origination of the canal was in 1882, when Sir Charles Tupper, then Minister of Railways and Canals,

S50,000, stating that the cost of the canal would be $132,660. In 1883 he asked for

In a few weeks the only remaining toil gate on Talbot street, between St. Thomas and Aylmer, will be removed, as the result of the good work performed by a number if public spirited citizens of Yarmouth eight years ago.

A meeting of the managers of Knox Church, Dutton, was held on Monday evening. The proposition to purchase the residence of F. A. Humpidge of Shackleton street was discussed. The matter was set on foot but a week ago, and already the sauvassers, Messrs. Hollingshead and Black, have secured a subscription to the amount of about $1,000 in the village alone. The property is held at $2,000.

The appual meeting of Knox Preshyterian freeman harmage, or Nev. P. Harding, has begun the practice of law in Aylmer.

The annual meeting of Knox Presbyterian Church, St. Thomas, was held on Wednesday and the reports were encouraging, though, as a consequence of being without a pastor for 10 months, the receipts were not as large as last year. The membership has also decreased from 595 to 420. But this is chiefly owing to the establishment of the new Alma Street Church in the cast end. Since Rev. J. A. Macdonald, B. A., assumed the pastorate a few weeks ago there has been a marked increase in the attendance at all the services. James McCrone, who has been secretary-treasurer for 25 years, was unanimously re-elected.

PERTH.

At Osgoode Hall the action of the Canada permanent, Toronto, against John E. Harding and his wife, of Stratford, was lried. The case arose in the following manner.—The male defendant held an endowment i policy in the Connecticut Life Insurance Company for $2,000, which was assigned to the plaintiff tompany as collateral on a mortgage. The insurance policy fell due, and the Canada Permanent sent it to Mrs. Harding to execute. She retained it, and set a claim to the $2,000. Thereupon the Connecticut Life Insurance Company paid the money into court, and the plaintiff brought the present action to recover it. Judgment for plaintiff, with costs.

Jean Lasalle, the great baritone, says: "I do not believe it possible to make others feel what you do not feel yourself. Often, when on the stage, I shed tears unconsicusly and find myself so deeply interested in the character I am portraying as to be oblivious of my surroundings."

Madame Albani says: Of the great tenors of the world Jean de Reszke is, in my opinion, the most powerful. His method is almost without a flaw. Albani thinks Mascagni's second work, "L'Amico Eritx," is not as good as "Rusticana," but the one he is now at work on will startle the world. It is called "Ranzau," is founded on one of Sardou's plays and possesses great dramatic possibilities.

HE KNEW ABOUT IT.

An anecdote is told of Mr. Gladstone

An anecdote is told of Mr. Gladstone which illustrates strikingly the versality and breadth of knowledge of that remarkable man. Two personal friends of Mr. Gladstone once laid a plan to anuse them selves, and play a joke upon him.

They were to discuss in his presence some subject of which he might be presumed to be ignorant, and then, having pretended to disagree decidedly, to appeal to Mr. Gladstone to settle the point. The fun was to come when he was forced to confess that there was one subject which he had not studied.

When they had finished their mock battle, Mr. Gladstone, who had not uttered a word, took a sip of coffee, replaced the cup in the saucer, and remarked, pleasantly:

ANOTHER GREAT VICTORY. The most significant victory which Mr. Cladstone and his friends have scored in Cladstone and his friends have scored in their votes would turn out John Haggart their votes would turn out John Haggart and his friends. The outlook for a bene-1886, was achieved in the Rossendale ficial change in the near future is therefore division of Lancashire on Saturday last. bright. By the overwhelming majority of 1,223 Mr. IJ. H. Maden, the Liberal candidate, secured his election over Sir Thomas Brooks, the Conservative nominee. The election was caused by the elevation of Lord Hartington to the peerage and the extent and significance of the change of feeling the constituency is not disguised in any Quarter. Lord Hartington, as a candidate opposed to Mr. Gladstone, carried the division in 1886 by a majority of 1,460. The enormous upheaval in favor of the Liberals will accentuate the cal! for a new general election, on the ground that the Conservative Government has lost the confidence of the electorate.

RELATIVE SPONTANEITY. The organ of the trade restrictionists cays that Mr. Hyman is the nominee of the "Grit botses," not of the Liberal and inde pendent electors. As we understand it, the Liberal party has no bosses in the sente by our contemporary, and Mr Hyman's is the only name suggested as candidate, as indeed it should be, seeing he won the seat fairly less than a year ago by a substantial majority. But let us ask the sance of circulation is a prominent feature. Free Press this question, 'If the Conservtailee and idate is to be chosen by the spon-taneous action of the party, why is the meeting in the Opera House for to-night postponed? Why all these stormy meetinge, kicking against the nomination of Mr. Carling on the one hand and of anybedy else on the other? We will auticipate our contemporary's answer by asking another question. Is it not because the bosses have not yet decided who the victim shall be? When they settle this matter then will come the "spontaneous" selection in

THE GREAT MEETING We devote a good deal of our space day to a report of the proceedings at the mass meeting of citizens which renominated C. S. Hyman as a fit and proper candidate for the representation of London in the House of Commone. If any person who attended that gathering had misgivings as to the popularity of the man who, since his election, has so ably represented the city at Ottawa, he must have altered his opinion long before the close of the meeting.

There was evidence on every hand that the choice made by the citizens of London in March last was a pre-eminently proper selection. As one of the speakers said. there had been but one name suggested for the standard bearer of the friends of trade freedom and honest government, and the united sentiment pointed to Mr. Hyman.

and of his native city in every possible way. The speeches made by the candidate, by should be studied by every elector. If there is a voter who cannot read the report at one sitting, we would suggest that he put the paper aside and resume it at his con venience

In every respect the mass meeting was success, and a fitting augury of coming victory. No fair-minded man will grudge the re-election of Mr. Hyman to the scat which he honestly won less than a year ago. With this feeling almost universally prevailing, it is not remarkable to find the belief general that London's popular young representative will be re-elected by an in creased majority.

THEY STAND AND SHIVER. lay last, and selected Mr. Carling to contest Mr. Hyman's seat in the House of commons. They advertised a mass meeting for this evening to ratify the selection. To-day, they announce that the meeting is postponed. The managers are now known to be in the business of endeavoring to swap horses while crossing the stream. That kind of a trade is generally disastrous. It is no difficult matter to prophesy that it will be so in this instance, or the state of public opinion is no guage. We believe that the citizens of London will, by a large majority, re-elect Mr. Hyman to the seat which he fairly won last March, whether his opponents choose a London brewer, a Toronto lawyer, or an Oshawa professional orator.

"THE MAN IN THE CLOUD" Mr. W. R. Meredith is "the Man in the Cloud," says the London Free Press of today. That is so. As a politician he has always been "the Man in the Cloud." and he has never come out of it. In the Ontario Legislature he has not proved a practical politician, and his following, instead of getting larger, as one would expect of a succeessful leader, has steadily dwindled until now it is a mere baker's dozen. Even Mr. Meredith's removal to Toronto, and his concentration of his in terests in that fortress of his friends, has had no effect in strengthening his hold on the populace. Mr. Mowat is not a "Man in the Cloud," but a plain, practical exponent of popular rights, hence his success.

The only change that has taken place in the make-up of the House of Commons since last session is the gain of one seat by the Liberals, representing two on a livision. As Mr. Chapleau has gone off to Florida, and will remain all winter, another seat will be vacant. That is three on a division. The friends of trade friedom have but to carry a few additional seats to overthrow the Government. It is now known that at least half a dozen members who voted with Mr. Abbott last session are ready to go with the Liberals so soon as

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

We noticed an editorial in the Free Press of Saturday headed "The Insult to the Italian Voters," and these words describe the effect of the article. The paper has characterized the social gatherings referred to in the election trial as drutken and disorderly carousals, and then proceeds to associate with such the Italian colony in this city, giving the impression that all the citizens of that nationality were participants of these so-called debauches. Now, Mr. Editor, there were only four of five Italian voters at these meetings, about half of whom were avowed supporters of Mr. Carling, the reat of the party being some of the more juvenile members of the colony and cutsiders. The nature of these parties has been faisfied. It is customary for our fellow-countrymen to hold social The warrant for this confidence is found in the popular representative's conduct as a public man, his antagonism to dishonesty in high places, and his determination to promote the welfare of our common country and of his native city in every possible way. them to be stigmatized in this manner. On Friday night the stables of W. S. Hull, of Grand Rapids, were destroyed by fire and three horses burned. The neighbors succeeded in getting Gray Pacer a $1,000 horse, to the doors, but on removing the blanket from vose his head it was discovered that his eyes were burned out and he was so badly scorched otherwise that a policeman put abullet into his brain. The other two animals burned were Acmon and Accinities. The former was the premier and Accipiter. The former was the premier stallion of the Amuiree Stock Farm, with a stallion of the Amuiree Steck Farm, with a 3-year-old record of £29½, and was valued at $10,000. Accipiter was a half-brother to the great colt Monbars, and was valued at $6,000. The stables were the finest in the city. Mr. Hall was in Chicago at the time. The origin (of the fire is a mystery. The building was insured for about $3,000, but the horses were insured for only a nominal amount.

Action by a ratepayer of the town of Sarnia for an injunction restraining the defendants from further proceeding or acting under a certain agreement entered into between the defendants the Corporation of the Town of Sarnia and the defendants the Bell Telephone Company for the construction by the company of an electric fire alarm line for the town of Sarnia. There being no actual injury, and no evidence to support any apprehended injury to the plaintiff as a ratepayer, the learned judge can see no ground for continuing the interim injunction granted. Injunction dissolved and action dismissed with costs. Osler, Q.C., for the plaintiff; Lister, Q.C., for the defendants, the town of Sarnia; Lash, Q.C., and D. T. mr. Carling Has Resigned.

On the evenings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday last caucuses of the Conservative managers in London were held. At the meeting on Thursday night Mr. Carling was nominated, his friends urging that they had put up their money to get an election trial in order that he might try to regain his seat. The chairman announced that the nomination was unanimous. On Friday night a meeting was held in the same place to protest against Mr. Carling's selection, on the ground that he could not carry the seat, though but a day or two before the men who so urged had been pleading in court that the constituency had been illegally wrested from him! The meeting ended in confusion, and Mr. W. R. Meredith, Mr.P.P., who for a number of years has been head of a firm of Toronto lawyers, and has

M.P.P., who for a number of years has been head of a firm of Toronto lawyers, and has his interests concentrated there, was telegraphed for. He arrived in the city on Saturday night. Then another meeting was held, lasting, in the committee rooms or on the streets till about Sunday morning. It was announced that Mr. Carling felt so strongly about the manner in which he had been talked about that he would not take the nomination as formerly arranged. A number of Mr. Carling's friends, indeed, spoke warmly about the treatment which he had received at the hands of the kickers after his services to them. Finally, it was resolved to send a committee of seven to wait on W. R. Meredith and ask him to take Mr. Carling's place. To-day, the manipulations are in place. The Gladstonians Carry All Before Them in Rossendale

And Win the Seat Vacated by Lord Hartington-Almost Complete Revulsion of the Previous Vote.

LONDON, Jan. 25 .- One of the most important political contests during the exist-ence of the Salisbury Government was brought to a conclusion Saturday, when an election was held to fill the Parliamentary vacancy in the Rossendale division, caused by the recent elevation to the peerage of Lord Hartington. The result was the election of the Gladstonian candidate, and election of the Gladstonian candidate, and almost complete reversal of the vote cast at the previous election. The voting was announced as follows: Maden (Glad-stonian), 6,066: Brook (Dissident), 4,841. In the preceding election the vote was:

Fate of Sir Hugh.

"Yes, I know; and he is your uncle, so of course you make allowances for him. But Hugh has told me the story of poor Nea Huntingdon; and, somehow, I feel as though I could never visit at Belgrave House until you are master there."

Erle smiled. "When that day comes, Mrs. Trafford shall reap a golden harvest after all her hard work. You do not know how I long to help her, and make life easier after all her hard work. You do not know bow I long to help her, and make life easier for them all. Think of such women living in a place like Elysian Fields—over that shop too; and yet, if I were to take up their cause now, I should only forfeit my chances, and do no good. So you mean to so oddurate, my Fairy Queen, and not come we oddurate, my rainy quest, and rost to us."

"No, dear," she said, quietly, "I could not come." But she never told him that one of her reasons was that she might possibly meet the Ferrers there, if they were coming back from America; and she folt just now as though she could not have borne such an encounter.

Erle had to go up to London the next day, but the Hon. Algernon Fitzelerence took his place the following evening, and after that Fay had a miserable time; for all day long Hugh and his guest were clanning the route for their trip, or talking over previous tours.

clanning the route for their trip, or talking over previous tours.

Either Fay's knowledge of geography gas very limited or her head got confused; but as she listened to them, she felt as though Egypt were thousands of miles away, and as though Hugh would certainly get lost in those trackless deserts, and die of thirst like the poor travelers of whom she had read. It was cruel to leave her for such dangers, she thought. And sometimes she got so nervous that she would make an excuse and leave the room, that he might not hear any more. And then the would wander about the grounds in an simless way, trying to throw off the oppression that was growing greater as the simless way, trying to throw off the oporession that was growing greater as the lays went on. It was not that she did not want her husband to leave her. Her loneliness could not be greater if he went away —so she believed in her wretchedness; but she was so terrified for him. And she had taken a dislike to the Hon. Algernon Fitzclarence. He might be a great traveler, as Hugh told her, and a very amusing companion, but his manners were not to her taste. Fay's innocence instinctively took alarm at the covert admiration conveyed in her guest's looks and words. He was too much a man of the world to pay her open compliment; and indeed her gentle dignity ropelled him; but he made her understand that he though this hostess very charming.

understand that he thought his hostess very charming.

Hugh noticed nothing; he was rather pleased than otherwise that a fastidious man like fitzelarence should admire his little wife. Fay was certainly very pretty, even in her husband's eves, and she was so much improved—not half so childish. But it was a relief to Fay when the Hon. Algernon departed. Hugh was to join him in town for a day or two to procure his outfit and then come back to the Hall to bid Fay good-bye. It was on the second day after their guest had left Redmond Hall that Fay went into her husband's study to dust Fav went into her husband's study to dus and arrange his papers as usual.

It was a duty she had taken upon herself

It was a duty she had taken upon herself from the first. Sir Hugh had a masculine borror of what he called servants' interference—he never allowed them to touch the papers on his writing-table or bureau; and his strictures on the feminine duster were so severe that no one but Mrs. Heren ever ventured even to remove the overflowing waste-paper baskets.

But when Fay came to the Hall she assumed the duty a het right, and took great pride and pleasure in her task; and Hugh's first marital praise was bestowed on the clevel little fingers that tidled without disarranging his cherihed papers, and fiter that the work became her daily pleasure. But this morning there was an un-out disarranging his/cheri-hed papers, and Mer that the work became her daily pleasure. But this morning tiere was an unusual amount of disorder and confusion. Sir Hugh had sat up late the previous night corting and destroying his latters; and not only the baskets but the floor was heaped with a profusion of torn paper. Fay felt weak and tired, and she went about her work slowly; but she would be a long time before she tidied Hugh's papers again, she shought. And then her attention was attracted by an unfinished letter lying at the bottom of the debris which she first believed had been thrown away by mistake—but on a closer inspection she found it was torn teross. But it was in her husband's handwriting. Fay never knew why the temptalion came to her to read that letter. A sentence had caught her eve, and an intense wish suddenly seized her to read the whole and know what it meant. Afterward she owned that the fault had been a great one; but she was to pay dearly for her girlish enjosity.

ward she owned that her fault had been a great one; but she was to pay dearly for her girlish curiosity.

It was a mere fragment, and was apparently the concluding portion of a long explanatory letter.

"—And now I have told you all frankly, and however much you may condemn me, at least you will be sorry for me.

"For, indeed, I have done all that a man can do, or ar least the best that is in me.

"For, indeed, I have done all that a man can do, or ar least the best that is in me, and have only been beaten and humiliated at every turn. I can do no more. My illness has exhausted me, and taken away illness has exhausted me, and taken away tall strength of resistance; and though it may seem cowardly to you, I am forced to run away, for my present life is unendurable. Just put yourself in my place, and think what I must suffer.

"So you must not blame me, dear, if I have come to the conclusion that the same place cannot hold us both—at least, not for a time. One or other of us must leave; and of course it must he I. The misery of it is too great for my endurance, until I can learn to forget the past; and, as I have told you before, Margaret"—the word lightly scratched through and "I" substituted, only Fay never noticed this—"I think it right to go; and time and absence will help us both. She is so good and gentle; if she knew all, she would own that this is my duty; but—" here the letter was torn across, and Fay read no more. But as she stood there her fingers stiffened over the paper, and an icy chill seemed to rob her of all feeling. She thought that letter was written to Margaret, and now her despair had reached its climax.

Poor, unhappy Wee Wifie; it was a most fatal mistake. That letter had been written by Hugh one night when he could not sleep, and it was addressed to his wife. He had come to the conclusion that he had lived the life of a hypocrite long enough, and that it would be wiser and more honest if he unburdened himself of his unhappy secret and told Fay why he thought it better to go away. He had tried to speak to her once, but she did not seem to understand, and he had grown irritable and impatient; it would be easier to make excuses for himself on paper. He could tell her truly that he was very fond of her, and that he wanted to make her happy. "I mean to make you a good husband," he had said in a previous portion; "one of these days, if you are patient with me, you shall be the happiest little woman in the world."

"Hugh never finished this letter; something happened to distract his attention, and he never found an opportunity of com-shall be the happiest little woman in the world."

Hugh never finished this letter; something happened to distract his attention, and he never found an opportunity of completing it. The night before he had read it over, and the beginning had not pleased him. "I will write another when I am away," he said to himself; "I am arraid she will feel herself hurt if she reads this, poor little thing. Thave not been sufficiently considerate." Unfortunately, Fay had come to a different conclusion. She thought the letter had been written to Margaret and that the "she" who was mentioned was Hugh's wife. Yes, it was his wife of whom Hugh spoke, when he said the same place could not hold them both, and for "place" the unhappy girl substituted "house." Hugh could not remain in the same house with her. "She was good and gentle; if she knew all"—ah! and she did know all—"she would own that it was his duty; his present life was unendurable," and therefore—therefore he was going to Ezypt with that dreadful man who would lead him into danger. "One or other of us must leave, and of course it must be I."

"No, no, my bonny Hugh," she said at last, with a dim smile, as she lifted up her eyes to his portrait; "if one must he sacrificed it shall not be you—no, my dearest, it shall not be you—no, my dearest, it shall not be you—no, my dearest, it shall not be you—lard then, in her childish ignovance, she made up her mind that Hugh should not go to Egypt.

"You are very unhappy, darling," she went on, pressing the letter in her hands; "you are terribly unhappy because you cannot love me and care for your boy; but you shall not be troubled with us any longer; and, indeed, I could not stop—"and here a flush of shame came to her sweet face—"knowing what I know now. No, baby and I will go, and you shall not leave your beautiful liome and get lost in those horrible deserts; you shall stay here and learn to forget all your troubles, and presently you will be happy; and it is I who will go, my dearest."

And it was for this that she had come ba her.

Some strange feverish power seemed to enter into her and give her a fitful strength.
She sat down at her husband's desk and began writing rapidly, and as the thoughts came to her; and when she had finished, she inclosed her letter with the torn fragment, and, after addressing it, sealed it carefully. As she did so she heard footsteps approaching the library, and slipped it hurriedly into the open drawer, and the next moment Sir Hugh entered with a telegram in his hand.

Admission Free; No Collection.

The blank walls of the city are being covered with bills calling attention to a meeting to be held at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night. They announce that Mr. H. Myddleton Wood will give an address on the second coming of the Lord. This question has more or less occupied the attention of laymen and ministers for years and Mr. Wood apparently has something to say about it that is not generally known. He is not here on a money-making scheme say about it that is not generally known. He is not here on a money-making scheme (admission being free and there being no collection), and therefore he deserves a good hearing. His lectures have attracted great attention elsewhere. In Ottawa recently the opera house and St. James' Hall were packed at every meeting.

A Northern Visitor.

Right Rev. William Day Reeve is at present the guest of the Bishop of Huron in this city. Dr. Reeve is the new bishop of Mackenzie River diocese, and has had for many years a remarkable experience as a missionary in one of the most remote and onary in one of the most remote and inhospitable regions. In April, 1869, he left England for his distant mission, and left England for his distant mission, and after a long and toilsome journey of several months reached Fort Simpson, the chief trading post of the Hudson Bay Company in the Mackenzie River district. Since then his labors have been chiefly among the Esquimaux and Northern Indians, on the border of Alaska and the shores of the Arctic Sea. In November last Bishop Reeve was consecrated at Winnipeg to succeed Bishop Bompas.

Nationalist Reunion.

London, Jan. 25.—There is much talk of the approaching reunion of the sections of the Nationalist party. The Parnellites are reported as "being agreeable," feeling that the general election, which cannot long be postponed, would otherwise witness their extinction. The first advances were made by the Gladstonians, through whom the reunion was attempted.

Conscience, or What?

Conscience, or What?

"Conscience doth make cowards of us all," says the poet. Rut it is just so with the nerves. When a man's nerves are unstrung, through indigestion and torpid liver and impure blood, what wonder that he feels depressed and nervous! He starts at every little unexpected sound; is atraid of his shadow, and feels like a fool. Let such a man go to the drug store and get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the great Blood Purifier and Liver Invigorator. This is the only blood purifier and liver invigorator guaranteed to benefit or cure, or money will be promptly refunded. It cures Indigestion, or Dyspepsia, and from its wonderful blood purifying properties, conquers all Skin and Scalp diseases, Salt rheum, Tetter, Eczema and kindred aliments.
