MET SUDDEN DEATH SATURDAY IN AUTO

S. Y. Jardine, Blackville Merchant, Found Dead Under Over-Turned Motor Car--Three Other Occupants Escape Serious Injury

Sudden death, while driving towards his home in Blackville from Newcastle last Saturday night about 12 o'clock in a motor car, was the tragic fate of Stephen Y. Jardine, a well known merchant of Blackville.

Whether death was due to heart failure, or to injuries received when the car which he was driving, plunged over the edge of the bridge at White Blackville, about four miles east of Blackville, dropped eight feet and turned turtle, will never be known.

The car in which Mr. Jardine met his death contained besides himself, Harry Underhill, who occupied the front seat beside the driver, Miss Clara Underhill, and Geo. Stephens. The party left Newcastle about ten o'clock Saturday night and were proceeding at a fair rate of speed towards Blackville, when as the car approached Bateman's Bridge, it made a detour in the road, and without warning, smashed squarely into the wire fence guard, and toppled over the edge to the ground eight feet below, landing upside down. All of the occupants, except Mr. Jardine, escaped from the car before it turned over.

Harry Underhill got out unscathed, while Geo. Stephens was slightly scratched and bruised, and Miss Underhill received somewhat painful but not serious injuries. The uninjured men, being unable in the darkness to extricate Mr. Jardine's body from the wreck, ran to the home of Mr. Smith some distance away, and with the assistance of a borrowed lantern and Mr. Smith's two sons, succeeded in righting the car just as another Blackville car, driven by Mr. Arward, came, with Messrs. D. T. Schofield, Allen Johnston and M. Schaffer, accompanying him arrived on the scene from Newcastle. Mr. Alcorn hurriedly proceeded to Blackville, and told of the accident to Dr. Beaton and undertaker Johnston, who hurried down to the scene of the fatality, the latter taking charge of the remains and removing them to town.

It was found that Mr. Jardine had been pinned down by the steering wheel and Dr. Beaton's examination disclosed the fact that the man's chest had been so badly crushed that death would probably have resulted from that cause almost instantaneously.

According to Mr. Underhill's account of the accident, Mr. Jardine, when about one hundred yards from the bridge, suddenly leaned forward upon the steering wheel of the car, and appeared to be gazing intently ahead, as if looking at something in the road. The car at once made a detour, and smashed into the bridge fence. The driver, however, showed no concern at this, but did attempt to move or utter any sound as the car plunged over the bridge. From this circumstance it is surmised that Mr. Jardine had an attack of heart failure at the moment when he fell forward upon the steering wheel, and it is thought that he was dead, or at least unconscious, when the car ran over the bridge. This opinion is also held by Dr. Beaton, and the heart failure explanation is further supported by the fact that Mr. Jardine

WANT TO CHANGE TEMPERANCE LAW

Rev. W. D. Wilson, N. B. Sec'y of Dominion Alliance Conducting Active Campaign in North'd County for Repeal of Scott Act

Rev. W. D. Wilson, secretary of the N. B. Branch of the Dominion Alliance, is in this county this week in the interests of the movement of the Northumberland County Alliance, to repeal the Scott Act.

Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Wilson occupied the Newcastle Baptist pulpit. He spoke of the forces at work in Canada, the most constructive of which is the church and the most destructive is the liquor traffic.

Sunday evening Rev. Mr. Wilson spoke in the Presbyterian church to another large congregation, taking as his subject: "Our Responsibility." He appealed for cooperation in the effort to repeal the Scott Act. The Christian people of Northumberland county ought to work as earnestly for the betterment of conditions at home as their brave sons are fighting at the front to preserve the honor and independence of our country he said. He offered, in illustration, the recent statement of a Welsh member of parliament that a young Welshman who took the valley train for Fredericton after a two days stay in York county, Gunner and Mrs. Ingram came to Newcastle on Saturday, and are remaining until today. Gunner Ingram's many friends here are very pleased to have him and his bride in their midst.

He blamed the M. P. for breach of faith. "In your recruiting speeches," said the soldier, "you promised that if I went to the war you would see that my home was protected. I went to the war, dug the trench and protected your home. You dug round mine, but allowed my home to be ruined by liquor."

Rev. Mr. Wilson made a fine impression in both churches.

Monday night he spoke in Douglastown Temperance Hall to a good-sized audience and fully explained the superiority of the Prohibition Act over the Scott Act. Rev. Alex. Firth presided. Messrs. R. W. Flett, chairman, Charles Johnston and Robert H. Jessamin were appointed a committee to supervise the canvass for signatures to the petition for repeal of the Scott Act.

Tuesday night Rev. Mr. Wilson and others spoke in Chatham; Wednesday, at Redbank; tonight (Thursday) in Loggieville; and on Friday night he speaks at Millerton.

In a short time Rev. Mr. Wilson will return to the county for a few days more propaganda.

Excitement Grows with Progress of Campaign

Miss Harrigan Leads, and Miss Betts Establishes Claim to Second Place--Others Making Splendid Showings

No startling developments are to be recorded in the Advocate Voting Campaign this week, although splendid progress has been made by all the contestants, and a tremendous total volume of votes has accumulated since last week.

Only one change in the relative standing of contestants has occurred, during the week, and this concerns Miss Betts, of Doaktown, and Mrs. Harry Brown, of South Nelson, who were tied for second place last week. This week Miss Betts has forged slightly ahead of Mrs. Brown, and has a clear cut claim to second place, although her margin of votes is very small. Mrs. Brown, who is now in the value of the various prizes, but one and all naturally want to win the "Chevrolet" touring car which will be awarded as first prize. The second prize, as previously announced is a magnificent $400 "Lonsdale" cabinet grand piano, manufactured and guaranteed by The Lonsdale Piano Co. of Toronto, while the third prize is a handsome $150 cabinet of highest grade silver plated tableware, manufactured and guaranteed by Canadian Wm. A. Rogers, Limited, of Toronto, and the fourth is a beautiful $100 quadruple plated silver tea service, manufactured and guaranteed by the

That, of course, is entirely speculative, and while speculating as to possible or probable changes in the relative standing of contestants, one might as well say that Miss Ullock or Miss Copp may be in second or first place a week from now, for comparatively few votes separate any two contestants and the leap from fifth to first place can be measured with a very few his subscriptions. The important fact at present is that five contestants seem to be doing all it is possible to do to obtain subscriptions and vot-

Land Settlement Scheme May Benefit Newcastle

Track of Land Near Beaver Brook May be Utilized for Settling Hundred or More Families

Newcastle stands a fairly good chance of benefitting materially from the community plan of farm settlement, which the provincial government is now at work on through its Farm Settlement Board. On Wednesday of this week a party consisting of the members of the Provincial Farm Settlement and Advisory Boards, inspected lands between Bathurst and Newcastle to investigate the suitability of those lands as sites for the proposed community settlements which the government purposes establishing within the near future. At Beaver Brook land was found which may prove suitable for the purpose in view. The object of the Farm Settlement Board is to establish communities of about 110 or 115 families each in various parts of the province. Each community will occupy a tract of land four square miles in extent. The farms will consist of from 10 to 100 acres each. The government will clear ten acres on each farm, build a house and barn thereon, and sell the farms to qualified settlers at actual cost of improvements. All the land to be thus utilized will be crown property. The farms will be sold on easy terms, with a small initial payment, and deferred payments running probably for a term of twenty years with interest at the same rate as the government pays upon the money raised to finance the scheme. At the centre of each community tract a demonstration farm, in charge of an agricultural expert, will be maintained for the purpose of instructing settlers in the most modern and scientific methods of farming. Agricultural implements will be kept here for the use of the community at large, on a nominal rental plan, when required.

and a school house, church and public hall will probably be erected for the use of the community. The details of the scheme have not been fully worked out, but the general purpose is to so arrange matters as to promote in the most effectual manner, the rapid settlement and development of the land for agricultural purposes. Co-operative marketing and buying will likely be one of the administrative features of the government's scheme.

Should it be decided to locate one of the settlements at Beaver Brook, it will mean the establishment of an important community of about five hundred people within ten miles of Newcastle, which in a commercial way will undoubtedly be of considerable benefit to the town.

Those in the party who inspected the land at Beaver Brook on Wednesday were: A. W. Hay, of Woodstock, and James Gilchrist, of St. John, chairman and secretary respectively, of the Farm Settlement Board; and Capt. Masters (chairman of Moncton C. C. Hayward, of Newcastle, and A. B. Wilnot, of Fredericton, members of the Advisory Board.

The party made their trip in a special car. They left Moncton Tuesday morning, and inspected several pieces of land on the Transcontinental line between Moncton and McGlavry's Junction on Tuesday. At Sagaw a fine tract was gone over, and there is a chance that the first community settlement will be established there. The party's special car was brought to Newcastle on the Express Tuesday night, and taken north Wednesday morning. On the return trip the party reached Newcastle Wednesday noon, when they disbanded.

Skillful Operations at The Miramichi

The first surgical operation of its kind, it is said, to have been performed in Northumberland county, was performed in the Miramichi Hospital about two weeks ago. The patient was J. S. Dutcher, of Bay du Vin, who has been a sufferer from apopleptic convulsions for some four years, as a result of two depressed fractures of the skull, caused by a tree falling upon him. The operation, which involved the removal of the depressed areas of the skull of about two square inches, appears to have been entirely successful, and Mr. Dutcher, who has been out of the hospital's now for a week, is progressing nicely, and no indication of a recurrence of his former trouble has appeared since the operation. Previously he was continuously bothered by shadows over the left eye, which have completely disappeared. The operation was performed by the superintendent of the Miramichi Hospital, Dr. D. R. Moore, assisted by Dr. Beaton, of Redbank, and Dr. Nicholson, of Newcastle.

Another operation of a similar character was performed at the Miramichi Hospital recently, the patient being John Johnson, of Nordin.

Other patients who have recently undergone successful operations at the Miramichi Hospital include Mrs. Frederick Young, of Nashwaak; Mrs. Gallivan, of Newcastle, and Mrs. Oliver Yeo, of Millerton, all of whom have returned to their homes.

The shaft of the wagon struck him in the side, fracturing one of his ribs, and hurling him unconscious into the ditch. He was picked up and carried into Dr. Nicholson's office, where, in the absence of Dr. Nicholson, Dr. Moore attended to the injury. Mr. Jones will be confined to his home for a few days. It is extremely fortunate that the accident was not worse.

PT. E. ATKINSON KILLED

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Atkinson of Moncton, received information that their son, Pte. Nelson, was killed in action on Sept. 15th. The message came from the widow of Pte. Atkinson of Medicine Hat. He enlisted at Medicine Hat and had been in the trenches since Sept. 1915. Two brothers, Capt. William D. and Walter P., also enlisted. The former is now in England, and the latter is invalided. Mrs. B. L. Gerow, of St. John, is a sister. Private Atkinson was married in 1910 to Miss Gertrude Dickenson, of Medicine Hat—Moncton Times.

APT. SHIVES

Captain Gilbert Shives, of the Royal Flying Corps, a native of Campbellton, was killed on Sept. 29th as the result of an accident with a Lewis machine gun. He was 25 years old and a graduate of the U. N. B.

FRUIT JUICES

After making jelly, turn the fruit left in the jelly bag into a saucepan, cover with water and boil. Strain this through the bag again, boil a second time with sugar and seal up in jars. This will be found very valuable in making cold drinks, especially when lemons are expensive.

TOASTED CORN

An improvement over boiled corn is toasted corn. After boiling the ears for ten minutes so as to cook them partially, remove to a bread toaster and place over hot coals, turning until they are browned evenly. The delicious flavor obtained by this method is well worth the extra work.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLD

The fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm the next is wet and cold and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mother's best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent colds or if it does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly cure it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

INSTEAD OF PAINT

DON'T paint your pretty home this season, but use instead Velux Creosote Shingle Stains. By so doing, you can bring out all the beauty of the wood. And think of the preservative value. Velux Shingle Stains contain Creosote, the greatest wood preservative known. This means prolonged protection against wind and weather. It therefore means economy.

VELUX CREOSOTE SHINGLE STAINS

Half the Cost - Twice the Wear Velux Creosote Shingle Stains cost about half as much as paint. And they wear much better because they penetrate the wood. They do not evaporate or dry out and of course they cannot peel off. These stains come in any color you want. They are very easily applied. You ought to investigate them. We have the complete line and we know you will like them. Write us for a sample of wood stained with Velux Creosote Shingle Stain.

Breezy Notes From The Battle's Din

The following letter was received by Mrs. James T. Crocker, of Millerton, from her son, Alward C. Crocker, who is somewhere in France:

Dear Mother,
I received a letter from home yesterday, and am glad to know you are all O. K. It must be very uncomfortable in the intense heat, but I expect by now it is much cooler. We have had a very cool summer in France, as compared with last year, and I swear my overcoat in the mornings and evenings when driving.

I have been intending to write you a short description of France, as I see it, for some time, but have not had time to do so. I am having it easier just now. For a few weeks before the big push came off, and up till late in the day, I worked four days and nights without sleep. Finally I fell asleep at the wheel and crashed into a tree, and severely damaged my radiator. It was just as well the tree was where it was, or I would have taken a day ride down an embankment. I went in the workshop for two days after the accident, and slept all the time. There have been quite a few accidents in our column and through drivers going to sleep. I can tell you it is misery trying to keep awake, plodding along at eight miles an hour.

We have made a move lately, and are now at the other end of the line, and the country is much flatter here. One night another lad and I were detailed to take material for gun beds up to within six hundred yards of the Germans' first line trenches. That is pretty close to take a Jerry, and I felt safer when I had a few miles between me and them, as they sweep the roads with machine guns occasionally. But it was dark and I hid behind a clump of trees, for star shells were some very occasionally.

There are a great many Australians and Canadians about here, but I have not seen any from home yet. They are a fine looking lot of men and are in good spirits. The Germans were greatly surprised by our strength when we started advancing on the Somme. Our advance was terrible, as we put over five million shells in ten days. The rear was continual day and night, but it is much better to spend ammunition and smash their defenses completely, before the soldiers advance, as we have found out the hard way. It is a wonderful how clearly the men are after going through what they have and they never think of anything but victory, but often ask among themselves: "How long do you think it will last?" A notion like ours with unlimited resources never has been defeated, as we never know when we are getting the worst of it, and our bulldog determination keeps us going on till the other nation's resources run out. It looked very black for us a year ago, but we reloaded our energies and now complete victory is easily in sight, thanks partially to the Paris conference, but we will have a trade war after this is over. There are two and a half million people in England at work on munitions, so you can imagine the amount they would turn out, besides what we get from home and the United States, and still we need more.

The French are harvesting their wheat now, and the crop is very good, as the land is very productive, and the weather favorable. There will be no shortage of food here for another year, but they have our navy to thank for that. When I was driving about the country a short time ago, I saw large fields of grain. They don't put their hay and grain in a barn, as we do at home, but bind it and stack it in the field, and that saves the top to keep out the rain. They live in villages and drive out to their work, some of them going as far as two miles. They don't believe in cutting up fences either. I have driven a hundred miles through the country at a time, and haven't seen a fence, yet they cultivate every inch of available ground, and on patches that we wouldn't think of cultivating, they have wheat or oats growing. They are not much like the people in England or Scotland, where I have been, who waste thousands and thousands of acres of good land, that should now be under cultivation.

I know of one estate in England of 7000 acres, and about all I saw on it was rabbits, and the poor people are not allowed to shoot them, and I was told that it was very good farm land. The French people have the funniest way of driving their horses. Instead of two reins, they have one, and how they manage to guide the horse is a mystery to me. Of course the poor old horses are not as wild as ours, and have more sense than the drivers.

We are having much more rain lately than for the past three months and we are having a taste of last winter's mud. I'm beginning to dread the wet season, as the roads in this section are not as good as where we were last winter. The centre of the main roads are built of cobble stones, but the sides are soft, and when it is wet, one must be very careful. I receive the papers from home regularly, and Ernest sends me papers and magazines, so I have plenty of reading matter. I also got a large tin of tobacco from a friend in Los Angeles. I can't use the army issue tobacco, and the cigarettes we get weekly are impossible, so the gift was very welcome. There is some talk of getting up a cinema in our company, also a recreation room like we had last winter, and I surely hope they do. The Y. M. C. A. is doing invaluable work out here, providing recreation rooms, and canteens for the soldiers, where they sell our requirements at cost. They keep a great many soldiers away from the camps, where all they sell is beer and wine.

I hope you all keep well. I must stop and go to the post with this. Write often. Love to all.
ALWARD.

A NEW WONDER

(Popular Science Monthly)

When the possibilities of sending messages over a wire by electricity were first realized, soon after Morse demonstrated the first telegraph, the limitations in the message carrying ability of a plain circuit were encountered. The ordinary good operator could send only one complete message per minute, and to do this he required the full use of the wire connecting with the receiver. Each line was thus limited to about four hundred messages per hour.

It became clear that extremely high rates would have to be charged for messages over expensive long-distance wires. The greatest cost of the telegraph system was due to the erection and maintenance of the lines, and therefore the way to make lower charges possible appeared to increase the number of messages which could be handled on each wire.

The first step towards solving the problem of message limitation came with the duplex telegraph, which made it possible for two operators to use a single wire at the same time. In this system two streams of messages pass over the wire simultaneously, in opposite directions, so that the capacity is doubled. The next step was the quadruplex, in which four messages are sent simultaneously over one wire, thus increasing the normal capacity some ten or twelve times. In this system the messages are first punched into special tapes by perforating operators. The tapes are simultaneously punched out by ten perforators which will usually keep in full operation. At the receiving station the messages are printed in dots and dashes on a second tape, this is divided into suitable lengths and distributed amongst a number of transcribing operators who translate the Morse code and write out the message for delivery. The system is entirely practical and is used in connection with the ocean cables. In the United States it is not favored for inter-city telegraphing because of the loss of time which results from the series of processes through which messages must pass.

Automatic telegraphy suggested printing telegraphy, in which the message received appears in typewritten form. The first of these instruments like the stock-ticker, printed their messages on paper tapes. Soon it became possible to connect the printers over considerable distances by wire. In these typewriter keyboard transmitters, either directly or through a punched tape, operates over the line a typewriter receiver. The message is thus printed ready for delivery in the office of the receiving operator punches it out of the sending keyboard. Such printing systems usually operate up to the typewriting speed of fifty words per minute or so, and can be duplexed. By their use much time and expense in message handling are saved and the good features of present day rapid wire line service are largely due to these installations.

The newest and most perfect page printing telegraph is that which the Western Electric engineers have recently completed. In this system a single wire is used not only to carry eight messages simultaneously, four in each direction, but to print them on blanks at the receivers, ready for delivery. Thus the speed of direct printing operation fifty words per minute is combined with a distributor to use a single wire line amounting to a group of transmitting, receiving and accessory units. The instrument used is much like a typewriter, but instead of printing the letters a group of punches are controlled by the keys and perforated on a paper tape, with various combinations of holes. After the printing is completed, the receiver is a group of transmitting, receiving and accessory units. Rowdies Were Taught a Lesson

The social gathering in New Salem Hall, Wednesday evening, Oct. 4th, under the auspices of the Blissfield Agricultural Society, following the society's fair of the same day, was all but broken up by the actions of three rowdies, which, it is stated on good authority deliberately created a disturbance which ended in a strenuous fistfight argument when the officials of the occasion attempted to eject the disturbers from the hall.

The men, who came to the hall from Doaktown, in a motor car, it is said, entered the hall unceremoniously, and immediately "started things" by upsetting the stove. Remonstrance at their behaviour proving ineffective, they were ordered out but refused to go, and when efforts were made to put them out, they became aggressively pugacious. They were finally ejected, however, and after they had been removed from the hall, it is understood that they were chastised so effectually by members of the gathering other than the officials, that they were quite willing to climb back into their motor car and return to Doaktown.

It is understood from a reliable source, that one member of the disturbing party, at least, has been making a practice of attending public gatherings with the purpose of creating disturbances, breaking them up, and in more than one case, it is said he has succeeded. It is thought, however, that the chastisement he and his companions received at New Salem Hall, will have a salutary effect upon them, and that they will not be so eager to break up future gatherings of a peaceable nature.

The officials of the society, it is understood, are not content to let matters stand as they ended Wednesday night, and there is talk of legal proceedings being taken against the trio of wanton disturbers alluded to.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it will be confidential.

UNION SCHOOL FAIR

On Tuesday, September 26th, the school District of Kirkwood, Bryncton and Derby combined to hold a school fair in the Derby Superior school. It proved to be a success, and was largely attended, not only by those in the district of Millerton, but also by many from the surrounding districts. The products of home plots as well as school garden work were exhibited. Not only garden produce but some project work of the pupils, such as cake, pie etc., by the girls and manual training work, such as bird houses, etc., by the boys, were shown. Some very fine specimens of Rhode Island Reds as well as other breeds of poultry raised exclusively by the pupils, were also on exhibition.

It is intended that this shall be but a prelude to more successful displays in Rural Science work later on, and indirectly to the community will be an incentive to greater agricultural production, expressing as it is intended to express, a closer relationship between the school and the domestic affairs of the community.

The Only Way to Cure Rheumatism

Must be Treated Through the Blood and the Poisonous Acid Driven Out

The twinges and tortures of rheumatism are not due to cold, damp weather as so many people suppose. Rheumatism comes from poisonous acid in the blood. This is a medical truth that every rheumatic sufferer should realize. There is only one way to cure rheumatism—it must be treated through the blood. All the liniments and rubbing and so-called electrical treatment in the world will not cure rheumatism, and the sufferer who tries them is not only wasting money, but is allowing the trouble to become more firmly rooted in the system and harder to cure when the proper remedy is tried. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have had remarkable success in curing rheumatism because they go right to the root of the trouble in the blood, driving out the poisonous acid, relieving the stiffened joints, clearing away the torturing pains, and giving the victim renewed health and ease. Mr. Vincent Brown, Havre Boucher, N. S., says: "For two years I was an almost constant sufferer from rheumatism, the trouble being so bad at times that I could scarcely move. I tried the stiffened joints, clearing away the torturing pains, and giving the victim renewed health and ease. Mr. Vincent Brown, Havre Boucher, N. "Go get him this minute. And bring the poor darling back to his mother."

"His mother! Ye gods!" cried Mallory, wildly. He turned away and dashed into the men's room with a furious "Where's that damned dog?"

He met the porter just returning. The porter smiled: "He's right in heah, sir," and opened the buffet door. His eyes popped and his jaw sagged: "Why, I left him here just a minute ago."

"You left the window open, too," Mallory observed. "Well, I guess he's gone."

The porter was panic-stricken: "Oh, I'm turrrible sorry, boss, I wouldn't have lost dat dog for a fortune. If you was to hit me with a axe I wouldn't mind."

To his utter befuddlement, Mallory grinned and winked at him, and murmured: "Oh, that's all right. Don't worry." And actually laid half a dollar in his palm. Leaving the black lids hitting over the starting eyes, Mallory pulled his smile into a long face and went back to Marjorie like an undertaker: "My love, prepare yourself for bad news."

Marjorie looked up, startled and apprehensive: "Snoodleums is ill. He did tite the darkey."

"Worse than that—he—he—fell out of the window."

"When!" she shrieked, "in heaven's name—when?"

"He was there just a minute ago, the waiter says."

Marjorie went into instant hysterics, wringing her hands and sobbing: "Oh, my darling, my poor child—stop the train at once!"

She began to pound Mallory's shoulders and shake him frantically. He had never seen her this way either. He was getting his education in advance. He tried to calm her with ineffectual words: "How can I stop the train? Now, dearie, he was a nice dog, but after all, he was only a dog."

She rounded on him like a panther: "Only a dog! He was worth a dozen men like you. You find the conductor at once, command him to stop this train—and back up! I don't care if he has to go back ten miles. Run, tell him at once. Now, you run!"

Mallory stared at her as if she had gone mad, but he set out to run somewhere, anywhere. Marjorie paced up and down distractedly, tearing her hair and moaning: "Snoodleums, Snoodleums! My child, my poor child!"

At length her wildly roving eyes noted the bell rope. She stared, pondered, nodded her head, clutched at it, could not reach it, jumped for it several times in vain, then seized a chair, swung it into place, stood up in it, gripped the rope, and came down on it with all her weight, dropping to the floor and jumping up and down in a frenzied dance. In the distance the engine could be heard faintly whistling, whistling for every pull.

The engineer, far ahead, could not imagine what unheard-of crisis could bring about such mad signals. The fireman yelled:

"I bet that crazy conductor is attacked with an epileptic fit."

But there was no disputing the command. The engine was reversed, the air brakes set, the sand run out and every effort made to pull the iron horse, as it were, back on its haunches.

The grinding, squealing, jolting, shook the train like an earthquake. The shrieking of the whistle froze the blood like a woman's cry of "Murder!" in the night. The women among the passengers echoed the screams. The men turned pale and braced themselves for the shock of collision. Some of them were mumbling prayers. Dr. Temple and Jimmie Wellington, with one idea in their dissimilar souls, dashed from the smoking room to go to their wives.

Ashton and Wedgewood, with no one to care for but themselves, seized windows and tried to fight them open. At last they budged a sash and knelt down to thrust their heads out.

"I don't see a beastly thing ahead," said Wedgewood, "except the heads of other fools."

"We're slowing down though," said Ashton, "she stops! We're safe. Thank God!" And he collapsed into a chair. Wedgewood collapsed into another, gasping: "Whatever are we safe from, I wonder?"

The train-crew and various passengers descended and ran alongside the train asking questions. Panic gave way to mystery. Even Dr. Temple came back into the smoking room to finish a precious cigar he had been at work on. He was followed by Little Jimmie, who had not quite reached his wife when the stopping of the train put an end to his excuse for chivalry. He was regretfully mumbling:

"It would have been such a good shanah to shave my life's wife—I mean my—I don't know what I mean." He sank into a chair and ordered a drink; then suddenly remembered his vow, and with great heroism, rescinded the order.

Mallory, finding that the train was checked just before he reached the conductor, saw that official's bewildered wrath at the stoppage and had a fearsome intuition that Marjorie had somehow done the deed. He hurried back to the observation room, where he found her charging up and down, still distraught. He paused at a safe distance and said:

"The train has stopped, my dear."

"Somebody rang the bell."

"I guess somebody did!" Marjorie answered, with a proud toss of the head. "Where's the conductor?"

"He's looking for the fellow that pulled the rope."

"You go tell him to back up—and slowly, too."

"No, thank you!" said Mallory. He was a brave young man, but he was not hearding the conductors of stopped expresses. Already the conductor's voice was heard in the smoking room, where he appeared with the rush and roar of a Bashan bull.

"Well!" he bellowed, "which one of you guys pulled that rope?"

"It was nobody here, sir," Dr. Temple meekly explained. The conductor transfixed him with a baleful glare: "I wouldn't believe a gambler on oath. I bet you did it."

"I assure you, sir," Wedgewood interposed, "he didn't touch it. I was heah."

The conductor waved him aside and charged into the observation room, rattowed by all the passengers in an awe-struck rabble. Here, too, the conductor thundered: "Who pulled that rope? Speak up somebody!"

Mallory was about to sacrifice himself to save Marjorie, but she met the conductor's black rage with the withering contempt of a young queen: "I pulled the old rope. Whom did you suppose?"

The conductor almost dropped with apoplexy at finding himself with nobody to vent his immense rage on, but this pink and white slip. "You!" he gaped, "well, what in— Say, in the name of—why, don't you know it's a penitentiary offense to stop a train this way?"

Marjorie tossed her head a little higher, grew a little calmer: "What do I care? I want you to back up."

The conductor was reduced to a wet rag, a feeble echo: "Back up—the train up!"

"Yes, back the train up," Marjorie answered, resolutely, "and go slowly till I tell you to stop."

The conductor stared at her a moment, then whirled on Mallory: "Say, what in hell's the matter with your wife?"

Mallory was saved from the problem of answering by Marjorie's abrupt change from a young Tsarina rebuking a serf, to a terrified mother. She flung out imploring palms and with a such of tears pleaded: "Won't you please back up? My darling child fell off the train!"

The conductor's rage fell away in an instant. "Your child fell off the train!" he gasped. "Good Lord! How old was he?"

With one hand he was groping for the bell cord to give the signal, with the other he opened the door to look back along the track.

"He was two years old," Marjorie sobbed.

"Oh, that's too bad!" the conductor groaned. "What did he look like?"

"He had a pink ribbon round his neck."

"A pink ribbon—oh, the poor little fellow! the poor little fellow!"

"And a long curly tail."

The conductor swung round with a yell: "A curly tail—your son?"

"My dog!" Marjorie roared back at him.

The conductor's voice cracked weakly as he shrieked: "Your dog? You stopped this train for a fool dog?"

"He wasn't a fool dog," Marjorie retorted, facing him down, "he knows more than you do."

The conductor threw up his hands: "Well, don't you women beat—" He studied Marjorie as if she were some curious freak of nature. Suddenly an idea struck into his daze: "Say, what kind of a dog was it?—a measly little cheese-hound?"

"He was a noble, beautiful soul with wonderful eyes and adorable ears."

The conductor was growing weaker and weaker: "Well, don't worry. I got him. He's in the baggage car."

Marjorie stared at him unbelievably. The news seemed too gloriously beautiful to be true. "He isn't dead—Snoodleums is not dead!" she cried, "he lives! He lives! You have saved him." And once more she flung herself upon the conductor. He tried to bat her off like a gnat, and Mallory came to his rescue, by dragging her away and showing her into a chair. But she saw only the noble conductor: "Oh, you dear, good, kind angel. Get him at once."

"He stays in the baggage car," the conductor answered, firmly and as he supposed, finally.

"But Snoodleums doesn't like baggage cars," Marjorie smiled. "He won't ride in one."

"He'll ride in this one or I'll wring his neck."

"You fiend in human flesh!" Marjorie shrank away from him in horror, and he found courage to seize the bell rope and yank it viciously with a sardonic: "Please, may I start this train?"

The whistle tooted faintly. The bell began to hammer, the train to creak and writhe and click. The conductor pulled his cap down hard and started forward. Marjorie seized his sleeve: "Oh, I implore you, don't consign that poor sweet child to the horrid baggage car. If you have a human heart in your breast, hear my prayer."

The conductor surrendered unconditionally: "Oh, Lord, all right, all right. I'll lose my job, but if you'll keep quiet, I'll bring him to you." And
