CHAPTER LXV.

She talked to him long and earnestly; but she failed to make him understand; she could not clear from his disordered mind the cobwebs that had gathered there. At length she ceased, for she saw that he was not responsible—that the evil she had so long dreaded, and which he had dreaded himself, had at last fallen upon him. That brave, loyal, honest Sir Royal, who would not have injured the meanest worm on the face of the earth, had killed a fellow-man while under the influence of mania, and could not be brought to understand that he had done wrong, seemed very strange to Diana. The blow that he had received in days gone by had affected his brain. The longer he talked to Diana the more clearly she perceived the state of his mind. He was sensible on every other point except this; and his delusions were harmless enough, not extending beyond talking to people whom he supposed to be present.

The decay of the once noble mind had been slow but sure. No one liked to notice it; and of late Sir Royal had remained almost entirely at home. He had seldom visited any of his neighbors. His housekeeper, Mrs. Caton, best knew how matters were with him—how he suffered continually from pain in the head—how he grew confused and rambled; and at last he confided to her that he feared the day would come when he should lose his senses entirely.

And now the end was come; with the approach of death his mind became more and more a blank; and Diana, who loved him, left him to the mercy of Heaven. She knew that the Judge before whom he must appear was just and merciful; she knew that the error of a wandering mind, the deed dictated by a disordered brain, would not be visited with the punishment due to a deed of willful, cold-blooded murder.

Even in her own mind she could not deem him guilty. He had evidently suffered during the best part of his life from the consequences of the blow he had received when shielding a defenseless woman from the murderous attack of a brutal man. The injury had affected his reason, and had finally shown itself in this peculiar form of mania; and he believed that his mission in life was to kill Lord Clanronald and set Diana free. It was insanity undoubtedly; and, after a few hours, Diana recognized it as such.

VAPOR-RESOLINE CO.
LONDON & ST. JOHN'S

He died one morning at sunrise, with Diana's hands clasped in his; and his prayer was that he might see again in heaven the face he had loved so well on earth.

Diana never disclosed his secret. She could not hold him guilty, in the common acceptance of the term, because he had not been accountable for his actions; and she felt that, after the lapse of time, no good would be done by dragging the forgotten mystery of Ferness again before the world.

On the same day that she heard Sir Royal's story, before the sun set, she wrote a letter which contained these words:

"Dear Sir Lisle,—I have made a terrible mistake. Come and see me as soon as you can. I wish to explain and ask your pardon. Do not delay, as I shall have no peace until I see you."

She gave not a thought to love or marriage when she wrote that letter; but after it reached Sir Lisle, he thought of nothing else.

On the lawn at Ling, the residence of Sir Lisle Scarsdale, stands a beautiful woman, no longer in the first freshness of her girlhood—a woman in whose face one can read a story—a story that has left its trace in the expression of patience, sweetness and dignity. She is no longer the bright, brilliant girl who sung of sunshine and roses; but she is a woman so lovely in face and form, and of such nobility of soul, that men pay homage to her as they would to a queen. She is known throughout the land, not only for her surpassing beauty, but for her loftiness of mind and for her unbounded charity. There is no good work in which she is not prominent, no worthy cause she does not advocate.

She prefers living at her husband's home at Ling, where she is beloved by all about her, and where she has done all the good within her power—where she has taught the poor to be self-reliant and industrious, where she has built a noble church, has erected schools and almshouses, and where she is looked upon as an angel of love and mercy.

She stands on the lawn, looking far away over the winding river, her lovely eyes full of unclouded happiness.

Sir Lisle comes up to her with an open telegram in his hand.

"Listen, Dian, darling," he says. "They are all coming. What a household we shall have!"

Sir Lisle has organized a party in honor of the tenth anniversary of his wedding-day. He has invited Peter Cameron and Lady Cameron, the Marquis and Marchioness de Vere, Richard Marche and his wife, with their children, Lady Colwyn, now grown old and feeble; they are all coming.

"I shudder at the association of names, for it reminds me of that terrible tragedy," Sir Lisle says; "and that mystery has never been unraveled yet, Dian."

"No," she answers.

The only secret she has from her husband is the story which Sir Royal told her.

Sir Lisle wonders much at one thing. He knows how attached his wife had been to Sir Royal, and how she had been with him when he died. When his little son and heir was born, he begged Diana to call him "Royal," but she would not, and he cannot understand that refusal.

How he loves and worships his beautiful and noble wife no words can tell. He thinks there is no one like her; and she is equally proud of her handsome husband.

No proud or passionate word is ever heard now from the lips of Lady Scarsdale of Ling. If her girlhood's friends could see her gather her fair children round her knee and talk to them of the evil of pride and the grace of humility, they would better understand the force and the benefit of Diana's discipline.

CHAPTER I.

"All right, very well," he retorts, yielding to the tone of laughing entreaty. "Don't make a fuss. It won't take me ten minutes."

"Go on, then," she says, and she pushes him before her out of the room.

But at the foot of the stairs he turns again.

"I say, Paula, why aren't you going too?"

A faint flush rose to the girl's face, and she laughed.

"Oh, for a hundred reasons. Two will do. There wasn't room, and I'm too young."

"What rot! Now look here; I know the reason. It's something to do with the toga."

The flush deepened, but she laughed.

"What an appallingly vulgar boy you are, Bob! Togs!"

"But it is true, isn't it?" in a lower voice. "I suppose it wouldn't run to more than one get-up, and, of course—I say, of course—Alice must have that."

"And I say of course, too," she retorts, pushing him before her. "Alice is the eldest, and—and the show one, and it is all right and proper. There you are," and she pushes him into his room. "I've lit a couple of candles for you. Stop! Don't go without your clothes, sir; and mind, don't screw up the collar as if it were a piece of tape! There, be quick—"

"Paula! Paula!" from an adjoining room.

"There! She is calling me! If you want me, send Mary. Be quick, mind," and she shut the door upon him and went into the room.

As she entered, a girl turned her head from before a looking-glass and looked at her with an impatient knitting of the brows.

"Paula, I've called until I'm hoarse," she says in a soft voice that is anything but hoarse—soft and nicely modulated rather, as a harp.

"What is it?" asks Paula; and she went and stood beside her, so that the glass reflected them both.

A greater contrast it would be difficult to find.

Paula had described her sister Alice as the beauty of the family, and the title was not undeserved.

She was a beautiful girl of the blonde type; yellow hair, fair, delicate complexion, tiny little mouth, and blue eyes. In her dress of palest blue, with the wreath of flowers in her hair, she looked as if she had slipped out of one of the illustrations to the books of beauty which one sees on fashionable drawing-room tables.

A beauty of the regulation type, "faultlessly faultless," as Tennyson says, with the soft smile that means so little always ready to be turned on, with the little lip in the nicely modulated voice, with all the turns and attitudes of a woman who knows her good points and their value.

And beside her Paula, with her clearly defined face, with nothing soft in it barring perhaps the eyes, and those only occasionally; with every feature distinct; with a mouth full of expression, and therefore large; with a wealth of silky hair that narrowly escapes being downright red; indeed, when she undoes the rich, coil at night, and lets the stream of hair fall on her white, shapely shoulders, some of the strands are red—red as the chestnut fresh from its sheath, red as the oak-leaves when they fall in autumn, the red which makes a painter's heart leap within him and his hands fly to his paint-brush, but which Paula regards with something like contempt, and herself declares to be carrots.

Yes, Alice's was the perfect beauty, the fair loveliness which woman acknowledges and admires; but there was something in Paula's face which made men turn to look at her, and which they remembered—perhaps weeks afterwards.

Younger than Alice, she stood still a head taller, already, and looked still taller in her plain, brown dress that, like an old friend as it was, clung to her as if it loved her, accentuating the graceful curves of the graceful figure, and lending itself to the lithe, easy movements of its wearer.

"Well," she says, "what is it?"

And she stood with her hands on her hips, regarding the beautifully dressed Alice with critical approval.

"I cannot get these gloves buttoned," was the reply; and there was a suspicion of peevishness in the soft voice.

"Are your hands clean? Where have you been? Pray do not come near me—"

"How am I to button it, then?" says Paula, with a laugh. "Wait a moment." And she dips her hands in the basin, and dries them swiftly—all her actions are swift. "Now give me your hand. What lovely gloves! I've been hurrying up Bob."

"Of course he is not dressed?" with an emphasis of displeasure.

"Very nearly, by this time," was the response. "Don't worry yourself about him."

"I do not intend," was the curt retort. "I was quite prepared to wait for him. I am fully aware that he will have no regard for my—comfort; he never has. What a time you are! Is the button off?"

"No, no; it's done now. What a swell you look! Alice! Ten-button gloves—"

The elder sister turned, with a cold stare.

"Pray don't indulge in slang, Paula; I loathe it. I feel as if it would cling to me—positively cling to me. Will you never learn that a lady does not use every vulgar expression which falls from her brother's lips?"

HOW WEAK WOMEN ARE MADE STRONG

Mrs. Westmoreland Tells in the Following Letter.

Harrison, N. Y.—"When my first child was born I did not know about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and when my second child came I took it and was well during the whole time, and childbirth was a hundred times easier. Ever since then I have used it without it for the world. I do all my work and am strong and healthy. I am nursing my baby, and I still take the Vegetable Compound and keep my woman in good health. You may publish my testimonial for the good of other women, if you choose to do so."—Mrs. C. WEST-MORELAND, Harrison, N. Y.

Women who suffer from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, leukorrhoea, backaches, headaches and nervousness should lose no time in giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

"Well," she says, "what is it?"

And she stood with her hands on her hips, regarding the beautifully dressed Alice with critical approval.

"I cannot get these gloves buttoned," was the reply; and there was a suspicion of peevishness in the soft voice.

"Are your hands clean? Where have you been? Pray do not come near me—"

"How am I to button it, then?" says Paula, with a laugh. "Wait a moment." And she dips her hands in the basin, and dries them swiftly—all her actions are swift. "Now give me your hand. What lovely gloves! I've been hurrying up Bob."

"Of course he is not dressed?" with an emphasis of displeasure.

"Very nearly, by this time," was the response. "Don't worry yourself about him."

"I do not intend," was the curt retort. "I was quite prepared to wait for him. I am fully aware that he will have no regard for my—comfort; he never has. What a time you are! Is the button off?"

"No, no; it's done now. What a swell you look! Alice! Ten-button gloves—"

The elder sister turned, with a cold stare.

"Pray don't indulge in slang, Paula; I loathe it. I feel as if it would cling to me—positively cling to me. Will you never learn that a lady does not use every vulgar expression which falls from her brother's lips?"

National Garment
APPEARS IN THE STREETS OF PARIS.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—The national costume for men, manufactured by the government to combat the increasing
 price of clothing, made its appearance
 on the Paris boulevards on December 1, as promised by the authorities. The suit is not such as to draw the attention of promenaders either by its elegance or its shabbiness, and but for
 a little strip of linen inside the coat marked "National Garment" one
 would never know that the suit had anything different from others daily
 turned out of the so-called fashionable tailoring houses.
 Wearers of the suits, however, seemed proud to exhibit the inside of the coat to friends and strangers in the cafes and theatre lobbies. There is one thing alone in which the national garment differs from others and that is the price, as the suits sell for 110
 francs. Andre De Fouquieres, the well known literary light, has not yet appeared in his, although it is reported
 he bought one on December 1, when
 they appeared on the market.
 At the present rate of exchange the price of the "national costume" is 110
 francs, the equivalent of about $11 in American money.

$300 OF SHIP MONEY MISSING.
 Efforts are being made by the police
 and the White Star Line Agents to locate S. W. Giffin, formerly purser of the White Star liner Corinthic, which was in port last week taking on bunker coal, while en-route from New Zealand to London. On Wednesday, several days after the steamer entered this port, Giffin disappeared, and it is presumed he left the city on the Mar-
 time of that day. Between two and three hundred pounds of the ship's money was found to be missing. It is not known whether he carried off
 anything belonging to the passengers
 on board, for usually the ocean passengers take advantage of the safe in the Purser's office to safely-guard their valuables. This will likely be learned
 when the steamer reaches the other side.—Halifax Chronicle, Dec. 5.

"Jaeger" Wool Goods First with
"Kearney First."

KEARNEY SAYS:—
 This is the second week of my "to the fore" effort. Here I ally with my famous Xmas slogan—
 "Kearney First"—another word of great power and meaning—"Jaeger". With the exploitation of my
 "Jaeger" goods has come the birth of a great confidence in what I sell. It is not only "Jaeger's" aim to be better than other makes, but to reach the highest
 height of minute perfection in wool manufacture.
 "Jaeger's" care not for competition; they watch not others. They have no need to. No other firm, no
 other article of wool manufacture, has been proven
 to be better than "Jaeger". The little label "Jaeger, All Wool" on every article that comes from the
 "Jaeger" factory has cost a fortune in sterling to put there. It means what it says, "All Wool". No other firm has such a label.

I have these goods—all the famous "Jaeger" line.
 With me this week it is "Kearney First"—"Jaeger
 First"! The greatest name in local haberdashery—
 the greatest name in wool manufacture allied together for my "Victory Xmas."

Give him one of the "Jaeger" products for Xmas.
 "Jaeger" Wool; heat productive 100 per cent. alcohol.
 Then he cannot say: "You could have bought
 better."

"Jaeger" Wool dearer than other makes—because more quality to the yard.

Twenty-Mile Shaves.

The distance a man shaves is an average lifetime, or the distance his
 razor travels over his face, will be a surprise to most people. From a multitude of examples, an average measurement around the chin from ear to ear is found to be twelve and a half inches. From where the beard starts
 on the throat to the chin and thence to the edge of the under-lip is four
 and half inches. You must reckon that it is necessary to give two strokes of
 the razor to each inch or fraction of an inch in order to cover all the surface, and to go over each section of the face twice in order to secure a clean surface. So, multiplying the number of times the razor is used, and
 four times the two above-mentioned
 measurements gives you the figures of 50 and 18 respectively, which, added
 together, produce 68. Therefore, the average man, whether dark or fair,
 shaves 68 inches once every 24 hours.
 With these figures we arrive at the result that every man wearing only a moustache shaves 2,068 ft. 4 in. per year. Taking, then, the average life at 70 years, and that the fair man starts
 shaving at 18, and the dark man a year earlier, or at 17, we have the following results: That a fair man, if he lives till he is 70, will shave in the course of his life 20 miles 650 yds. 4
 in. The dark man, if he lives till he is 70, will shave in the course of his life 20 miles, 1,340 yds. 1 ft. 8 in.

Inventor of Celebrated
Bramah Lock.

The inventor of a celebrated lock
 which engaged the attention of two continents died on December 9, 1814,
 in Joseph Bramah, the mechanical engineer, who is probably remembered
 nowadays in connection with his lock-
 making achievements alone, although
 his success in that direction was one of the least important of all his victories in the mechanical world. This is chiefly because there was a mystery
 connected with them. At one period,
 it was the custom among the lock-
 makers of England, America, and other places, to challenge each other to pick particular locks. Nearly forty years
 after the death of Bramah, the Great Exhibition of 1851, brought this curious contest into very marked prominence. An American lock-maker, name Hobbs, declared that any lock could
 be picked, and in the presence of several witnesses he picked one of Chubb's safety locks in twenty-five minutes, without injuring it in any
 way. The successors of Joseph Bra-
 mah had for many years offered a prize
 of two hundred guineas to anyone who
 should be able to pick that particular
 lock. Hobbs determined to try for this,
 and an elaborate agreement was drawn up. The American was to be allowed to take thirty days over the job. All kinds of precautions were taken against cheating by both sides.
 Suffice it to say that in two days less than the time agreed upon Hobbs succeeded in opening the celebrated lock
 which had defied all attempts for fifty years.

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Slightly prepared, and saves about 5c.

You might be surprised to know that
 the best thing you can use for a severe
 cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments.
 It's cheap, but for prompt results it
 beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest
 cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—
 children like it—and it is pure and good.
 Four 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (30 cents
 worth) in a 16-oz bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn
 syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired.
 And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly
 breaks the inflamed membrane that lines
 the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the
 phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup,
 hoarseness and bronchial asthma.
 Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous
 for its healing effect on the membranes.
 To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything
 else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex
 Co., Toronto, Ont.

Household Notes.

Dental floss should always be used
 very carefully and lightly, or it may
 injure the gums.
 Mix the butter cakes in a wide-
 mouth pitcher. It is easier to pour
 the batter than to dip it.
 In making cheese sandwiches, the
 cheese should be pressed firmly between the slices of bread.
 To stiffen cranberry jelly add a
 little softened gelatine to the sauce
 just as the sugar is added.
 Each child should possess a laundry bag and put his soiled clothes in
 it as soon as they are taken off.
 Core apples for baking and fill the
 center with red cinnamon candies,
 and bake till the apples crack open.
 Potato salad is made more attractive and more palatable when garnished with peas and English walnuts.

Maternity Home Campaign.

DONATIONS STILL COMING IN.
The workers in connection with the Maternity Hospital drive will be delighted to learn that yesterday the money continued to pour in to headquarters by team workers, cable and callers. Several telegrams were received giving large contributions to the fund, not a few Canadian and American companies replied to messages sent them, and each reply was favorable. One of the features of the drive was the splendid response of the industrial workers through the untiring efforts of Mr. F. Bradshaw. In his address Monday night, Mr. Bradshaw spoke eloquently of the employees of the industrial plants. The number of subscriptions was 1,070, aggregating $848.70, which amount has since been augmented. Continuing, Mr. Bradshaw said: "From the numbers involved the amount may appear small in terms of dollars, but owing to the limited resources and urgent needs of the donors, many of whom are women and young girls, it represents something infinitely more than the mere monetary support for these lists containing such a great number of names, show a sympathetic interest which must necessarily be of a great abiding benefit. It is not those of us who have our names writ large on the literature of this campaign, nor yet those who have given so munificently in the larger donations who have done the greatest amount of work, but that magnificent band of workers, the men and women and bright girls who are before us in the body of the hall. They have gone forth day after day at great personal inconvenience to interview very often doubtful prospects, doing the actual collecting, to many most distasteful and a necessary duty we all desire to shirk. But they got the money and the Salvation Army must look to its laurels, for they got alone got the money, but by their efforts have shown that same service and self-sacrifice for which the Army stands. They have, by the compelling force, a physical force of personal contact, implanted in the minds and hearts of our people that germ of enthusiastic effort whose contagion will spread throughout the land. This campaign has done something more than collect funds to build a Maternity hospital. It has performed the miracle of bringing together with one common interest every shade of political and religious conviction, and the only other organization that accomplished this in my memory took a world war to bring it into being. There are a few who say they are unconvinced, and yet a few who imagine that another agency might have been used to promote this work, but when the home is built and they see and feel the influence of this charity, this great charity that soothes and heals and blesses, they also will be numbered amongst its warmest friends. Some there are, I regret to say, but their numbers are vanishing so rapidly that we will need Dr. Roberts' microscope to find them, who are still obstinately opposed. They, I think, should be answered by the following questions: Could you, failing any definite proposal, delay the helping of these mothers who need such help; would you permit them to suffer in their travail one unnecessary moment, and above all would you penalize the child? The child, whether from an economic or sentimental standpoint, is the greatest asset of the community, the home and colony. Hay, a poet and great statesman, has said with that combination of philosophy and quaint humor: 'I think the saving of a little child and bringing him to his own is a darn'd eight better business than loading round a throne.' Mr. Bradshaw's was only a partial list, and yesterday $14 was received from the employees of Bowring Bros. Other splendid donations yesterday were:

The drive has not only resulted in the biggest amount ever raised for a single year, but it has the biggest percentage of cash in the bank already $35,000. The first meeting of the Advisory Board takes place at campaign headquarters at 4 this afternoon, when the officers will be appointed. The campaign has meant much work for many, but there is satisfaction for them in the knowledge that it has been well done.

Dept. of the Colonial Secretary, December 9th, 1919.

Further contributions have been received at Campaign Headquarters by telegram this morning from the following firms—

B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co.
Boston, Mass. (through their agents, Messrs. Bowring Bros. Ltd.) $500.00

Westinghouse Lamp Co., New York, (through their agents Messrs. Bowring Bros. Ltd.) 50.00

Wilcox Crittenden & Co., Middletown 100.00

J. C. Wilson Ltd., Montreal 100.00

At the Majestic.
Dainty Shirley Mason, the Paramount Star, leads in the feature picture at the Majestic Theatre this evening. This is "The Winning Girl," a delightful story of spies, intrigue and love. Such a combination of interest cannot fail to prove acceptable to the patrons of the Majestic who are used to seeing pictures that lead. Shirley Mason is well known as an actress of rare daintiness and ability, and in "The Winning Girl" her ability is given an excellent chance for display. An actress was never known to throw away a chance and the result is that this picture is, to use a slangy but expressive phrase, "a humdinger." The Motion Picture World says of the production: "The story is best suited to audiences that appreciate a clean, wholesome picture with a modern motive." Two other pictures will also be screened—"Sparks from the Embers," a Western drama, and "Knutt Gets a Bite," a comedy. Don't miss this big show.

Local Enterprise.
Messrs. Wm. Dawe & Sons, mill owners at Bay Roberts have installed special machinery at their plant for the making of veneer from local wood. Samples of the product on exhibition in the Board of Trade Rooms, would show that there are many uses to which it can be put and it is hoped that a large sale for the product will reward the enterprise of the producers.

Association Sale is Successful.
The St. Thomas's Women's Association sale at Canon Wood Hall yesterday was considered the most successful held in the history of the Association. Many people attended during the afternoon, and at the close of the sale the proceeds were well up to expectations.

Side Table by Ruth Ca
A letter friend has an old, old question to put up to me. The letter came this morning, and after I had read it, I caught my hands absently dusting the top of the bookcase for the third or fourth time because my mind was so busy considering this old question that it had forgotten to get them. This is the letter: Do you believe in the theory of men having stimulating minds. I was brought up to think when a woman marries she would give up all other acquaintances.

Was Afraid Her Husband Would Be "Mad!"
However, as I grow older I often think life would be much pleasanter if one had friends of the opposite sex in a pleasant way. But would it be one's friends to look doubtfully at such an action? I have never received but one letter from a man who was not a relative since I have been married and then I was frightened at what my husband might say. From here she goes on to explain that the letter was written by a husband, to accompany a book which he had spoken her and which had offered to loan her. And yet she feared her husband's wrath!

Fourth Time.
I have dusted the bookcase the fourth time. I am only one person's humble opinion, but since she asks, I am going to set down disjointedly some thoughts with which my mind is busy with while my hand dusts the book case for the third and fourth time.

He wants male friends because they are stimulating. Well and good, the stimulation is such as one would get from feminine friends, being only in the main quality of friendship. But, of course, one has no right to friendships which are a sex

Enquiry Begun.
The enquiry into the death of Dr. Reid was begun yesterday afternoon before Judge Morris. The evidence of Dr. Tait, Sr., who made the post mortem examination was taken, and the finding of Analyst Davies was taken in. A companion of the dead girl, Walsh, says evidence. The enquiry was continued this morning after the regular court business had been concluded.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

MARRIED WOMEN AND MEN FRIENDS.

A letter friend has an old, old question to put up to me. The letter came this morning, and after I had read it, I caught my hands absent-mindedly dusting the top of the bookcase for the third or fourth time because my mind was so busy considering this old, old question that it had forgotten to meet them.

Is the letter: "Do you believe in the theory of men having stimulating men?" I was brought up to think that when a woman marries she had give up all other acquaintances.

"However, as I grow older I often think life would be much pleasanter if I had friends of the opposite sex in a pleasant way. But would it be wise to have such friends?" I have never received but one letter from a man who was not a relative since I have been married and then I was frightened at what my husband might say.

From here she goes on to explain that the letter was written her by a man's husband, to accompany a book she had spoken of while the man had been visiting her and which she had offered to loan her. And yet she feared her husband's wrath!

While I dusted the Bookcase the Fourth time.

stimulation. Surely, she would not wish her husband to enjoy such friendships. That thought leads to this one: The Golden Rule of After Marriage Friendships.

The measure of friendship with men which any woman has a right to is the amount of friendship with women that she is willing her husband shall have (and vice versa). Of course, in this case I pre-suppose that each loves the other and that it is not a case of double laxity due to indifference.

There is safety in numbers. It is one thing to have male friends, outside of her husband, another to have a male friend.

If any particular friendship with the other sex means a great deal to you, isn't that the time to beware of it and find some other interest to fill its place?

I do not know whether these suggestions will make the way any plainer for my letter friend. I hope they may perhaps open up the subject a bit.

And I also hope they may inspire some other man or woman to speak out of his or her experience some words that may be of more definite service.

Should they do so, I shall be delighted to pass them on!

THE CHEERFUL GROCER.

Grocer Johnson is a peach, and he should be hired to teach optimism to his kind; he's a man of hopeful mind. In the throbbing marts of trade optimism seems decayed; nearly every merchant prince seems to think that life's a quince, and he tells me tales of fears, and of doleful doubts and fears. Every day I hear a speli from the dealers as if of doom, hear a narrative of woe, and of commerce lying low, lying profligate and dead, and of frightful times ahead. Every day I hear such bunk when I go to spend a plunk in the throbbing marts of trade, where the hams and spuds are weighed. But in Johnson's moral shop I have heard no doleful yawn. Johnson skips around his store, leaving smoke around the floor, and he murmurs cheerful tunes as he weighs his boneless prunes. Tired of hearing people beef, it's to me a great relief, to encounter, then and now, one who has unfurrowed brow, and who chortles as he sells hard boiled eggs and oyster shells. Far too many people whine in this little grad of mine, putting up a doleful wheeze, when they should be on their knees, thanking Providence all day for the good that comes their way.

John Hassall, the celebrated artist, emigrated early in life to Canada, and settled down as a farmer; but, some sketches from his amateur pencil having been accepted by a London weekly, he was induced to return to England with a view to taking up art, and his success is now well known.

Priceless art treasures have been found sealed in the walls of Prince Nicholas Esterhazy's castle at Forchtenstein. There were found money, silver dishes and goblets, including a silver goblet as tall as a man adorned with precious stones dating from the time of Matthias I. (King of Hungary 1440-1490.)

The average storm-wave is 30 feet in height, the highest storm-waves ever measured were between 44 feet and 48 feet high. The gigantic force of storm-waves is shown by the fact that at Skerryvore lighthouse, off the West Coast of Scotland, a mass of rock weighing 5 1/2 tons was once hurled to a height of 72 feet above the sea level, whilst a mass weighing 13 1/2 tons was torn from a cliff 74 feet high.

Queen Alexandra is the latest member of the Royal family to take part in a photo-play. Her Majesty was recently photographed in the conservatory of Marlborough House in a scene in "Women who Win," a play in which the Queen, the Crown Princess of Sweden, and Lady Patricia Ramsay have already appeared. A most successful picture was taken, and afterwards the leading characters and the producers were presented to Queen Alexandra.

ABOUT GRUMBLERS.

I hear men whimper an' complain About the way the world is run. On sunny days they sigh for rain An' when it rains they want the sun. "If we were runnin' things," they say, "There'd be much less of grief an' wrong. We'd keep the clouds o' care away An' life would be one round o' song."

Yet in the homes where they abide As lords an' masters day by day, The women folks are sorely tried, The children are not always gay; The grounds are often bleak an' bare; The roses struggling by the fence Don't seem to show the tender care Of notable intelligence.

I've never found a grumbler yet Whose dealings with his fellow man Were free from error or regret Or shaped to any faultless plan. With'n his territory small An' on the round he daily makes, Where he is lord an' boss of all I notice that he makes mistakes.

So when I hear such men complain About the way the Hand Divine Orders the sunshine an' the rain I look around an' try to see The kind o' work that he has done And I'm so glad as I can be He doesn't have the world to run.

Auld Scotia's Standard.

The national flag of Scotland is the St. Andrew's Cross, white on a blue ground. It forms the foundation of the Union Jack to-day, as Scotland's flag, J. H. Stevenson, author of "Heraldry in Scotland," says—that "the Silver Cross to Scotland" as Sir Walter Scott termed it, is one of the very oldest, as it is one of the most striking of all the national flags. The Royal Standard of the King of Scotland, which to-day finds place in the Royal Standard of the King of Great Britain (Scotland, England and Wales), the red lion on a golden ground, is also an ancient device, being found on the great seal of Alexander II. of Scotland about 1230. The three lions forming the old Royal Standard of the King of England, first appeared on the seal of Richard of the Lion Heart in 1195. "The three

Enquiry Begun.

The enquiry into the death of Ellen Reid was begun yesterday afternoon before Judge Morris. The evidence of Dr. Tall, Sr., who made the post mortem examination was taken, and the finding of Analyst Davies was handed in. A companion of the dead girl, Alice Walsh, gave evidence. The enquiry was continued this morning after the regular court business had been cleared.

SHOP EARLY.

With Christmas but two short weeks away, purchasers should make a note reminding them to do their buying early. This advice, which is given to the public by the newspapers, annually, is old, but that it will bear repetition no one doubts, as an old story can never die of age. Hence the request is made again. There are numerous reasons why it is unwise to put off until the last few days before Christmas the buying that could be done away ahead of the usual Christmas rush. One of the most important is that the early buyer will find larger and more varied stocks from which to make selections. Another is that early shopping will enable the purchaser to avoid the crush which invariably gathers around the Christmas counters during the immediately preceding days, and, not the least important to be considered is the reason that early buying relieves the burden of the clerks, who from now till Christmas Eve will be kept busy from early morning to late at night.

The slogan Shop Early is full of good sense and practical wisdom. As has been pointed out, it is not only a great convenience to the stores, to the salesmen and saleswomen, but it is of even greater convenience to the buyer. It is sensible to shop early; it is comfortable, and it helps everybody. To the moderately financed woman or man, it gives an opportunity to make a close calculation of what presents can be bought out of the available fund, and then time can be taken in making the selection from such shops as are usually patronized, or which keep the articles which are to be purchased. Then there is the matter of service. It is much more easy to be served by the salespeople and secure their best attention and assistance when the shopping is done before the rush begins, when a hundred people are demanding of tired and weary clerks that they all should be waited on at once. The stores have all the articles on display now which the shopper can hope to find later. Windows are dressed with all the variety and glittering array of Christmas, and shelves and counters are heaped with the very presents that the shopper and prospective gift-giver admire, all inviting an early selection and purchase.

Again, if it is the desire of all to inculcate the spirit of Christmas and make it a merry season for everybody, shopping has to be done early. It must not be forgotten that the employees of the stores, not only require a little breathing spell during the Christmas rush, but as well need a little time to themselves in order that they may make their own purchases, and exchange greetings with their friends. No one would be so uncharitable as to deprive them of this privilege or to question their right to exercise it. Early shopping will help them, will make them more cheerful in waiting upon customers and more eager to please their patrons. And so it is in the power of all to begin at once to practice the good will which the season teaches and emphasizes. By early shopping the salespeople will be freed from worry and will go about their multitudinous duties blithely and merrily, borne up by the knowledge that there is a genuine tendency on the part of the customer to lighten their burden and make their daily work easier to perform. The advantage will be to all, so keep the Shop Early slogan in mind, carry it out, and profit by it.

DECORATIONS PRESENTED.
His Excellency the Governor and Lady Harris held a reception at Government House last evening, the guests of honor being those who were recently awarded decorations by His Majesty the King for meritorious work during the great world war, and also the immediate relatives of the recipients. The Prime Minister and Executive colleagues, the Judges of the Supreme Court and Church dignitaries were also among the invited guests which in all numbered considerably more than one hundred. The decorations were presented by His Excellency Sir C. Alexander Harris in the following order:—
Awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous Gallantry and Devotion to Duty in the Field—Major Robert Holland Talbot.
To be Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire—John Chalker Crosbie.
To be Commander of the Order of the British Empire—The Honourable Marmaduke George Winter, Mr. Robert George Rendell (Officer of the Order), Mrs. Mary Pitts, Mr. Thomas Andrew Hall.
To be Officer of the Order of the British Empire—The Hon. Francis Joseph Morris, K.C., Mr. Robert Thos. Squarey, Mr. Charles Henry Hutchings, Mr. Patrick Joseph Summers, K.C.
To be Companion of the Imperial Service Order—Mr. George Edward Turner.
To be Members of the Order of the British Empire—Mrs. Ethel Harvey, Mrs. Helen Kennedy, Mrs. Agnes Cliff, Mrs. Caroline Augusta Somerton, Mrs. Henrietta Palfrey Holloway, Mr. Charles Robert Steer, Mr. George Frederick Moore, Mr. Henry Frederick Fitzgerald, Mr. Charles Pascoe Ayra, Mr. Dr. John Alexander Robinson, Mrs. Janet Aitken Fisher, Miss Elizabeth Shaw Lauder.
During the evening refreshments were served, and a programme of dances gone through, the C.L.B. Band furnished the music.

Germany Still Unregenerate.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)
The demonstration in the Potsdam Garrison church during the service for the German soldiers who fell in the war, is strong evidence that Germany is simply hiding her time to seek revenge for the humiliation she has had to undergo. With the officiating clergyman standing on the tomb of Frederick the Great and pledging the people to support a monarchy, and the congregation singing "Deutschland Uber Alles," there cannot be much regret in their hearts for the iniquitous and inhuman war they forced upon the world. Their only regret seemingly is that it failed in its object. Germany is to-day without ships, without money, and with an army that is to a great extent demoralized. It will take her many years to organize an armament that will make her the menace to her neighbors that she was before her armies were crushed by the united weight of Christendom. But Germany is a patient worker. She spent nearly half a century preparing for the recent war, and if it was not successful it was not for lack of effort on her part. She provided for every eventuality she could foresee, and she failed only because there were some she overlooked. She sees her mistakes now and is already preparing to remedy them. Given another forty or fifty years for preparation she may prove to be as formidable and relentless an enemy as she was during the late war. A future generation may have to do all over again the work we thought we had completed.

Has No Objection to Kiss British Flag.

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—W. D. Euler, M. P., Kitchener, who was beaten in the G. W. V. A. headquarters at Kitchener recently in connection with the outbreak following the decision of the City Council of Kitchener on the name changing proposal, and compelled to join in the singing of God Save the King, states that he had nothing whatever to do with the movement to have the old name, Berlin, restored. He says he declined to kiss the flag when ordered by the returned men to do so because the demand was intended to humiliate him and he felt that the flag was being made "the instrument of oppression." Under proper circumstances, he says, he has no objection to kissing the British flag.

COST $15,000.00—SELLING FOR $14.00 EACH—AT BISHOP, SONS & CO., LTD.

The designer of the "Orkin Fleet," Samuel Orkin, conceived the idea of building toy models of American battleships while working on a design of a battleship to be controlled by wireless from shore. A visit to the Battleship Georgia, in the year 1912, had shown him the wonderful possibilities and the number of lives that could be spared if this big fighting craft could be brought safely to port under the guidance of a wireless operator on land.
He began to build a model of the battleship with this idea in view, and after two and one-half years of the most tedious, tiresome work, confronted with many obstacles which he finally overcame, his boat was at last completed at a cost of nearly $15,000.
We have only received SIX of these models, which we are selling at $14.00 each.

Civil Court.

An interesting case was heard in the Civil Court this forenoon when a cooper, or maker of fish casks, from a nearby outpost, summoned a merchant of Water Street for the value of some fish casks which the latter had verbally contracted for. The casks were to be of special make for a particular market, but when received on the merchant's premises it was found that the packages would only hold four quintals, whereas the merchant wanted them to contain five. A master cooper gave evidence as to the condition of the barrels and said that they were only "slapped together," although the plaintiff testified that he had been making casks for the past 47 years and had sold some 5,000 without ever having one rejected. Mr. Hunt appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. L. E. Emerson for the defendant. Judgment was given for the defendant with the amount of a counter claim for cartage and freight.

Enquiry Concluded.

The enquiry into the death of Ellen Reid was concluded this morning. Four witnesses were examined, viz. Noah Iveny who made the report, Ed. Murphy who also made report of finding the body, Duffy Joseph at whose shop the victim purchased beads the night before her death, and Constable Myers who was sent to remove the body.

Danger of Supply Shortage.

THROUGH WRECK OF ARRANMORE.

Government steamer Arranmore, which went ashore at Cape Whipple, on the Labrador coast, on Wednesday will probably be a total wreck says the Marine Department of Halifax, N.S., in the Dec. 8 issue.

The Captain of the steamer Montcalm sent a radio to C. H. Harvey, of the Marine Department last night, that his ship was unable to get within two miles of the Arranmore. The Montcalm anchored for the night.

While the stranding of the ship is unfortunate, there is another feature still more regrettable attached to the stranding of the Arranmore. The steamer sailed from Prince Edward Island recently with a very heavy cargo of supplies for lighthouses and Marconi stations on the shores of the Straits of Belle Isle. If these supplies do not reach their destination there is a possibility that the people there will starve. It had been originally planned that the ice breaker Montcalm would make this trip, but she was diverted to the St. Lawrence to keep the track clear for outgoing ships. It may be too late even for the Montcalm to take a new or transferred cargo to Belle Isle. When the winter's ice sets in it would be impossible for even this strong icebreaker to make any headway. The winter supplies are already overdue at Belle Isle.

Transatlantic Mail Bag Returned.

The Postmaster General has received from the British Postal authorities the mail bag in which the first Transatlantic airmail was carried from this country to the British Isles, in the Vickers-Vimy biplane. It has been duly certified and handed over to the Department of Agriculture and Mines to be placed in the Museum, where the public may at any time examine it. This mail-bag will in years to come prove of great interest, as being the first one ever to cross the Atlantic Ocean by Air.

Getting After the Advocate.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—Please oblige me by publishing the following copy of letter which I am sending the Advocate. Yours truly,
MICHAEL O'ROURKE.

Dear Sir:—The name of Michael O'Rourke appeared in a recent issue of your paper as having received eighty dollars, Government money (p.p.). I now want to tell you that this Michael O'Rourke did not receive any monies from the Government, and you vilify my reputation by giving publication to such a falsehood; therefore I desire that you correct the error you have made, also to publish this letter and oblige.

Yours truly,
MICHAEL O'ROURKE.

Bullet Crashed Through Window.

Fired by some lads, as it is thought, a bullet crashed through the back window of Mrs. Hillier, Duckworth Street, yesterday afternoon, narrowly escaping Mrs. Hillier. The bullet, which is now in the possession of the lady, struck a chair by which she was standing at the time, and the probability is that if she had been hit severe injury would have resulted.

"Honor to Whom."

In connection with the rescuing of the boy Gussel, as noted in this paper yesterday, we have been asked to state that the man who went into the water after him was Mr. W. C. Saunders, a cooper at the factory of Mr. Samson, South Side. The boy was coasting at the time and ran out on the thin ice on his slide.

(No. 1) "This Our Country."

There is a man with soul so dead, who never to himself hath said:— "This is my home, my native land." He missed the poet. So muse we all, for of our country can be as serious as any other sacred thing, and devotion. The Yankee sings, "Jerusalem the golden with milk and honey blest." The devout Jew chants in solemn refrain, "Let my feet forget her cunning if I forget thee, O Jerusalem." The German is passionately devoted to the "Fatherland," the Britisher to the "Motherland," the Australians to the "Land of the Kangaroo," the Canadian to the "Maple Leaf for Ever," and so on, ad infinitum. The Newfoundlanders would fain hope as strenuously and intelligently thoughtful for Newfoundland. The greatest advertisement of the land of promise, the key to the heart of Canada, Britain's oldest and most loyal Colony is the Newfoundland. Let him breathe the patriotic soul's aspiring word, and those who know so little of it, but who think they know so much, and in their knowing ignorance speak of it as the forest surrounding St. John's will come to realize that here is a mean city. Some one has that God made man in his own image; but the public is made by newspapers; members of Parliament, excise officers, and poor-law-guardians." Is it not also true that newspapers, members of Parliament, excise officers, and poor-law-guardians are made by the public. The law of political economy states not only that Demand creates Supply, but that Supply creates Demand. A lady out shopping is often asked to buy things, not because she needs them, but because some one else is buying them. The business sign on a shoe shop-keeper will insist upon allowing to her a special line of goods. The supply governing the demand. So we find that very, very often, the public makes the newspaper, the member of Parliament, the excise officer, or the relieving officer, these elements, politically are called the country, and the public make the country what it is. The old adage, "Give a dog a bad name and it will stick to it," is still true. Newfoundland will be as precious ornament poured forth when Newfoundlanders give fragrance and color to the speaking of their country. In these days in which Democracy is King, and every illiterate may has as much power, politically, as the University President; when in his own right, a right which none will challenge, the humblest and weakest in the realm, by his vote decides the destiny and welfare or otherwise of his fellow-beings, it needs to be particularly emphasized that the public make the country. The same kindly providence which prepares conditions for people out West or farther East, where grain and gold contend in glorious commercial expression and welfare; also controls the sky over our heads, and the sea around our shores, and the rocks and minerals in our land, and the thousand and one possibilities of our Island Home. We individually need to work in sympathetic and co-operative effort to realize for our land, as much, if not more, than other people realize for their lands.

Our Land is as Much to Us

As other lands are to those who live there. Whence does this love of our country, this universal passion proceed? Why does the eye ever dwell with fondness upon the scenes of infant life? Why do we breathe with greater joy the breath of our youth? Why are not other soils as grateful to our hearts as this? Why does the soul of man ever cling to that earth where it first knew pleasure and pain, and, under the rough discipline of the passions was roused to the dignity of moral life? Is it only that our country contains our kindred and our friends? And is it nothing but a name for our social affections? . . . It cannot be this; the most friendless of human beings has a country which he admires and extols, and which he would, in the same circumstances prefer to all others under heaven. Tempt him with the fairest place of nature, place him by living waters under the shadowy trees of Lebanon, open to his view all the gorgeous allurements of the climates of the sun—he will love the rocks and deserts of his childhood better than all these, and thou canst not bribe his soul to forget the land of his nativity; he will sit down and weep by the waters of Babylon when he remembers thee Oh, Zion.

A wide diffusion of this spirit, a deep and abiding consciousness of it and Newfoundland will stand forth fair as the morning bright as the noonday, terrible as an Army with banners.

You will occasionally meet a Canadian who sees no good thing come out of Canada or an "American" who sees the spots in the sun abiding which shines on "Old Glory," or an Englishman who views the fair fields of that lovely country with mistrust and pessimism. When you do, you meet an enemy to the best interests of each respective country. Shun him as you would a plague, learn not his ways. Always speak well of your own country, so shall you not share in the indignity of those who go down to their graves; "Unwept, unhonoured and unsung." We do not argue Newfoundland for Newfoundlanders and limit it to such narrow bounds; but we would have every son of Terra Nova feel, that there is no place like "Home." It is as much to the point that every member of the crew stick to the ship as that the Captain be the last to leave her. She sails better when the crew is loyal to a man. We expect our Governor, or Ministers of State and Politicians; our Business men and Professional men, to give to and for the good of the Homeland; the ideal State is where every man places Country before Self, and makes his personal contribution thereto. Shall we have an Old Home Week in 1920?

On the Cathedral Steps.

(From the British Weekly.) "A year ago," writes a city correspondent, "I stood with a little crowd before St. Paul's Cathedral awaiting the signals that proclaimed the signing of the Armistice. Then the maroons that had so often struck terror to our hearts thrilled us with joy. To-day they called us to silent reverence. At ten minutes to eleven the Cathedral steps were thronged with city people, while outside the railings they formed a solid ring. On the first stroke of eleven every man's head was bare, the bleak wind parting the thin silver hair of age and ruffling the thick brown locks of youth; every woman bent reverently; traffic ceased, and in the great hush while London held her breath we heard the swish and beat of the Cathedral pigeons' wings as they circled round—and round—an omen as beautiful as the day's sunshine. When the pause was over, a clear voice gave out the first verse of 'O God, our help in ages past,' and the people took it up, first tremblingly and haltingly, then stronger and stronger as each encouraged each. Then the last verse, 'Be Thou our Guard when troubles last, and our eternal home.' Tears stood in many eyes as they finished, and the lips quivered. 'Now let us sing the Doxology'—and then those in the street halted again to listen to the voice of the great concourse singing 'God Save the King.'"

THE NUMBER OF OUR DAYS.

The following is one of the well authenticated calculations in use among Life Insurance companies showing the average length of life at various ages.

The first line represents the present ages of persons of average health, and the second line the number of years they will give us to live. These figures have been the result of careful calculation and seldom prove misleading. Of course sudden and premature deaths occasionally occur, but this is the average expectancy of life of an ordinary man or woman.

Age:—1, 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60, 70, 80.
More years to live:—38, 31, 41, 24, 28, 21, 14, 9, 4.

Culled From All Sources.

A black opal find at Tintenbar, Australia, has caused great excitement. One hundred claims have been pegged out.

"The Prince of Wales went to Halifax without any suggestion from anyone in the United States," remarks the Boston Globe.

Holding the War-time Prohibition Act unconstitutional, Federal District Judge Foster at New Orleans, yesterday, granted an injunction restraining Govt. officials from interfering with the sale by the Henry Lelzco Liquor Company of bonded liquor held in warehouses there.

A Herts (G. B.) farmer declares that the best way to catch rats is to place a 36 gallon barrel containing food in the farmyard. The rats go up a ladder at the top of which is a balance stick which tumbles them into the barrel. He says he has caught fifty in one day this way.

In reference to the recently cabled appointment of a lady food inspector by the Bermudez, Great Britain, Council, to keep track of shopkeeping profiteers, this lady started her duties last week. Her advent resulted in her being chased by newspaper photographers, and she was obliged to escape by scrambling over a wall.

Near the St. Lawrence River, in Canada, there is a water-slide three miles long for conveying pulp-wood to the railway. It is capable of moving nearly 3,000 cubic feet of wood per hour. The company operating this slide had at one time a pile of pulp-wood 1,000 feet long, 20 feet high, and 40 feet wide, all of which had been transported from the woods to the railway by this novel method. One company have on one of their jobs a water-slide seven miles long, by which their pulp stock is carried to the river, whence it is driven to their mills.

The largest mass of ice in the world is probably the one which fills up nearly the whole of the interior of Greenland, where it has accumulated since before the dawn of history. It is believed to form a block 600,000 square miles in area, and to average a mile and a half in thickness. According to these statistics the lump of ice is larger in volume than the whole body of water in the Mediterranean; and there is enough of it to cover the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland with a layer about seven miles thick.

In the Harlem, New York court, Magistrate Raphael Tobia was called upon to decide the ownership of Daisy, a little white poodle dog. Daisy, which raised a great rumpus in the court room, was claimed by Charles Irovitch and Harry Rothstein. To settle the affair, the magistrate placed the disputants on opposite sides of the room and had them each call Daisy. Rothstein called first and the dog came nonchalantly. When Irovitch called the dog came running, apparently overjoyed. So Daisy was awarded the latter. Both men left the court fast friends.

Among the civilians in the American occupied area complaints, originating with the German men, are often heard to the effect that the American soldiers are "spoiling" the German girls by heaping luxuries upon them and by spending money recklessly for presents, wines and good things to eat. Since the anti-fraternization regulation was revoked by army headquarters several weeks ago, the cafes in Coblenz have been crowded each night with soldiers and frauleins, and many of the German men have openly asserted that the Americans were entirely too considerate of the German women and girls.

A Tobermory, G. B., message says that Miss Nawior, for the second time, indulged in deep sea diving. She descended at 3 p.m. from a pontoon in six and one-half fathoms at high water. During her descent and the half-hour she was below she showed herself an apt pupil. Only once had Diver MacKenzie an anxious moment regarding her. It was when a stream of bubbles became invisible, as she got immediately under the pontoon. At the bottom she found herself among masses of small fish, and she was asked whether a basket should be sent down. She had experiences then of climbing a steep incline and of falling into an excavation, but she ultimately extricated herself.

Because Miss Linda A. Wotring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wotring of Allentown, Pa., looked liked his dead wife, she became the bride of John Kohler, of Kutztown. The marriage was the result of an unusual romance. Ten weeks ago they had never heard of each other. Then a friend of Miss Wotring told her she was the exact image of the first wife of Mr. Kohler, who was a young widower, bereaved just before the war. This friend had also told Mr. Kohler that in Miss Wotring was a young lady who was a duplicate of his deceased wife. He became curious and sought an introduction. He found the resemblance true as to looks, figure, voice and even gesture. The young people fell in love at first sight, and in a few days their engagement was announced.

(Associated Press, Dec. 4.)
 George Carpentier, the French champion, knocked out Joe Beckett, champion of England to-night in a brief and decidedly one-sided fight for the heavyweight championship of Europe.

Seventy-four seconds, as announced by the official timer, sufficed to decide whether Carpentier or Beckett should meet Jack Dempsey, the American heavyweight, for the championship of the world in June next. From the moment the referee, B. J. Angles, called time, Carpentier had the battle entirely in his own hands. Beckett never had a chance of hitting the agile Frenchman, who landed blows with enormous strength whenever he felt inclined.

Amid absolute stillness, most of the spectators could hear the terrific crack of the swing that put Beckett to sleep. There was a roar of cheering as Carpentier assisted Beckett to his corner, where the Englishman opened his astonished eyes and saw his opponent being carried on the shoulders of some of the enthusiasts around the ring.

The contestants presented a notable difference in appearance when they stripped and were introduced--Beckett swarthy and muscular; Carpentier white-skinned with slight figure. Carpentier looked about him as though accustomed to his surroundings; Beckett seemed somewhat nervous.

The Prince of Wales, peers and peers, members of the House of Commons, high officials of state and many women, most of them in evening dress, looked the fighters over critically as they squared up.

As a fight, the contest was not spectacular. Carpentier was fast on his feet, dancing in and out and playing havoc with the Englishman from first lead. With lightning swiftness, Carpentier's left leaped out and caught Beckett on the face and a suppressed sigh was audible all over the house. A quick break-away followed a short clinch, and the Frenchman landed two more hard lefts.

Beckett with a sort of bull-dog determination, forced Carpentier almost to the ropes. But this was a diversion for a moment only, for the Frenchman stepped back and then forward, and

Ordeal of Poison.

It is said that very strange customs still exist amongst the Bambara tribes, who reside in numerous village communities on the banks of the Kourou River, a southern tributary of the Congo. In disputes, where two peoples of the same village are concerned, a poison ordeal is employed as judge. Whether a man is accused of witchcraft, parricide, or of some minor offence, he declares himself willing to take poison to prove his innocence.

This poison, which is derived from the bark of a native tree, is usually ground fine and mixed to a thick paste, from which are made five small loaves, and these are administered one after the other to the defendant. During the next fifteen minutes, if it be a case of witchcraft, the bystanders call on Moloké (the evil principle) to come out.

The poison usually acts very quickly; it may kill the accused or cause purging or vomiting. The last-named effect alone is regarded as a proof of innocence. In the second case the prisoner is compelled to dig a hole. He is then given a bowl to eat and enough palm wine to make him quite intoxicated. After this he is laid in the hole, or possibly goes and lays himself down, and is then buried alive in order to prevent Moloké escaping with his last breath. A large fire is kept alight on the grave for two days, and then the body is exhumed and eaten.

An innocent man is carried round the village, decorated with beads, and his accuser pays a pig as compensation for the false charge.

Cannibalism is an every-day occurrence, and, according to the natives themselves, who display no reticence except in the presence of state officials, it is based on a sincere liking for human flesh. Enemies killed in war and people buried alive after the poison test, or dying as a result of it, are eaten; so, too, are slaves, and farther north and near the river these are killed on rare occasions to provide a cannibal feast. In the latter case the body may be buried, for a couple of days and a fire kept burning over the grave. The flesh is consumed in the ordinary way with manioc flour.

No one has ever been able to trace any magical or religious basis for any of these customs. Vessels in which human flesh has been cooked are broken and thrown away, and this rather suggests some magical idea, but the men say the custom is only adopted to prevent women or other prohibited persons from using the same pot afterwards. On the other hand, this prohibition suggests that there was in the past, some idea of possible magical effects, though women are at the present day debarred from human flesh, as they are from goat's flesh, only in order that there may be a larger supply for the men.

A Celestial Scrap.

Recently after we had briefly glanced over some four thousand despatches from our private agents in various parts of the world and had satisfied ourselves that there was nothing on earth which particularly needed our attention, we got out our telescope and turned it on the heavens with a view to ascertaining for our readers if there was anything of interest astray in the solar regions. We intercepted a wink between Venus and Mars which proved conclusively to us that that old affair is still in progress and noticed a considerable amount of filtrations wafting among the lesser stars which interested us considerably. Our attention was promptly diverted from such matters, however, when we got a clear sight upon a large, silver planet where there appeared to be a desperate battle in progress. Huge clouds of shining dust rose and eddied in the empyrean air and now again in the intervals of eddying we could dimly perceive the outlines of two struggling forms. We watched the struggle with intense fascination. Up and down and in and out the two wrestling forms made their way. They fell into planetary canals with a great splash and crawled out again to fight. They rolled

Snapshots.

Vivian Drake, a young Englishman,
is a versatile kind of a fellow. He felt convinced he could write a book
of merit, tried it and did so. He was sure he could become an aviator, and
as a result became a captain in the British flying force. Then navigation appealed to him, and he has just
qualified in a tramp steamer crossing
the Western ocean, and is not much older than 25 at that.

In order to supply the demand for
safety razors abroad, Jane Carroll,
a graduate of Cornell University,
has been appointed general manager
of the export division of the American Safety Razor Corporation. It is to be Miss Carroll's strange position to put a safety razor into the hand of every male inhabitant of Europe, so says Geo. L. Storm, chairman of this $20,000,000 concern.

Once upon a time there was a little boy who wanted a horse. He was wealthy and had many toys, but most of all he wanted a horse. He was told he was too young, but he persisted and finally the horse was ordered and arrived. It was a beautiful horse, with springs in its back and legs and all covered with hair. The little boy who grew up to be King Edward VII. of England was delig-
ted. The toy maker who pleased the royal offspring with his art was Jesse Armour Crandall, of Brooklyn, who has for 70 years been engaged in making wonderful toys for children the world over. Mr. Crandall recently observed his 86th birthday by making more plans for better toys.

Someone once offered Gabriele D'- Annunzio, Italy's greatest living
poet and aviator, whose exploits
have caused such a flutter, $15,000
for a series of lectures in South America. "Thanks," he replied. "I have no wish to brave the ocean for
a box of cigars." The reply was typical of the man who writes his poetry clad in a robe of cloth of gold
and whose stock of fancy waistcoats
and neckties is the envy of the Beau-
brummels of the world. By the way,
his real name is Tommaso Rasag-
netta, but as this was considered by
him too commonplace for a poet, he changed it. His assumed name means "Gabriele the Messenger."

Regarding her work, Mrs. Elinor Glyn, the famous authoress, who is now engaged upon reconstruction
work in France, once made this interesting confession concerning her
method of working: "I began writing to amuse myself. I won't accept an order for a book, because I will not publish anything that does not satisfy me. Before beginning to write a story I relate it either to my mother or my daughter. If they do not approve, the story is never written. If they do, then I work at white heat, and the novel is completed in a few weeks. My advice to beginners
is: Never be afraid of your own
convictions, and never write a word
you don't believe."

Beware Wood Alcohol.

There seems to be a general belief
among the masses of even such an intelligent people as the Canadians that alcohol is alcohol, a single individual
substance the same yesterday, to-day
and forever, forming the "real thing"
in all fermented and distilled drinks.
Consequently anything going by the name of alcohol is regarded as potable and drunk. Now all this is the densest sort of ignorance, resulting in illness and death. So great has been the injury resulting that the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness, of New York, has issued a
most timely warning about wood alcohol, denatured alcohol and medi-
cated alcohol when used for beverage purposes. Wood alcohol is a deadly poison, clear and direct, and the harmful action comes not only from taking
it internally, but may be induced likewise while merely breathing its fumes
and by absorption through the mucous
membranes of the body. Within a few
hours after drinking there follows an
acute headache, violent attacks of body
pains and excessive dizziness. Vision
is always impaired, total blindness frequently occurs, and death itself often comes. The wood alcohol used in Canada and the United States is made from the destructive distillation of wood of different sorts. It is used to denature—render unfit for drinking—
grain alcohol, in the making of varnishes, as a fuel and illuminant, and for various chemical purposes. Denatured alcohol consists of ninety per cent. grain alcohol and ten per cent.
wood alcohol, to render it unfit for drinking while leaving it useful for all other purposes. Where denatured alcohol or wood alcohol is sold the
poison label is always put on the bottle, and if it is not there it is proof
that some scoundrel has tampered
with it in order to sell the fluid as a potable product. One teaspoonful of wood alcohol taken internally is sufficient to cause total blindness, a larger quantity not infrequently causing death. If you value your eyesight
or your life, never use wood alcohol,
denatured alcohol or medicated alcohol for drinking purposes.—Acadian Recorder.

Conduct at Cambridge.

T. R. H. AT THE 'VARSITY.

(From Answers.)

Anent the arrival of Prince Albert
and Prince Henry at Cambridge, a daily paper announces that they went
shopping, bought their caps, gowns,
and surplices, and dined in the college
hall (Trinity) in the evening.

This, we are informed, they will do
from time to time only. Otherwise
"they will conduct themselves as ordinary undergraduates."

To that, as an old Cantab, I say
"H'm!"

Unless the war has changed Cambridge—I noted with horror that undergrads had been seen with umbrellas—the Princes will be asking for a certain amount of trouble if they
"conduct themselves as ordinary undergraduates." The species, in my time, did a lot of things that wouldn't be considered decorous behaviours for
royal princes!

"Confined to College."

We used to scuttle across to morning "Chapel" with our attire—our
lack of it, that is!—covered and concealed by our surplices, a voluminous garment, buttoned at the neck,
and always called a "shirt."

Occasionally there were contra-
tempo, due to hurried and very partial
dressing and traitorous buttons.
Then the offender saw the Dean, and
got "gated"—the college equivalent
of the military "C.B."—confined to barracks.

Then, if the outside world called pretty strongly, it was through an attic window, along the roof, and a shin down a rope to the freedom of the streets. That wouldn't do for
royal princes!

"Wines" were out of fashion, but
we had "beers"—cheap, bottled beers.
And after we had filled ourselves with the gassy stuff we did things. Once we tubbed a "fresher" who was reported to be unclean; another time we screwed up the "oak"—the outer door—of a Don's rooms, and left him bottled up
for many hours.

On one occasion we went to a "P" (pious) meeting, and behaved ourselves with great decorum. Groaned and wept over our sins, that is, and refused to be comforted. On another occasion we wrote "Wet Paint" on various lintels and doors, and suffered internal convulsions as we watched
reverend professors gather their M.A.
gowns about them to escape detile-
ment.

Collecting Police Helmets.

Once, too, we took away the Bible
from the lectern in the college chapel
—sorry, we meant no irreverence and
played no tricks with it—and substituted a copy of "Robinson Crusoe."
We all went to chapel the next morning.

We didn't get "Crusoe," but there was a certain enjoyable delay. Also an inquiry; but "nobody knew num."

And what about other delights of the "ordinary undergraduate"? Smoking in cap and gown in the streets,
and giving the "Froggins" and his attendant "Bull Dogs" a run for their money? Great sport!

And what about playing "pills" in unauthorized billiard saloons? I don't think it would be decorous for
royal princes to bolt through the window, shin him down a drain-pipe, and
"go a bunk" that way!

And what of the glorious Town vs.
Gown "rag"? In my time the height of the ro"adary" etain shruu etainoin
and by absorption through the mucous
membranes of the body. Within a few
hours after drinking there follows an
acute headache, violent attacks of body
pains and excessive dizziness. Vision
is always impaired, total blindness fre-
quently occurs, and death itself often

I don't suppose, either, the Princes
will do as some of us did at certain smollient lectures. We played ha'-

When Cricket

Was a Crime.

As Little Work as Possible.

Ordinary undergraduates used to
slop about in pumps, half the day.
That, I suppose, is barred! And the ordinary undergraduate used, at the College Debating Societies, to revel in such subjects as "Should Female Infants be Smothered?" "That, in the opinion of this Society, Royalty should be abolished," and so on. But perhaps times have changed.

At any rate, I guess two characteristics remain: One—to do as little
work as possible; two—to eat dinner
at "ball" in the largest possible mouth-
ful, and in the shortest possible
time!

Well, good luck to the Princes—
Hope they have a good time—or as good as being more or less obliged to
be good will permit them.

I think they should have gone to Cambridge "incog." Then they would —bet your boots on it—have conducted themselves as "ordinary undergraduates!"

The cork mat which can be rolled
up is one of the sensible accessories
of the bathroom.

It is not generally known that
down to the year 1748, cricket was an illegal game in England. Any person allowing it to be played on his land
was liable to a fine of twenty pounds,
and three years' imprisonment, and
the players ten pounds fine and two years' imprisonment; while the "implements" were to be burnt. This was under a statute of Edward IV.,
enacted because the popularity of the
pastime was interfering with archery.
Nevertheless, the first county match
was played while these tremendous penalties were in force. This was between Kent and Sussex, at Sevenoaks,
in 1745. In the London "Evening Post" from Saturday, August 23, to Tuesday, August 26, 1735 it is recorded: "Last week was played at Sevenoaks in Kent, a great cricket
match between the Earl of Middlesex,
the Lord John Sackville, and nine
other gentlemen of the county of Kent, and Sir William Gage and ten
other gentlemen of the county of Sussex, when the Kentish gentlemen
beat." The following year Kent met Sussex.

[The annexed letter was received yesterday, but too late for publication, as announced. As there is nothing like hearing both sides of the story, we deem Mr. Job's communication of sufficient importance to interest our readers, many of whom will not see eye to eye with the writer. The letter, as will be seen, is a copy of that addressed to the Daily News and published in that paper this morning.]

Editor Daily News.

St. John's, Nfld.
December 9, 1919.

Dear Sir:—Though sorely tempted to reply before to the various letters published in your newspaper, I have hitherto refrained from doing so for the reason, first, that the letters were anonymous ones and very evidently written from a prejudiced standpoint, and that a correspondent who won't sign his own name is usually ashamed of his composition and therefore not worth replying to, and secondly, that the answer to them is too obvious to anyone who knows the true facts to require dealing with.

The leading article in your newspaper of yesterday morning, is, however, another matter altogether, as it is presumably intended to be your own unprejudiced view, and I cannot imagine that you would permit political bias to influence you in what is undoubtedly an attempt to improve conditions for the public benefit. I feel that none of my friends, or even my enemies, will accuse me of being politically biased, or of acting for other than either the benefit of the trade generally, or for my own selfish ends. In lending what assistance I can in this case I imagine that I am acting in the best interests of the trade generally, and not for my own selfish ends.

I am convinced from the earnestness of my confederates on the Advisory Board that they quite value the same imagination. I will go further and state that I am very doubtful whether I am not acting, to some small extent at least, against the interests of my firm, and of the so-called large exporters, as I am inclined to believe that the Export Regulations are going to benefit the small Exporter more than the larger houses. The inexperienced haphazard shipper is going to be protected by the larger knowledge of the big exporter, and the idea that the genuine small exporter is going to be interfered with is entirely erroneous. This idea, as far as I can see, is merely brought forward in order to prejudice the success of this bold attempt to set right certain abuses which the disorganized condition of the trade has prevented from setting right by ordinary means. Broadly speaking, this is a National movement; a very drastic one I grant you, but one from which the Dominion as a whole cannot fail to benefit, if properly administered.

You presumably believe the statement of "Fairplay" and others, that the Regulations will be used to seek or force such prices abroad as will amount to profiteering for the benefit of the big exporter alone, and if such were the case, your arguments would be worthy of consideration, and I, for one, would admit them, but your correspondent's figuring is extremely erratic, and your own addition to the result is purely imaginary. As a matter of fact, the average margin obtainable from the prices fixed (for the time being) are in my opinion too low for the risks involved in exportation whilst the present low basis of exchange exists, and they may have to be increased to save actual loss. If your correspondent "Fairplay" is sincere in believing that he can realize a net profit of $4.50 per qtl. on Labrador fish I can inform him where he can purchase about 10,000 qtls. of such fish at prices which, according to his figuring will yield him the handsome fortune of at least $30,000.00. I presume he knows there is no risk involved!

Broadly speaking, and altogether apart from the question of certain abuses seriously requiring to be straightened out, the object of the Regulations appear to me to be to keep the prices of our main export at a sufficiently high figure to balance the enormous prices we are paying for commodities necessary to our existence. I have no hesitation in stating from my knowledge of the situation that but for these Regulations the prices of fish locally would have already declined to a deplorable and unnecessary degree, and that the issuing of these Regulations was just in time to prevent a considerable collapse, which would have been quite unjustified by the statistical position, and that it would have been brought about entirely by ignorant selling on the part of certain parties, some of whom do not form any real spoke in the wheel of the Trade, and who have very little interest in the Dominion's welfare.

It is true that a considerable part of the season's fish was out of the fisherman's hands at the time action was taken, but the gain, (or rather saving of loss) to those fishermen who had not marketed their catch, has been an enormous sum nevertheless, and the saving of loss to the genuine middleman or outport business man who was a large holder of fish has been larger still. Every class in the community will reap the benefit of these Regulations if they are justly and fairly administered, as I believe they will be, and I fail to see how anyone abroad is going to suffer from the imposition of what under existing conditions appear to me to be very fair prices.

We are quite justified in regulating (if we can do so) our export prices at a sufficient high level to counter-balance the very high prices we have to pay for our necessary imports. Reduced fish prices would mean calamitous results to this Dominion whilst prices of imports remain at their present high level.

The question as to whether we can regulate these prices to a desirable level must depend upon competition from competing fisheries (Norway, Iceland, and France). When our prices abroad are above those asked by these competitors we shall be forced to reduce them, but there seems to be no necessity or reason in doing this until the occasion arises. There is no reason to cut our own throats by permitting insane competition here.

I trust, Mr. Editor, you will "think on these things," and do your utmost to assist what I, for one, believe to be a wise National movement for the benefit of the whole country, and that you will assist rather than obstruct the solution of the serious problems facing us.

I am leaving the Country on business for a few months, in a day or two, and would like to see you, with Mr. "Fairplay," and Mr. "Small Shipper" take my place on that Advisory Board, and take off your coat to assist the very earnest gentlemen remaining there, to carry out the intention of the Proclamation.

Apologising for the length of this letter,

Yours very truly,

ROBERT B. JOB.

P.S.—Since writing the above, I have read with considerable disgust another anonymous letter. The letter is untruthful from start to finish, and is clearly written by someone with a personal grudge against Mr. Hawes, (and after that gentleman had left the Country) that until the writer discloses his name it does not merit an answer.

Nine Year Search in Gold River is at Last Rewarded

Fisherman Strikes it Lucky When He Found Health by Taking Tanlac.

"After a search that lasted for over nine years I at last found the thing I had been looking for when I began taking Tanlac," was the statement made by Robert Hiltz, who for the past twenty-seven years has lived at Gold River, Lunenburg County, Nova Scotia, where he is engaged in the fishing business.

"For about nine years I have been troubled with a bad case of indigestion," continued Mr. Hiltz, "and during the summer my condition got worse than ever and I began to go down hill rapidly. I hardly cared whether I ate anything or not and if I did take a few bites I was sure to be in misery for two or three hours afterwards. I would have terrible cramping pains and feel heavy and draggy and gas would form so bad that it pressed up around my heart and caused it to palpitate and pain me terribly. I was bothered a great deal with heartburn and had a bad taste in my mouth, in fact, I was troubled with one thing or another nearly all the time, and had about forgotten what it was to feel good."

"One day I came home from a fishing trip troubled with indigestion more than usual, and as Tanlac had done my wife so much good, she got after me to try it, and I took her advice and started taking it. Well, sir, to my surprise my appetite began to improve and before I knew it I was eating things I hadn't touched in years and I was feeling so much better generally that I kept on taking Tanlac until I can say now that I am entirely rid of a case of indigestion that has troubled me for nine years. I can eat anything put on the table and I digest it perfectly without a sign of indigestion or the cramping pains, gas and heartburn are all a thing of the past. I never have that worn-out, draggy feeling now, but I sleep better, feel better and am built up in every way. I consider Tanlac the greatest medicine in the whole world and I've tried many different kinds, too, and I am glad to recommend it publicly."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative, in Harbor Buffett, by Thomas Wakely & Sons; in Placentia, by James Murphy & Son; in Topsail by J. K. Burrell.—adv.

Presentation to Mrs. MacKeen.

On Monday afternoon at the Presbyterian Hall, following the annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Church, the Treasurer, Mrs. MacKeen, who has held that office for twelve years in succession, was presented with an afternoon tea service of silver. The presentation was made by the President, Mrs. Wittchell, who in a short but appropriate address referred to the high appreciation in which the W. M. S. held its Treasurer, and asked her to accept the gift as a small token of the esteem and regard in which she was held. Mrs. MacKeen was taken quite by surprise, as the gift was utterly unexpected, but in replying made most gracious reference to the kindness which prompted the presentation, and to the hearty good will which exists among the members of the St. John's branch of the institution. Words were too feeble to convey her thanks for the handsome gift, which would ever be prized as a souvenir of the kindheartedness and sincerity of her colleagues. After the presentation, the "Cup that cheers" was passed around, all present enjoying "the fragrant infusion of the leaf."

Dalhousie.

1819-1919.

(By Alexander Louis Fraser, in University Magazine.)
Here, where the mighty pulse of Empire beats,
Here, where the iron gates of Commerce swing,
That room he made for sinewy Trade to bring
To anchor, or to send abroad, her fleets,
Rose, modest, thorough, one of Learning's seats,
Whence for a hundred years
Thought showed the way
To realms where Beauty, Truth, and Wisdom lay,
Like to some trusted guide a traveller meets.

Mid storied scenes. Here come they, young, keen-eyed—
Those thousands now upon her sacred roll;
Here taught to see, to think, to do, to bide;
Here taught their kinship with the mighty whole
Of things, they going world-wide did their part
In war or peace, at council, altar, mart.

A New Suggestion.

WHY NOT A GOVERNMENT LOAN? Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—I have read with pleasure all the letters that recently appeared in your paper dealing with the War Service Gratuity, and like all returned men, I agree with every one of them, and more especially with that of Sallor Chap, as he is about the only one that referred to the Manifesto of Hon. R. A. Squires, from which I take the following:—
"I propose that the Navy boys shall be placed with regard to pay and allowances, on the same basis as the Soldier lads.

I propose further that the Soldier lads and Navy lads of Newfoundland, the record of whose deeds are as good as the record of any body of men in Great Britain, or in the British Colonies, shall be placed upon the same status as the Soldiers of the neighbouring Dominions, in the matter of gratuities, pensions, and allowances to dependents, and financial and other assistance, to enable them to get back to a peace basis and earn their living as honorable and independent citizens. The boys who won for us a place of honour in the World's War record are worthy of every reasonable consideration."

A fine manifesto, no doubt, if it was acted up to. To start with what reasonable consideration have we received yet from Hon. R. A. Squires? What about the increase in the War Service Gratuity? Has Mr. Squires given that his consideration? What about the poor Sailor that allotted five shillings per week to his old father or mother, out of his one shilling and eight pence per day, to keep them comfortable while he was away fighting for them? Now the back Separation Allowance that they should have got they cannot get without going through that great roll of red tape, and if your father or mother has got a few dollars worth of property they cannot get that Separation Allowance at all. I think it quite time that somebody (I don't mind whether it's the Prime Minister, or any one else so long as it's for the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors,) done something for us people to put us in a position to live as independent citizens. I should like to see that promise fulfilled of doing the same for the Soldiers and Sailors of Newfoundland as the neighbouring Dominions. Why the Canadian Government is loaning money to returned men at a certain per cent. interest, to start them in civil life. Cannot Newfoundland do likewise?
Hoping you will find space for the publication of this, I am, Sir,
Yours truly,
NINE POINT TWO.

A. J. Powers

INTERRED IN ST. PHILIP'S, BOSTON.

The funeral of Andrew J. Powers, aged 23, an ex-service man, who was employed at the Boston City Club, took place on Dec. 5th, with a requiem high mass in St. Philip's Church, Harrison Avenue, at 9 a.m. The State Headquarters of the American Legion had charge of the services, as Powers had no relatives in this country. Powers was a native of St. John's, Newfoundland. He served in the 23rd Artillery Brigade, 25th Division, A. E. F. He lived at 4 Worcester Square.
