THE REAL HERO.

Up by the gate Sanny's horse was dancing around the hitching-post tagging at his halter, while Sanny was lying in the hammock on the porch.

After a while he was going to ride around the mountain to the lower pasture, to see the fellows break in the horses.

He was in no hurry; they would be at it all the afternoon. Besides, he was tired, and had eaten a hearty dinner.

He had spent the morning chopping off chick'n heads and dressing the fowl for market, and he had eaten a double portion of dumplings at dinner because his uncle did not eat with him.

This uncle, his mother's brother,

William Sanford, had come up into the Colorado mountains to be cured of the lung trouble. He was a hearty and jolly fellow, but unless in mountain ways, and very restless. He had made up his mind to drive down to Denver that afternoon, and since he was bound to go, Sanny's mother had decided to take advantage of his trip and go with him, to sell her butter and eggs and chickens, although her usual market day was Saturday.

Sanny's father who had lived in the mountains all his life and knew the weather-signs, said to her:

"I advise you to wait until the drought is broken. It's likely to break before many hours, in my opinion. It's the closest day I've ever known in these parts, and any one with ears can hear trouble brewing over yonder mountains.

You may be caught by a cloudburst."

William Sanford laughed. "See here, John," he said, "you've been expecting this drought to break for the last month, and it's still as dry as asher-tree there was yesterday. It was just as sultry, and I heard the same rumbling over the mountains. I've business that I must attend to by telegraph. I couldn't sleep last night for thinking of

it. If you can spare the team I'm going this afternoon."

"If he's going, I'm going, too," declared Sanny's mother, thinking around to get ready. "Of course the horses can't make the trip to-morrow. If they are driven down to-day, now don't you worry John. If it rains hard, we will just stop somewhere overnight and go on to-morrow. I've done so lots of times, you know. Sanny, don't forget to feed the chickens, and help grandma with the dishes, now, son."

Mrs. Lane watched on her sunbonnet climbed into the wagon and took the reins from her brother.

"I'm the best driver," she laughed.

"Besides, I know the horses and I know the mountains, and I'm not going to risk having my ears spilled over a precipice. Get up!"

John Lane sat down on the step and watched them as they drove down the hill and out of sight. Then his gaze turned to the green valley before him.

The house was backed securely into a hillside, half-way up a spruce ridge.

In front, the ground sloped away across the road and down to the spring, where it would dip up again in beautiful cultivated fields. Up the valley to the right, down the valley to the left and climbing the opposite mountain, green crops glistened and waved in the sunshine. "It's the best crop I've raised since

I went to farming," remarked John Lane, with satisfaction. "I declare we've snapped up the best farming strip in the mountains, son."

"I know it," said Sanny, sitting up in the hammock. "But farming's awfully hard work, pa. Why don't you stick to horses?"

"I guess we'll stick to both," smiled

John Lane. "You'd better tend to Princess; he's chafing himself with that halter. Now I'm going up the wood road," he added, rising and stretching his long legs, "to see how the men are coming on with the timber. You had better wait here with grandma until I come back. I tell you I don't like the way the weather is boiling around the mountain."

"Sanford, Sanford!" called his grandmother to him in a frightened voice.

Sanny rushed up stairs. Coming out of the dark cellar, the whole world seemed ablaze. The storm-brewing mountain was hooded in black, but from beneath the seething clouds burst

a lurid light that burned over the valley with portentous glare. Chasing streaks of lightning cracked the black cloud-mass, and terrific roars of thunder rolled from the mountain's side.

But above them the sky was blue and the sun shone steadily on the fields of waving grain.

"Did you ever see the like!" gasped grandma. "It's a cloudburst, as sure as you're born. Your mother and that crazy Will Sanford—merry on us!

Come in and shut the door! The waters will—Sanford, Sanford! Where are you? Sanford! Come back, come back this minute! Sanford!"

"Go in and shut the door, grandma," yelled Sanny from the gate. He had jumped Princess's halter loose; he was on the horse's back—he was off down the road. He could ride Princess as well with a halter as with a bridle.

The awful light faded out. The sunbeams trembled tranquilly in the sunshine that climbed up the steep walls of the canon, and the tall columbines waved their stately heads. Sanny swept by the familiar scenes without a glance. He dug his heels into the horse, his elbows slapped his sides, he whooped his frolic cowboy yell; he whipped his dust-rolled back from his horse's feet.

Now and then Sanny gave a fearful glance over his shoulder. The canon walls out of sight of the storm-brewing mountain, but above the cluster of the horse's feet broke the crashing of thunderbolts, and beneath all Sanny's ears detected a low, continuous roar that caused his brow face to pale.

Already the slender mountain stream that threaded the road had risen in its bed and was lashing itself to white foam.

A lone man was cultivating a valley that broke from the canon. Sanny checked Princess a trifle, by hard work,

"Run!" he yelled. "A cloudburst on the mountain!"

The man caught up his hoe and ran.

Sanny stopped at the lower pasture.

The bronco tamers were tossing hilariously.

"A cloudburst, a flood!" shrieked

Sanny.

The horse-tamers paused, listened and whipped their horses up the mountain's side.

A "mountain schooner" crept slowly up the mountain road, bearing a party of jolly campers.

"A flood! A cloudburst! Turn back! Drive up the divide! Hurry for your lives!"

"A flood!" The campers looked up at the cloudless sky and laughed. "A flood in your eye!" they shouted; and Sanny was out of hearing, and they went gaily onward to their doom.

Five miles from home Princess overtook the team. Sanny's mother looked back at the sound of hoofs; she recognized Sanny—he looked beyond him.

"A flood! A flood!"

She pushed Will Sanford from the wagon, sprang to the ground and gave the horses a stinging lash. She scambled up the mountain-side, her brother tagging behind her.

"Sanny!" she screamed.

But Sanny and Princess had sped on.

They had one more message to deliver.

For a week two campers had been pitching their tent close to the trickling mountain stream beneath a cluster of pines, tethering their horses among the aspens. They were city worn and weak—men who were breathing in health and strength before climbing farther into the mountains. One of them lay in a hammock, staring into the fathomless blue of the sky. The other sprawled listlessly in the sunshine watching chipmunks steal oats from the fodder bag.

"Have you noticed," remarked he,

"how noisy the brook is all of a sudden?"

Why, I declare it's full to the brim!

It's running over. By George! We have got to get out of this; we're going to be flooded!"

"Hi!"

An empty wagon bounded by, the horses bled with fright. A bareheaded rider dashed across the bridge. The bridge melted away from beneath the very horse's hoofs. Behind the boy came a seething wall of water tenty—thirty feet high.

"Come!"

Sanny spurred Princess up a steep mountain path. The terrified campers scrambled after him. They clung to brush, they clutched at rocks, up, up, up!

The water caught them, but they got upon a rock and pulled the other after him. The canon was narrower here the rush of water mounted high; it

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAR. 23, 1900.

One Man One Vote.

Particularly in municipal affairs do we hear the protest of the man of property that his voice should be listened to with more attention and that his vote should carry more authority than that of his more lowly neighbor who like himself is entitled to the privilege of the franchise. In federal or provincial concerns the theory of "one man one vote" is pretty well recognized and it is very seldom argued that a candidate should be regarded as elected because his candidature was supported by the vote of a magnate who perhaps owned more property than the rest of the constituency put together. But when it comes to town or county matters, as any citizen of Wolfville has noticed, the supporters and opponents of any project will each cast the assessment with the greatest care and will endeavor to make out that their side of the question is supported by the most property, and about this as an unanswerable argument for or against.

The people who talk so much about this kind of property representation are perhaps ignorant of the consequences which would result were this principle carried into general effect. As "the little floss which dies as it grows" so are the ambitious citizens even of our wealthiest towns eclipsed throughout the country by those who own dollars and their cents. It is the dollar therefore and not the man who is to vote even the Dives among us might find himself disfranchised and some wealthy syndicate ruling the country. Few we think would relish the idea of our democracy being converted into a plutocracy. Yet if this principle is to be followed at all it should be carried to its logical conclusion.

The people who talk so much about the representation of property in town affairs would probably be surprised were they to be told that property as such does not figure at all in our representative system. Yet such is the case.

When the reform bill of 1832 was brought in, Sir Robert Peel objected that the franchise should be left as it was or be ridged of property qualifications altogether. It was then that the supporters of the bill, the spirit of which rules to day, pointed out that it was not to allow representation to property that the Englishman was compelled to have property qualification before he could vote but that this was a precaution taken to ensure stability of government. It was unsafe they argued to admit to the franchise the miserably poor who on account of their poverty would be more susceptible to discontent and a desire for radical change. Property as property has no voice in the rule of our country, and this is as it should be.

However, the objection may be raised that as the wealthy man pays a greater amount in taxes than his more lowly neighbor, he should have a greater voice in saying how those taxes shall be expended. But if the wealthy man pays more taxes than the one who does not own as much, he gets the full equivalent of his greater contribution in the greater protection which his property receives without any greater franchise privileges. It costs the state more to protect the mansion of the rich than it does to guard the hovel of the poor, and it is only just that the owner of the mansion should pay more for such protection than his less fortunate fellow citizen pays for the protection of his lowly home. The man who counts his income in millions gets much more out of the state than does the day laborer and it is only just that he should pay more for it and be content without looking for other favors.

But it may be argued that the financially poor voter who has little property at stake, is not a safe guardian of the greater interests of the capitalist. Here too is a fallacy. The contribution which the poor man has to make to the revenue of the country is a much greater sacrifice to him than the taxes of the rich is to him. A ten dollar tax is a heavier burden to a man with an income of a thousand dollars and who cannot live within his income than a tax of a hundred dollars would be to a man with an income of ten thousand. The wealthy man might very readily, if he had large enough authority, ruin his poorer neighbor by heavy taxes brought on by rash expenditures. The poor man however, cannot so ruin the rich for he is the first to feel the keenness of the sacrifice.

It will be found wise we think to stick to the good old custom, and ever in civi matters give to man only one vote.

The world famous mare and former queen of the light harness turf, Miss S. second 2,084, fell dead in her stall at Shuteburn, the stock farm of John H. Shuteburn, at Port Chester, about ten o'clock Saturday morning. For a few days before her death she had not taken her food regularly, although she appeared to be quite as well as usual. She died of heart disease, which bore out the diagnosis of a veterinarian who was called to see her last Wednesday and pronounced that organ affected.

Miss S.'s farewell appearance in public was made last month, at the Grand Tip-top sale at Malton Square Gardens, during the disposal of the horses belonging to the estate of the late Robert Bonner, she being the only one of that famous collection to be reserved. Mr. Bonner purchased the noted mare from Wm. H. Vanderbilt, paying $10,000 for her.

Spring Pruning.

The coming six weeks comprise the season best adapted for the general pruning of orchards and now that the time has arrived for this all-important operation it is worth our while to consider carefully what we prune for and how we can improve on old methods. It is surprising how many men there are who seem to measure their success in this operation by the amount of brush they cut out. It is usually these same men, too, who do their pruning with an axe. As a result of this system (1) of pruning the tree soon loses all the branches in the centre of the head and becomes a collection of long bare poles with some bearing wood at the end of each.

Yet in a climate like our own where trees make so rank a growth it is imperative that more or less pruning should be done each year if the trees are to be kept healthy and are to give fruit of the best quality. Of what shall this pruning consist? This question must be answered a little differently for every individual tree in an orchard, yet a few suggestions may be of assistance in arriving at a decision. We must remember first that a too severe pruning will only cause the tree to grow more rankly and that our object should be to avoid this and yet take out sufficient wood to accomplish the following objects: 1st.—To let the sunlight into the tree to color and perfect the fruit (everyone knows that the finest apples grow at the top of the tree and this is largely due to the fact that they receive an abundance of light and air). 2nd.—To keep the tree within bounds and prevent it encroaching on its neighbors. 3rd.—To remove superfluous and injured parts, and 4th.—To facilitate spraying, cultivating and harvesting. With these objects in mind let us begin operations. First remove any dead limbs or any that have been broken. Next take out all branches which cross one another, tending to rub against their neighbors. This may be all that is necessary but as a rule some further thinning of the top is desirable and this is where the judgment of the pruner is demanded. Then, too, the tree may require some pruning from below which will depend on its previous training and on the personal preference of the grower. None of our other orchard trees require such severe pruning as the apple but all are better for a certain amount of attention.

PRUNING TREES WHEN SET. Young trees at the time they are set require a much more severe pruning than they usually receive. To appreciate the necessity of this we have only to reflect that before the tree is dug in the nursery the roots and the top just balance one another, there are just enough roots to supply the top. But during the process of digging nearly all of the feeding roots are left in the soil and therefore the top should be cut back to correspond. This pruning is more easily done after the tree is set as it is then stationary and one can better decide how to shape the top. There are two methods of procedure in this first pruning. 1st. If the young tree is well grown we may begin immediately to shape the future head, selecting a few of its branches to form the main ones of the tree and removing the rest. Even those which are retained should be cut back one-half or two-thirds. This may seem like heroic treatment but if any one will test the matter for himself, cutting back one tree as indicated and setting a similar one without pruning, he will find that at the end of two years the pruned tree will be the stronger of the two. 2. If the young tree is not well grown it may be best to cut it back almost to a bare pole which will cause it to "feather out" during the first season and from these branches the permanent head may be formed a year later.

In all our pruning we should observe the following rules: Use a sharp saw with comparatively fine teeth. In removing branches cut as close to the tree as possible so that the wound made may be as nearly in line with the surface of the tree as possible. Cover all large wounds with thick lead paint. Gather up and burn all trimmings to get the brush out of the way and to destroy insect eggs and fungus spores. And above all put thought and study into your work. Observe from year to year the effect of what you have done and so gain knowledge for future use. Prof. Bailey most truly says—"Of all the operations connected with the growing of trees and shrubs, pruning and training bring the person into closest contact and sympathy with the plant. One shapes and thoughtfully, working out his ideals as he would in the cradling and guiding of a child. If a person cannot love a plant after he has pruned it then he has either done a poor job or is devoid of emotion."

[SPECIAL TO THE ACADIAN.]

HALIFAX, MAR. 22.—Transport Mi-waukes with North West mounted police and other Canadian troops on board arrived at Cape Town at 11 o'clock last night. All well.

Grand Pre Cleanings.

The last car load of apples for the London market was shipped on Saturday. This season's shipment to N. & L. from this station is 2319 barrels, and Bligh's shipments added make a total of 4,000 barrels. In a few years more three orchards here will each ship as many as 4000 barrels in a season—Judge Weatherbe's, George Johnson's and J. W. Borden's.

Jack Simson and his sister Annie were in Halifax to see the embarkation of "Starbuck's House." The weather was too much for the church social at Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harris' Wednesday evening (14th). It was repeated on Thursday with very good success. A pleasant, sociable evening was spent and $9.75 collected.

Thursday morning (15th) the sleighing was superb. I drove to Hantsport, and the whole country was a thing of beauty and a joy to the beholder. The band of God in one night had clothed the earth in a robe as purely white as angel's wings and hung every tree and bush and twig with a wealth of flashing brilliants, which sparkled and glittered and gleamed in the sunlight with a beauty and radiance unequalled by that of all the diamonds of all the millionaires of earth.

Benjamin Shaw, late of Lockhartville near Hantsport, who has been ill for two weeks, died Sunday, the 18th, aged 72 years. Mr. Shaw was well known and highly esteemed in Kings and Hants counties. He was a man of an iron constitution, of strong convictions, up-right, honest, a consistent, faithful Christian, praising God with his last breath. He leaves a widow and a large family, all of whom are in the enjoyment of good health. Another of those enjoyable church socials was held in the parsonage Wednesday evening. The house was comfortably filled and the evening passed very pleasantly. About $5.00 were added to the treasury. Several young men came down from Greenswich on a trolly. These socials are very attractive. The improvements in the church are nearing completion; the opening will probably take place at Easter.

Miss Annie Peterson and the choir are preparing for an Easter concert in the new church. A new Easter cantata has been secured and everything will be done to make it a success. Quite a number of our people are going to Kentville, Friday night, for the Biograph. Many others will wait for Wolfville. We hope the people will attend in masses to swell the Famous Fund. The description of this terrible calamity should stir the hearts and open the pockets of all. Mrs. Ralph Weston is collecting for the Fund a Lower Horton.

Have you seen those Wheels in the Drug Store windows?

A Mothers' Meeting, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the McKenna building on Thursday, March 29th, at 3:30 o'clock. All mothers who have children in the schools are urged to be present at this meeting, as matters of vital interest to them will be discussed.

The election pupils of Acadia Seminary, assisted by the Wolfville orchestra, etc. in giving the third recital of the course in College Hall on Friday evening, March 30th. This will be a Shakespearian recital, and will no doubt be a most interesting one. Don't make any other engagement for this date.

Mr. A. J. Woodman has leased the Palmerston store and will carry on his furniture business there in future. The store is one of the most attractive in town, and is a good stand in every way. The store recently occupied by Mr. Woodman will be occupied by Mr. Chambers' millinery department.

The third lecture of the series being given by the College Faculty this winter will be held this evening, when President Trotter will deliver his lecture on "The Oxford Movement, or the Undoing of the Revolution," in College Hall. There is an admission fee and the public is cordially invited. A rich treat is in store for all who attend.

In the window of Mr. William Regan's harness shop there has been displayed this week a number of curious sent by Private W. J. Egan from South Africa. They include a number of articles collected by Mr. Regan, most of which were taken from the dwelling of a Boer on one of the raids made by our troops. Though not of an intrinsic value they are much prized by Mr. Regan and are an object of considerable curiosity. Among other things are part of a muzzling, a tobacco pipe and tobacco, photographs, letters, etc.

Local and Provincial.

Mr. L. S. Gawe, formerly of the ACADIAN staff, now editor of the Amherst Press spent Sunday in Wolfville.

The earnings of the D. A. R. for the eleven months ending Nov. 30, 1899, amounted to $766,025, as against $594,271, the earnings of the corresponding period in 1898.

It is said that Robert Shaw, of Avonport, has contracted to supply 1,500,000 brick for the D. L. & S. C., Sydney. In the eastern part of the province this company has secured the entire output for the season of some brick yards.

The death of Mr. Benjamin Shaw, father of Mr. E. B. Shaw, of this town, occurred at his home near Hantsport on Sunday last. Mr. Shaw was 73 years of age and well known and highly respected in eastern Kings and Hants counties.

The remains of Helena Victoria Paterson, formerly of Waterville, Kings county, arrived per steamer Boston on Saturday morning. She died at Boston on Tuesday last of pulmonary tuberculosis. She was in the 24th year of her age.

A discount of fifty per cent. on all Felt Hats at Mme. Andrews from March 1st, 1900.

Windsor has been in a state of considerable excitement for the last few days over the very sudden departure of one of its most conspicuous citizens and leading members of the town council, Mr. A. E. Shaw, of the firm of Shaw & Sangster, Barriers. Certain irregularities in business are assigned as the cause of Mr. Shaw's hasty leave taking.

The editor of the Truro News is attempting to discuss the affairs of this town gives a very vivid illustration of the absurdity that even a newspaper man may fall into when he attempts to write about a subject of which he positively has no knowledge or information. He compares the promises of the Wolfville citizen in paying his taxes with that displayed by the ratepayers of Truro and vauntingly exclaims: "In Truro we have 98 per cent. of last year's taxes paid. In Wolfville less than one quarter of the citizens have paid their taxes." It never occurred to our subtle critic that it was this year's and not last year's taxes that a majority of our citizens had left unpaid. The people of this "disgraced town" (to use the words of our content) are not worrying over last year's obligations.

Co. 9 of this town, sent ten members to make up "H" Company of the provisional battalion, which is to garrison Halifax. Their names are as follows: R. G. Swan, H. C. Merrett, H. H. Carrie, Sergeant-Major Henry Nelson, D. A. Mitchell, E. H. Scobie, Wm. H. White, James Washburne, C. E. Martin, Saunders. The boys left on Monday's afternoon (22nd inst.). No 9 Company was org'd. here seven years ago, and in addition to the above has four members from the garrison. Messrs. Currie and Merrett are from the college, the former being a member of the Junior and the latter of the Freshman class. Mr. J. Merrett, of the Senior class, will also be a member of the garrison at Halifax, having been appointed to a first-lieutenancy. We wish our brave boys all success and a safe return.

A GIRL WHO WAS SAVED.

HAD SUFFERED FOR NEARLY 12 YEARS WITH ANEMIA. Severe Headaches, Heart Palpitation, Nervousness and Extreme Febleness Made Her Life Miserable—Her Doctor Told Her She Could Not Recover.

Doctors have given the Greek name anemia, meaning "bloodlessness," to a disease which is much more prevalent among young women than is generally believed.

What then? Are the skies indeed not blue, Millies white, nor the roses red? Shall we doubt whether ever the crystal dew

Drop pearls on the path we tread? We may dwell where there is no blur in the air,

Of a Truth and a Love so high That possible evils sully them not— No black in the blue of the sky.

The Blues in Spring.

Despondent, Melancholic and tired People are Made Active and Strong by Pain's Celery Compound.

Round and Half-dead Men and Women Obtain Health and Strength from the Great Medicine.

The blues, despondency and melancholy make thousands of lives miserable in spring time. Men and women around us complain of tired feelings, nervousness, dizziness, irregular menstruation and general rundown condition.

Though not confined to bed, the condition of thousands of despondent, melancholic, sleepless, nervous and run-down people is sufficiently alarming to demand immediate care and attention.

This particular sea-on should be a time of cleaning, recuperating and strengthening for run down and ailing people. Pain's Celery Compound will quickly banish the blues, despondency and melancholia, and tired feelings will give way to life, buoyancy and full health.

It is suicidal for sickly men and women to mope around in a half-dead condition and shut their eyes to the marvelous blessings that are offered by Pain's Celery Compound. It is the one great medicine in spring with all classes of our population. Try a bottle and see how rapidly you get rid of every physical burden. Pain's Celery Compound will be kind that "makes sick people well."

Lincoln won the appellation of "Honest Abe" when he was a grocery clerk at New Salem, Ill. He was noted for his sincere integrity. He once took 6 1/2 cents too much from a customer, and that evening after closing the store, he walked three miles to return the money.

On another occasion he weighed out a half-pound of tea, as he supposed, being eight when he did so, and that was the last thing he sold before going home. On entering the store in the morning he discovered a four-ounce weight on the scales. He then perceived his mistake and shutting up the shop, he hurried off to deliver the remainder of the tea.

Catarhazone Poils the Doctors. Mrs. I. Reynolds, of 39 Queen St., Ottawa, writes: "I have been a constant sufferer from Catarhazone with dropping in the throat, etc., for some time. My doctor said an operation would be necessary, but the use of one bottle of Catarhazone has rid me of my trouble."

Ernest McGaffey, the poet, is accredited with a good bonnet. A lady said to him: "Oh, Mr. McGaffey, I have just seen your wife for the first time since your marriage. But I had supposed that she was a taller woman. She seems shorter than when I saw her last."

Mary and Martha, two little sisters, had been promoted to the dignity of Mr. and Mrs. They were sleeping together. "I sleep on the front side," said Mary, with an air of importance. "And where do you sleep, Martha?" inquired the visitor. "I sleep where Mary doesn't," replied Martha, with a rueful glance at her restless little sister.

When I was a little girl a meddling funny happened in Sunday-school (says a Christian work). My Sunday-school teacher had been telling us about faults, and I did not understand what she meant. So when she said, "I have many faults," I said, "No, I have not any faults; but my sister has faults."

Total Abstinence. The selection of Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener as the military leaders in South Africa ought to reinforce also the worldwide forces against intemperance.

Most persons who have studied the question are of opinion that actual drunkenness has materially diminished in all classes of society in the last twenty-five or thirty years. Many causes have contributed to this. The zealous labor of countless workers in the temperance cause, whom we know, it is not necessary to repeat, has been a powerful factor.

A Race With the Sun. The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of travelling at an rate to 1000 miles an hour a traveller in it starting westward from London at a speed of 660 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m. it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he travelled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles an hour. He will soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rise in the west where it had set a short time before.

Don't throw your faded things away. Diamond dyes give new life to old garments. That faded and rusty dress, skirt, blouse, cape, jacket, cloak, or your lace and ribbons that you are thinking of consigning to the rag bag can be made as new dyed with any of the fashionable and reasonable colors that Diamond Dyes produce.

Perhaps the day will come when all men will look upon creeds in the tolerant light of the late evangelist, D. L. Moody. The Congregationalist tells a characteristic story of him in its latest issue. When the Roman Catholics were about to build a church in Northfield, Mr. D. L. Moody's native town, he made the largest subscription for that purpose and afterward, presented an organ to the church. He justified himself in so doing by stating: "If they are Roman Catholics it is better that they should be good ones than bad. It is surely better to have a Catholic church than none and so for the organ, if they are to have music in their church, it is better to have good music." When Mr. Moody set out to build a Protestant meeting-house on the Northfield ground, the stone for its foundation was hauled from the hills and presented to him by Roman Catholics.
