BISHOP FEILD COLLEGE

(FOR BOYS)
Will Re-Open on Tuesday, Sept. 24th, at 9.30 a.m.

The Church of England Orphanage Building has been taken over by the Directors for the accommodation of boarders attending Bishop Feild College and is being completely renovated and repaired for the purpose.
The Rev. H. L. Pike, assisted by Mrs. Frank Colley as Lady Matron, and a suitable staff of resident teachers will preside over the new Hostel, which will be known as Feild Hall.
The work of renovation is the cause of the rather late date of the re-opening of the College.
Applications for admission and for further information should be addressed to R. R. WOOD, ESQ., B.A., Headmaster of Bishop Feild College, Salmon Cove, near Carbonear; or, in the case of boarders, to the REV. H. L. PIKE, Warden of Feild Hall, LeMarchant Road, St. John's.

BISHOP SPENCER COLLEGE

(FOR GIRLS)
Will Re-Open on Tuesday, Sept. 17th, at 9.30 a.m.

Number 9 Church Hill (Spencer Lodge) has been taken over by the Directors for boarders attending Bishop Spencer College and Mrs. R. L. Cooper (formerly Miss Bright) has been appointed the Lady Superintendent of the Lodge.
Applications for admission and for further information should be addressed to MISS STIRLING, Principal of Bishop Spencer College, Barnes' Road, St. John's; or, in the case of boarders, to MRS. COOPER, who will be at Topsail until early in September.

Happiness Secured AT A Heavy Cost!

CHAPTER XXIV.
IT WAS NOT TO BE.

And three days later the news is brought to Deepdene that Mr. Warden has quitted Hanbury for good.

"Gone away—nobody knows where—and without so much as a word of good-by to any of us!" Len exclaims, with a little uneasy glance at Addie. "What is ails, Adelaide? Have you and Ernest quarrelled?" he asks, in a tone of surprise and perplexity. "Won't you tell me what has happened? What is the trouble between you two?"

"I cannot, Len!" she replies, turning away her face to hide the anguish in her eyes—"I cannot, indeed! Only that we have parted forever, and that if you love me you will never mention his name to me any more!"

But, apart from this, she takes it very quietly.

Her womanly pride keeps her silent. Not even to me does she utter a word of complaint; but I can see that her heart is bleeding inwardly.

There is a beseeching pathos in her sad eyes—a white, stricken look in her face that frightens me; and as the days wear on, Len, all unconscious as he is of the real nature of her trouble, grows so anxious about her that he insists upon calling in medical aid.

Almost immediately upon Ernest Warden's departure she goes back to her desk and tries to write; but the task is evidently beyond her strength. And as time drags on, sleep and appetite both fall her so utterly that she begins to look more like a wan specter of her former self than anything.

If she could but sleep she might, perhaps, learn to forget in time. I think, as I find her, night after night, lying awake, absorbed in that silent, tearful grief that is eating away her life. But, alas! to quote the fussy little country surgeon, who comes over nearly every day from Hanbury to see her, "insomnia is the most difficult feature of the case!"

Landanum, morphia, and chloral are alike powerless to lull the aching brain to repose; and, finding at last that his patient's symptoms will yield to neither tonic nor opiate, the doctor begins to talk of change of air and scene.

"As if one place were not the same as another to me, Lesley!" she exclaims, almost instantly, when I strive to rouse her into something like interest in the subject. "Only let me alone, dear! I should be better if I could but write; work is the great anodyne for suffering; but I begin to think sometimes that I never shall again."

"Things can't go on like this, Lesley," Leonard remarks in confidence to me one morning. "That poor little soul is simply dying before our eyes! I tell you what it is, dear, I've lost all faith in that Hanbury man, and I've made up my mind that I'll write to Doctor Fuller this very day, and see if he can spare time to run down and see her. It is a strange thing; but I have a strong presentiment that if any one can do anything for her, Doctor Fuller is that man."

DOCTOR COULD NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from a Serious Operation.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I suffered something dreadful from a displacement and two very bad attacks of inflammation. My doctor said he could do nothing more for me and I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am now in good health. I am willing you should see my testimonial and hope to benefit other suffering women by so doing."—Mrs. P. Pratt, 9 Woodbine St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Operations upon women in our hospitals are constantly on the increase, but before submitting to an operation for almost any ailment, your own every woman ought to try to give the famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. If recommendations exist, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Kink in the Back

You bend over and can scarcely get straightened up again. This comes on you so suddenly you can't understand it.

This is lumbago. Like backache and rheumatism, it is the result of poisons in the blood. The kidneys are deranged, but the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will soon set them right. The pains and aches will disappear with the poisons when the kidneys do their work properly.

So it is arranged, and Len sends away an urgent appeal, which brings a prompt reply from the doctor, saying he will be with us to-morrow.

CHAPTER XXV.
WHEN LOVE COMES KNOCKING.

NEARLY eight weeks have gone since Ernest Warden quitted Hanbury, and, so far, we have heard nothing of him from any one.

It is September now. Everywhere the blackberries are ripening on the hedges, while the sharp crack of the sportsman's gun rings out over the stubby fields, from which the harvest has been gathered in; and, although to all outward seeming, things are going on much as usual at Deepdene, a very perceptible change has come over us all in the interim.

For one thing, Miss Clitheroe is a very much less frequent visitor to Deepdene than formerly. While poor Len, looking pale and miserable, shuts himself up in his studio, and works away at his painting with such a desperation of industry as he has not displayed for months.

Something is wrong between them. I see it all too plainly; and I am afraid I can only too easily divine what it is. I make no mention of the subject to Len; but I cannot help suspecting that it is certain significant little rumors concerning the beautiful Miss Clitheroe and the wealthy owner of the Priory that are troubling him.

Once or twice while walking alone with Mr. Denton, who has got into the habit of constituting himself my very frequent escort of late, I have caught sight of Gwendolen Clitheroe's beautiful blond face in the Priory carriage, as, accompanied by her father, to whom Mr. Erroll is reported to have become wondrously polite of late, she was being driven over to the great house for some quiet little dinner or luncheon, to which no one save the Clitheroes are ever invited.

One thing is clear: A wonderful intimacy has sprung up of late between the master of the Priory and the inmates of Fynton Rectory; and taking the fair face of the rector's daughter, and Mr. Erroll's very significant attentions in consideration, people are beginning to draw their own inferences.

Mistress of the Priory is a position few women would disdain to occupy; and, as the Hanbury gossip very openly asserts, Miss Clitheroe, with her extravagant habits and lack of dowry, is certainly not one of those few.

At Ivy Cottage, so far as I am able to judge, things are going on much as usual. Mrs. Lennox, as the poor, demented creature who occupies it is called, still remains there with her solitary attendant, Mrs. Martin, who no longer comes to Deepdene.

Our most frequent visitor since Ernest Warden's departure is Mr. Denton. Week after week he stays on at his old quarters at the Red Lion; and very few days pass without bringing him over on one pretext or another to Deepdene.

To-day it is a tempting little basket of fruit for Addie; to-morrow a new book for me; or some choice cigars, that need to be talked over with Len; and just how and when it first began to be an understood thing that Mr. Denton comes to Deepdene in the character of my lover I can hardly tell. That such a state of things has come to pass it would be mere affectionation on my part to attempt to disguise; and, whether the knowledge gives me more pleasure or pain, is a question I am really at a loss to answer.

Of his feelings for me he does not leave me in much doubt; but of mine for him I am not so clear.

Young, handsome, rich, devoted to me, what more can any girl desire in the hero of that sweet dream of love, and a husband feasting somewhere in the shadowy future for me as for every girl that breathes? And yet there are times when I am half inclined to wish that handsome Charles Denton and I had never met.

"And so that is your medical friend from London, eh?" he remarks, on the afternoon of Doctor Fuller's arrival at Deepdene, following me into the garden, where, taking a seat on the bench of the old summer house, he watches me while I fill my basket with flowers for the vases. "What a grim-looking customer, to be sure! Did he ever indulge in any such weakness as a smile or laugh, do you suppose? Uplift me ever I saw, by Jove!"

"He is plain," I reply, with a laugh, as I remember my own first impressions of the doctor. "But it's a plainness all his own, though. You would not find another man like Doctor Fuller if you searched all London over; and it is astonishing how you grow to like him as you come to know him."

"Humph!" he replies, with a suspicious little glance at me, "never saw a man who realized my inner notions of Mephistopheles more thoroughly! Does he always take refuge in such a brilliant flash of silence as that to which he treated me to-day, when I enjoyed the inestimable pleasure of basking in the light of his distinguished presence?"

"He is rather stern in his manner, I'm afraid," I admit, with a glance at the handsome face under the cool shade of Charley Denton's careless straw hat. "But we, of all people in the world, cannot afford to criticize him very severely." I add, snipping off a spray of prettily tinted leaves, with a very vivid contrast in my mind, presented by Doctor Fuller's stern, hard face and rather stiff manners, to the handsome Charley Denton's free-and-easy fascinations. "We owe him a debt of gratitude which nothing can ever pay! But for him we might have lost poor Len in that terrible illness of his; and friends like that are not so common that we can afford to despise them. So whatever your personal impressions of Doctor Fuller may be, Mr. Denton, I beg you will remember that I am not at liberty to listen to one single disrespectful word against him," I conclude, rather icily.

"Hang Doctor Fuller!" is the impatient reply. "I hate him! I believe you would quarrel with me for his sake!"

"I would quarrel with any one who spoke disrespectful of my friends," I return, with as much dignity as I can muster. "Doctor Fuller has done us a great service."

"Good Heavens, Lesley!" he exclaims, "do you suppose that there is nobody in the world ready and willing to do you a service but that surly old sawbones—that there is anything I would not do—any sacrifice I would not make—that I would not be proud and happy to share my last dry crust with you?" he adds dramatically.

"Thanks, very much," I reply, with a demure little glance into the earnest, gray eyes that are searching my face, as if they would read, my thoughts, "but I'm afraid I am not particularly fond of dry crusts."

"No, nor of anything else I can offer you, I believe," is the bitter reply. "Oh, Lesley, why cannot you be a little nice to me? Why cannot you be as pleased to see me as Doctor Fuller?"

"You are very ungrateful," I reply, looking up from a careful inspection of the contents of my basket. "I'm sure I'm always very pleased to see you."

"Are you, indeed? I'm glad you have told me, for I'm sure I should never have suspected it," he returns. "You see I always thought that when people were glad to see their friends,

Shell Shocked Nerves

Shattered nerves are the source of greatest suffering to many a returned soldier.

The doctor can give something to relieve physical pain, but when the nervous system breaks down and you are sleepless, nervous and mentally worried, real cure only comes when the exhausted nerve cells are nourished back to health and vigor by such restorative, upbuilding treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When you want Sausages, why get ELLIS'; they're the best.

they were in the habit of according them a cordial welcome."

"Which I have always given you," I return.

"Have you, really? Then I must have been laboring under a strange delusion. My impression of the matter is that it is remarkably cool at times. I did my best to believe it the reverse, but not being a person of strong imagination, I have not succeeded very well. Lesley," he adds, as he strides toward me and takes my hand in a grasp that makes me wince, "what do you suppose I have been dawdling away my time in such a quintessence of daintiness and drowsiness as this dead-and-alive little Devonshire village for all the summer? What do you suppose has chained me here week after week like a dog in a string?"

"I'm not good at guessing riddles; never was," I reply. "If you are bent upon asking what the children call hard questions, I hope you will answer them."

"There is little need for me to answer that question. You know, you must know, that I love you, Lesley! Oh, my dear, don't torment me—what is to be my answer? Will you be my wife?"

It has come at last! The very crisis is that, half unconsciously to myself, I have been dressing and struggling to keep off as long as possible. For the moment I do not answer him—for the simple reason that I cannot. That I like him well enough for a friend, a companion for a moonlight stroll, a sentimental little chat, or a harmless little flirtation, even, I very well know; but, whether there is anything in him to satisfy the ceaseless craving of my woman's heart, I am not so certain. Whether I like him well enough for the companion of my life—my husband—is another matter.

"What am I to understand, Lesley?" he asks, impatient of my silence. "Do you love me?"

"I am afraid not," I reply, my eyes still fixed on the ground. "Not as I have always thought I should like to love my husband if I ever have one—not as your wife ought to love you."

He drops my hand, and, with a look of pain, turns away without speaking. "Oh, Mr. Denton!" I continue, my heart smiting me for the disappointment I am making him feel, "why cannot we remain as we are? Of all the friends I ever had, I believe that I like you best. Won't you be content to be my friend still?"

"No!" is the response. "I'll have all or nothing! If you cannot give me your love, you may bestow your friendship where you please for me. I'll have none of it, thank! There may be people in the world who, having lost the diamond their heart was set on, find consolation in a piece of glass that looks like it; but I'm sorry to say I am not one of them, Lesley," he adds, with an intensity of tone and manner almost startling in gay, debonaire Charley Denton. "Will you answer me one question: is there any one else? Have I a rival? Tell me the name of the man you love best?"

"Well," I reply, half frightened, half amused at his tragic air, "if it be any consolation to you, I don't mind telling you that I think it's Leonard. I doubt if there is a man in the world I love better than my dear old brother Len."

"Then I'll win you yet, dear!" he exclaims, his face lighting up with a look of radiant happiness; and, gathering me into his arms, he presses a kiss on my lips. "I'll be very patient, dear," he adds, as I turn away, my face suffused with such blushes as I did not think Charley Denton could ever have called to it. "I will not tease you any more about it now; but Heaven helping me, I will win you yet!"

"And such a prize as you'll have when I am won—if ever!" I laugh, with a touch of mischief I cannot control. "Do you know that I haven't a penny in the world, and not the remotest expectation of ever getting one? Oh, Charley, you would never be such a simpleton as to want to marry a girl who is as poor as Job, and has hardly a decent dress belonging to her, would you?"

"Would I not?" he exclaims, catching me once more in his arms and striving to obtain another kiss, which I make no very strenuous effort to evade.

STILL HAMMERING THE HUN

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 23. (By the A.P.)—

Victorious on a battlefield of 23 miles extending from the Cojeul River on north across the Ancre and Somme Rivers, almost to Liéons, the Third and Fourth British armies under General Byng and Rawlinson at mid-afternoon were vigorously following up their successes of to-day, which apparently have been one of the most disastrous days ever experienced by the Germans. The enemy has lost wide stretches of ground, numerous towns, thousands of men and large quantities of material and guns. He also again has had heavy casualties. Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, commander, has thrown his men in before the advancing British armies in an effort to stave off the inevitable, but only to have them mowed down again and again by storms of metal poured from the British guns. One entire enemy battalion was annihilated during the fighting. Dead Germans in great numbers are scattered everywhere over the battlefield. As an example four hundred enemy dead were observed this morning on one small piece of ground over which the battle had swept. With all this fierce fighting and notwithstanding the fact that the British at many places have fought over open ground against an enemy protected in pot holes and strong points of other kinds, the British losses everywhere seem to have been extraordinary light. This is probably due to the confusion which the Germans find reigning behind their lines, as they are fighting a losing battle which for them hourly grows more disastrous. Crown Prince Rupprecht to-day had strengthened his lines at many places, but this instead of stopping the British simply meant that the Germans suffered bigger losses. During the night and this morning the front upon which the battle was being fought yesterday, was widened appreciably both in the north and the south, while the ground in the middle between Albert and Beaumont-sur-Ancre, which heretofore had been fairly quiet suddenly was drawn into the whirl. New attacks from the River Cojeul and in the south carried the British across the Albert-Arras railroad embankment. The British apparently hold Boiselle-Bocquereille and Bouelles, and have passed beyond the Arras-Bapaume road. The troops just to the south who for two days have been fighting for and afterwards from the embankment stormed forward and reached Hamelincourt and are pushing on toward Ervillers, St. Leger and Croisilles. Airplanes reported that British tanks had crossed the road between Ervillers and St. Leger, while some infantry was reported to be less than a thousand yards west of Ervillers some hours ago. At about that time an airplane reported that the Germans had disappeared from their positions northwest of St. Leger and between that town and Hamelincourt, and that the fighting British found time in the midst of their task to cheer heartily. Apparently the hard pressed Germans rather than suffer more here where they have met with some of their heaviest losses, decided to get out of this locality which was one of the worst that the Germans had doubtless their strength. The fighting to the south of this region began in the night when strong British forces assailed Gomecourt just a few minutes before the Germans had anticipated launching an attack at the same place. Gomecourt was British at daylight. As it happened the British upset all the enemy plans. After killing many Germans and capturing 600 in the town of Gomecourt alone, Haig's men continued their forward movement, and at last reports were pushing steadily onward. The fighting especially severe, incidentally, this movement cut in around the rear of Achiet le Grand. At the same time the British here having launched another frontal attack on the enemy's stronghold were again in the fighting. While the battle was raging here the British planes were helping the fighting on the ground by heavily bombing or using machine guns against the enemy. Among other things obtained were several direct hits on a building at the rear of which were a number of touring cars. The building apparently was a German headquarters. South of Achiet le Grand, the British did not start to-day's operations so early as farther north. The New Zealanders here stopped work to let a German counter attack develop. They played dead until the advanced enemy infantry was almost on top of them. Then they put down a heavy machine gun barrage just at the rear of the Germans who surrendered in a body rather than be killed in their tracks. This happened just north of Morauville. Many of the prisoners were non-com. officers, and all of them appeared to be glad they had been captured. When asked about the Australian prisoners expressed their greatest contempt for their Allies as soldiers, saying they were no good whatever. Slightly to the south the British have crossed the Ancre River and started back in the general direction of Courcellette. Already they are in the rear of the German stronghold at Thiépval which is an old fortress. At Albert the British pushed forward toward Tara Hill at the back of that town. An airplane report of about noon said that the British troops held the entire position. About the same time German shells started breaking on Tara, while British shrapnel could be seen bursting some distance on the other side of it, showing that the enemy had been driven. Considerable numbers of prisoners were taken in this locality. British troops seem to be pressing well up the road from Albert to Bapaume. Welsh troops are participating in the fighting in the neighborhood south of Albert. Mesnilte appears to be in British hands, having been captured early in the day. Thence the line extends southeasterly with a break where the Germans last evening managed to take Happy Valley just northwest of Bray, by throwing in fresh troops of the 5th division, which apparently were brought up for this special purpose. The Germans suffered heavily during the first attack. The fighting was very heavy. Since then the Germans have been constantly heavily fired upon. Happy Valley truly is a shambles; its name belies it. South of the Somme the Australians were most successful in the part they played in to-day's battle. They easily attained all their objectives and apparently hold Chignolles, Chaignes and Herleville and are pushing eastward of these villages a little distance to make sure of holding them. In this region 23 German officers and 1,660 men of other ranks were made prisoners. Eleven of the captured officers were from one regiment. The Germans offered heavy resistance at Chignolles, but with the assistance of tanks, the Australians hammered their way through the enemy and swept on, leaving the town and its environs laid with dead Germans.

KEEPING THEM WEST.

LONDON, Aug. 24. A despatch to the Daily Mail from the Hague says it is indicated that some German units under orders to proceed to Finland by way of the Kiel Canal are being diverted to the West-ern front, according to a frontier messenger. Landwehr infantry from the Rheinisch industrial district, which was to leave for Kiel on Thursday, was held up, and will leave for France shortly. It is not indicated that such diversions will be extensive.

RELYING ON MACHINE GUNS.

LONDON, Aug. 24. The Germans are apparently relying on machine guns to counteract their waning man-power in France. This is reflected in an article in the Vossische Zeitung, of Berlin, by Capt. Von Hatzman, a military critic. The Daily Mail's correspondent at the Hague says that the captain explains that the Western front has been made impregnable by machine guns. The critic declares that the effort of Marshal Foch to convert the tactical gains into a strategic victory, will be defeated by machine guns. Horse-drawn machine guns, he adds, have been distributed to each company.

ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF BRAY.

LONDON, Aug. 24. The British Fourth Army is on the outskirts of Bray, where heavy fighting is proceeding.

BRITISH TAKE PRISONERS.

LONDON, Aug. 24. (Official).—The text of the statement follows: During the night our troops made progress in the Albert sector. This morning the attack was resumed. In the three days of fighting since the morning of the 21st our troops on the battlefield have captured over fourteen thousand prisoners and a number of guns. We carried out a successful operation last evening northwest of Neuf Berquin in the Lys salient. Local attacks by the enemy during the night north of Bailleul, south of Loire and north of Kemmel were repulsed by sharp fighting. This morning fighting took place to our advantage north of La Bassée canal in the Givency sector.

FRENCH CROSS DIVETTE RIVER.

PARIS, Aug. 23. The French troops in the fighting on Friday crossed the Divette River in the region of Evricourt, and made progress to the east of Bagneux and to the west of Crecy en Mont, lying north of Soissons, according to the official communication issued this evening.

TOWNS CAPTURED.

LONDON, Aug. 23. The town of Achiet le Grand has been captured by the British and also Bihucourt just to the southeast of the former place and about two and a half miles from the railroad junction of Bapaume. The text of the communication follows: In the course of an advance of over two miles into German positions, a great number of Germans have been killed and prisoners taken. On the left of the battlefield we stormed the villages of Gomecourt, Ervillers, Hamelincourt, Boyelles and Boiry Bequerelle, and made progress east of these villages. In our right center we advanced against German positions on the east bank of the Ancre from southeast of Albert to the neighborhood of Grandcourt and gained ground after heavy fighting. A counter attack was repulsed. South of Grandcourt we have captured Achiet le Grand and Bihucourt and the ridge overlooking Orles. We continued our attacks this afternoon. Several thousand prisoners were taken and heavy casualties inflicted on the enemy.

TURNING THEM WEST.

A despatch to the Daily Mail from the Hague says it is indicated that some German units under orders to proceed to Finland by way of the Kiel Canal are being diverted to the West-ern front, according to a frontier messenger. Landwehr infantry from the Rheinisch industrial district, which was to leave for Kiel on Thursday, was held up, and will leave for France shortly. CORRECTED STATEMENT.

ROME, Aug. 23. Referring to a statement appearing in the newspapers, to the effect that the Pope, answering a telegram from the German Emperor who sent him greetings in his name day, had evoked a benediction on the "Emperor's work," the Vatican organ "Osservatore Romano," says this statement is untrue. The Pope thanked the Emperor for his greetings and for the benediction which the Emperor himself had invoked on the charitable work of his Holiness.

JOURNALISTS IN SCOTLAND.

LONDON, Aug. 23. (Via Rater's).—A combed party of journalists from South Africa, Australia and Newfoundland is touring the war areas and the industrial centres of Scotland. They were dined at Glasgow, where the Lord Provost declared that even if England dropped out of the war, Scotland would fight until victorious.

PRESSING ATTACK.

LONDON, Aug. 23. (Official).—We pressed our attack vigorously and successfully to-day on a front of thirty miles from Lihons to Morcotel. South of the Somme we strongly held positions where the villages of Heleville, Chignas and Chignolles with the woods lying between the villages and the river.

WAR REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. (By the A.P.)—Over the fifty-mile battlefield from the region of Arras to the north of Soissons the German armies are meeting with defeats which apparently spell disaster. Everywhere the British and French forces have continued the attack. The enemy has been sanguinarily worsted, and the end of his trials are not yet in sight. To the British over the thirty miles west of the fighting zone from the Coteau southeast of Arras to Lihons south of the Somme, numerous towns have fallen, and the enemy territory has been penetrated to a depth of several miles. Where the French are fighting between the Marne River and the territory north of Soissons, additional goodly gains have been made in the envelopment of Novon and the general manoeuvre which seeks to crush or drive out the Germans from the salient between the Somme and the Ailette and to put into jeopardy the entire German line running to Rheims. Notwithstanding the fact that the Germans brought up large numbers of fresh reinforcements in an endeavor to stay the progress of Haig's armies their efforts were without avail. Where they were able momentarily to hold back the oncoming force, the Germans were finally forced to cede the ground demanded, and they paid a terrible price in men killed, wound-

THE BATTERIES TO-DAY.

Books laden with statistics have been printed for the Baseball Fan. It is a well established fact—or an advertising claim—that by mail you can learn to pitch like Carew or hit like Hiltz. Why has no one issued a pocket compendium outlining the rules of conduct for the Baseball Fan? Probably because no one has thought of it. The majority of people on this universe are busy making money in more sordid ways. Yet how simple it would be.

Under a caption "Don't Forget!"—valuable advice could be disseminated. For example—

First.—When one of the home team is caught red-handed off first base DON'T FORGET to join in unison with your neighbour and howl, "Get an alarm clock!"

Second.—It so happens during the course of an afternoon that the star slugger of the home team is called out on a third strike, do not blame him. Blame the umpire. Shake your fist at the minion of baseball law. If he looks your way, yell, "Go home and poison your wife." That'll fix him.

Third.—When a member of the visiting team fans out, DON'T FORGET to slap your neighbour on the back and exclaim "Didn't I tell you of Claude could do it!" That will increase your reputation as a prophet.

These are off-hand examples of an equally off-hand idea. Yet the kernel is there, let the nuts say what they will.

TIRED THOUGHTS.

I sometimes think that never howls so loud, A baseball player as before a crowd, That if he were alone upon the field, He wouldn't act so peppery and proud.

I sometimes think that never seems so fat, The head beneath a kicking player's hat. As when he makes a roar at a third strike, An amateur could murder with his hat.

I sometimes think the wisar readers wink To see the statements that I some-times crank. And at such times I have the grace to blush, And put away my paper and my ink.

The Week's War.

The most important gain to the Allies during the past week's operations has been the capture of Lassigny by the French forces, who, as a result of this success were able to advance their lines to the South West of Noyon, whither the Germans defending Lassigny had fallen back. The depth of this advance is something like five miles, which means that only a matter of a mile or so separates the French from Noyon. By this action and forward movement villages to the number of twenty hitherto occupied by the enemy have been released from his hands. Simultaneously with the French attack on Lassigny the British launched an offensive on a front of ten miles extending from the Ancre River to Moyenville which was wholly successful, the enemy's positions being penetrated deeply and many prisoners taken. Under cover of mist the opening assault captured five German held villages, and the advance was continued to the neighbourhood of the Albert-Arras railway, in addition taking three other important positions from the Germans.

On four principal sectors in France and Flanders the tide of defeat is surging against the enemy. His entire front from Trossy in Belgium to Soissons on the Aisne River being now seriously menaced. General Mangin's army is operating in the region north east of Soissons, distant about two miles from that town, and along to the River Oise, while General Humbert is continuing his hammer stroke between the Oise and Matz. Both the French armies here engaged are gradually advancing their fronts, their successes placing them in positions which threaten the immediate evacuation of the whole Somme-Oise salient, from Bray to Noyon, by the Germans opposed to them. Between Albert and Arras, further north, the British Commander in Chief is following up the advantages gained during the previous days, and as noted has driven forward over a front of ten miles, capturing beside the villages, many prisoners and guns and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. In the famous Lys sector, still farther north, a general advance Eastward has been made on a four miles front, by the British, who by this move have succeeded in bringing their positions somewhat nearer the old battle line of 1916, which runs east of Armentieres. On this salient the German delivered a violent counter attack the object being to recoup themselves in part for the losses they had sustained. The efforts, however, bore no fruit, for the British withstood the assault and pushed the assault forces back beyond the point from which they made the attempt. The armies under Rawlinson and Byng (British) Mangin and Humbert, (French) are everywhere pressing the enemy with a strength that will not be denied, and thousands of prisoners with equipment and supplies have been added to the already large stocks of the Allies. The capture of the town of Albert, situated eighteen miles north west of Amiens, is not less important to the British than the taking of Lassigny by the French. Being a railroad centre its capture makes it of considerable value to the Allies, and it was only after most desperate fighting that the Germans were forced out of their positions. A German retreat from Noyon is now foreshadowed as being the local sequence of the recent victories and as predicted last week the withdrawal of General Von Eben to the Chemin des Dames must be the outcome. Either that or he must institute a tremendous counter attack to relieve the pressure of General Mangin's troops which is being exerted to the full. The fall of Bapaume north east of Albert may soon be expected, the Germans having been forced back perilously near that town by the British Third Army. The week's fighting may therefore be summed up as going consistently in favour of the Allies on the Western front, which is the chief theatre and that toward which all eyes are turned.

Air raids over and upon towns in Germany are being regularly carried on the cities of Frankfurt and Cologne coming in for a due share of the bombing with good results. The enemy is now being handed out copious doses of his own medicine and he does not like it a bit. Only by a continuance of this form of warfare will the populations of enemy cities realise what war means. Should it only strike terror to their hearts, the effect will prove of value.

As usual very little news has come in from the Italian and Eastern fronts. Fighting of a minor nature continues and the paucity of despatches received need not be taken as an indication that the campaign against the foe is lessening. Few details of the Russian situation filter through. The Allies recently landed at Vladivostok have advanced to the Ussuri River, and advices from Harbin say that they have been forced to withdraw in consequence of being outnumbered by the Bolsheviks who are commanded by German officers.

The spectacular march of the British contingent from Bagdad to Baku, the great Russian oil port on the Caspian Sea, reported during the second week of August is considered a magnificent military feat. The distance is seven hundred miles and Baku was reached almost before the world knew that a British expedition had left Bagdad to undertake a push of such magnitude.

The appearance of Hun submarines in Nyra Scotia waters and their success in wrecking such havoc amongst the fishing fleet, aided by the captured steam trawler "Triumph" is more theatrical than valuable from a naval point of view, and while the existing menace of their presence will naturally give rise to some uneasiness, there is yet no cause for alarm. If these pirates are operating without bases, on this side, which they undoubtedly are, it will only be a matter of time when their activities will be brought to a finish, while on the other hand should they have concealed supply depots or parent ships, their discovery and destruction will certainly ensue. Without the latter the chances of the marauding U boats returning to their home ports are small. The patrols of the North Atlantic are not likely to let them slip through the net which is slowly but surely enclosing them in its meshes.

Extended Leave.

The Minister of Militia announces that the leave of the "Blue Puttees" men has been extended to September 30th, on which date they will be required to report at headquarters, St. John's. This extension will be very welcome to the boys, as well as to their friends, and the extended furlough is an appreciation of gallant services rendered by the men of our first contingent. The Military Authorities are to be congratulated on their decision.

Timely Sermon.

Rev. Father St. John preached a most practical and timely sermon at St. Patrick's Church, yesterday, his subject being "The duties of parents." Referring to the immoral conditions of the city the preacher declared it was due largely to parental indifference, children being allowed to do practically as they pleased, and to remain out at night till all hours. In this way many of both sexes were growing up without the proper care and guidance that should be theirs, and eventually would curse their parents for their negligence in training them properly and morally. Father St. John appealed strongly to the youthful members of his congregation and urged parents to be vigilant and unceasing in looking after and watching over the spiritual and moral welfare of their children.

Local Bankers Safe.

As far as can be learned, all of the local banking feet have escaped the German submarines that have been operating among the fishermen the past two weeks. The larger number of the bankers are now in their homes, rotting and getting a supply of squid for the fall trip, and following the practice of years, will visit other grounds than the Grand Banks in summer. As big catches have been made it is probable that some of them will abandon the voyage, and the schooners will engage in other work.

Special Meeting of Council.

A special meeting of the Municipal Council was held on Saturday night, the full Board being present. The question of Workmen's Houses was discussed. Architect Barter submitted plans and specifications of proposed new houses. After fully going into the matter it was decided to erect eight double houses on Quill Vidi Road and tenders for same will be asked for at once.

In re alleged disorderly conduct in Bannerman Park the Park Committee reported that conditions are as represented. They were of opinion that the only remedy lay in having the presence of a Police Officer there every evening. The Inspector General will be asked if he can arrange to have a member of the Force do duty there. The Council would be willing to pay for this service.

Complaints were made of the inconvenience caused by owners of motor garages obstructing the streets with their cars. The Inspectors are to report any violation in this respect.

Jas. Brennan asked permission to dispose of his forge on Prescott St., same to be used as a garage and store.

Is This True?

Dear Sir—As you will probably remember, a meeting was held by the Postal Telegraph and Post Office employees a little while ago to discuss the question of approaching the Government on a raise in salaries. It was decided at that meeting to petition the Government for such an increase and it is hoped that on the arrival of the Premier back from England the "just demands" of the civil servants will be granted.

But, listen to this, sir, report has it that the gentleman who was instrumental in calling together the meeting has since had his demands satisfied, and that of course he is no longer interested in the movement. Is this true? I do not say it is, I hardly believe it is, but if it is, then every individual working to-day in the civil service should "walk out", for to live on the present wage is simply impossible, and for "one man" to be "conveniently" silenced at the sacrifice of every other worker, is an outrage.

our convenor now come forward and say he has not been guilty of any such miserable conduct.

Yours truly,
"SQUARE DEAL."

The Weather.

For the forty days including and following St. Swithin, the period of which ended Friday, the weather man has given us 13 days of rain, 10 dull and 17 fine. The prophecy was almost fulfilled, if the 10 dull and damp days be added to the 13 rainy days, as the correct interpretation of the ancient rhyme is that should it rain on the day of St. Swithin, for forty days afterwards rain and full weather will be in excess of fair.

SMASHING THEM BACK.
WITH THE BRITISH ARMY FRANCE, Aug. 25. (By the A.F. The British continue smashing Germans towards the old Hindenburg line, which has almost been reached in the northern battle zone. The fences of Bapaume have either been captured or are in process of being captured and Bapaume itself must fall shortly. Means some of the heaviest fighting of war is going on in this section of the front, for the Germans are in contact with the town which is of great strategic value. Wartime an important position just south of Bapaume, on the road to Albert, which has been widely crossed, was taken by the British after a bitter struggle which the Germans suffered severe losses. Great numbers of enemy were captured during the day among them being a large party from the German Third Naval Division, the last was the British advance last night and to-day, that it is impossible to be certain where the front will be located from one hour to the next. The Germans are again cracking at some places, but are suffering desperate resistance; many more guns, some of large calibre have been taken; one British column alone has counted 80 guns. There is evidence of confusion in the enemy rear as units of the same division hurled into the battle, have been taken at points separated by many miles. Quantities of material are falling to British hands because the Germans are not troubled to apply the torch to explosives. Poitiers, to the north of Albert, fell this morning. British patrols were seen east of Bagnescourt where apparently the Boche made good his escape. Highwood, a strong position near Longueval, northwest of Comblis, is reported captured, with Eaucourt, Labbaye, Contalmaison and Corcelette have been occupied by the British. The French have continued their advance east of Bagnescourt between the Ailette and the Aisne. According to the War Office announcement tonight, they repulsed counter-attacks were made by the Germans, 400 additional prisoners have been taken.)

SIDNEY STRIKE SETTLED.
SIDNEY, N.S., Aug. 25. Strikes at five collieries of the Scotia Coal Co. is settled by the General Supt. stating if the four deputies who were the cause of the strike wished, they could remain in the Union. He blamed both miners and deputies for causing the strike over a trivial matter. The deputies resigned from the Union on being promoted, and the strike resulted.

FIELD MARSHAL'S REPORT.
LONDON, Aug. 25. The British troops made further progress to-day, and have taken many prisoners, notwithstanding the arrival of German reinforcements on the battlefield, according to Field Marshal Haig's report last night. The statement says: Resistance increased to-day with the arrival of German reinforcements on the battlefield. Many hostile counter attacks were broken down. Our troops with great gallantry have overcome the resistance and have made further progress. They have taken many prisoners. The North of the Somme the British carried the enemy's positions on the high ground east of Bray. British troops advanced in the direction of Carnoye and have taken Mametz. Welsh troops captured Mametz Wood. In the centre we captured Martinpuich, Lesaun and Lecharquois. North of Bapaume, there has been severe fighting in Favreuil, and about Berry and Crotelles, we made progress.

PEERS REVIEW.
NEW YORK, Aug. 25. The Associated Press to-night issued the following: Notwithstanding the fact that the Germans have brought up strong reinforcements on both wings of the battlefield, the British and French forces everywhere have beaten off the enemy and continued their victorious progress. Many additional losses have been captured. Field Marshal Haig's men in the north, while the French have successfully overcome obstructions in their way and reached territory north of Soissons, which adds further to the danger of the German advance eastward, and to their line running eastward from Soissons to Rheims. All along the front, from Arras to the German line, the enemy has been driven back to the old Hindenburg line by the British. Along the Somme, the enemy is being harassed north to the east of Bray, while further north a strong counter attack has been repulsed, and the town of Mametz, Mametz Wood, Martinpuich, Lesaun and Lebarquois have been captured. It is around Bapaume that the Germans are keeping up their strong efforts to hold back the tide of British attacks against them, but the British are continuing to make slight gains daily in the process of surrounding the town which eventually must be evacuated. The taking of Soissons and Lebarquois appears to be the result of this event. Lebarquois is only two and a half miles south of Bapaume. Everything,...

cept directly south of Bapaume, the British are well across the Bapaume-Albert Road, and north of the town they are fast pressing forward towards the Hindenburg line. Unofficial reports have placed the British in the outskirts of Bullecourt, which is just west of the old line. Since last Wednesday the British have taken more than 17,000 prisoners and large numbers of guns, and great quantities of supplies also have fallen into their hands. Some of the prisoners taken have been identified as coming from Austro-Hungarian units. The Germans are launching strong counter attacks against the French, between the Oise and Ailette Rivers, in an endeavor to hold back General Mangin's army, which is threatening the entire German front in this region. Here also the Germans have been reinforced by troops from the Dual Monarchy. North of Soissons, in the region of Bagnaux, the French have made progress east, and are now abreast the railroad line running from Soissons to Laon. A considerable number of additional prisoners have fallen into French hands. As yet there has been no movement by the Germans along the Vesle River to indicate that a retirement towards the Aisne is in immediate prospect. The Americans and French in this region continue to heavily shell the enemy's back areas. Farther east in the Vosges region the Americans are keeping up their patrol activity against the enemy. The Americans also are busily engaged in bombing German points behind the line. Thirty-eight bombs were dropped from aeroplanes on Condans Saturday, and ten direct hits were scored. Considerable fighting in the air is also taking place, one American aviator apparently having disposed of two German Fokkers, and two other Americans each sending down one enemy plane.

Our American Letter.

Boston, Aug. 25.—The first contingent of American troops for Siberia have arrived at Vladivostok from the Philippines. The despatches state that they were given an enthusiastic reception. The revolution in Russia is assuming large proportions and it is said Lenin and Trotsky are preparing to flee to Germany. Before they leave it is expected that the Soviets will declare war upon the Entente Allies and endeavor by fair means or foul to strengthen Germany's grip upon Russia. This prospect has not been met with the approval of the Russian people, who are weary of the war and are willing to accept even German domination if it brings them peace. Their ignorance of the things for which the Allies fight have made them "easy marks" for the German propagandist who stops at nothing in the shape of lies and deceit. It seems only the other day that the Russian army was fighting so valiantly against the common enemy. Without an adequate supply of guns or ammunition they had given the hosts of Germany their fill of fighting, and accomplished military feats that were the wonder of the world. What a change has occurred since then. The great colossus of the nations suddenly collapsed and allowed Germany to bind her hand and feet.

Those who should have been her friends in the darkest hour were helping to undo the mischief which these wretches have caused by their treason to the Allies have intervened. It is fervently hoped that they will be in time. If by their presence in Siberia they can swell the number of the revolutionists who are battling against German and Bolshevik domination, Russia will again be a factor in the war. In a country so illiterate as Russia, the lack of enlightening the people is one of extreme difficulty. The example of the Czech-Slovaks who from a mere handful have become a mighty host may prove infectious and we may yet see the veteran soldiers who fought under the Grand Duke Nicholas with such success, forming a nearly one-third of the entire wealth possessed by Germany before the war. Stories of the fighting in France are now coming in in detail and make interesting reading. The American troops must have opened the eyes of the Germans to the quality of men which we produce on this side of the water, judging from the manner in which their best regiments melted away before the onslaughts of the Yanks.

It seems a pity that the censorship prevents the publication of the most interesting news from the front. This could be given without betraying any military secrets and would be a great boon to those whose thoughts are always "over there." But stupid and aggravating as are many of the acts of the censor we must abide by his rulings like patriots and nurse our regrets and impatience in silence.

President Wilson arrived in Boston a few days ago and is now in New Hampshire enjoying a well earned holiday.

Comparative Values in Footwear!

With the majority of people, price is the chief consideration in purchasing footwear. That's why there are so many uncomfortable feet in Newfoundland to-day and so many dissatisfied shoe purchasers.

For low-priced shoes cannot be good shoes—the high cost of good materials and skilled labour won't permit. Then why experiment—at the expense of your comfort—with low-priced shoes? Why not wear

What is Worth While?

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Daughters of time, the hypocrite Days Muffled and dumb, like barefoot dervishes And marching single in an endless file Bring diadems and fagots in their hand. To each they offer gifts after his will Bread, kingdom, stars, and sky that holds them all. I, in my pleached garden, watched the pomp. Forgot my morning vases, hastily Took a few herbs and apples and the Day Turned and departed silent. I, too late, Under her solemn flet saw the scorn." Emerson.

"Yes, I like flowers but they're such a bother. They take a lot of time and they make so much dirt, too." So said my neighbor the other morning when she found me filling my bowls and vases.

She was right. Flowers do take time. I had been half an hour just filling those vases. And they do make dirt. Only yesterday I had to do a special sweeping when a bowl of roses suddenly decided to fling their petals to the winds.

The All Important Question. But most things do take time. Most things are a bother if you look at them in that light. The thing to decide is what is worth it and what is not.

So far as I am concerned, flowers are worth it. To my mind they are the redeeming touch in an ugly room, the finishing touch in an attractive room. I always like to welcome my guests with a bowl of flowers in their bedroom. My dinner is far better relished if I have a few flowers or even a little green, in the center of the table. On my living room mantel stands a lovely bronze and silver bowl which from early spring to late fall I keep filled with whatever mass of color the season supplies. And often when I am tired I lie on my couch and just look at that bowl of color, and am rested.

Is the Avoidance of Dust the Be-all and the End-all Here?

Fireplaces are another thing which this neighbor does not approve of because they make too much dirt. Now if the avoidance of dust is the be-all and the end-all of this existence, she is certainly right. But if one cares enough for all the things which the fireplace connotes to tolerate a little more dust or the bother of removing it, then fireplaces are worthwhile.

Children Make Even More Dirt Than Fireplaces.

Carrying out my neighbor's line of argument to the logical conclusion, (which by the way, she does) children are emphatically non-grata for they cause more bother and dirt and take up more time than even fireplaces or flowers. And yet a great many people seem to find them worthwhile.

Queer isn't it with what different scales we weigh the gifts which the "Daughters of Time" offer to each of us.

One wonders sometimes when one stops to think things over if under their solemn flets there is scorn for one choice.

Lachute, Que., 25 Sept., 1908. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—Even since coming home from the Boer War I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and liniments; also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT. The effect of which was almost magical. Two bottles completely cured me and I have worked every day since.

Yours gratefully,

JOHN WALSH.

THE RESTFUL WOMAN.

The man who is the fortunate husband of the restful woman is usually a brilliant success in his business or profession. He is often high strung, irascible, as inconsistent as a woman is supposed to be. At the same time he is companionable and lovable. A man who demands everything of his nerves and brains has no business marrying one who wants her own brains and nerves recognized.

The restful woman isn't young, possibly a year or so older than her husband, she isn't beautiful and she doesn't appear to be particularly brilliant mentally. But she knows how to be quiet, and there is just that about her that rests one just to be in her presence.

She talks very little but her listening is eloquent. Apparently she has no nerves, she never indulges in any of those nervous, futile habits that make one wish to scream to stop them at once. She is not constantly twisting a ring on her finger or snapping the catch on a purse, or fussing with a back comb, or jumping up every minute or so to fix something.

Her smile is generous, it is understanding and her laugh, it is like a chuckle that betokens a full breathed enjoyment. Her home is a haven for her husband; not a place where he is whipped up mentally to entertain someone nor where any strenuous efforts are made to entertain him.

It is the place where he recuperates where he is always welcome without any fuss being made over him, the place where strife ceases and a gentle understanding begins.

FOOL'S PARADISE.

The German people live in hope's because they're fed on faked up dope. The public prints don't dare to tell if battles are not going well. A German army meets defeat, and pulls a panicky retreat. About a million Hunns are slain, and stacked to moulder in the rain. "Odeafish" we cry, the startled Teutis will shrivel now, you bet your boots! When they have heard of this defeat, and see their armies can be beat, they'll shed all kinds of scalding brine, and doubtless will take in their sign. Alas, they do not hear the news, and so escape a seige of blue. The war lords call the printers in, and say, "Announce that we still win! Of course we dropped our guns and ran, but that was Ludenbinder's plan—a master stroke of strategy, as all of you will later see. Go, print a lot of cheerful bunk, and if you hint the luck is punk, we'll back you up against a shed, and drill you with a ton of lead." The printers then get out their sheets, and make big triumphs of defeat. The people read and say, "G. Whia, how wonderful our army is! Our Kaiser undetested dwells, and Hindendort is wearing bells!" Some day the Teuts are bound to wake, and see how they've been fed on fake, how they've been made a Kaiser's joke—and then, perhaps, there'll be some smoke.

The Story of the Lucille Schnare.

A Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 21.—The Lucille Schnare of Lunenburg was waiting quietly with the tides of the Banks in the twilight of Tuesday evening. She was in the same locality, but not in sight of the other ships, and so was unsuspecting. It had been a successful trip, and the holds were filled to overflowing with fish, 11,000 quintals, an extraordinarily good catch in these times. Captain Schnare was preparing to sail for home the following morning.

Raiders Hove in Sight.

Suddenly a large boat loomed up through the half-light. Captain Schnare plainly recognized her as the Triumph, near which he had often fished in the daytime. To his intense surprise a jet of flame sprouted from her deck, and a shell hissed through the air above the rigging of the Lucille Schnare, falling into the water a few yards away. Other shots followed, but as all of them, although the distance was not great, failed to register a hit, they were apparently fired with the object of intimidating the crew of the belaguered.

The schooner lay helpless. The absolute calm rendered any attempt at escape out of the question. The sailors expected that every instant a shell would strike and ship them. About a quarter of an hour later, a boat was lowered from the Triumph containing two men. They rowed the Lucille Schnare, boarded her, and covered the crew with revolvers, gave them two minutes in which to take to their dorics.

The crew needed no second invitation. Nothing appealed to them more than getting out of sight of the converted trawler and her guns. Before being allowed off, however, they were obliged to surrender their papers and show the Germans where the provisions were stored. They also saw two bombs slung over the side of the vessel preparatory to blowing her up. Once in their dorics, they rowed away as rapidly as their oars would carry them, and when the lights of the Triumph were no longer visible, they raised their sails, finally reaching Canada, none the worse for their adventures, at six o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Captain Schnare said that the Triumph was fitted with two guns, something like machine guns, placed upon pivots. The Germans treated him and his men with exceeding courtesy, and did not fire upon the lifeboats. The submarine was clearly visible, lying near the trawler, but took no part in the attack.

Little Red Riding Hood.

(By Clair-Price in "Answers.")

side by side, with their back to the re in the little bar of the Royal Ho-their hands behind them and their faces on the mantelpiece, stood the commander and the captain and the commodore.

The commander was the tallest and finest officer in the Royal Navy. The captain, standing next to him, with the shortest and fattest officer in the Royal Navy.

As for the commodore, he was a very engaged with a frown that was most trying a knot in his bushy eyebrows.

So they stood, the commander and the captain and the commodore, with their yards of gold bands and gold buttons sparkling in lively gold rays of the still, solemn blue of their monkey-jackets.

She used to be the private yacht "Hood," said the long, lean, commanding officer was telling us how he happened to find himself ashore waiting for a new command—"with pretty ladies for lounge and rows of ancient pictures in her hold and a pleasure cruise to the Mediterranean in the summer and lost hairpins always raising the deuce with her compass. But when the Admiralty took her over, they left us only a tea-table of teak-wood on which to play nap for a farthing limit, and they gave us a red-lined case of Navy nuts, and they named her the patrol boat Little Red Riding Hood and sent us out to do pleasure-cruising in the North Sea.

And all her crew, all twenty-eight of them, were the D.C.M., and where he dipped his head—"I was the Humble Servant in Command. And then the patrol-boat Little Red Riding Hood went out a-roaming a-roving, up and down the North Sea, a-roving. And in the ensuing month she had her two four-point nines, she had three mine-sweepers belonging to her friendly foe, and sniped the Hood and sent us out to do pleasure-cruising in the North Sea.

been running ammunition for the after gun, leaped at it and ran up to Little Red Riding Hood's little crow's nest and made it fast to the foremast.

"By that time, with only the for'd gun left, it was only a matter of time, of course, but we hoped to keep Fritz busy until the destroyer came up, after which there'd be prize-money."

"And just then, the for'd gun, which was almost red hot, decided to misfire."

"Now, there's a very old rule in the Service, which was laid down about the time of the Medes and Persians, to the broad, general effect that a fall half-hour must elapse between the misfiring of a gun and the opening of the breech-lock thereof. The reason is quite simple; the cartridge may have taken fire and be smoldering in the gun, ready at the first touch of the breech-lever to explode and blow out the breech and kill the crew and wreck the gun."

"And Maguire, who had been driving his crew at the for'd gun about 14 rounds to the minute, knew it—and jumped from the telescope to the breech-lever and bellowed 'Stand clear!' And his crew nurt themselves trying to get down the forward companion-way all at once. It rather took me by surprise, for I flopped down flat on the bridge. But all I heard was Maguire's voice above the racket, bellowing, 'Hogan, if you ever put another cartridge into my gun wrong end first, I'll throw you overboard! Close up!' And when I stood up again, Maguire was turning the wrongly-inserted charge so the powder was next the breech-block, and his crew were piling up from below. And Little Red Riding Hood's sole and only gun went back to work."

"By that time we were being hit about twenty times to the minute, and you couldn't see ten feet for smoke, and she was down by the stern so badly that we were having a hard time to stay at ten knots. And about that time, I went clean to Kingdom Come."

"Did you ever die and wake up in Heaven and find that somebody's binacle was lying across your chest and a silly compass was staring you in the face, with its needle chasing itself round and round, and the letters on the dial were twirling about two inches from your nose, and go to running your hands up and down your body and discover that all your arms and legs were still attached to you—that, in fact, you were still alive?"

"Well, I got out of there to find that we were awash aft, and there wasn't a thing left on Little Red Riding Hood's deck but smashed gear and blood, and Fritz had eased off to let her sink. The for'd gun had gone aboard and Maguire had gone clean crazy. He had carried on with his Service revolver after his gun went, and when his belt was empty, he had fired all the distress-rockets he could find, and when I first saw him he was picking up pieces of smashed gear off the deck and trying to throw them at Fritz, who was standing about 1,000 yards off our port beam. And all the seven men in the crew who could stand up were in a row back of him, feebly squawking 'Hooryay!'"

"And in about fifteen seconds more, or the fourth part of a minute, Little Red Riding Hood went home to Davy, with what was left of the White Ensign flapping from the rail at her cut-water."

"Of course, Fritz didn't stop to pick us up."

"He probably didn't care much about us, for all four of his stacks were down, and he was sweating smoke as if he had a half dozen fires aboard. Maguire knows what to do with a gun!"

"Well, we floated about in the sea for an hour on pieces of wreckage amid a silence that was almost uncanny. I had the engineer with me, and he kept mumbling something foolish about the Winter Gardens at Blackpool—he comes from Lancashire—I don't remember anything much that, he was trying to say, but I remember Maguire yelling over to me—you could have heard him for a mile:

"Hey, skipper, where do we go from here?"

"That was the kind of a crew Little Red Riding Hood had. They were a merry lot of sealwags."

"The whole thing had taken about fifteen minutes, and in an hour the destroyer appeared and picked us up. Were you ever picked up of a floating piece of wreckage by a destroyer?"

"I used to hate them; the beastly fellows swank about as if they owned the sea, but in that moment all was forgiven. Anyway, that's why I'm ashore, waiting to take out another patrol-boat."

Market Notes.

Codfish.—Hundreds of quintals came into town during the past week, chiefly by land, from nearby settlements. A few schooners arrived with part cargoes from more distant ports. The total collections of new fish now is probably over ten thousand quintals. Prices paid last week were $11 for No. 1 Small and $12 for No. 1 Large Merchantable; $5.50 for Small and $6.50 for Large West India. A minimum deduction of $1 per quintal was made for damp, even when only slightly so. General opinion is that present prices will go higher, as a few sales of Large Merchantable, well cured, were made at $12.50. This is owing to the scarcity of this quality, and further offerings will bring the same figure and possibly more in October. The price for Labrador has not yet been fixed. Much depends on the volume of the catch, which from reports, received so far, is not large.

Cod Oil.—Prices of Common are normal at $280 to $300 per ton, though sales were made at $295 for large lots. On the South and West Coasts keen competition amongst Canadian and United States buyers have run prices up to $50 a barrel, f.o.b. carrier. Refined is still being quoted at previous prices but it is expected to go up soon. There is nothing new to report on Lobsters or Piletid Fish.

Provisions.—Newfoundland will receive its quota of Flour from Canada, but the situation demands the strictest economy on our part. All flour is now "Government Standard" and the price is $14 wholesale; $14.25 to $14.50 barrel lots. Pork has gone down a little last week, quotations being $45 for Ham Butt, $48 for Short Cut Clear and $35 for Spare Ribs. Local supplies are fair and consignments are coming along regularly. The market signs are that Beef will ere long take another advance. Present prices are $35 Flank and Boneless $43 to $45.50; Bos Packet, $41; Cuttings, $30.50. The shortage is 6,000 barrels. An ample supply of American Granulated Sugar is assured, but notwithstanding this there is still the necessity for greater economy in the use of this article. The price holds at $10 per hundred pounds. Many sales of molasses have been made to export dealers, in lots, at 93 to 94 cents per gallon. The maximum F. C. B. prices are 95 to 96 1/2 cents. Sales negotiated above were made at lowest prices and an increase may be ruled at any moment. The local market is now being supplied with home grown potatoes and the price has declined to 25 cents per gallon. This slump was due to the importation of a large lot of Florida tubers, which were disposed of at much lower rates than the Canadian grown, which had hitherto held the market. The potato crop now promises to be as good, locally, as in normal years.

Wedding Bells

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at the Wesley Parsonage on Saturday evening by Rev. Bugden, when Miss Mary Blackie was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Ernest Ash, of the R.N. Co. electrical Dept. The bride, who was beautifully attired, was given away by Mr. A. Roberts and was attended by Miss L. Ash, sister of the groom. The groom's present to the bride was a silver tea set and tray and to the bridesmaid a brooch, and to the father-giver a gold tie pin. The happy couple left by Sunday's express for Springdale, Hall's Bay, Millertown and other points along the railway.

Soldiers Arrive.

By Saturday's express twelve volunteers, who are on furlough and sick leave, arrived in the city. They were met at the station by the Ladies' Reception Committee and by a squad of soldiers under command of Lieut. Clare. Most of the returned men belong to the outports and will leave for their homes by to-morrow's express.

Sunk By Submarine.

According to reliable information it is now established that the schooner "W. C. Mackay," which sailed from Fogo for Europe last fall, was sunk by a German submarine, as a German wireless was picked up by a passing vessel at the time of sinking which read, "Schooner 'W. C. Mackay,' 145 tons, sunk."
