Crushed Coffee—
what it is

By a process of crushing between steel rollers, instead of grinding, the skin, which remains in the eye of the bean after roasting, is separated from the kernel and removed by air suction, while the kernel is broken into small even grains. These grains when steeped, being free of the skin or chaff, settle quickly, leaving the liquid clear and bright, and give the true coffee flavor.

Estabrook's Red Rose Crushed Coffee is as easy to make as Red Rose Tea. Directions are in each tin.

The Long Ago.

Oh a wonderful stream is the river Time,
As it runs through the realm of fairs,
With a fearless rhythm and a musical rhyme,
And a broader sweep and a surger swifter,
As it blends with the tress of years!

How the writers are drifting like fakes of snow,
And summers like beds between—
And the year's breast with its ebb and flow,
As it glides in the shadow and sheen.

There's a magical tale up the river Time,
Where the softest of airs are playing;
There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a song as sweet as a vespere chime,
And the June's with its roses are straying

And the same of the late is the Long Ago,
And we bury our treasures here—
There are lovers of beauty and homes of joy,
There are heroes of deeds and legends of glory,
There are fugitives of souls that nobody
And a part of an actor's prayer.

There's a late unsewn, and without string,
There are broken vows and pieces of rings,
And the garments that she used to wear,
There are hands that are waded when the fairy
By the Mirage is lifted in air;
And we wander here, through the turbulent
Sweet when we heard the days gone before,
When the wind whistled in fair.

Oh, remembered for ages, be the blessed Tale,
All the days of our life till night,
When the evening comes with its beautiful smile
And our eyes are closing in slumber awhile,
May that Greenwood's soil be in sight.

The Prodigal.

(Rita Richmond in Scottish Review.)
Where the woodland road dipped to the hollow of the village he stood still a moment, very still, the blackness of his figure inkily etched against the cold brightness of the sky—stood so, looking down into the quiet village with a long, long thought on his shadowed face and in his brooding eyes.

Thought that reached as far back as his youth and his father's manhood with forgotten dreams and hopes and fears; thought that brooded the past so present, that it seemed the only reality—the present a dream.

Behind him stretched the white ribbon of road that had led him like a magic thread from out the shadows of his father's and his own childhood, to the spot where he stood now, looking back into his youth—into the homestead.

The smoke curling so quietly from the village chimneys upon the still air, the barking of a dog in the sleepy little street, the bleat of lambs from the heathery, honey-scented moorland.

His eyes were fixed upon the doorway of the house that was not mere in a dream; he had been wont to dream so.

Thus, like a carved figure of dream and brooding, the man stood for a space, and then with a long, deep breath, lifting his hand and passing it over his forehead, he turned and held him bound, he moved forward over the dip of white road with a light step, and as he went his face gradually cleared of its brooding shadow, as if some hope had chased the shadow away. He swung his stout traveller's staff in his hand, and unconsciously his lips formed themselves into a soft smile—an old melody from out his boyhood's years. It ran like an accompaniment to his thoughts.

When he had gone but a little on his way, he fell in with another wayfarer, a rustic, who gave him 'Good day' with hearty courtesy cordially, and then both bowed and passed on together, talking in the desultory fashion of chance companions, and presently they came into the village.

'How quiet it seems,' said the stranger to the countryman, looking about him with eyes of wonder. The place was like Goldsmith's 'Deserted Village,' an empty slumbering lay upon the little vacant seemed to look out upon the two passers-by with unseeing stare from under their half-shut lids of white blinds. A cat blinked musingly at them from off a doorstep, a caged bird chirped out against a white-washed wall chirped softly under its breath, nothing else stirred.

The door stood wide and unnoted he strode in. The crowd beyond him moved and pressed together in the big hall before the raised figure of the auctioneer. The sale had commenced, even as he stepped within the door. The first bid had been given for the quaint, old heavy chairs that stood about the hall. The figure was low, and it was quickly capped again and again even by the villagers as the stranger stood breathing hard behind the crowd, the sweat drops standing thick upon his brow.

For a moment or two he stood still, moistening his dry lips, wondering if his husky voice would come from out his throat. Then even as the auctioneer's hammer descended and the final 'lots' was forming on his lips, his voice leapt heavily from him.

The stranger had topped the winning bid, and the handsome old chairs were his.

Among the crowd a few heads turned and twisted to note the bidder, but he stood so far back that few discovered him, and attention was quickly concentrated again on the next sale.

Once again the stranger waited till the final moment, and once again opened his lips to top the last bid, given this time by a keen-eyed broker.

er. The great hall table was knocked down to the stranger.

This time more heads turned. An angry mutter from the disappointed broker could be heard; then reluctantly the sale went on till the hall was disposed of. With the exception of a few immaterial things the stranger had bought them all.

The bidding began, but here again the quiet, steady voice at the back of the crowd rose upon the highest note, and bit by bit each article of furniture fell into the stranger's grasp. Nothing did he let pass.

The brokers eyed him furiously; excited murmurs arose among the crowd. Who was this who was buying up Thorndens? What big broker could he be?

The interest began to centre more in the stranger than in the sale.

Oblivious of all the curious looks he was unmoved to all appearance.

With steady step he followed from room to room, buying up each article that was offered with insatiable persistence; and as the sale went on, a strange hush gradually fell over the crowd—the hush of a tense curiosity. Bit by bit he gathered in the whole house. One thing after another, from ceiling to floor, fell to his possession, and at last he stood virtually master of the house.

There were but a few odd things left that the stranger was not owner of. Among them, what might have been a boy's toy, a fall-rigged pretty model of a ship. Carelessly the auctioneer put it up almost at the close.

There was no bidding for the toy at first; then the silent, waiting pause was broken by a woman's trembling glance shot quickly, curiously at this one figure in the crowd—a slim, dark figure, shrinking timidly back at the sound of her own voice—and he caught a glimpse of a fair, white, frightened face and an anxious pair of brown eyes fixed on the ship with eager longing.

For a moment the stranger eyed her with a puzzled frown; then suddenly a light broke upon his face, a smile rose swiftly to his eyes, and he checked, however, immediately.

The auctioneer had raised his hammer, for no other bid had followed that uttering first one. He was knocking the model down to the woman when the stranger lifted his voice again calmly, relentlessly, glancing at the first bidder.

She shrank still farther back, but in a quick, trembling voice advanced upon the stranger's bid.

Again a smile flickered over the bronzed face, a half-mischievous smile this time. He made a higher bid, and again the woman raised it, with a sort of hesitating desperation, and again the other capped her.

The model fell to the stranger, and with a disappointed air the woman drew back and hid herself among the people.

The sale was over.

In a few hours Thorndens had passed from out the hands of its former owner, and the stranger stood master of it from attic to basement.

Slowly the curious crowd had filtered out through the doors with many a backward glance at the quiet figure still behind, many a commiserating look from two old people who had lost their home.

The stranger stood quietly, with folded arms, watching the crowd pass out as the master of the house might do.

Among the others following the crowd came the woman who had bid for the ship. She seemed to be hanging behind the others, and on her hand she hesitated, and then stopped in front of the stranger.

'Sit,' she said timidly, without looking up, and she spoke almost in a whisper, 'the little ship can be of so little value to you. Will you not sell it to me?'

Her face, the face of a woman past the bloom of her youth, yet strangely sweet and fair too, was half hidden behind her veil, and her eyes were downcast as the man looked down at her with strange regard.

They two were alone now; the crowd had faded away.

'Madam,' he said courteously, 'I am sorry to be disabbling; but yet I ask you since you are a woman, 'What can a lady care for a boy's model of a ship?'

er. Besides, the thing is a poor toy; it is not well made, it is—

But now the downcast eyes had flashed up; the face was lifted defiantly almost to his.

'How dare you?' she said tremulously, angrily. 'The little ship is beautiful. How dare you? Give it then to one who will value it as I do—' 'As I do—' Suddenly her voice worth nothing to you, while to me—'

The man looked down at her, his bronzed face a sudden white, his eyes deep and dark.

'If you tell why you wish for it I will give it to you,' he said deliberately.

Again she looked up at him. All her body seemed to tremble with the agitation that possessed her; her white hands flashed painfully; her white hands clasped each other in a nervous grip.

A cruel fellow this stranger to be so hard. He seemed relentless.

'Come!' he said again. 'A bargain, madam; the little ship is yours for nothing, but your reason for wishing for it—'

A struggle seemed to be going on in her breast. Her breath came hard and fast from between her white lips, then she lifted her eyes, and in a low, low voice she said to him, 'I who was very dear to me, and is now dead. He was the ship when he was a little boy. It would be the only thing I have of his and—'

Her voice died away in an incoherent trembling upon her hands.

There was a little pause of silence and then there happened a strange thing, for the man talking with her, suddenly and very gently, took the two hands of the woman in his own and drew them from her face.

'Joan!' he said, and now his own steady voice seemed to tremble as of old, and something dearer than playmate in later years, don't you know me at last, Joan? Don't you know me at last, Joan? And with that she, looking up at him now, as one who would look at the dead new risen, and with eyes into which had suddenly flooded knowledge, hope, love, joy, recognition, and with a sudden stifled cry and then there happened a strange thing, for the man talking with her, suddenly and very gently, took the two hands of the woman in his own and drew them from her face.

Together, hand in hand, the man and woman went along the silent, deserted passages of the house, but at the door Joan stopped, and lifted her tear-filled eyes to his.

'You must enter alone,' she said in a low voice. 'No one but you and them. Go, my dear, and do not tell them too suddenly, lest they die of joy, as almost I, she whispered under her breath—'as almost I did.'

And with that she pushed him gently forward, and he opened the closed door.

The little room was growing dark; the shadows crept along the walls till they almost reached the two benighted figures seated together on the big corded box in the middle of the room. Hand clasped in hand, the two old people sat, a patient acceptance of their doom upon their wrinkled brows.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., AUG. 5, 1910.

The Charlottetown Guardian says it has heard a rumor that the C. P. R. intended building a line of railway from Truro to Wallace, Windsor people have heard of a rumor that the C. P. R. intended connecting Windsor with Chester. There seems to be no limit to what people expect the big corporation to do.

The English Commoners have expressed themselves as favoring the change in the Coronation Oath. If the bill making the change legal passed upon the King George will not be Catholic as given in the Coronation Oath, but that he is a member of the Church of England. The declaration will be that he is a supporter of the Protestant faith.

Over 5,000 students wrote the Provincial Government examinations throughout the province this year. This number is about five hundred better than last year. Then there was only about 1,500. A few years ago the total amount of writers aggregated about 2,000.

It is gratifying to find that this province is making fairly satisfactory progress in the development of its common school system.

Cuba is being disturbed by another insurrectionary movement, which it is feared may be serious in character. It is not known that successful insurrection in Cuba would produce any general good. The government of the island can appreciate, long years of encouraged disturbance, however, may have brought in the Cuban insurrectionary habit that he cannot shake off and so, what would drive a resident of colder latitudes to write to the papers sends him to the hills with a gun.

In our Canadian Dominion dwells a young Russian, who is absolute over 10,000 Doukhobors. Under Peter Veregin's leadership these people seem to be prospering, and it is thought that in time will be assimilated into thrifty, honest, hard working Canadians. Lately Veregin has purchased 3,500 acres of land near Nelson, B. C., and purposes giving some attention to fruit culture. He has planted 11,000 trees this year, making 20,000 altogether, a considerable amount, and the rest principally apples. He is also operating a brick yard, saw mill and grist mill, and is planning to secure yet larger holdings of land.

The Canadian Magazine for August has an unusually strong number. Perhaps the feature of most importance is the article by Professor W. A. Grant entitled "Golden Smith at Oxford." Professor Grant has been for some time lecturer on Colonial History at Oxford, and the researches for this article were made by the speaker. There is also a splendid appreciation by Dr. A. H. U. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education for Ontario, of the work and place of Goldwin Smith in Canada. These two articles are well illustrated. Professor Archibald MacMechan contributes an entertaining account of some early associations in Halifax. Mr. Arthur O. Wheeler, President of the Canadian Alpine Club, has a beautifully illustrated article on "Canada's Wonderland," the second act of Arthur Stringer's play "The Blue" is in this number, as well as some fine short stories.

One reason which I have heard given for Goldwin Smith's retirement to the United States may be set aside, it is that he was driven out of England by the attack of Disraeli in "Lothair." Disraeli had been hiding his time, and with Semitic malice introduced into "Lothair" an Oxford professor, described in words full of those half-truths which bite like an acid.

Goldwin Smith, who had all the sensitiveness of a may bred in the Common Room, must have felt stung in every word. Only the matter of satire can feel its full force in the hand of an opponent. But the attack cannot have driven him out of England, for the good reason that while he left England in 1868 "Lothair" was not published till 1870. But we must not leave Goldwin Smith with the arrow of the bravo in his side. One who sees how much he did for Oxford at a time when her freedom was in peril will rather apply to him the words in which a greater Jew than Disraeli wrote his own epitaph. He was, like Helios, a noble soldier in the liberation-war of humanity. - Doctor A. H. U. Colquhoun, in The Canadian Magazine for August.

A NEW FERRIS.

Not more than a couple of weeks ago a young woman was taken in charge by the Ottawa police, she having apparently lost all knowledge of both her whereabouts and identity. Later she got her bearing sufficiently to disclose her name and place of residence, and was released. Medical men interested in the strange case decided that the girl had been brought to so queer a pass, mentally, by over indulgence in tea-drinking.

We are well acquainted with the arguments of opponents of the liquor-drinking habit, and we need no special instruction on the evils which are bound to follow in the train of those engaged in drinking intoxicating beverages. But here is evidently an entirely new situation and one which opens up a fresh field for would-be moral reformers. And can one imagine what sort of a time the tea prohibitionist will have when he or she attacks the great army of women who believe in tea as they believe in their religion, the one a cure for soul ills, and the other a panacea for bodily ailments.

When it comes to excesses for tea-drinking the average woman is as well stocked with them as is the most rabid defender of a religious cult with arguments in defense of his particular faith.

When tea was first introduced into England at the time of the later Stuarts, the price was so high that only the wealthy could afford it. In the time of the second Charles it was costing $10 per pound. Some years later not more than 5,000 pounds per year were imported into all Great Britain. To-day the annual importation is more like 300,000,000 pounds, which is one might call going some.

It is now surmised that unless the women's favorite tippie is largely decreased in Canada, she is sure to become quite as much a slave to the habit, and in quite as much danger mentally, as is her lordly master from over indulgence in whiskey.

Broken Health Brings Wrinkles.

HOW ALL WOMEN CAN PRESERVE GOOD HEALTH AND GOOD LOOKS. Too many women and girls look old before their time. In nine cases out of ten it is a matter of health. Work, worry, confinement indoors and lack of exercise cause the health to run down. Then faces become thin and pale; lines and wrinkles appear; there are headaches, backaches and a constant feeling of tiredness.

Women and girls who feel well look well. Therefore improve your health and you will look better. It is a fact that thousands of Canadian women and girls owe the robust health they enjoy to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They feel well and enjoy life as only a healthy person can do.

The simple reason for this is that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich, red blood, which strengthens all the vital organs, brings brightness to the eye, a glow of health to the cheeks, and bracing strength to every part of the body. Mrs. Warren Wright, Una, Sask., says: "I feel that I owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that nothing I can say in their favor will fully repay. I was so reduced in health and strength that I was hardly able to walk at all, and could do no work whatever. My blood was so thin and watery that my lips and finger tips resembled those of a corpse. I had almost constant headaches, and the smallest exertion would set my heart palpitating violently, and often I would drop in a faint. Nothing I did seemed to help me in the least, and I felt so far gone that I never expected to recover my health. I was in this critical condition when I read in a newspaper of a cure in a case like mine through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I got a half dozen boxes and before I used them all there was a great change in my condition. My appetite returned, the color began to come back to my lips and face, and my strength was increasing. I continued the use of the Pills for some time longer and they restored me to the pink of perfect health. While using the Pills I gained twenty pounds in weight. My cure was made in the summer of 1909, and I am now enjoying better health than ever before."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do for other weak and worn women just what they did for Mrs. Wright, if they are given a fair trial. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

At Father Point, P. Q., on the arrival of the S.S. Montrose, Sunday morning, Dr. Crippen and a woman companion dressed in men's clothes and represented on the passenger list as the Dr.'s son, were arrested on the charge of murdering Mrs. Crippen in England in February. Only recently the murder was discovered. The English police set at once about the discovery of Crippen. Wireless telegraphy played an important part in the case. The fugitives were located on board the ship at sea. An English police inspector starting by a faster steamer, reached Canada before the Montrose, and on Sunday made the arrest on the Montrose.

Rev. J. Alfred Faulkner, D. D., Professor of Historical Theology at Drew Theological Seminary, will preach in the Lower Horton Methodist church next Sunday morning.

What Do You Know About It?

That's what a customer asked me recently about a patent medicine I had sold for years, and I was forced to admit that in reality I knew nothing more than what appeared on the label, wrapper and advertising.

Some of the claims made were so extravagant that of course I could not take them seriously, but concluded I had better find a line of remedies I did know something about.

The Bicentenary of the Church of England in Canada.

Two hundred years ago the first regular services in Canada according to the use of the Church of England were held at Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia, where after the capture of the fort by General Nicholson, a service of thanksgiving for the success of Her Majesty's (Queen Anne's) Arms was held by Rev. John Harrison, and a sermon preached by Rev. Samuel Hesker. To-day the Church of England in Canada, has twenty-two dioceses stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the Bicentenary of its work in this Dominion is to be celebrated by special events at Halifax, Windsor and Annapolis Royal, the first week of September next.

At Halifax All Saints Cathedral, today the finest church edifice in Canada, erected at a cost of some $150,000, is to be opened on September 3rd as a memorial in stone of the Bicentenary, and the three following days a great Canadian Church Congress is to be held, at which there promises to be a great attendance.

On September 8th, a special Convocation will be held at King's College, Windsor, the oldest university in the British colonies, and on September 9th special services commemorative of the first services will be held at Annapolis Royal. Every Anglican diocese in Canada is sending delegates to the Congress, and the preachers and speakers include the names of many of the great leaders of the Anglican Church in England, Scotland and the United States, as well as Canada. Those from across the Atlantic are the Bishop of London, the Bishop of Glasgow, and Bishop Taylor Smith, chaplain general of the States which will come the bishops of Washington, Massachusetts, Duluth, Colorado, Central New York, Tennessee, Indianapolis, Idaho, Harrisburg and the Philippine Islands, as well as many leading priests and laymen.

The distinguished Canadian ecclesiastics who will take part include the Archbishop of Rupertland and Ottawa, and the Bishops of Nova Scotia, Fredericton, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Ontario, Huron, Niagara, Algoma, Calgary, Moosehead, New Westminster, and Columbia, while the Deans, Archdeacons and Canons, they will be there by the score.

Serious complaints are being made as to the disorderly conduct of certain families and groups upon Main street almost every evening recently. Whether the whiskey comes from Kentville or Halifax it matters little, but the fact remains that intoxicated people upon the street are all too apparent. Then again the nights are made quite disgusting by people who are supposed to be under better influences than whiskey. We may be more specific later unless a reformation is apparent.

Mount Allison Institutions.

The question as to where to send your son or daughter for further education is answered by the Mount Allison advertisements in to-day's issue. There is no better preparatory school for boys than the Mount Allison Academy, one of the oldest of its kind in Canada. There is no better Commercial College in eastern Canada than the one in connection with the Academy. A residential school, the Acadia Commercial College is one in which the most thorough instruction is given under conditions which make for the proper development of character.

The Mount Allison Ladies' College - which includes the College of Literature and Science, the Conservatory of Music, the Massey-Treble School of Household Science, the Oratory Department, the Owens Museum of Fine Arts - is the largest in Canada.

All its teachers are specialists, the members of the Conservatory staff having been trained in Europe. Its equipment is extensive and thoroughly modern. The school aims to be, and is, a home-like institution where the development of the individual student along all lines is sought. In this fact is to be found the reason why the school has attained its leading position.

A calendar of the Academy and Commercial College will be sent free on application to Mr. J. M. Palmer, M. A. Sackville, N. B. The Ladies' College calendar will be sent free if application for it is made to Dr. B. C. Borden, Sackville, N. B.

Horton Academy. We were in hopes that we would have been able in this issue to report a new principal for this popular school, but such is not at hand.

Various reports are heard upon the street of a more or less pleasant nature, but when traced are found groundless. It is to be sincerely hoped that the understanding of the school during the past two years will be maintained, and an able teacher of experience will be secured.

Glained by the Way.

'Is there any soap on the hill of far?'
No, sir; there was, but I rubbed it off.
Don't wait till your hair is gone, Use Bearine (the genuine bear's grease pomade) in time to save it, so, a jar.
Maude:—How long do you think that I am a better man?
Reginald:—I have money enough to last about six months.

Goodbye to Beauty.

It is goodbye to beauty when kidney derangements set in. The skin becomes hard and dry, and the form wastes away and becomes emaciated. One cannot be too watchful and the safest way is to keep the kidneys as well as the liver and bowels, healthy and active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. This ensures pure blood and healthy digestive system.

'I always feel after I have spent an hour or two in your company,' he said, 'that I am a better man.'
'It is very good of you to say so,' she replied, 'Don't hesitate to come often.'

Mamie:—That was mean. But she might have done more.
Maude:—How?
Mamie:—Well, she might have told some lie about you.

Regular Customer.—There used to be two or three little bald spots on the crown of my head, away back. Are they there yet?
Barber.—No, sir, it ain't so bad as all that. Where those spots used to be, sir, there's only one now.

Baby's Skin Troubles.

'My baby boy, while nursing, broke out with rashes, rashes all over his head and behind the ears,' writes Mrs. Oscar Vanhook, St. Antonio, Tex. 'Many others have been cured by effect. The child's head became a mass of scales and he suffered much agony from the dreadful itching. Dr. Chase's Ointment made a lasting cure and also cured an older son of eczema.'

Side by side they sat by the seaside. The ocean waves remind me of human beings, he said.
How is that? she queried.
They come to the shore in great style, he replied, and go away broke.

PILES

A lad was standing with his donkey and barrow selling vegetables in London one day, when a smartly dressed young man came up and asked:
'I say boy, would you like to drive me to the Mansion House?'
The boy thought for a moment and then replied:
'Yes, guv'nor; but I don't think the 'arress would fit yer.'

The day before she was to be married the old negro servant came to her mistress and entrusted her savings in her keeping.
'Why should I keep it? I thought you were going to get married,' said her mistress.
'So I is, Missus, but do you 'posse I'd keep all dis money in de house wid dat strange nigger?'

Widow (tearfully).—John was such a hand to worry when things didn't go right. He simply wore himself out doing it. Why, the very last day he lived he was fretting because the price of coal had gone up a dollar a ton.

Friend (trying to say something consolatory).—It is too bad—too bad, indeed! But your husband is over all his trouble at last. He won't have to worry over the price of coal where he is now!

I bought a home with a supposedly incredible mortgage for $20. Carried him with $100 worth of MINARD'S LINIMENT and sold him for $500. Profit on investment, $200.00.

MOYSE DEBROCK, Hotel Keeper, St. Philippe, Que.

The little daughter of the hostess looked long and inquiringly at the guest who had been told was a learned man and a professor. During a lull in the conversation she spoke up. 'What do you do in college, please, sir?'

'I am a professor, my dear,' was the reply. 'I impart my knowledge to the student.'
'Then if you keep on that way, she said solemnly, 'pretty soon you won't know anything yourself, will you?'

Silent Service.

'I cannot be of any use,' is an exclamation used by many people. 'I cannot be a missionary. I cannot nurse the sick, or visit the poor and do for them. There is nothing really worth while that I can do for our Lord.'

But our tongues are not the only faculties we can use in the service of the Lord. Surely there are ways, grand ways, we silent people can be of use and a blessing to the world.

A star does not talk or make a noise; but its calm, steady beam shines down continually, and is a benediction to many. A flower cannot sing, and soon fades away and dies when plucked, but its sweet fragrance and beauty make it a blessing. Be like a star in your peaceful shining and a flower in your sweet purity and fragrant humility, and many will thank God for your life.

The living sacrifice does not always mean the active work. But it may mean the patient endurance of a wrong, the quiet bearing of a pain, the sweet forgiveness of a wrong, or a cheerful acquiescence in a disappointment. All these, and many more, will make your life blessed, even though silent, and you will be working continually for God.

Be Contented.

Don't worry because your neighbor's wife gives pink teas and cuts a swath in society while yours has to be content with the church tea meeting as a social function. You don't know what your neighbour has to take with the pink teas; if you did it might make you and your wife feel more contented. The question 'where does the money come from?' often has a most tragic answer. If you have a happy home and are paying your way let the other fellow have the excitement and worry of keeping up appearances in society. 'Better is a house of herbs where love is than a palace of gold and hatred therewith.'

Money and place are not everything. There are men and women in high positions who envy their servants and others who have no anxiety beyond the day's duties. The happiest man on earth is he who has learned 'in whatsoever state he is therewith to be contented.'

Granulated Sore Eyes Cured.

For twenty years I suffered from a bad case of granulated sore eyes, says Martin Royd of Henrietta, Ky. In February, 1904, a gentleman asked me to try Chamberlain's Salve. I bought one box and used about two-thirds of it and my eyes have not given me any trouble since. This salve is for sale by Rand's Drug Store.

Life's Picnic.

Oh, the folly of it. We pack our hamper for life's picnic with such pains. We spend so much, we work so hard. We make choice pies; we cook prime joints; we prepare so carefully the mayonnaise; we mix with loving hands the salad; we cram the basket to the lid with every delicacy we can think of. Everything to make the picnic a success is there except the salt. We slave at our desks, in our workshops, to make a home for those we love; we give up pleasures, we give up our rest. We toil in our kitchen from morning till night, and we render the whole least tasteful for want of a ha-portion of salt, for want of a handful of kind words, a touch of caress, a pinch of courtesy.—Jerome K. Jerome.

Dysentery is a dangerous disease but can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has been successfully used in nine epidemics of dysentery. It has never been known to fail. It is equally valuable for children and adults, and when reduced with water and sweetened, it is pleasant to take. Sold by Rand's Drug Store.

Low Heading.

John Isaacs, writing in the Orchard and Farm, states that an old apple grower, whose trees branch out about two feet from the ground, remarked a short time since, that with his experience, and appreciating the advantages of a low tree, if he were planting a new orchard he would not start his trees over a foot from the ground. The most successful peach orchards are started as close to the ground as this, and this is the outgrowth of experience with California conditions and those pertaining to the peach sections of Oregon and Washington. Apple growers all over the country are following in the same lead.

To sum up the advantages of this system: Low pruned trees are more resistant to the attacks of insects than high pruned ones; they are stronger and bear their burden of fruit better, as they are formed in a compact mass; their fruit is more easily gathered, as it is well within reach; the fruit is better, as the best fruit is always borne on the lower branches of the tree; they shade the ground and prevent the evaporation of its moisture—a great desideratum in a hot climate. These many advantages more than offset the one disadvantage offered in the matter of somewhat more difficult cultivation.

Be sure and take a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with you when starting on your trip this summer. It cannot be obtained on board the train or steamer. Changes of water and climate often cause sudden attacks of diarrhoea, and it is best to be prepared. Sold by Rand's Drug Store.

A Canadian Sunday.

Our Sunday and the work of the Alliance, attracts very widespread attention. The Edinburgh Weekly Scotsman recently printed a long article concerning the Lord's Day and our Lord's Day Act. Space permits only the two opening paragraphs:

Through the energetic activities of the Lord's Day Alliance, the Sabbath in Canada is truly a day of rest. All pursuits except divine worship, the transit of passenger trains and some freight, the transmission of telephone and telegraph messages, and the 'works of necessity and mercy,' specified in the law, have been brought to approximate inertia on the Sabbath. The saloons and bars, which since eleven o'clock six nights a week, look up at seven on Saturdays. Working men who might throw away a large part of their week's wage in drink, are thereby prevented from extravagance.

'The campaign of the Lord's Day Alliance has been largely successful because addressed not only to the principle of preserving the sacred character of the Lord's Day, but because it emancipates labor from toil. While many working men would like a little wholesome amusement on Sunday they would much rather sit at home and twirl their thumbs than work on that day.'—Lord's Day Advocate.

For Health and Economy Eat more Bread

TEN cents will feed an ordinary family a day on first class bread. This does not mean ordinary bread. For there is an important difference between ordinary bread and first class bread.

It isn't a difference of looks or methods of making or baking. It is a difference of nutrition, food value, healthfulness. And this food value depends on the flour used. For there is a wide difference between flours.

If all flour were the best flour, then all bread, properly made, would be good bread. But all flour is not first class because all wheat is not first class. Wheat, you know, varies in quality almost as much as apples or potatoes; there are as many different grades of wheat as there are grades of butter—or wool.

And every difference in grade represents an actual difference in nourishing value, food elements, wholesomeness. Flour made from a low grade of wheat is by no means so healthful as flour made from high grade wheat. Now the wheat that goes into

is of the very highest grade. It contains the highest possible percentage of nutritive value. The makers of "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" maintain extensive laboratories and baking departments where skilled men scientifically analyze each day's milling. None but the very best Red Eye wheat—rich in nutrition and healthfulness—can pass. For this reason bread made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR contains the maximum of food value and furnishes the maximum of energy and strength. And for the same reason "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" makes the finest pies, cakes, biscuits, muffins, rolls, and pastry of all kinds. It is the one flour that a housewife should use in order to have her household baking strictly first class.

Once used it and no one could ever coax you back to the old-fashioned clothesline method. Hill Dryers are made in several sizes and styles for sun, balcony and roof. Hold 100 to 150 feet of line—revolve so line comes to you—taken starts, folded up and put away, leaving your lawn entirely clear of obstructions.

Rocking Down vs Shaking

Which Do You Prefer?

Look at the man above. He's SHAKING an ordinary furnace. He bends nearly double, exerts all his strength, works up a perspiration, and gets a sore back.

Now, look at the woman. She stands nearly erect, gently moves the lever to and fro, a few inches, and the ashes are dropped into the Sunshine ash-pan. This is called ROCKING DOWN. It's so easy a child can do it.

Which method do you prefer? Why, Rocking Down, of course.

The Golden Rule and the Voting Out of the Saloon.

'If the country should vote 'dry,' I would be out of a job.'

Johnson's Hall in one of the small towns in Southern Ohio was crowded with people who had come to decide the question of circulating a 'dry' petition. The first speeches had been strongly in favor of temperance action. Then Simon Stribley sprang the first sensation of the evening.

'Fellow citizens,' he began, 'I have kept one of the two saloons in this town for the past ten years. We both have observed the law. No one can say we kept a disorderly place. I have $12,000 invested in the saloon business. It is the only business, I know anything about. If the country votes 'dry,' I must leave town, for I would be out of a job.'

At once the 'wet' took up this note of warning and tried to stampede the meeting. 'Of course we won't be so foolish as to drive such good citizens out of town,' said one frenzied habitue of the den.

In the midst of the hubbub, a pale faced little woman rose from a back seat, and asked the privilege of a hearing, which was granted.

'Friends,' she said, 'you all know me. I have lived here over thirty years, and my parents lived here thirty years before me. We have never broken a law of the community. My husband, as you know, is a railroad man. He earns sixty dollars a month. On pay day he brings home from two to seven dollars out of his sixty. The remaining fifty-eight are spent before they are earned, in Stribley's saloon. I have four children to clothe, feed and educate. To do this I take in six washings each week and keep two boarders. If this country should vote 'dry,' Mr. Stribley would lose over fifty dollars a month from my husband's salary, but I would have to spend in the grocery, clothing store, shoe store and other places about town. And I would have a husband's help and company about the home. True, Mr. Stribley would be out of the saloon business, but I would gladly pass over to him my two boarders and six washings. He need not be out of a job.'

And then came the triumph of the 'drys.' Amid their cheers and laughter, mingled with an occasional outburst of dismay from the 'wets,' the meeting, by a splendid majority, voted to circulate a 'dry' petition. Today Mr. Stribley is not passing out beer, nor is he keeping boarders, and his wife says he is the happiest man in town.

An investigation of moving picture shows made recently in Cleveland, Ohio, revealed the fact that forty per cent of the films examined were unfit for children and young people to see. Nor would older people be benefited by seeing them. They represented robbery, murder, domestic infidelity and were suggestive of indecency. Others represented loose ideas of marriage, kidnapping, suicide, etc.

It was found, too, that over twenty per cent of the evening audiences were under eighteen years of age. A chief of police reports that many criminals who come under his charge confess that their falling crime was due to suggestions received from seeing pictures representing scenes of violence, robbery or licentiousness.

Two Hundred Bars Out.

There are over two hundred and fifty less licensed grog-selling places in Ontario than there were on April 30th—thanks to the local option victories of January last. Many more places will have local option votes next year, and probably two or three hundred more licences will be cut off.

Half of the municipalities in that Province have delegatized the drink traffic, and the temperance people are determined to bring the other half under prohibition. Success to their efforts, and to like efforts in every part of the country. The traffic is an abominable thing, disgraceful to every community in which it is permitted to exist.

David Starr Jordan, president of Leland, Stanford, Jr. University of California, says: Boys who smoke cigarettes are like wormy apples. They drop long before the harvest time. They rarely make mistakes in life because they do not have any life. The boy who begins smoking before his sixteenth year never en-

AWAKENING OF SCIENCE TO THE VALUE OF FRUIT

What is "FRUIT-A-TIVES"?

Medical men are just beginning to realize the possibilities of fruit in curing disease. Its action on the liver, kidneys and skin is wonderful. Yet fruit in its raw state is impracticable in treating disease because of the minute quantity of the active or curative principle contained in fruit juice.

A physician in Ottawa, after years of patient work, discovered a process, whereby the medicinal or bitter principle of fruit juice is increased in quantity and thus a more active and more valuable substance is obtained. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit.

Hundreds of prominent people in every section of the Dominion owe their good health to "Fruit-a-tives." Hundreds more are daily becoming stronger and better by taking them.
