Church News

For the Sunday

ALEXANDRA PRESBYTERIAN.

The Rev. D. T. McClintock's theme for the morning service was "Thanksgiving," founded on the text "Because that when they knew God, they glorified Him not as God; neither were they thankful." The pastor referred to some of many causes for thankfulness during the past year. 1st, our country—Thank God for peace; 2nd, our National prosperity; 3rd, our increased prosperity gives greater responsibilities; 4th, increased prosperity is sometimes fraught with danger to the church and home life which must be guarded against.

Another cause for thankfulness is, there are five homes for rescue work in Canada in connection with the Presbyterian church, and eighty per cent of persons leaving these homes have made good. Another reason for thanks is the broadening spirit of denominations towards church union. The pastor emphasized that increased prosperity gives greater opportunity and requires a deeper consecration for service. The solo in the anthem was sung by Miss Agnes Heath. "Correct me O Lord" was sympathetically sung by Miss Della White. The congregation joined heartily in the singing of a Thanksgiving hymn with refrain "All good gifts around us are sent from the heaven above, then thank the Lord O, thank the Lord for all His love.

The Rev. McClintock's evening subject was based on the answer of Simon Peter to Jesus: "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." Peter felt the need of some one to whom he could go.

The music was especially good, which included a solo by Mr. W. T. Cullen, entitled "Heaven is My Home." The solo "Calvary" was sung by Mr. Walter Carpenter. In the anthem "O Happy Band of pilgrims" the solo was taken by Mrs. Barton.

ST. BASIL'S.

Sunday evening saw the successful closing of St. Basil's mission at St. Basil's church.

It lasted a week and was preached by Rev. Father Barry, Redemptorist, from Toronto, and Rev. Father Cox, Jesuit from Guelph and formerly of Winnipeg.

The sermons preached every evening were on the great subjects of man's eternal salvation, and all the faithful were exhorted to receive the sacraments and gain the jubilee indulgences, which like all other indulgences cannot be gained until the faithful seek forgiveness of their sins.

It was encouraging to those in charge to see the church filled every evening and several hundred men and women coming out to mass at 5.30 o'clock in the morning before going to work.

Last Sunday evening Dean Brady carried the Blessed Sacrament in procession around the church. Four men carrying a rich gold canopy, accompanied the celebrant. In the procession were several hundred boys and girls, the girls dressed in white with wreaths of flowers on their heads, while the boys wore white ribbons on their arms. They and the choir sang hymns.

Rev. Father Cox closed the jubilee mission by imparting the Pope's benediction. Rev. Father Cox looked after the altar boys.

This jubilee has been granted by the Pope to the whole Christian world to commemorate the sixteenth century of Christian emancipation. Constantine the great Roman Emperor or saw a mysterious cross in the sky over Maximianus. The victory over Maxentius. Christianity and the gave freedom to Christianity and became a Christian himself, A.D. 312.

Fishing Industry is of Great Value to the Province, Bringing in, as it Does, a Goodly Revenue.

New Brunswick, in common with the other Maritime Provinces of Eastern Canada, shares the distinction of being in close proximity to what are admitted the most prolific fishing grounds in the world. Its geographical position and the configuration of its seaboard, make it, in some respects, the most favorably situated of any of the Atlantic provinces.

On the one hand the shores of the Counties of Westmorland, Kent, Northumberland, Gloucester and Resignouerie are washed by that most excellent of all fishing waters—the Gulf of St. Lawrence, while on

In such huge masses do the fish appear that the fishermen who prosecute their calling amongst those islands depend largely upon it for their livelihood.

The fish are captured in what is known as weirs, which consist of a wall or leader of twigs or brush running out from the shore and terminating seawards in a pocket, or trap into which they are guided by the wall in their movements along the shore.

The catches are sold fresh at the weirs at from one to two dollars per barrel, or five to ten dollars per bushel. The canners of Eastport and Lunenburg are the chief buyers of the fresh product, but six canneries in New Brunswick, including one of very large capacity at Chatham, annually handle an increasing quantity of the sardine catch. In an average year the pack of Canadian canneries amounts to almost 100,000 cases. The weirs take many a herring of a large size as well as most of the sardines smoked and exported to the West Indies, while some are cured in pickle for consumption in the home markets.

Cod, hake, pollock and lobsters are a great abundance in the Bay of Fundy. The three first named are mostly dried and sent to the West Indies and South America. Haddock in a fresh state, also as finnan haddies, are sent to all the inland towns of Canada. Owing to easy shipping facilities the lobster catch of the Bay of Fundy counties is marketed in a fresh state chiefly in the United States.

While all the counties of the North Shore produce large quantities of cod and herring, the County of Gloucester, on account of its nearness to the fertile cod and herring banks of the sheltered Bay Chaleur, produces the greatest quantities of such fish.

Find Market in Southern Europe. The cod are all dried and, owing to their excellent quality, are highly prized in the markets of southern Europe. Herring are taken in enormous quantities in the spring of the year, but being of poor quality are largely used for lobster bait. A considerable quantity is smoked for export to the West Indies. Herring that are taken in the fall, though not so numerous, are of very fine quality and are cured in pickle for consumption in Canada. This fishery has possibilities of being greatly developed.

Lobsters are abundant on all parts of the North Shore.

Inspector of Indian Agencies Finds Magnificent Crops Raised 800 Miles North of Edmonton.

Henry A. Conroy, inspector of Indian Agencies, who recently returned to Ottawa from an official visit to the agencies of the north, brings back with him much information of interest regarding the Indians and the possibilities in the way of development presented by the enormous territory over which he has supervision.

This region, which extends more than 800 miles north of Edmonton, is inhabited by about 11,000 Indians, 8,000 of whom are "treaty men." In the course of a yearly visit to No. 8 agency, Mr. Conroy distributes among the Indians about $35,000 as well as ammunition, provisions, etc.

Crops in the Arctic Circle. His route runs from Edmonton to Fort McMurray and Chipewyan and down Slave Lake to Fort Smith and thence to Fort McPherson. In the district of Fort Resolution, eight hundred miles north of Edmonton, there is an abundance of wooded country and magnificent crops have been raised.

Major Hamilton, when seen, said that recently property had been acquired on the other side of the street adjoining the fire hall and including the large Burrows' dwelling. This structure will be shifted next to the hall and turned into two stories with dwelling apartments above.

On the remaining portion, a commodious structure will be erected by the company of 33-1/2 feet frontage. It will be of three stories with a basement, and will have in all an area of 14,000 square feet of space. The front will be of handsome design.

The lease of the present premises expires on August 1st next and the enlarged new premises will be ready long before that.

NO DRINKING MAN NEED DESPAIR

The Neal Cure—Greatest of All Modern Discoveries—Offers a Means of Escape from the Curse of Drink. A cure of the Drink Habit is Guaranteed in Three Days no Matter Whether the Patient is a Hard and Constant Drinker, Social Tippler or Goes on Occasional Sprees.

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a splendid position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers, who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the wash tub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do today?

But this home which was made a hell on earth through strong drink—as every drunkard's is—may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as a result of the Neal Treatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man, physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler, or goes on occasional sprees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down, down, down through the curse of drink? Then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES for INEBRIATES or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man, physically and mentally, in THREE DAYS' treatment.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him, to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit; it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

The Cash Intrigue

By George Randolph Chester (Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

Rensselaer turned to him quickly. "Of course I'm not going to ask you what your plans are nor how you reached your present point," he observed. "but you're doing a stunning thing if it's your aim to gain profitable conspicuousness. There hasn't been so much real money in the financial district in years. You certainly must have had in a remarkable few years. Where did you go from Montana?"

"Oh, down to Tennessee in the real estate business," said Phillip guardedly. "I managed to get to pretty good on them. I did a stroke or two down there that brought me some success and some influential friends. Now I'm going to make a big play. You know a certain Wall street crowd, still in business, broke my father, and he fled from it."

"I remember your telling me something about that. But be careful you don't overplay your game," warned Rensselaer, whereat Kelvin just smiled, though grimly enough. "He had reached the bottom of the hotel elevator shaft now, and they turned into the subway corridor, a convenience which impressed Kelvin very much.

"It's a bad development," stated Rensselaer, shaking his head. "There is a growing tendency toward these direct entrances both in business and in tenement districts, and it is bound to produce a race of tollers who will see no sunlight whatever. They will practically be human moles, like that grand boy yonder—under-sized and under-developed, physically, mentally and morally, white and soft and flabby, like putty. They will not be men; they will be worms."

"Sometimes the worm may turn," Rensselaer asserted, "and if it does stretch out! When a country loses its middle class it is in a bad way. You can crush out of mankind everything, even hope, with one exceptional capacity to kill."

Rensselaer laughed. "Can you imagine anything more amusing than a fight with about fifty of those chaps?" "I don't see the fun in it," objected Phillip. "I saw a crowd of newboys in Chicago attack a very brawny man once, and they nearly killed him."

"I've known cowards to fight over a milder discussion than this," laughed Rensselaer. "I guess we'd better drop it. Do you remember that famous fight between Mutton Harris and Freckles Lane over the proper way to sop a pancake?"

HELPLESS CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

Toronto Lady Took "Fruit-a-lives" And Cured Herself.

4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO, Dec. 15th, 1909 "I was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism for nearly a year. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could not move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians without benefit. I saw "Fruit-a-lives" advertised and decided to try them. After taking one box, I was much better. When I had taken three boxes, I could use my arm and the pain was almost gone. After taking five boxes, I was entirely well again. The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-lives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me. "Fruit-a-lives" cured me." Mrs. LIZZIE BAXTER, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

"I'm mighty glad to see you," she said, shaking hands with him, and her tired eyes grew a trifle brighter. "My, how solid looking you've grown! Seems to me you look as if you was hunting for somebody to confound you. You didn't use to look that way when you boarded with us—did he, Elsie?"

Kevin turned to Elsie, and in his gaze Rensselaer thought that he read friendly admiration and nothing more. His look had not that rapt eagerness of her gaze and never would have for any woman, Rensselaer found himself deciding. He decided wrongly, Kelvin had found himself strongly drawn to Elsie, but he sternly suppressed that tendency as quickly as he recognized it in himself.

"I don't know," replied Elsie to her mother's question. "There seems to be some slight change, but to me he is just the same old Phillip, whom I'm glad to see again and hope to see often."

"I suppose you're married by this time," suggested Mrs. White. "I have never stayed in one place long enough to get married, except in Tennessee, and there I was too busy," laughed Phillip. "Elsie has never forgot you," Mrs. White next observed. "She thinks about you all the time, and she's been talking about you ever since we moved away."

The connection of Mrs. White's remark was so obviously palpable that Rensselaer could not help letting his eyes twinkle, and Elsie, catching his glance of amusement, laughed outright, whereupon the two callers joined her. Very much to Mrs. White's surprise.

"You was a mighty busy young man even in that six months before we moved away," rattled on Mrs. White. "We was all sorry we had to go and leave you behind, and it nigh broke Elsie's heart. But she's kep' track of you all right. She made us take a paper from back home on purpose. First we saw that you struck oil on that cheap little two acres of ground you scraped together and bought, then you bought some coal land and built a millinery and a railroad. You don't know what all you done, but Elsie can tell you every bit of it, from A to Z. She's—" "Mother, did you call father?" interrupted Elsie demurely.

condition of the laboring classes was worse than today nor where the power of money was so unlimited. Look at Henry Breed! That one man alone owns an enormous share of all the property in this country, and the United States government is not strong enough to collect from him thirty $23,000,000 fine. It has been held up in the courts for fifteen years. Some day this country will start aflame and will burn and destroy itself, to the horror of the world."

Dinner time came, and still Mrs. White raved on. Kelvin, entering here and there traces of a rather closed pinch in money matters, did not waste time to stay to dinner, but he saw that he would hurt them if he refused. Before dinner he was up to see the bedridden Ed, a youth of about seventeen, and he came down from that interview rather sober.

At the table, fortunately for the visitors, White had another topic of conversation, his gardening; but some chance remark led him back to his favorite topic—the crimes of the plutocrats against the proletariat—and he began to accuse Phillip, as a wealthy man, for it was in vain for Phillip to aver that he had not reached the plutocratic stage by any means, though he was perfectly willing to do so.

Phillip found opportunity before he got far to venture that "Things are not going right in a business way," he ventured.

"No," she replied. "Phillip, I knew that you couldn't help but see it. Father seems entirely to have lost his mind. Ed is in a terrible mood, and will be. I have never been able to do anything, but I must go to work. I must; there is no way out of it. Tell me what I should do."

"It's a hard problem, Elsie, to find niches in this busy world for people without any special training," he told her. "Stenographers earn good pay, if they are competent and intelligent, but it takes half a year to learn, and even then the advancement in wages is very slow."

"I know," she replied. "I shall apply for a position as a lady's maid somewhere. I'd be green even at that, but I am intelligent enough to learn." Phillip shrugged his shoulders. "I'm afraid I wouldn't like it very well."

The Hudson Bay route for the shipment of grain and produce from the Canadian west as well as from the north-western United States to European markets will effect a saving of some 700 or 800 miles, as compared with any other route.

Manitoba Will Benefit. The completion of the Hudson Bay Railway, now building, will be followed by the installation of a fast ocean freight service from Hudson Bay ports to European and other foreign ports.

In other words, an enormous volume of worldwide commerce will be developed from Manitoba shipping points. It is also estimated that through the Hudson Bay route, even from the first year of its operation, a saving of at least $2,000,000 will be effected yearly. This estimate being based on an average export over this route of but 30,000,000 bushels.

From all indications the year 1913 should go on the records as marking an era of tremendous activity in railway building in Canada. Two great transcontinental trunk lines are now under construction (the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern), and promise to be completed from coast to coast within two years' time.

In addition the Great Northern Railway is spending something like two million dollars in completing its Vancouver terminals, with the expectation of further developing the rich tributary territory, which serves. Tremendous progress in double-tracking especially in British Columbia, may be looked for in 1913 in the case of these railways.

The Canadian Northern, meanwhile, is prepared to continue the phenomenal building record that has been making during the past two years on its line from Quebec to the Pacific. By the spring of 1914 it is expected that this road will be running trains from Quebec to the Pacific slopes, and linking up of Port Mann and Vancouver. A branch line of this railway will dot the seemingly inexhaustible deposits of the Brazen coal fields, in Alberta; while other branch lines in Saskatchewan and Manitoba will put dozens of new towns on the map and open up hundreds of them.

NEWEST CHAMPION GOLFER IN THE MAKING

(Copyright, 1913, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

THE world of golf has a new conqueror, a youth of twenty years, Francis Ouimet. One might say almost that hours ago he was known to none outside of his personal acquaintances and those who followed his work in the New England golf events. And now the question on thousands of lips is, "Who is Ouimet? Why was he never heard of before? Where did he learn to play golf? It may be said of the youthful celebrity that he walked obscure to retire at night famous."

Although Mr. Ouimet is only twenty years old, his interest in golf dates back to his early childhood. Mr. Ouimet's parents were French Canadians who moved from Montreal to Brookline, Mass., some years ago. The name was originally pronounced "Wem-may," but they have accepted the public's guess at it, and now the name is pronounced like "Wem-mi." Francis was born in Brookline, where he attended school when he was not "playing hockey" in order to act as caddy on the Country Club golf links. Even then he began to play, and the knowledge of the course which he gained from caddying and playing stood him in good stead in the big event which he won.

My earliest recollection of golf as a game," Mr. Ouimet himself says, "is when I saw my older brothers, Wilfred and Dick, playing. It looked good to me then—I guess I was about six years old—and it has looked good to me ever since. Now, if you must write something about me, please get my eye right. I was born in Brookline on May 8, 1893, and am therefore a little over twenty years old." The champion's father is ground superintendent for Mr. Alfred Douglas, of New York, who has a country place near the Country Club, and it was owing to this that young Ouimet spent his early years so near the links on which he attained his remarkable success. When he was nine years old he spent every spare hour from school and study on the links as a caddy.

Then it came to a toss up between school and caddying. If the prospective employer was a "real golfer" the youthful Ouimet stuck to golf. For four years he acted regularly as a caddy at the Country Club, often in the service of "Matt" or Alex Campbell (the "Nipper"), and it was from them, so the champion says, he learned many of the points which helped him to defeat Messrs. Vardon and Ray.

It was in 1908 that Ouimet played in his first intercollegiate golf match, representing the Brookline High School. It was his first match of importance, and though he qualified, he was defeated in a second round by the ultimate winner of the tournament. He wasn't a bit discouraged, but went back at the game with more enthusiasm and determination than ever, and the following year won the schoolboys' tournament at the Commonwealth Club.

The last three years he has been working as a salesman in the golfing department of Wright & Dison's sporting goods store in Boston. His employers, recognizing his ability, have given him plenty of leisure time in which to play golf, and they seem as pleased over his success as the young man himself. As a result of his success over Vardon and Ray they gave him a substantial increase in pay and an extra vacation.

The story of how Mr. Ouimet fought successfully to cut down the lead which had over him has been told and retold. It has now become a matter of record. The question is being asked, "Who is this Ouimet?" So little has he appreciated as a golfer before this year that the National Handicap Committee were with difficulty persuaded that he should be as low as four on the national handicap list, although the Brookline Country Club folks, who knew his play, insisted that he was in a class by himself and ought to be listed at two.

There were at least two optimistic members of the Ouimet household the night before the match in which Francis tied with Vardon and Ray. His mother and sister were sure that he would win, bound that he must, and it was their stolid, unshaken confidence in him which heartened the "youngster" for the crucial test.

"You must win—you've got to do it," said his mother, "and I know you can, my boy." He did.

The Ouimet house stands very close to the seventeenth green, the green which has come to be known as Ouimet's "lucky seventeenth." In the match of September 19 Ouimet did the seventeenth hole in 3. It was this which enabled him to tie his two chief competitors. His mother was standing in her garden, looking over the fence at him as he reached his green. The ball had scarcely clicked into the hole when a friend called out to Mrs. Ouimet:—

"Francis did it in 3!"

The mother considered the thing done with that, and later developments showed her faith well founded.

When the tie was played off on September 20 Ouimet again took a brace as he neared his home. Once more his mother was watching him over the fence and once more he pulled himself together, played his best golf of the day and holed out in 3. Vardon got in a bunker, and the seventeenth hole again proved lucky for Ouimet, enabling him to win the championship.

In the match against Jerome Travers on September 26, Ouimet again won the seventeenth hole, which enabled him to go on and win out at the twentieth.

"Eddie" Lowry, one of the smallest caddies on the Country Club links, carried his clubs for Ouimet during the matches, and according to the champion himself, was instrumental in bringing about the victory. "Eddie" is a mighty bright boy and he knows the Country Club links perhaps as well as any one, and Ouimet says that many a time the little fellow offered him advice which he took to good advantage.

Francis Ouimet said after the championship match, "The very first time I realized that this affair had an international significance, the first moment I woke up to the fact that I was going out on those links as an American, to play an American against Englishmen, was when 'Eddie' reminded me of it."

"As we walked from the club house I noticed in his buff tunic a little bit of red, white and blue. I looked at it for a moment and 'Eddie' noticed me. He glanced down at it himself."

"Now, Francis," he said, "we've got to win this. We've got to win it for the Americans."

Such a surprise was the result of the match of September 19, a triple tie between Messrs. Vardon, Ray and Ouimet, and the final result of the following day, when Ouimet won the title, that men and women went literally wild with excitement. Hats were thrown into the air and crushed without regret. One excited man attempted to thrust a roll of bills into Mr. Ouimet's pockets. Men rushed onto the green and carried off the champion on their shoulders. One woman shrieked and glorification followed his triumph, there seems to be one young man who kept his head, who has not made of Francis Ouimet an idol—and that is a more modest title than he deserves. For a more modest champion never wore the laurel.

Now what are the characteristics of young Ouimet's golf? On what golfing point has this young Caesar set that he hath grown so great? What does he look like? How does he handle his clubs?

In the first place, he had the inestimable advantage of learning the game in extreme youth, so that his swing is not, so to speak, an intellectual product. He does not have to turn a lot of things to do or not to do. He no more thinks about that swing than you think about swinging one leg further than another when you want to turn a corner. It is in all parts guided by unconscious cerebration.

He has a very full back swing with wooden clubs, something like J. J. McDermott's, but the fineness thereof is not so much with the arms as it is in the body turn and footwork, the hands going not extremely high when at the top of the swing.

This gives him the power of the full low swing without the factor of inaccuracy due to too full a swing with the arms. It is this that is the mark of many of the greatest golfers, notably of Robert Maxwell, the great Scottish amateur, twice winner of the British championship. He is remarkably true to the line, usually without "slice" or "hook."

In his iron shots he is shorter in swing, but would be called a "full swinger" at that. He stands square to the ball and takes turf liberally, like Jerome Travers and McDermott.

Off the tee Vardon and Ray were not beating him much, and often he had the fringe ball. He consistently gets more than 200 yards under wet conditions, and on ordinary ground, with no wind, 200 or more yards.

But it is his excellence in the game within a range of fifty yards that is peculiarly deadly, quite like Jerome Travers, in that respect. Then, too, again like Travers, he is a fine putter.

But here there is a difference of method that will be of great help to him in the British championship next year. He does not use the Schenectady putter, which is barred abroad, but uses a goose-necked steel putter, narrow and long and rounded in the back with a bit of loft. His stroke, too, is different from Travers's, his forehead and arm being uncommonly full. It is more sweep and less tap to the put than with Travers. On the forward stroke his left elbow stays near his body while the

Mrs. Bullock Workman's Party Ascending the Sher-fi Gang Glacier.

Mrs. Fanny Bullock Workman Has Made a World's Record and Has Narrow Escape from Avalanche.

MRS. FANNY BULLOCK WORKMAN, mountain climber, recently returned to the lower plane of existence after heading an expedition up the Himalaya Mountains. The party ascended the Sher-fi Gang Glacier. They had many interesting experiences, none of which, according to the London Graphic, they were engaged in an avalanche cloud that fell on a glacier near the exploring party.

Mrs. Workman was born in Massachusetts and is the daughter of Mrs. Under Hamilton Bullock, formerly a professor at the State. She was educated in New York city, Germany and France, and began her mountain climbing career in 1899. She made record first ascents for women. Her first climb was Mount Bullock, 19,170 feet. Her next was Mount Ham, 20,700 feet, and Mount Koser Gungu, 21,000 feet. In 1902 she made the first exploration of the

REGARDING SEX EDUCATION IN SCHOOLS.

TO what extent can sex instruction be given in the public schools? Wide differences of opinion still exist among school men on the subject, judging from reports received at the United States Bureau of Education.

There is widespread recognition of what Professor Foster, president of Reed College, calls "the social emergency," and general agreement as to the need of action against the social evil, but when it comes to the question of what part the public school should play the ideas range from a detailed plan of sex instruction in the elementary schools to a determined opposition to any form of sex education whatsoever.

Professor Thomas M. Ballet, of New York University, outlines several points of attack in sex education. He believes sex instruction can now be given to the following groups: (1) to parents, by means of lectures; (2) to enlisted men in the army and navy; (3) to college students, both men and women; (4) to young people in Y. M. C. A.s and similar associations.

Ballet considers sex instruction in college students particularly valuable, because it will enable them to impart sex knowledge in turn to people in elementary and secondary schools, as well as the public, in preparation for this step.

Recently medical men have joined hands with school men in the sex hygiene movement. Dr. Hugh Cabot, a distinguished physician of Boston, is one of the leaders in the demand for sex instruction in the schools. He declares that the policy of silence and punishment as practiced in the past has failed. He suggests education, rather than punishment, as a remedy for social evils. He says:—

"Sooner or later we shall come to realize that the teaching of the comprehension of the sex instinct is the function of the public school, though we are far from such a realization to-day."

Other members of the American Federation of Sex Hygiene, including Professor Elliot, formerly president of Harvard, who is the head of the organization, hold equally positive views of the need for sex instruction.

On the other hand, there are many, both among educators and physicians, who see danger in sex instruction in the schools. Dr. Tierney, president of Woodstock College, Maryland, expresses the fear that in the minds of many students when they see "sex instruction" in apt to put forward by some years the time of student temptation and safety lies in diverting the attention from sex details.

Officials of the Department of Education believe that the sex hygiene movement is about to assume great importance in many school systems. Teachers in the larger cities report considerable success in incorporating sex instruction into their ordinary work in biology.

State Superintendent Hyatt, of California, has issued a leaflet on sex instruction that has been considered worthy of distribution by the American Federation of Sex Hygiene, carrying out its idea of constructive work against social evils. It has drawn up what is probably the most careful outline yet devised for sex education at every stage of life, both in school and at home.

Georgia Mothers Win Custody of Minor Children.

A BILL giving the mothers in Georgia an equal standing in court with fathers in the awarding of the custody of minor children has been signed by Governor Slaton and is now a statute law of the State, largely owing to the zeal of Mrs. George Brown, wife of Dr. George Brown, of Atlanta, who was a member of the General Assembly for four years. Although the bill was introduced late in the session and its chance of passage appeared very doubtful, Mrs. Brown went to work animatedly, and through her personal acquaintance with the members of the House and Senate, coupled with her very logical arguments in its behalf, it made record time in passing both houses.

The bill went through the Senate on the last day of the session. On the following morning Mrs. Brown visited the Capitol and prevailed upon the presiding officers and secretaries of the House and Senate to sign the measure ahead of all others. She then took it to the Governor herself and stood beside his desk while he affixed his signature to the measure.

In recognition of the fact that this legislation was largely due to her untiring efforts Governor Slaton presented Mrs. Brown with the pen with which he signed the measure.

Through her connection with this measure Mrs. Brown became an "insidious lobbyist." She haunted the corridors of the House and Senate, never overlooking an occasion to put in a word for the bill until she saw it receive overwhelming majorities in both houses.

The bill is designed to prevent a recurrence of the recent incident of the Zachar children in Augusta and South Carolina, when a babe in arms was taken from its weeping mother's breast and awarded to its father because under the Georgia law, which did not recognize the rights of mothers, the presiding judge was allowed any discretion in the matter. He stated from the bench that he wanted to give the child to its mother, but that the law prevented him.

THE SORT OF GIRL A MAN ADMIRES.

DEAR Godmother—I know you always help girls who are confronted with problems too difficult for them to solve themselves. My case is typical of that of hundred of other girls.

I am twenty-three, fairly good looking, domesticated, moderately fond of outdoor sports, healthy and, I hope, intelligent. My friends tell me I am unselfish and good tempered. I adore children and my ideal in life would be to have a good husband and a happy little family about me.

I have plenty of common sense and certainly never expect to find perfection in men. Yet, although I make friends with the men I meet, none of them ever fall passionately in love with me or seem to want to marry me.

Now I have a girl called Celia who absolutely refuses to do any kind of little odds and ends in the house, on the plea that it would spoil her hands, and who devotes most of her time to dress and appearance. She is erratic in temper, very charming sometimes, but quite unreliable. Her features and complexion are not so good as mine, and her only form of exercise seems to consist in looking in shops and lying in a hammock in her garden.

Yet all the men I know fall madly in love with Celia. They say she is "fascinating" and "attractive" and "adorable," and every other adjective that a girl likes to have applied to her. Many people declare she is heartless and selfish. And yet, despite all these criticisms, the men prefer to the domesticated girl.

Can you explain this to me? It seems to me that the girl who wants to get married will never court or marry a man as she will be left, as I am, "on the shelf."

Dear Godmother—Many girls have asked me the same question as yours. At first sight it seems incredible that any man should prefer a capricious, wayward and selfish girl like Celia to one who, like yourself, is so fitted to be the mistress of a home.

But you must remember that all men before they are married, are not always first attracted by sterling qualities. They like to be amused and entertained. Celia is very capricious and waywardness, have the charm of variety and novelty. Very few men are so conventional as you truly read a woman's character. What you may see as selfishness and capriciousness in Celia, a man only sees coquetry and Celia, on the other hand, underneath her demure and reserved exterior, she is never dull, and knows that vivacity and a certain sprightfulness of manner always appeal strongly to nine out of ten men.

No man ever sees her untidy or badly dressed, overheated by tennis, or her complexion weathered by the sun. Celia's one idea is to charm and entertain her swains, and evidently she meets with plenty of success.

Now, if I may be frank with you, the domesticated girl often makes the mistake of being a little dull and commonplace. Let her keep all her virtues and her talents, but she must not make these her only charms.

Never allow a man to make sure of you. Do not let him see that you are ready to fall in love with him at the first opportunity he gives you. There is no harm in a little judicious flirting. Men want something more than practical gifts in a woman.

Unhappily, the domesticated girl thinks that if she understands how to make a house and servants, every man should be ready to fall down and adore her.

It is true that after marriage the domesticated girl is likely to keep her husband's love by her talents for outfitting domestic machinery. But the sweetheart is first attracted by outward graces and a charm of manner that is not easy to describe.

My advice to you is to cultivate lightness and gaiety, and, perhaps, the more frivolous side of your nature. A pretty smile and a winning manner are more attractive in a woman than the knowledge of every cockney lark in creation.

In the meantime, I have an inkling that Mr. Riant will soon make his appearance, and there is no fear that you will ever be really left "on the shelf."

White Pearl Divers.

CAPTAIN TALBOYS, who has had wide experience of diving on the Australian coast, said, in an interview recently, that the white diver was an immensely big man, and always hoped that the white man would be a successful diver, but after a very lengthy experience the idea had been abandoned.

At the return of a year's diving, the best returns of any of the white divers did not exceed a ton, whilst the average yield of an Asiatic's work was between four and five tons. The Asiatic worked for from 25 to 35 per month, plus a commission of 5 per cent on the value of the pearl. The white man received 70 per month, with a similar commission, in addition to which the cost of the diver's gear was shared equally. The Asiatic's cost that expended on the Asiatic.

The respondent continues: Grand Von Tirpitz, Naval Secretary, spoke to me very in the naval situation. He did wish to give any false impression to the British government, he said, that the British people government should know that "there is nothing," he says, "to be feared."

He does not question wisdom or necessity of a British, may do. As for the Navy law will be carried its conclusion without hesitation. The Admiral stated that the has been any acceleration of the German fleet, but that many ships were laid down a Far up in the highest of the galleries, where the seats sold for 25 cents, there were few vacant spots to be seen. In the dollar seats tier below only a fraction of chairs were taken. The $1.50 back of the boxes held only a small contingent, and of the boxes around the area only a few were occupied.

The main floor of the Garden been solidly paved with chairs close rows, selling at $2.50 and there were perhaps three times many empty chairs as there were cupied seats. Instead of the expected crowd of 12,000, there were not more than 3,000 persons in the great hall.

THANKSGIVING

OLD and NEW

By Donald G. French.

THANKSGIVING Day as celebrated throughout Canada partakes largely of the nature of a harvest-home festival, and it is, no doubt, to the influence of that time-honored institution in the Old Land that we may attribute the establishment here of this annual national observance. Historically, however, we may trace it back to the Pilgrim Fathers who settled in the New England States in 1620, and many of whose descendants came later to Canada after the Revolutionary war and were known as the United Empire Loyalists.

Turkeys and Thanksgiving are always closely associated but the reason is not generally known or thought of. For the explanation we must go back to the founding of the day in America. It was after the first gathering of the harvest by the Pilgrim Fathers in their home in the New World. And it should be noted that the harvest had not been a particularly abundant one, and, further, that the day was set apart to consider not only the immediate mercies as represented by the harvest, but the blessings of providence extended to them throughout the year. Four men sent out by Governor Bradford to shoot wild fowl, that the colony might, in the words of the governor "after a more special manner rejoice together". And because the wild turkey, no doubt, garnished the feast at the first Thanksgiving dinner, his domesticated relative now holds the place of honor on many Thanksgiving tables.

FOR many years the autumnal "feast of ingathering" was merely an occasional festival, as unexpected prosperity or unhoped for aid in adversity moved the Pilgrim Fathers to a special act of praise. During the Revolutionary war the feast became a national one in the States and was observed annually, but after 1784 when a general thanksgiving for peace was held, it lost its national character, and except on a few specially proclaimed occasions was observed only in the New England States until 1863. In 1863 and 1864, during the Civil War, President Lincoln issued proclamations recommending annual thanksgiving, and since that time a day of thanksgiving has been regularly proclaimed every year throughout the United States.

FOLLOWING the custom of their New England relatives the people of Halifax in 1763 proclaimed a day of Thanksgiving for the conclusion of the peace that gave Canada to Great Britain. Throughout the colonies of British North America days of Thanksgiving were frequently proclaimed, but these were on special occasions and not as an annual observance. The first Thanksgiving Day in Lower Canada was proclaimed on the 22nd of December, 1798, and observed on the 10th of January, 1799. "In signal victory over our enemy and for the manifold and inestimable blessings which our Kingdoms and Provinces have received and daily continue to receive." The first proclamation of a day of Thanksgiving in Upper Canada appears to be dated the 17th of May, 1816, and was observed on the 18th of June, 1816, for the end of the war between Great Britain and France. After Confederation the first proclamation was issued on the 1st of March, 1872, for the restoration of the health of the Prince of Wales. The first of the annual Thanksgiving Days, which are now observed, was proclaimed on the 9th of October, 1879, and observed on the 6th of November, 1879. Since that time proclamations have been issued every year. For some time the date was made to correspond with that observed in the United States, but it was generally felt that this was too late in the year to serve the purpose of a harvest festival and also that it fell too near the celebration of Christmas. It was, therefore, put back to October, being observed usually on a Thursday. Representations made by commercial travelers resulted in the government's selection of Monday to enable the commercial men to spend the holiday at home as well as to allow many city folk to eat Thanksgiving turkey at the old homestead. The turkeys are now "winned to be ready for the third Monday in October."

ALONG the Pilgrim Fathers, Thanksgiving Day was primarily a religious function. It was a feast day, not for the sake of feasting, but for the purpose of "giving thanks." Religious exercises were the important feature of the day. At the observance, continued, other characteristics were added so that the day, as now observed in Canada, has a three-fold aspect. The festival side, which is not so pronounced here as across the line, combines with it naturally the sportive instinct, which evinces itself in games and public entertainments. Our churches, a least some of them, provide for the proper observance of the day with religious exercises for those who desire to attend.

THE annual Thanksgiving shooting match which was the "regular thing" in almost every Canadian community a couple of decades ago may be the natural consequence of Governor Bradford's "sending four men out to shoot fowl", or it may have been simply the result of the desire and the opportunity. Small game was then still fairly plentiful in most portions of the country and one form taken by the shooting match was choosing of sides under captains, points being given for the different kinds of game. The shooting period began a week or ten days before Thanksgiving and wound up by a grand tally of results on Thanksgiving evening when the side making the least number of points put up the expense of an oyster supper or some similar entertainment, which was followed by dancing or games.

Where small game was not plentiful enough for this kind of a match, or the boys were not prepared to give more than one day to "leisure, target-shooting, took the place of hunting game, and ducks, geese or turkeys were given as prizes. This was individual rather than team shooting, for each contestant paid his fee in the competition for each bird, and the best shot took the feathered prize.

Quite common, too, some few years ago, altho' reputed to be "against the law" was the Thanksgiving Eve raffle. Such an occasion was about the only one upon which you saw members of a staid Canadian community handling the dice-box. For ten or fifteen cents a throw, you had the chance of winning a goose, duck or turkey for tomorrow's Thanksgiving dinner. The raffle quite customarily was followed by a dance or entertainment of some kind so that the ladies might share in the evening's enjoyment.

Thanksgiving shooting matches of the olden kind, and Thanksgiving raffles are pretty much things of the past and have been replaced, especially in the larger towns and cities by the Thanksgiving football game. The shooting match, if there is one, resolves itself into straight target practice for honor or fame alone. Still the burning instinct that lurks in the breast of man shows itself in the Thanksgiving Day "exodus" of the small boy and the growing youth to the highroads and woodlands armed with all classes of weapons from the death-dealing catapult to the latest make of rifle.

FOR what, as a nation, should Canada be thankful in this year nineteen hundred and thirteen? If we consider only material prosperity, there is much to be thankful for—an abundant harvest, in practically every part of the land; increased returns from many other branches of national resources; a steady advance in the opening up of our newer lands; a buoyant confident hope in the future of our country. It is true that the year has, in some respects, been one of adversity, but the adverse conditions should have the ultimate effect of bringing about a saner, more beautiful and more certain national growth.

This year there has been much preliminary celebrating of the "Hundred years of peace" between Canada and the neighboring Republic. While either countries in America and in Europe are being devastated by the horrible agencies of war, it behooves us to be grateful that we are so far removed from even the probability of such dread occurrences.

Let us be thankful, too, for what progress Canada has made during the year in other than mere material affairs.

There are Canadians, few it may seem, but possibly as many in proportion to the general population, as any other country has, who are "following the gleam" of a spiritual vision in the fields of art, literature and science, and accomplishing what is more lasting than the production of money-making things—they are making permanent the world of ideas and knowledge as a heritage for future Canadians.

It has been a goodly year in a goodly country. Be thankful that you are a Canadian!
