CHAPTER XXI

My lord did not rely. His tongue clave to the roof of his mouth, and in his ears was a booming sound, like the roar of the sea.

"You will not ask me to acknowledge him again, papa; you must not; for, indeed, I cannot!"

He turned toward her an ashen face, and she never forgot the look of horror in his eyes.

She would have run to the bell, but he commanded her with a gesture not to move. Then he rose slowly, and heaped himself a glass of wine, his steps as feeble as those of a man of eighty.

"Gladys," he whispered, at length, "in years you are but a child, but I believe that you have the strength and resolution of a woman. I never wished, I never intended that you should know of the terrible pit of despair, disgrace and death over which I am suspended; but I am convinced that if the honored name of the Howards is to be saved from eternal infamy—if I am to be rescued from the gallows—you must know all—for to you alone can I look for salvation."

He again moistened his lips with the wine before him, and with distended eyes and throbbing heart, Gladys listened to him.

"My child," continued the earl, "do not shrink from me, or believe me a murderer at heart. God and myself only know the torture my life has been since I killed Lady Marcia's lover—Edgar Emden."

"Gladys could not suppress a shriek, and clutched at her heart.

"You papa! You!" she whispered.

"I did—by accident. He attacked me from behind, believing that I was a rival, and in the struggle that ensued he was drowned in the lake. I was mad, Gladys, to do as I did. I foolishly hid the body. The terrors of the hangman were before me. I had everything to lose by risking a trial, and nothing to gain. I was the slayer of my sister's lover, while sneaking like a thief into my father's house. Should I not, at the best, forever forfeit Marcia's love, and even if acquitted, after the exposure and disgrace of a trial, should I not be a marked man? He was dead, and nothing could help him. Thus I argued, and I carried the lifeless form of Edgar Emden into the library through the window. I deposited it in a passage that I thought was known only to me. I never dreamed, then, that the father of Sir Charles Hastings would be accused of killing Emden, and when he was arrested, some week later, I had to see him suffer. I dared not acknowledge my guilt; I dared not prove his innocence for the sake of the young wife I had married in secret. Do not think that I am a coward, Gladys. That one foolish mistake has cost me a lifetime of sorrow. But for you, I would give myself up, and let a jury of my countrymen decide the punishment I deserve."

He buried his face in his hands, and Gladys slipped to her knees beside him.

"People have attributed my lifelong sorrow to the loss of my sainted wife," he continued; "but they little dream that I was also suffering the unrest that follows a murderer."

"Papa, papa!" murmured Gladys, "let me comfort you always, let me alone share with you this horrible secret. I know that you are innocent of any real wrong; but, ah! if auntie knew, it would kill her. She still lives in the belief that the lover of her girlhood will come back again some day."

My lord pressed his daughter's hands firmly between his own; he held them so tightly that she with difficulty suppressed a cry of pain.

"Gladys," he went on, huskily, "the secret is not our alone, it is shared by one other, who consents to keep it only upon terms which fall most heavily upon you."

"Lord Stanhope!" she faltered.

"No—Collins, the steward. This man is my half-brother; this man claims to be the rightful Earl of Swinford, but renounces all title, and swears never to betray me, if you will consent to marry Lord Cecil."

Lady Gladys shuddered. Her blood went icy cold, and she uttered a faint moan.

"He saw me hide the body, and has said not a word all these years. I marvel at it, but suppose that he has had some scheme in his brains that I cannot fathom. At first I feared that he had told Lord Cecil all; but he would not be made enough. He has merely instructed Stanhope to press his suit, and boasted of some power over me. My child, this is all I have to tell you; it is little enough, but it is terrible! In your hands is my safety from the gallows. After all these years, my judges would never believe me otherwise than guilty. In your hands alone is the honor of the Howards."

The girl's head had dropped upon his knees, and for some minutes she knelt in silence. She had heard every word of the awful story, and her brain was in a mad whirl. Had so much ever before been crowded into his life of a single human being in so short a time?

A few weeks since she was a light-hearted, happy child, whose deepest emotions had never been stirred. To-day she was a woman who had loved and lost, and whose life was burdened by the shadow of a terrible crime and its consequences. She alone could save her father—the last of a noble race of men—from a felon's grave, in whose ignominy she and Lady Marcia must inevitably share. But the price! It was more bitter than death! Rather would she have shed her heart's blood than become the wife of Lord Cecil Stanhope. She both hated and feared him.

Presently she raised her head. Her eyes were burning like stars; her face was white as paper; her breath was hot, and came in quick little gasps.

"Papa," she said, "I think that I am bravest when I can help those who are dear to me. As I can never marry Sir Charles Hastings, it will not make it so hard for me to wed Lord Cecil Stanhope. I am glad that you have told me everything, and my heart is filled with pity for you when I think of the long years of misery that have been yours, while I have been living in happiness and innocence."

There was a sudden catch in her voice, and, swiftly kissing the earl, she glided out of the room, to try and seek relief in tears.

The same day my lord wrote to Lord Cecil:

Lady Gladys consents. Do not press your attentions upon her for a few days, as she is naturally a little upset. Be kind and gentle, and you may yet win her love.

Lord Stanhope read this with a smile.

"Kind and gentle," he muttered. "I can never forgive my lady for the names she has bestowed upon me. However, I can be amiable when I choose, and rather than risk losing her, I will be upon my best behavior in the future. I will let Collins know the result. I can't think why that steward fellow takes so much interest in me. What on earth is the power that he wields over Howard? It's some boyish folly, and I suppose he will look for a handsome check on my wedding day. He shall have it, by Jupiter!"

CHAPTER XXII

Some five weeks later the engagement between Lord Cecil Stanhope and Lady Gladys Howard was officially announced. To some it was a surprise, but everybody believed the match to be a most suitable one. The estates were two of the grandest in England, and were within a few miles of each other. The young people had known each other from childhood, and must have had every opportunity of studying each other's characters. It was no sudden burst of love's flame, whose fire would be but transient, but must be a solid respect, the result of many years of close intercourse.

Report said that Lady Gladys Howard was lovely beyond all comparison, and the intimates of Lord Cecil felt surprised that one so gentle and so sweet should favor the loud and horsey young peer. It was considered a shame that the Earl of Swinford's daughter should be fettered before she came into society. She had had no opportunity of seeing the world, and of making her choice of a lover among the hundreds of gallant gentlemen, who would be certain to pay her their devotions when it was too late.

The engagement made but a ripple on the busy waters of society, because Lady Gladys was but little known. Attention was drawn to it on account of the sudden return of the Earl of Swinford after years of wandering. It was hoped that he would sustain the old reputation of the Howards by opening his doors hospitably to the world of fashion, but he did nothing of the kind, and the knowing ones prophesied that he would soon be off again, as he was a confirmed glutton.

Immediately following the item concerning Lord Cecil and Lady Gladys came a most astonishing piece of news, which was sweet in the nostrils of the scandal-mongers. The society papers were full of it, and even the dull but respectable daily newspapers mentioned it. There could be no doubt of its truth, and it was really the choicest tid-bit of the year to the idle devotees of fashion, whose lives are made of little-tattle and vicious gossip.

This is what appeared in Society News:

ROMANCE OUTDONE.—Some twenty years since, Sir Charles G. Hastings, a worthy knight, and ambitious politician, was suddenly dragged from his high place in the estimation of the people, on the charge of murder most foul. His brother-in-law, whose place he had usurped in the ancestral home of the Emdens, suddenly and mysteriously disappeared. He was last seen with Sir Charles, engaged in a wordy warfare, and the servants say that blows were struck. After a patient trial he was discharged, a ruined man, to die in misery and oblivion. The son now appears on the world's stage in a melodramatic part. Some years ago his mother contracted heavy liabilities, which she was unable to pay; and the son, like a chivalrous hero of mediæval times, relieved his injudicious parent by wedding the daughter of their tyrannical creditor, without even looking at or speaking to his bride. Now comes the mystery. The playboy Lady Hastings promptly disappeared, and the world knew little of the event. After all these years she has suddenly reappeared at Emden Hall to claim her rights. We shall watch the result with some curiosity, and as it is certain that Lady Hastings eloped with a man named Spiers after her marriage, the solution will probably be the divorce court.

GARDEN ROSES.
A single rose is fair to see, the dollar kind the florist sells. Viewed from an artist's point of view and tale of care and culture told, and in its slender silver cup, provides a touch of lovely grace. Tall, straight, and perfect and precise, a lamp to light a darkened night. But there's a lovelier sight to see, the roses in a garden grown. Old-fashioned blooms of red and white with all the petals fully blown.

The florist might not call them fine, the artist's eye might fail to see. True beauty in so mixed a mass, but still they mean a lot to me. I've known this rich bouquet for years, with every summer that has been.

Always upon the table there this glorious cluster I have seen. And I can call them all by name, the red one shading almost black. Has been a boyhood friend of mine—a Jacquemont—best known as Jack.

Paul Neyron with his heavy head of pink has seemed to rule the place, the giant of the garden plot, and scornful of Yvan Druschki's grace. And there's the golden Sunburst, too, a glorious yellow, short of stem. That table bowl were incomplete, unless it had a few of them. Old friends since first this heart was young, modest and brave and loyal still. Lighting our rooms from day to day and never sending in a bill.

I will admit the florist's art and grant the grace his blooms possess. But those old-fashioned roses seem to hold much more of loveliness. And I can bend above a bowl some gentle hand has filled with care. And seem to see once more the smiles of all my long-lost friendships there.

I need no catalogue or guide, in bowl or by the garden wall. Like old-time friends I know their names, and I'm at home among them all.

Painted Bunting is Most Colorful Bird.

The fanciest of American birds is the painted bunting. The department of agriculture says: "The male painted bunting is one of the most brilliantly colored birds of the United States." The upper part of the head and neck are shining purplish violet, the middle of the back yellowish green, wings and tail purplish blue and the underparts and rumps are vermilion or the brightest red. The female is dark green above and yellowish beneath.

This little jewel bird has not failed to attract popular attention and is known under many names. In Louisiana the French speaking people have called it the nonpareil (or unrequited) and le Pape (or the Pope). The last name has been contracted to pop and varied as red pop. Spanish speaking people in the United States know the bird as "mariposas" or butterfly bird and in English the bird has been variously called painted bunting, painted finch, paradise finch, Mexican canary and Texas canary. It is a persistent localist and likes the society of human beings.

Exodus of Females From Germany.

YOUNG GIRLS CROSSING INTO HOLLAND.

BERLIN.—Holland's frontier, made notorious during the war as a favorite exit from Germany for fugitive prisoners of war, is again coming into the limelight through the surreptitious crossing of young German girls anxious to get Dutch employment. It is estimated that Germany is already poorer by 20,000 female servants as a result of this practice. With high wages and attractive working conditions, Holland has become something of a "promised land" for German frauleins qualified as housemaids or cooks. Twenty to twenty-five guilders a month are paid beginners, while the more efficient receive from 40 to 50. Such pay means from 2,000 to 5,000 marks monthly at the present rate of exchange. About ten times more than help of this kind received in Germany. Amsterdam firms and dwellings have acquired about 5,000 of the emigrants and there are about 3,000 at the Hague. Most of them have been drawn from the Rhineland and Westphalia, where labor exchanges have been established at various places in co-operation with Dutch exchanges. Women's organizations in the western German provinces are actively opposing the exodus because of the shortage of help in households and on farms.

The Oldest Thing Living.

They cut down one of the big soft-wood trees of the Pacific Coast a few days ago, and found there were 8,425 rings on the trunk. That is it had lived 2,425 years at least. Some 555 years before our Saviour came that tree began its life. It was creeping along towards its 2,000th birthday when America was discovered. What changes it saw, what generations of men passed under its shade, what races of birds and of animals! It was probably one of the very oldest living things in the world.

A CHIC AND CHARMING DESIGN.

3801-3798—Here is a very popular variation of the jumper dress—and a pretty design to wear with it. As portrayed, wool jersey embroidered in floss was used. The gumpie is of pongee with self frills and hemstitching for trimming. In duvetyne or crepe a trimming of grosgrain ribbon would be pleasing.

The gumpie 3801 is cut in 7 Sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. The Dress 3793 is cut in 8 Sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. The dress front is cut with fullness beneath the yoke extension of the back. To make up this style for a 38 inch size, requires 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for the Gumpie, and 3 3/4 yards for the Dress, of 40 inch material.

This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 1c. FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

A PLEASING DINNER DRESS.

3798-3798—Softness and simplicity stamps this model as youthful and becoming. Crepe de chine trimmed with a picot edge and tiny roses and leaves of chiffon would make it very attractive. The roses could be in a color contrasting to that of the gown. With long sleeves one could have the fin satin, taffeta or velvet, with the lining of embroidery or jet.

The Waist Pattern 3796 is cut in 7 Sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust-measure. The Skirt 3798 is cut in 7 Sizes: 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, and 34 inches waist measure. The width of the skirt at the foot is about 2 yards. To make the dress for a medium size as illustrated in the large view will require 7 1/2 yards of 27 inch material.

This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns which will be mailed to any address on receipt of the FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

A DAINTY FROCK.

4025. One of the season's prettiest models is here portrayed. Convex pockets are placed under the tabulations of the waist, which has long lines and girde extensions which close over the back. White lace with frills and bows of organdy would be pleasing. Pongee is a natural shade with pipings of green tulle would be attractive.

The Pattern is cut in 7 Sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size will require 4 1/2 yards of 40 inch material. Width at the foot is about 2 1/2 yards. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 15c. in silver or stamps.

A NEAT AND SERVICEABLE APRON.

4080. Fercals with facings of linen is here depicted. Black satin with crotome would be attractive, and would also crepe with trimming of contrasting color or with rack for a snail.

The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: Small, 34-36; Medium, 38-40; Large, 42-44; Extra Large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A Medium size requires 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A GOOD APRON.

Pattern 3324 made the comfortable model. It is cut in 4 Sizes: Small, 32-34; Medium, 36-38; Large, 40-42; Extra Large, 44-46 inches bust measure.

Figured percale in white and black is here illustrated. One could have gingham, gerseruck, lawn, spack, drill, or seaten. A Medium size will require 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 15 cents in silver or stamps.

A BECOMING DRESS FOR WOMEN OR PORCH WEAR.

3943. Neatness and utility are stamped in this model. The collar is at the square front, the lines are good and comfortable, and the style is pleasing feature. One could have silk, checked gingham, with vest, or white fabric and cuffs of white organdy. Other wash fabrics are equally desirable. For warmth, hannelle and gabardine are recommended.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 15 cents in silver or stamps.

Will Cancel French War Debt --- Honours List to be Carefully Scrutinized --- U.S. Ice Patrol Withdrawn From Atlantic.

ANOTHER PLAN FOR RECONSTRUCTION.

PARIS, July 17. The reduction of the German indemnity to fifty billion marks from the present total of 132 billion marks and thirty-two billion for the cancellation of the French war debt to Great Britain, is the basis of a suggestion of the reparations question now being seriously discussed by French and British officials. Although the scheme has not yet officially reached the Reparations Commission, members of the latter body have discussed the details. It is expected that the suggestion will be one of the chief topics of discussion in the forthcoming meeting of Premier Poincaré and Lloyd George. The suggested solution has the hearty support of British officials who have been urging the acceptance of the French proposals. The latter, so the Associated Press has been reliably informed, is looking with more and more favor upon the plan proposed. It carries with it a clean-cut offer of assistance in time of attack, and assures France the allotment of the whole or part of Great Britain's twenty-two per cent. share of the total indemnity. It is believed Great Britain is ready to concede virtually all these demands if full acceptance of the French government is obtained. The British decided to push the plan when it was definitely determined that the United States is not in a mood to discuss cancellation of the allied debts, it was learned to-day. Supporters of the scheme hope America will follow the lead after she has a chance to observe the good which may result from even a partial writing off of war debts. British officials have informed the French that the plan would bring about a radical change in the present European situation. It is thought that the pact would be stabilized, business confidence restored, and Germany with a collectible indemnity would be found to find means to pay it.

DRASTIC ACTION TO BE TAKEN IN MINERS' STRIKE.

WASHINGTON, July 17. Intimation was given in well-informed Government circles this afternoon that the administration was preparing to take drastic action within the next twenty-four hours in the strike situation. The President was represented as being of opinion that inasmuch as the miners' representatives have refused the Government's arbitration and the bituminous officers were undecided upon acceptance of such a proposal, the interests of the public demanded the immediate reopening of the mines.

LOYD GEORGE AND HONOURS.

LONDON, July 17. The Prime Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, told the House of Commons to-day that the Government was quite prepared to assent to any re-examination of the question of the bestowal of honors which would be satisfactory to the House. The Premier made this statement opening the much-heralded debate over questions in connection with decorations and titles awarded by the honors list. The House was crowded for the event, Mr. Lloyd George said, during the last thirty or forty years there has been considerable increase in the number of honors owing to the increase in population and wealth, and because of the setting up of a new order which had demoralized honors to a great extent. For the last twenty years there had been the same charges, as are now being made, of trafficking in honors, employment of touts and scale of charges. During the last six years there had been an exceedingly heavy list because of the war and the part the civilian population played in it. "There was never a time when the honors list was subject to more careful and organized scrutiny than now," said the Premier. During the whole of the last six years, despite careful scrutiny, only four names had been mentioned. The Premier announced he was ready to appoint a Royal Commission to advise on the proceedings to be adopted in the future in advising the Prime Minister in making recommendations to his Majesty. The Commission would consist of men of independence, integrity and experience, the Premier declared. On the whole his speech was a strong defence of the existing system, although the Premier admitted it was not absolutely perfect. He warned that any attempt to abolish a system centuries old might result in replacing it with something infinitely worse.

ICE PATROL WITHDRAWN. BOSTON, July 17. Ice is no longer considered a menace to navigation this season, and the ice patrol maintained to warn shipping of bergs and floating fields in the Atlantic has been withdrawn. The ice patrol was maintained two weeks longer than usual this year. Ice fields were not so numerous this year, but many large bergs were sighted.

The Little Mother.

To-day as I looked from my window,
And saw a wee tot at her play,
I thought of the great moth' instinct
In that small frame hidden away.

As she sat there holding the doll child,
Rocking it to and fro,
Walking it backwards and forwards
As mothers would you know.

Her little mind turned to its comfort,
As she snugly tucked it in,
To her breast as if to warm it,
Oh! what a soul may bring.

If properly guided and governed,
Into this world of woes,
A child with its wonder of wonders

Gifts to Mrs. Paine.

The following item clipped from the Ottawa Journal, will be read with interest by the many friends of Mrs. Paine, widow of the late Rev. Geo. Paine, who for very many years was a member of the Newfoundland Conference, and a former beloved pastor of Cochrane Street Church, of this city.

"Mrs. George Paine, widow of the late Rev. George Paine, who has been a resident of Ottawa for a few years, was the guest of honor at a gathering in the Eastern Methodist church, held under the auspices of the Lily Lloyd Mission Band. Mrs. Paine will leave Ottawa shortly to reside in Montreal, and is thus severing her connection with the Eastern Methodist church, in which she has taken a keen interest and with which she has been actively identified since coming to Ottawa. A life membership in the Band was presented to Mrs. Paine, the address being read by Mrs. John Cawthray, and the certificate being handed to her by Little Miss Lillian Crawley. The Ladies' Aid Society and the Women's Missionary Society also made a presentation of a leather bound Methodist hymn book to Mrs. Paine, to whom the gift was handed by Mrs. T. W. Kenny. Mrs. Arthur Leggett read an address accompanying this presentation."

Reception to Clergymen.

PRESENTATION MADE.

Last evening a reception was held in the Lecture Room of the Congregational Church in honour of Dr. W. T. Gunn, Secretary of the Canadian Congregational Union, and Rev. J. B. Thompson, a former member of the Church, who are now visiting the city. The event proved most interesting and enjoyable, and the social hour was enhanced by a delightful musical programme. During the evening a presentation was made to Mrs. W. J. Smith, who with her husband and children, is leaving to-day for California, where they expect to make their future home. The gift was of silver plate and was made by Mrs. Caldwell, President, on behalf of the Ladies' Aid of the Church.

Regatta Ripples.

The C.C.C. Band gave an enjoyable concert at the Lake side last evening. Hundreds of people were present, most of them going down after the football match on St. George's Field.

The Blue Peter's amateurs are the favorites so far.

The B.I.S. are entering a crew, and the Societies race promises to be very exciting.

From present indications it looks as if four boats will be competing in every race, while in several five crews are practicing.

A crew of fishermen from Outer Cove are expected out this evening to have their first practice. It is said that two crews will enter from this settlement.

The Intermediate Race is attracting much attention. Two crews were on the Lake side last evening.

It is unlikely that the Press Race will be rowed this year, as to date only a crew from the News is practicing.

The Regatta Committee holds a special meeting to-night.

A Gloomy Future.

The number of men seeking employment has never been so large in the town's history. Present needs are bad enough, but the future looks worse for the men. We may be no worse off in this respect than the small or large communities in Canada or elsewhere, but the prospect is in no way promising for us with our limited avenues of employment. The wood-cutting proposition put forward this week would be a good one if the men were to work near home. With finding themselves, keeping their families going and outfitting for the work, the men would not clear much, though they would be supporting themselves for the time being. This proposition is one between the contractor and the men, and the engagement is a matter of decision between them.—Hr. Grace Standard.

Home's Report.

The following report was received from the S.S. Home which arrived at Humbermouth yesterday:—"Fish very scarce from Forteau to Battle. Hr. Grant of Blanc Sablon reports 9000 quintals landed; Whiteley of Bonne Esperance reports 2500 quintals landed. Very good sign of fish on Newfoundland side, extending from Fort au Choix to Brig Bay, but very little fish from Bonne Bay to Flower's Cove.

DESTROYED BY FOREST FIRES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Victoria, July 8.—More than $1,250,000 worth of standing timber in British Columbia has been destroyed by forest fires up to yesterday, according to official figures.

The forty mile gale which swept through the Nanaimo district at Marville, Campbell River and Menzie's Point districts, Vancouver Island, since yesterday morning will add enormously to the total loss.

Logging camps at Langbay, where 1,000 men were employed, were destroyed by the fire that practically destroyed the village. The camps are on the mainland, south of Powell River.

Airplanes are being used in shipping in supplies to the fire-fighters and many logging camps have shut down and turned all their employees into the fighting line.

The fires gained new impetus last night when the Comox fire joined the one burning out of Menzie's Bay and swept forward to wreak destruction on timber areas hitherto untouched. Weather forecasts are for continued dry weather.

STORES BUNGLED.—Two West End stores were broken into last night but very little was taken. The shops were those of R. Callahan and F. J. Fortune. Suspicion rests on two boys who were seen hanging around the neighbourhood. The police are investigating.

Work That Gives Returns.

It should be the first duty of a Government, when finding itself in an embarrassing position, so far as having to discover and plan labor for the people who are deprived and prevented from following their natural avocation, which in this country is the fisheries, to determine the course which that labor should take, having regard always to the best returns to be shown for the money expended. It is comparatively easy to throw away revenues on public works that are of no utilitarian advantage, in order to get rid of the importunate seekers after government employment. As witness the roads in the wilderness, commenced last year, now unfinished, and leading from nowhere to nowhere. Monies wasted and bearing no return whatever to the Colony or its taxpayers.

During the process of construction of these roads, the country was told that they were to be great highways connecting up isolated places with the railway system, and advocates of that policy of expenditure were wearing their throats hoarse and causing their articulation to become raucous in extolling the advantages that the building of these was to confer on the people north. Yet what benefit has been so far derived from these wilderness highways? Have they connected up the dwellers in sparsely populated localities with the transportation system by rail? Have they proven to possess the advantages claimed for them by those who advocated their construction? Such lines as were built are there it is true, but of what use are they? Yet the government insisted on their construction through sterile land, whilst leaving to fall into utter despair roads that would have been of obvious utility had they been looked after.

But it was ever thus when inexperienced leaders mapped out a policy of expenditure, and left the carrying out to others less experienced. To-day the road building idea has been abandoned, and the motive is to send the unfortunate seeker after labor up in the woods, to engage in the cutting of pit-props or pulpwood. Apart from the season of the year when men have to combat the attacks of myriads of flies while pursuing the course laid down for them, what is the real effect upon their future. Away from home the cost of living is doubled, as has already been pointed out, and the end means that when those who are so employed comes back for the winter, their case is worse than when they shouldered their axes and went into the forest, for they had little when they accepted the employment thus offered, but less at the end. Consequently they have not been in

Dooley Relief Fund. WHO WILL HELP IN A WORTHY CAUSE? As a result of the fire of Sunday last which destroyed his home and barn, Mr. J. Dooley, the well known cabman of Logy Bay Road, is rendered practically destitute. Besides the loss of his vehicles, harness etc., he also lost what little cash which he had put aside. The savings of a lifetime have been wiped out and possibly may not be replaced by years of struggle. Much sympathy has been expressed for Mr. Dooley, and to afford an opportunity to those kind friends who would like to assist him by a contribution to the Dooley Relief Fund, a column in which any amounts received will be acknowledged. Popular Station Master. Mr. E. Tipple, who has been station master at Little River for the last two years, is now transferred to Norris Arm. During his term at the former place, Mr. Tipple made many friends, and his change to Norris Arm while a loss to Little River, is a distinct gain to the place which will now be the scene of his labors. Mr. Tipple likewise won golden opinions from the people of that beautiful farming centre of the Codrorys, and the departure of this amiable couple is witnessed with genuine regret.

George St. Sunday School Picnic. George St. Sunday School Picnic takes place to-morrow at Mount Pearl. The scholars will proceed to the Picnic Field by train leaving the station at 10.30, returning in the evening at 8 o'clock. Buses will run during the afternoon for the conveyance of passengers to the Picnic Field and return. Every preparation has been made to make the day an enjoyable one for the children, to which a railway ride will greatly contribute.

Wesley S.S. Picnic. The Wesley Sunday School Annual Picnic will be held in McDougall's Field, Blackmarsh Road. Refreshments will be sold and visitors are welcomed.

Kilbride Garden Party. The Annual Garden Party at Kilbride will again be an attraction. The usual races and football games will be held and side shows will be numerous.

S. A. Field Day. Lester's Field is the site selected for the Salvation Army Field Day which will be held to-morrow afternoon. Tea and refreshments will be served and the three S. A. Bands will render music throughout the afternoon. The event will be inaugurated with an open air meeting conducted by Colonel and Mrs. Martin, assisted by Headquarters Staff.

Kilbride Garden Party. The Kilbride Garden Party takes place to-morrow. Its object is a most worthy one, being the raising of funds to rebuild the church which was destroyed now nearly thirty years ago. Work on the new church is well underway, and it is the intention of the contractor to have it fully completed by the end of the year. The Committee of management hope for a liberal patronage to-morrow. The table-holders are amply supplied with good things for the great crowd which they anticipate will be with them to-morrow. The sports programme will be even more interesting than former years. All the football games will be played at the Garden Party. The greatest horse race of the year known as the Kilbride Derby will take place. That race has attracted thousands the past few years, and this year's event will probably gather the highest crowd yet. There will be at least twelve starters, hence the race will be run in three heats with a final. Big money prizes will be given to the first three. Up to the present there are twelve entries: Duffs, Campbells, Bairds, Gibbs (2), O'Toole, Kerrs (2), Murphys, Driscolls (2), Nugents, others will enter at the practice on the field this evening. The Committee in charge of the Garden Party have decided that no lottery tickets shall be sold on the field.

Found the Goods. AND CONFISCATED SCHOONER. Another rum runner was taken last night, says a news item in the North Sydney Herald of July 15, when the schooner Mary F. Hyde, of Grand Bank, Nfld., fell into the hands of the revenue cutter Grub. The capture was made in North Sydney harbor about midnight. The Hyde was challenged on suspicion and after a search the customs officers uncovered fifty gallons of St. Pierre brandy, which was confiscated and taken aboard the Grub. The schooner was placed under arrest and is now anchored in the harbor. John Thornhill is master.

Found the Goods. The Grub called this morning for a coastal trip around the entrance of the harbor with Revenue Officer Young aboard.

Wreck Reported.

BANKER ASHORE AT CAPE BALLARD. A message was received this morning by the Assistant Collector of Customs from Arthur O'Leary, Sub-Collector at Renews, stating that a Lunenburg banker had gone ashore 3 miles east of Cape Ballard, 3 schooner, which is the Doris L. Corkum, has 700 qts. of fish on board. The tug Hugh D. left port at 9 a.m. for the scene of the wreck, and Mr. F. Ellis, the Tug Co.'s manager, left by motor car an hour afterwards. No further particulars of the casualty have been received.

Salt Steamer Due.

Messrs. Job Bros. are in receipt of the following message from the captain of the Seapool on the way here with a cargo salt: "Seapool due in port on 19th inst., weather permitting." Capt. Kean's schooner Little Stephano, which arrived in port this morning, was heard during yesterday, blowing her whistle. It is supposed to be the Seapool. The weather outside is very foggy.

Dempsey Not Coming.

HAS TOO MANY ENGAGEMENTS. Mr. P. E. Outerbridge has received a message from Jack Dempsey, champion heavyweight boxer of the world, who is now in Halifax, stating that engagements previously made prevent him from coming to Newfoundland and giving an exhibition of his prowess in the ring. Mr. Outerbridge had hoped to get Dempsey to give an exhibition in the Prince's Ring, and many fans who were anticipating a glimpse of the champ, will be sorely disappointed.

Personal.

Mrs. Providence Scott-Manning, of Woonsocket, R.I., is at present on a visit to relatives and friends in Newfoundland. Mrs. Manning is a native of Kolligawa; but left there 26 years ago and has since resided in the States; she is enjoying her visit very much, and the many old familiar scenes bring back to her many memories of the past. Mrs. Manning will remain about two months and is staying with her sister Mrs. John Gent, 17 Colonial Street, whom she has not seen for 33 years. We wish Mrs. Manning a pleasant stay in the land of her birth.

Susu's Passengers.

F.S. Susu sailed at 2 p.m. on the Fogo mail service, taking a full freight and the following passengers: S. Calk, Miss N. Lawrence, J. Lawrence, Miss M. Foley, E. B. Brown, W. Purza, Mrs. Norris, Miss Davis, Rev. H. Gosse, Mrs. H. Gosse and child, Mrs. Cobb, Master Cobb. J. Chaffey and son, Miss B. Way, E. Burton, Mrs. Gabriel, Miss Bursey, Miss J. Normore, Mr. Hayward and son, Miss Johnson, A. V. Perry, A. R. Randall, Mr. Jones, Mr. Stocks, Miss M. Templeman.

Broad Cove Races.

A committee of men from St. Philip's were in the city this morning collecting funds for the annual Broad Cove Regatta which is being held this year on August 9th. The Broad Cove Races attract many people from the city and this year's events promise to be better than usual. Crews from Topsail, Lance Cove, Bell Island, Portugal Cove and Horse Cove will compete in the two and four car races. A swimming race will also be a feature of the event.

A Case of Destitution.

Mrs. Earle, who is noted for the interest she takes in suffering humanity, has had a case of destitution of the most pitiful kind reported to her from Hamilton Street, where a mother, with 7 children, is on the verge of starvation. The husband it appears has cleared out and left his family without any means of support. Several charitable people who heard of the plight of this family have rendered what assistance they could.

Shipping Notes.

S. S. Sabie I. is due here direct from North Sydney to-morrow morning. S. S. Rosalind left Halifax on time this morning. S. S. Manoa arrived at Charlotteville at 4 a.m. to-day and left for Montreal three hours afterwards. S. S. Dagbird sailed to-day for Sydney with 11,600 tons ore from Bell Island. Sch. C. Bryant has cleared for Barbados from Port Union with 481 barrels herring, 50 qts. haddock and 40,000 lbs. lumber. Sch. Dorothy G. Snow arrived at Liverpool, N.S., on the 13th inst. STILL LOWER. The passenger rates on the S. S. Manoa have been reduced from $85, the lowest, to $76, and not $75 as was stated in an item yesterday.

Valuable Horse Killed.

FELL INTO DRY DOCK. A splendid fine horse owned by M. O'Regan, the butcher, was killed this morning by falling into the dry dock. The driver, a man named Carrigan, fortunately escaped. The express was loaded with fresh meat, and it is assumed the horse became frightened by the noise of trains. The vehicle was badly smashed and the horse had its neck broken by the fall.

Export Tax and French Bounties.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—I wish to compliment you on your excellent editorial last evening in condemnation of the Government Export Tax on our Fishery Products. Canada has threatened retaliation on us, but we should thank her Government for this timely warning. It may be an easy matter for us to arrange the "Statu Quo" with our sister Dominion, but it will be a very different matter when our foreign buyers start their retaliation for our mal-administration. We are breaking our Reciprocity Treaty with Greece, both in spirit and letter. The Spanish Government have increased their duties on our fish, and are now negotiating for reciprocity or reduction of any foreign taxes while our Government places an export tax on our fish shipped out of this country. If our fish can stand an export tax, it can stand any amount of taxes that foreign countries like to pile on us. The last mail from the Mediterranean markets brought the news, that the French merchants of Bordeaux are pushing the scale of the St. Pierre Lave (soft cure codfish) and promise it $1.25 per quintal cheaper than in Spain, Italy and Greece, than our genuine Labrador codfish, and this they are enabled to do owing to the bounty given by the French Govt. on all their codfish, shipped to these countries. What a comparison between the Newfoundland Govt., that places an export tax on our fishermen, and the French Government that gives the St. Pierre fishermen $1.25 per quintal, where do our exporters fit in under such circumstances? We recently heard that "Editors" of the Canadian Government are for increasing their postage rates on us, but let us first consider how far we have proceeded in our folly? There is little wonder that our exporters refused to give out supplies this spring, and the end is not yet. Yours truly, W. A. MUNN. July 18, 1922.

Attend to War Trophies.

Those who are responsible for the upkeep of the various war trophies would do well to see that the pile of rocks, barrels and debris piled around the tank in front of the Court House is removed. As it is at present it shows a lot of carelessness on somebody's part and the mess should be cleared up before the arrival of the many tourists who are expected during the week by the Red Cross boat.

HIS DIARY.

June 17th.—Up betimes and to the office. Anon to wait on Mr. Cotton and did have much discourse with him of his plans for the "development of Hawke's Bay. He tells me of six air coaches which he will bring from England. So to the Board of Trade and Mr. Williams talks with me of the game of golf, and indeed, did create in me a desire to play at it, but I will wait another year, being that the times are now mighty hard. Great talk of the Rogatta and many do beg of me to buy sweepstakes which I like ill, seeing how they have always cost me much money nor have I yet won a prize in them. At night to Toppal by motor coach and so to the village store, where I did gossip till late.

In the Realms of Sport.

President Orr of the Baseball League presided over all the naughty-naughties in his office on Saturday night, and after solemnly bidding them good night, he turned the public road to them the same as if they were not there. The matter concerning the exhibiting of pictures if not started on time and about the disciplining they got they promised to be very very good in the future and not attempt to delude a long suffering public anymore by exhibiting perfectly good pictures for back-slit exhibitions of baseball.

Full of resolve therefore to hand out a brand of baseball that will be worth seeing, the Cubs and Wanderers go over the top-to-night in the regular league fixtures. Joe Murphy has given such a wonderful exhibition of week week will again do mount duty for the Cubs, while opposite them will be that clever southpaw, Rocky Donnelly, whose speed and curves would be the wind-up in a regular big league. Players are expected to be in full uniform by 7 o'clock, and John B. is going to visit the dressing rooms in future to see that this is so. Fans and the public generally can therefore be assured from now on that the players are going to be serious in their efforts, and this being so, good exhibitions will be witnessed for the balance of the season.

The Cadets climbed up another rung of the championship ladder last night when they secured a win over the Felidians by a score of 1 to 0. The first half produced the finest and fastest football for the season, in which Flynn secured the one and only goal of a rebound from the post. The second half was most painful to witness, particularly if you were a Felidian sympathizer, for, despite the fact that they had all the play for the period of the Cadets' goal, their forwards so in scoring was concerned were usually about as harmless as a one-eyed man with water on the knee. He would need a tallyboard to record the innumerable opportunities they lost, and the way in which they booted the ball here, there and everywhere instead of on the goal was a shame. And there was but very little of the element of hard luck attached to it—just tumbling and the most erratic shooting. Only once in the second half did the Cadets get the ball beyond their full-back line, and this is the proof positive that the Felidians had the decided advantage all through.

The game started at an easy clip with the Felidians in the eastern end and the Cadets at the upper portion of the field. Playing conditions were ideal, being cool and practically no wind. Referee Churchill got them away promptly at 7.30. Play started at an easy clip and it was some time before Meaney started hostilities and sent in a hot one to Volsey. Jerrett and Winter by combined play retailed but Clare was on the job. A corner against that was nicely placed by Callahan but nothing resulted. He again sent in a nice wing shot right from the flag, but missed. This caused a regular melee in front of the college goal, but Volsey dug in and averted the danger. Meaney and Callahan on the left wing were now controlling most of the play, but their shots were ineffectual. A foul throw against Madden broke up the prolonged attack and then the blue-and-blues took a hand in. Clare stopped Albert Martin's long one, and then three Felidians each had a try. The Cadets' defence were a bit bothered for a while but Clare responded manfully to all the onslaughts. The kick-off of the foul against Canning gave Goldstone a splendid opening, but being unable to check his speed he knelt it. For some minutes the pressure was on the Cadets' goal, but Galgay, Kavanagh, and Clare prevented any damage being done. Flynn's hot one was saved by Volsey. A corner kick beautifully placed by Callahan struck the crossbar and on the rebound Flynn instantly nipped in and scored. For fully five minutes after being reentered the ball was kept between the half-back lines until Winter got it and shot but Clare had the goods. A foul against Albert Martin resulted in a back. Winter had another splendid opening but fumbled it. A scrum on the Cadet goal resulted in Madden giving a foul—just outside the full-back line. Meaney rushed the place kick by Chafe and he and Callahan broke away, but their efforts were good for only a back. A foul against Caul excellently placed by Martin was good for a corner off Kavanagh. Goldstone put it behind on the place kick. Canning and Meaney got away but failed to score. The hottest scrum for the season found Winter blown offside. He got a good opportunity next but asked it, Galgay and Albert Martin were the stars of the period.

The Felidians' kick-off was secured by Maddigan, who in turn lost it to Ron Martin. He shot well but it was secured by Clare. Winter had a chance but fumbled it. Five minutes after play had started the referee discovered that the ball had lost its shape though this fact was quite apparent to the spectators for over half the first period after Fred Rendell had met it on the full. Ron Martin and Goldstone had a pretty rush but fell a victim to Galgay's wiles. Albert was penalised for charging Flynn, and for revenge Canning fouled him. Martin's beautiful place kick lost its sweetness on the six yard line. Chafe next had a long try which looked good for Winter and Payne to handle but Clare rushed out and beat them to it. Meaney got away and got a corner off Rendell but Callahan placed it behind the crossbar. Madden's throw-in was foul, and on Albert Martin's kick-off Maddigan very nearly duplicated Rose's stunt when he headed it on his own goal. Payne had rather hard luck when his last one just grazed the southern post. Goldstone's opening was excellent for equalising matters but he attempted to shoot before steadying it, with the result that it went off his instep, without force, right into Clare's hands. Albert crudely tripped Meaney, and Maddigan placed it well but Chafe cleared. Morris spoiled Payne's fast run. Meaney gave a wonderful exhibition of control when surrounded by four Felidians, but they ran him to earth at last. Another splendid opportunity was lost by Jerrett when the ball slipped out of a scrum right to his toe. Clare's strong right fist cleared a hot one from Goldstone. Then the Felidians produced a series of wild shots and had the goal posts been anywhere but the place they were they would have easily notched up a half dozen goals in five minutes. Chafe tried a long shot which Clare brilliantly saved. A corner off Galgay, placed by Goldstone, was headed behind by Payne. Ron Martin had a try which Clare headed out. Payne secured it, and never did Sid Cotton attain the altitude that Tommy got when he explained it right from the goal mouth. Flynn broke away but when in his combined play with Callahan and Meaney the referee found him too far ahead of the ball in the enemy's territory, he was blown off-side. A corner off Galgay was misplaced by Jerrett. This was the last gasp, and incidentally the last chance that the Felidians are likely to have for Championship honours.

It looks now as though the race will be between the Cadets and B.I.S. there being a difference of only one point (in favour of the latter) between them. The Irishmen have yet to face the Saints and they cannot afford to holler therefore until they are out of wood.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES

LAST CHANCE.
THE HAGUE, July 17. Soviet Russia will be given an opportunity, to-morrow, to outline any new proposals for a settlement of the issues, which have been before the Conference. In other words the Hague Conference has been re-suscitated, though not in that whole-hearted swinging fashion, indicative of general optimism.

WILL OPEN MINES.
WASHINGTON, July 17. President Harding, to-day, invited bituminous mine operators, who notified him at the White House their acceptance of his offer of arbitration in the coal strike to, "return to your mine property and resume operations."

The Felidians' kick-off was secured by Maddigan, who in turn lost it to Ron Martin. He shot well but it was secured by Clare. Winter had a chance but fumbled it. Five minutes after play had started the referee discovered that the ball had lost its shape though this fact was quite apparent to the spectators for over half the first period after Fred Rendell had met it on the full. MANY KILLED.
WELLSBURG, Va., July 17. Four are known to be dead, slight witnesses to-night, to a gun fight, which raged more than an hour at daybreak around Cliff-ton mine of the Richmond Coal Co. at Cliff-tonville, ten miles away. Sheriff S. H. Duval, who led his little band of deputies against a large crowd of men, said to have crossed from the Pennsylvania Coal Fields, was among those dead. The rumor is persisted in that the bodies in the morgue by no means represent total casualties of the fight.

French Steamer Due Thursday.

WILL TOW SCHOONER TO ST. PIERRE.

S.S. Pro Patria is due here on Thursday to tow the French barot, Vinna to St. Pierre. The vessel has discharged her salt cargo at Baine Johnston & Co's premises, and will have to undergo extensive repairs when she arrives at the French port. It is understood that the owners of the vessel, Messrs. Francaise, are negotiating for the purchase of the tern schooner Cape Pine. Nothing in the matter has, however, been finalized yet. The crew of the Vinna will go to St. Pierre in their vessel.

Youthful Thieves Arrested.

A SERIES OF ROBBERIES.
This forenoon Constables Lee, Bennett and Walsh arrested three youths who are charged with a series of burglaries committed during the past month. Two other boys connected with the robberies are still at large, but will be apprehended this evening. For some time past the police have had reports of burglaries from different parts of the city. The work of the thieves did not appear unattractive, which made detection difficult. The boys arrested this morning have been before court previously on similar charges. Their ages range from 11 to 13, and there are, so far as is known, five in the gang. The charges against them are: Stealing $3 from a store near Cliff's Cove. The panels of a door here were removed to effect an entrance. Breaking and entering. Callahan's tinmith store on two occasions; entering a George St. store and stealing $12 in cash; entering George St. Church, where $250 was taken; attempted robbery at Royal Stationery Store; entry of dry goods store of P. J. Fortuna. A flashlight owned by some person at present not known to the police was found in the possession of one of the youths when arrested.

Rotary To-Day.
"Marketing Newfoundland's products in England" was the subject of an interesting address delivered by Mr. C. T. Phipps before the Rotary Club to-day. Mr. Phipps is the manager of the Newfoundland Atlantic Fisheries Company, and his address, which dealt chiefly with the marketing of fish, will be reported more fully in to-morrow's issue. Gerald Harvey was Chairman for the day.

Fortune Bay Line.

NO RAILS YET REMOVED.
"No rails have yet been removed from the Fortune Bay Branch Line." This statement was made to the Telegram to-day by Mr. H. J. Russell, Assistant to the General Manager of the R.N. Co. Mr. Russell said that the ties are now being retained so that an engine will be able to go over the whole line which is about 40 miles long. In a week's time the work of taking up the rails will begin.

The Scream of the Pipes.

It is claimed for the bagpipes, by some admirers that it is among the oldest of musical instruments. Whether or not the oldest, it is certainly the loudest of all instruments. The Duke of Cutherland owns a bagpipe which figured at Prestonpans, and must, therefore, be nearly 200 years old, yet it can still be heard at a distance of eight miles.

THREW STONES AT WINDOW.
Residents of a certain section of New Gower Street were awakened from their beauty-sleep last night by the sound of pebbles striking against their windows. The cause of the disturbance was Mary Barron, a girl who has been several times in the Penitentiary for vagrancy and who refuses to remain at home. Last night she amused herself by throwing stones at windows and she was given 30 days in the Penitentiary by the Magistrate this morning.

Road Repairing.

GOOD PROGRESS BEING MADE.
The work of repairing the suburban roads is still continuing, and good progress is being made. The Topsail road is now in better condition than ever it was and Cornwall Avenue has recently been oiled with tarvis which acts as an efficient preservative. This tarvis could be applied to good purpose on parts of the Topsail and other roads, to keep down the dust and prevent pot holes from forming.

Forty-Three Years in the Public Service--The Evening Telegram

Tourists and Hotels.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S DRAWBACK.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—In the course of my perambulations about New York I met Mr. Cyril Bowring at the offices of Bowring & Co., and the Red Cross Line, Battery Place. This is the American branch of Bowring Bros., as you are of course aware. I asked Mr. Bowring to say, for publication, something about tourist traffic to Newfoundland. He was interested immediately and expressed his enthusiastic opinion that there should be such a traffic between this country and Newfoundland, and between Great Britain and Newfoundland as well. "There is no doubt whatever about the great possibilities that lie in such a traffic," he declared. "If the thing were properly worked up it would be no time before many thousands of people would be going regularly every summer to spend a vacation in Newfoundland."

Everyone will of course see the immense advantages that such a tourist movement would have for Newfoundland. In the first place, it would be the wealthier classes that would be involved, and wealthy Americans are notoriously prodigal with their money. They would spend big piles of money in the country, and all branches of trade and commerce would feel the beneficial results. Why, given a few good roads of any length, and those fellows would be taking their automobiles down with them and spending the summer there—at least, their families would. There would be hundreds of rich men taking their families there for the summer, staying a while themselves, and leaving their families behind them. The summer months here are dreadfully hot, and anybody who can afford to generally contrives to be out of the city during the hot weather. They go across to Europe, north to Canada, and indeed anywhere where the heat is more moderate than here. It is the same throughout the whole country. They go to Florida and Cuba in the winter months, but in the hot weather they seek cool climates. Newfoundland summer weather is exactly what they need. It is tinged with salty sea breezes, being an island there is no fever, and taken all round is salubrious and health-giving. For tired business men and worn-out society females Newfoundland weather would be invigorating and refreshing and they would return with soothened nerves to tell their friends what a wonderful place Newfoundland was, to be sure. Newfoundland should take a leaf from Nova Scotia's book—and Quebec's book, so far as endeavoring to get tourists is concerned. Both these provinces have reduced the thing to a science, and in every steamship and railway agency window here you see their posters and folders and propaganda prominently displayed. Newfoundland is conspicuous by her absence.

But, compared with any other country or province you like to mention, Newfoundland is a better health resort than all of them put together. Judged by the three-fold standard of climate, scenery and sport, Newfoundland can knock spots off any of 'em. Newfoundland's wonderful fishing villages, picturesque and romantic, would become famous, and not only would you have ordinary tourists—you would have painters and photographers and moving picture cameramen of all kinds swamping down to the country. There is one thing lacking—Hotel facilities. Climate, scenery and sport are absolutely worthless unless there be proper hotel facilities. That is the brutal truth. It is no use trying to get around it. Until the hotel facilities shall have been provided, Newfoundland can never, never work up any tourist traffic. An American will not tolerate inferior hotel accommodation. You have got to cater to him there. But beyond this one qualification, I say that Newfoundland stands unrivalled of all countries in the world as a palatial field for tourists. Consider it an island out in the Atlantic, yet lying close to the continent. A few days from the States. Reached by a pleasant sea voyage. Beautiful exhilarating weather. Beautiful, fascinating scenery. Wonderful bays and fjords. Unsurpassed fishing in hundreds of rivers and ponds. A country which, except for the coasts, is quite uninhabited. A country with many hundreds of beautiful, quaint fishing villages. Add hotel accommodation and you have an article which it would be a pleasure and an easy matter to sell anywhere. "I have many hundreds of personal enquiries from my own friends concerning Newfoundland," said Mr. Bowring. "They invariably ask concerning hotel accommodation. After I have lauded the attractions of the country, and they listen interestedly, they invariably ask: 'And what kind of hotels are there?'"

Speaking as a shipping man, with all kinds of proof for his statement, Mr. Bowring declared that if Newfoundland had the hotel accommodation she would in no time have a big influx of tourists both from this side and from the other side of the Atlantic. If it interests Newfoundland that, with hotel accommodation, she could have a tourist traffic of several thousand well to do people every summer, then Newfoundland should

Fifteen Foot Water Cress.

What watercress can do when not on the tea-table is told by Mr. J. L. North, curator of the Royal Botanic Society of London, in the current number of the Society-Review. Illustrating the evils of indiscriminate naturalisation, Mr. North tells how the common watercress was introduced to New Zealand soon after Canterbury was settled in 1850. "It soon blocked up all the rivers and streams in the province," he says, "causing disastrous floods and involving the settlers in enormous expense to keep them open. "Plants grew to a length of 15 ft. with stems as thick as a man's wrist. "Fortunately, this vigor lasted but a few years, and it has now returned to the normal size, but it is a most troublesome water-weed, and seems likely to remain so since it has found no enemies." He also mentions the Scotch thistle, which, after being introduced, "often grew to a height of 15 ft., and spread over large districts, resisting all efforts to keep it in check." This plague was stopped by a mistake. It was intended to introduce the common sparrow, but the "hedge-sparrow," or duncock, was introduced instead. The duncock took a fancy to the seeds, and kept the crop within bounds.

Yours sincerely,
J. R. SMALLWOOD,
106 West 16th Street, New York City.

Famous Bad Penmanship.

A distinguished lawyer of the United States, Rufus Choate, is said to have been one of the worst penmen known to modern history, possessing a style of handwriting altogether eccentric and illegible. A story—which may or may not be true—has been told to illustrate how exceedingly bad his chirography was. While having his house "done over" he engaged to send the contractor a plan for a carved mantelpiece. Failing to discover a design to his taste, he wrote the workman to that effect. The recipient of the message eyed it carefully from several angles and finally decided it must be the promised plan. Balzac was another notoriously poor writer. It was such a task to read what he had written that his printer specified in his contract that he work only one hour at a time on the copy. Horace Greeley's chirography was so baffling that a compositor once observed that if his handwriting had appeared on the wall at the time of Belshazzar's feast, the King would have been even more terrified than he was. Napoleon's letters to Josephine from Germany were written in so extraordinary a hand that they were at first believed to be rough maps of the theatre of war.

Where Cocaine Comes From.

Cocaine, the use of which is so greatly abused because it produces elation of spirits for a short period is a most valuable drug when used by the surgeon for small operations on the nose, ears, mouth, teeth, and other surface parts as a preventive of pain. It is used instead of ether or chloroform. It is made from the leaves of the shrub Froxytholium coca, which grows in Peru, Bolivia and Chili, and is now cultivated in India and Ceylon. A traveller in Bolivia and Peru will come across a shrub growing wild which will remind him somewhat of the British Blackthorn. It bears a cluster of small flowers with yellowish white petals which are succeeded by red berries. The leaves are oval and about an inch in length, and when crushed have a faint tea-like odor. This is the coca plant. The leaves have for centuries been used by the natives. When chewed they allay the desire for food, and prevent a feeling of fatigue when travelling or during great exertion. Fifty years ago cocaine was practically unknown. The dried leaves of the plant are the part used, and these yield approximately 5 per cent of cocaine. From the leaves the cocaine is extracted, in the form of crystals. But as these are soluble only in oils, alcohol, chloroform, and some other vehicles, the cocaine is converted into a hydrochloride, which is easily soluble in water and used in sprinkling on the parts to be operated on or for snuffing into the nose, or as a solution for injection under the skin.

Hunger Groups Returning Home.

SARATOFF, Russia.—Thin but sunburned little groups of ragged children and adults, who fled from the hunger-death of the Volga last autumn to provinces that promised bread, are now trekking back to the homes they deserted. Daily they arrive at Saratoff, Samara, Kazan and other railway junction points in the famine belt. Some of them are in worse shape than when they departed. They found other provinces inhospitable and food scarce everywhere. Many of the returning wanderers are being fed at American Relief Administration food kitchens. Others are struggling on as best they can until the September harvest. MINARD'S LIMENTIN PREVENTS SPANISH FLU.

Bobbed Hair Flourished Long Ago.

Female fashions and especially coiffures were worse in 1628 than they are at the present day, according to old William Pryne, a writer of the time of Charles I. "Whence is it," asks Pryne away back in 1628, "that our immodest, mannish and impudent viragoes or audacious women do so unsexually clip and cut their hairs, wearing their locks and foretops (as they stile them) in an odorous and shameless manner, as if they were really transformed and trans-substantiated into males by a stupendous metamorphosis?" He had even harder names for the men who suffered their "hairs" to grow long into what were called "love-locks" and declared that they would "rather have the commonwealth disturbed than their hairs disordered." Pryne came in for a bit of shearing himself, for both his ears were cut off as punishment "for being too vociferous a reformer."

Diamonds of All Colors.

The green diamond which has been found recently in South Africa is an exceedingly rare stone. There are probably not more than five or six others in existence, and, assuming this stone to weigh, as stated, 1½ carats and to be of "the utmost emerald" is a curiosity at about $25,000, a hundred times the price of a white diamond of the same weight. The rarest colors of diamonds are red, blue, and green. Only one red diamond is known, its owner being an Indian Rajah. The famous Hope diamond is blue. Black is also a rare color. The green diamond was blackish in color in its complete form when it was found. It was only when it was cut and reduced from 5½ carats to 1½ that it proved to be of an emerald color. There are many yellow and brown diamonds, but they are not very popular. The white diamond is the most attractive. The rare colors are seldom worn; they are most prized by collectors.

Touchy!

A lecture, a well-known authority on economics mentioned the fact that in some parts of the United States the number of men was considerably more than that of women, and added humorously: "I can, therefore, recommend the ladies to emigrate to that part of the country."

A young lady seated in one of the centre rows of the auditorium got up and, full of indignation, left the room rather noisily. Whereupon, the lecturer remarked: "I did not mean that it should be done in such a hurry."—Everybody's.

Early Amphibian.

The land vertebrates of the coal era were amphibious animals half reptiles, half fish. Bones and skeletons of the Eryops, the largest and best known of these amphibians in America, are occasionally found in the upper coal measures of Pennsylvania, but the best specimens are from Texas. The Eryops is twice as old as the Broctonian, five times as old as the Ectopithecus—the diminutive ancestor of the horse—100 times as old as the mammoth or the mastodon or the earliest known remains of man. It has been said of the Eryops that he is a collateral ancestor of all the higher animals—of reptiles, birds, mammals, and of man himself—all developed through the ages which have since elapsed, from animals of the same type and grade of organization, and may serve at least to raise our respect for the possibilities of development which lay in the primitive amphibia.—Washington Star.

Ask For Whiter Teeth

If you desire them—make this free test

You see glistening teeth on every side today—teeth you envy, maybe. Millions of people now employ a new teeth-cleaning method. They combat the film that dims the teeth.

That method will be sent you for the asking—a ten-day test. It will bring to you its delightful effects. Won't you ask?

Film makes teeth dingy

Most people find that well-brushed teeth discolor and decay. The reason lies in film, which old-way brushing does not effectively combat.

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. It absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. It forms the basis of tartar.

It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Very few people who brush teeth daily have escaped those film-caused troubles.

Now ways to combat it

Dental science has for years sought ways to combat that film. It has found two methods and

MEN, WOMEN AND TELEPHONES.

Why is it that men as a rule like the telephone so much less than women do? It is so, isn't it?

A man called my attention the other day to this difference of the two sexes toward the telephone. He asked me if I agreed with him that it existed, and if so, how I could account for it.

"When things come up, my wife always says 'I'll telephone' where if it were left to me I'd write or let it be declared. 'And when the phone rings at night, my wife usually jumps up and I hate to hear the thing. You have to use them for business but no visiting over them."

They Get Enough.

Perhaps in that last sentence is one of the reasons for the difference in feeling. Men use the telephone so much for business that they don't care to do anything to do with the instrument out of business hours.

And here's another explanation. The average man's life is led under conditions which make an interchange of casual conversation with fellow workers part of the day's routine. Whereas a woman works in her house alone, or with only small children to talk with. The telephone is a welcome outlet for her social needs. It takes the place of the back fence as a chat conductor. And has this vast advantage over the back fence that it makes it possible for her to talk with the people she enjoys most instead of with those who happen to live next door to her.

When He Was Courting.

"But what I don't understand," said another man with whom I was discussing this subject, "is the way a woman feels so at home with a telephone and talks just as naturally over it as if she were sitting opposite the person she's talking to. Men aren't at home on a telephone. Now when I was courting my wife I used to go out to see her every other night, and the alternate night I'd telephone. Well, after I'd told her how business was and when I'd get out the next day, and so forth, I was through but she wanted to go on talking. And then if I didn't, she'd think I didn't care as much as I did at first."

A third man whom I consulted on this all important subject had a very interesting suggestion to offer.

An Hour's Chat.

"I can't tell you why women love to telephone so," he said, "that's beyond me. But I can tell you one reason why men hate it. Because when they have to call their homes for any purpose they have such a devil of a time getting the line. And then they find their wives have been having an hour's chat with some other woman and that makes them sore on the whole proposition."

And now I can just see Himself showing this triumphantly to Herself and Herself getting cross at Ruth Cameron for giving him ammunition when he has plenty of his own.

Soviets Seize Religious Treasures.

Requisition of church valuables by the Soviet government, reported in patches from Russia, raises a question as to the wealth of the various religious institutions of the world.

"Since the dawn of history people have been lavish with their gifts for religious purposes, whether they worshipped idols or an unseen God," says a bulletin from the Washington, D.C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"The result is that in all ages treasures, usually in the form of gold and silver and precious stones, have flowed into temples and churches, monasteries and other religious institutions. In every period and in most parts of the world, then, except during recent decades in the west, a considerable part of the liquid wealth of the world has been in ecclesiastical hands. Only the treasures of temporal princes surpassed those of the religious institutions, and in some instances as in the case of the monasteries and temples of practically all the countries of the world."

Religions Use Gold.
"Archaeologists find that the pagan temples of civilization dead for thousands of years were ornamented with wealth of precious metals. Indian temples of several faiths have had rich treasures and silver for centuries; and they have made use as well of a glittering array of diamonds, rubies, sapphires and other jewels. Many an old-to-day, from the dim interiors of Indian temples, look out through eyes of great lustrous, precious stones, and wears other gems that might ransom an emperor.

"Christianity had to fight for its life for the first 300 years of its existence, and its rites were carried on in the simplicity that secrecy made necessary. But with its official recognition came the tendencies which had marked most of the openly accepted religions which had gone before; toward the making of gifts to churches by devout followers and powerful patrons, and toward the use of more elaborate and costly paraphernalia in the services. Constantine, first Christian emperor of Rome, lavished gifts on St. Peter's Church in Rome and on Sancta Sophia in his new capital, Constantinople. He had a hand in enriching the two most famous, and once the two richest churches in Christendom.

Treasures Often Looted.

"The marked enrichment of Christian churches began in earnest in Italy and the east in the fifth and sixth centuries and spread in early medieval times to France and other western countries. Not only did the churches accumulate gold chalices, patens, candelabra and other small objects, but many had large screens of gold and silver, as well as fonts and statues. To a few of the churches altars of solid gold were presented, but later church regulations prescribed stone and wood as the only permissible materials for altars. Precious stones also came into use to ornament images of the saints or as gifts to them. Thus the sacred baby of the Church of Ara Coeli in Rome has been given over a space of many years a wealth of jewels.
"The accumulation of treasures by temples and churches and monasteries has not been unbroken. Time and time again these convenient stores of precious metals and precious stones

Coal Diggers of Australia

Opal is the Australian natural gem, but latest reports from that country show that the diggers are experiencing very hard times, owing to the slump in the precious stone in the European markets.
Coober Pedy, the home of the famous South Australian black opal, is 100 miles from anywhere, and probably the most primitive village in the British Empire. The Australian blacks christened it Coober Pedy, or "white man living in a hole," and it well deserves its name.

Of all the rough outback jobs in Australia, digging for opal is about the worst. Coober Pedy lies in the heart of the Stewart Range, 170 miles from the nearest station on the East-West Railway, and its whole population of between 70 and 80 diggers lives underground in burrows scratched out of the hillside. A tin shanty, in which diggers keep their tools, is the only sign of life showing above ground.

Every morning the diggers come out of their burrows and set out for the opal fields, to cut patiently through the rock in the hope of finding the beautiful black diamonds lying beneath. Between them they have dug many thousands of pounds' worth of opal in the last four years, though they have worked only a small area of a field said to be 40 miles long. In normal times opal is worth $150 an ounce, but now there is practically no demand for the gems and the diggers have opal, but no money.

Coober Pedy has a dug-out post office, of which it is very proud, and a mail once a week, but neither food nor water are to be found within a day's journey. At present water is carted from a water-hole 14 miles distant, but as it is some time since the last shower occurred, the diggers will, this month, have to go to a creek still further away for their water. As much as $15 per 100 gallons has at times been paid for the precious fluid.

Beef and bread are brought by mail cart from Kingoonya, the nearest station, but the people of Coober Pedy insure themselves against sudden scarcity by taming the rabbits that abound in the neighborhood. One man alone has 50 of these pets, and it is a curious sight to see them every evening trooping to their master for their food.

An Old Fishing Net.

The natives of New Guinea have a very cheap way of providing themselves with fishing-nets for use in their rivers and lakes. Cutting a long bamboo, they bend it into the shape of a large tennis-racket, fastening the small end to the staff or handle with fibre. This they take into the forest and leave it for a few days. When they call for it again the huge spiders of the country have been at work and covered it with a network of web strong enough to imprison any fish that may come in contact with its meshes. The bamboo is carried away, and no doubt the spiders wonder what has become of their new home, made with so much labour.

Danger and Folly of Fixing Prices.

EFFORTS AT ARTIFICIAL CONTROL HAVE BOOMERANG EFFECT ON BUSINESS.

A very striking illustration of the danger and folly of the effort to substitute fixed prices and collective control for the free play of the competitive markets is to be found in the Cuba during the recent crisis. Startled by a drastic break in prices, the Cuban Government established a sugar commission which fixed a minimum price, and controlled buying and selling. The result was an intensification of difficulties and a virtual complete stagnation. Courageous friends of Cuba among the New York bankers urged that relief could come only from the natural play of market forces and insisted that the price control be dropped and the markets left to take care of themselves. They expected that the first effect of a free market would be some further decline in the price of sugar, but they were confident that, as soon as a free market was established and bottom prices reached, a great buying movement would come from all over the world which would clear the markets. The advice of the New York bankers was taken and the restrictions were abolished. The open market price established was a substantial fraction of one cent a pound below the nominal price which had been set by the sugar commission. The reaction from this low price, however, came very speedily, the revival of buying which had been anticipated speedily came, and within a very few months a whole year's crop of sugar was moved out of Cuba.

When the markets are satisfied that prices are free from artificial control and that they really reflect conditions of supply and demand, goods move and production can go on. The question of right prices is an economic rather than a moral question. Right prices may be defined as prices which will move goods and which, through clearing the markets, permit new goods to be produced. The best way to determine what right prices are is not by a prior calculation, but rather by experimentation in the open, two-sided, competitive markets. —Financial Post.

Poldhu Closed.

LITTLE TOWN'S WIRELESS HISTORY.

Poldhu, probably the most famous wireless station in the world, has sent its last message. "M.B.D." its famous call sign for which ships' operators have listened eagerly for 19 years, is now replaced by "M.F.T." the sign of Clifton, the Irish station of the Marconi Co., which has taken up the duty of talking to people who go down to the sea in ships, talking them at midnight what has been happening throughout the world during the preceding 24 hours.

Poldhu's last message was on a matter of business in the little Spanish town of Cleza. Now the new wireless station at Omgar, in Essex, is responsible for this Spanish traffic.

Perched on the rock-bound coast of Cornwall, Poldhu has made history. It was the first high-power wireless station to be built, and from here the first wireless message was sent across the Atlantic in a 2,000 metres wavelength, on December 12, 1901, to St. John's, Newfoundland.

It was from Poldhu in 1920 that the Daily Mail wireless telephony test to the Canadian Pacific liner Victoria, then crossing the Atlantic to Canada, was carried out. A little township has grown up around the great towering wireless masts on the cliffs edge to provide homes for their families and now they are all to be closed.

The future of the station is not yet certain; it is probable it will be used for research work, but never again will messages from the far ends of the earth be received, marked "Via Poldhu."

The Nickel Will Show "East Lynne."

LOCAL FANS WILL SEE NEW VERSION OF FAMOUS PLAY.

Mr. J. P. Kiely having just returned from an extended visit to Canada and United States, announces that he has secured for exhibition at his theatres some of the greatest motion picture productions of the day, the first of which is the screen version of the greatest stage play ever produced, namely "East Lynne." Other big attractions of a different nature will be announced in this paper later. "East Lynne" is the beloved story of Isabel Vane, her happiness and her trials, and is all brought before our eyes in a most masterful manner. Five generations have seen the play and countless more will see the epic picture produced by Hugo Ballin. The true love of a man for a maid and the illicit lust of villainy fight on—but real love wins out in the end. See how a treacherous tongue can wreck a home and blast a life; see how a trusting loving heart can be deceived; see how a woman learns the truth. The cast is headed by Mabel Ballin and Edward Earle.

Encourage Home Manufactures.

The trade eloquently burling upon the ears of the people for a considerable period of years has been "BUY HOME MADE GOODS," but from observation we find that this good advice is not invariably accepted. Particularly is this so in the case of Medals for the winning crews at our annual regatta. These, we understand, are imported, the inscriptions only being engraved on them by the local jeweller supplying them. Why this should be, is difficult to surmise. We are of opinion that local talent in the gold and silversmith's craft is quite capable of turning out medals of more ornate design, or equally so, than the foreign worker in precious metals. All things being equal then why not the Regatta Committee adopt the "home made" motto and place the order only on condition that the much prized trophies are designed and inscribed wholly and solely in this city. It is a poor compliment to our jewellers that such has not been done. If for the sake of cheapness then the pretext is a weak one, and should not be countenanced. Next year those in charge should insist that city jewellers be given an opportunity to show what they can do in competition with outsiders. This may seem to the superficial reader but a little matter, but there is a great deal underlying it.—COM.

War on Toothache.

EXPERTS HOPEFUL OF SUCCESS.

The discovery of the two types of bacteria which cause dental decay and toothache is regarded by dentists as one of great importance. The investigation is being continued at the Bland-Sutton Institute, Middlesex Hospital, and as the cause of dental decay is now definitely known, there is hope that remedial measures will ultimately be found.

It has been discovered that these two types of bacteria produce an acid which gradually softens the enamel and then penetrates into and destroys the underlying dentine or tooth ivory. Once a path is opened, other bacteria can find an entrance and cause inflammation, with violent pain. So universal and destructive are these little organisms that scarcely anyone escapes dental decay.

One of the bacteria is a long, thin bacillus, the other is shorter and of-

CHANGE OF CARS.

I had a good old honest bus I used day after day, and with no foolish sort of fuss it testered on its way. There was no hill it wouldn't climb, no mudhole clogged its gait; it always got me there on time, when I would keep a date. But auto salesmen laid for me, and jeered my ancient van; "It is a grievous sight to see you drive this also-rah! Let's sell you then a better boat, with every modern curve, and down the highway you will float, in state, as you deserve. Be wise," they said, "this bus reject, a modern one obtain; no man can keep his self respect, who drives so punk a wain." I have a new one now, my friends, worth going miles to see, but every passing hour it lends some kind of grief to me. Oh, rinktums odd and dooddads strange excite my dreads and fears, and when to lower speed I'd change, I always strip the gears. Whatever rinktum I may touch it's always a mistake, and when I try to push the clutch I jam down on the brake. I see my old bus going by, and wail, "Alas! Alack! I'd give a mansion in the sky to have that tumbler back!" So my bright auto daily lends a pang, and sometimes two; old cars, old shoes, old books and friends are better than the new.

Sounded That Way.

"I taught school among my own people in the Tennessee mountains for several years after I graduated from college," said a Southern lecturer. "Funny things happened. Hearing a boy say, 'I ain't gwine har,' I said to him, 'That's no way to talk.' Listen: 'I ain not going here; thou are not going there; he a not going there; we are not going here; you are not going there; they are not going there.' Do you get no idea?" "Yessur, I gets it all right. They ain't nobody gwine."

The High Commissioner.

(Canada July 1st.)

Sir Edgar Bowring, the High Commissioner for Newfoundland, sailed from Glasgow on Saturday for Newfoundland. He usually spends several months of each summer on the island, where he has important interests. His present visit has an unusual significance, however, for it is no secret that he wishes to resign the High Commissionership so as to be able to give more attention to his own business and other affairs, and we understand his resignation is likely to take place before he returns to London next Autumn.

The announcement of the resignation, when it comes, will cause wide regret, as Newfoundland has been most fortunate during the past four years in being represented in Great Britain by a High Commissioner so intimately in touch with the affairs of both the Dominion and Great Britain, and whose public spirit is so well recognized in both countries. Sir Edgar has always maintained a robust confidence in Newfoundland, and just before leaving, he assured us, that in spite of the present more or less depressing outlook the country will satisfactorily surmount all difficulties.

Mission Sermon.

BY REV. W. C. MCGRATH, AT THE R.C. CATHEDRAL, SUNDAY, JULY 16TH.

"Behold I say to you lift your eyes and see the countries; for they are white already to harvest. The harvest indeed is great but the labourers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He send labourers into His harvest." John IV:35; Luke X:2.

own followers has long stood as a barrier between the grace of God and the souls God died to save. The population of the entire world to-day is estimated at some fifteen hundred million souls. Of these, nine hundred and ninety-five millions, or eight out of every thirteen members of the human race, are still sunk in the darkness of paganism.

I say through abuse of grace. We know that Christ gave us unreasonably high commands. It would be nothing short of blasphemous to assert that Christ entrusted to His followers an impossible task when He commanded them to preach the gospel to every creature.

Christ. The harvest indeed is great but the labourers are few, and because of the failure of many to answer the Divine call those who are labouring in fields afar are almost unequal to the gigantic task imposed on their shoulders.

WHITE TO HARVEST. My brethren it is my purpose only to ask you to consider seriously whether or not you are obliged as members of the Catholic Church to do your part to share the faith with those who still dwell in darkness and the shadow of death.

LACK OF INTEREST ON THE PART OF CATHOLICS. There is another partial cause of the failure of God's plan in regard to the conversion of pagan lands, and that is, as I have said, lack of interest on the part of Catholics generally.

The Kingdom of God.

A SERIES OF ADDRESSES DELIVERED BY PROF. GIFFORD OF WESLEYAN THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE, MONTREAL, BEFORE THE METHODIST CONFERENCE, 17-18 FEBRUARY.

These are Christ's own words to those who are not called to devote their lives to active work on the missions, and the very words imply that the sending of labourers into His harvest will depend to a great extent upon the united prayers of those who have God's interests at heart.

Mackerel Fishing.

Casco Bay trap fishermen have their nets in place and are now waiting for the annual run of mackerel. This is due any time during the month of July, and there is only one thing more uncertain than when the mackerel will arrive: How long the run will continue.

The fish may not arrive until early in August. The run may last from the first of July till nearly into September and it may be over in a day. No fisherman, no matter how long he has studied the fish, can safely predict a think about it.

While the run lasts trap fishers have to visit their traps twice daily because if the fish are plentiful the trap will be overcrowded. Again the uncertainty of mackerel fishing along shore shows itself in the conditions of the catch. The trap may be full one morning and not another fish in it for a week; again it may be full every tide for days and then not another fish go in for the season.

SOME BIG DAYS.

Last season the mackerel run was one of the best in years and the trap fishermen at Casco Bay made much money. For days at a time some of the traps netted their owners from $40 to $50 a day. These were the traps best located.

A mackerel trap might be termed a floating weir, for it is built upon general plan of a regular sardine weir. It consists of a net about ten feet deep enclosing an area of about 100 feet. At low tide the bottom of this net should be about five feet from the ocean bottom. A bottom net hanging to the wall nets prevents all fish which enter the enclosure from escaping under the sides. The fish are lead into the enclosure through an opening at one side.

The trap is supported by floats made of oil barrels at the corners and along the top of the side nets. These floats are anchored. A cable runs across the centre of the trap to the shore, where it is made fast to a tree or a boiler.

When the trap is to be pulled the fishermen row their dories over the sides and then, starting at one corner, haul up the bottom of the trap. This forces the fish into one corner of the enclosure from which they are dipped with a hand net into the boat.

Shackleton's Warning to Civilization.

Harold Begbie, the English writer, had an interview with the late Sir Ernest Shackleton before the latter started on his last voyage, which he relates as follows:

"I once asked Shackleton to tell me how civilization struck him when he came back from his last expedition. 'Well, I'll tell you,' he said. 'Honestly, I think we are shirking our responsibilities. That's how it strikes me. Wherever I go it seems that people don't realize one of the most terrible facts of the war—the fact, I mean, that the flower of the world has gone.'

"Remember, the United States is the one nation left intact. Here in Europe the high spirit and the faith and the enterprise of youth have been mown down, as with a scythe. It's a fearful loss, a loss no language can express, and yet . . ." he shrugged his shoulders.

"Well?" I asked. "Oh, I don't want to be the least bit fanatical, but sometimes here in London it seems to me as if we're almost up against the writing-on-the-wall business—Babylon, eh?"

"Take a little thing like this jazz mania. It's only a straw, I know. And just after the war one could understand it—reaction, and that sort of thing. But now! In my lecture I show a moving picture of a sea elephant; you see its undulations in the water, the heaving up of a mass of tremendous energy just under the surface current. I say to the people: 'The first time I saw a sea elephant was in South Georgia; the second time was in a jazz room here in London.' They laugh.

"A Serious Side. 'But there's a serious side to that remark. People here are not doing their duty. They're fooling when fooling—something worse than wrong. It's something to be done; something that ought to be done, and something that must be done at once if we're to mend the world properly; but is there any sign that the crisis is ever realized? I don't come across it myself.

"I should have thought the war would have drawn the nation closer together. I should have thought the needs of the country, after such a visitation, would have given to the world duty a Nelsonic ring, a national selfishness. 'But I don't think that this is so. 'On the contrary, one feels that the central pull on conscience has ceased. People are openly quite selfish and frivolous. There's no 'one clear call' for the individual. It's a go-as-you-please scramble for self indulgence. 'At any time such a spirit is dangerous, but after so great a war, and in a world so shaken up and impoverished as that which has survived from the war, such a spirit seems to invite calamity."

NEW YORK, July 11.—Champion Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills through their managers to-day signed a contract to box for the world's heavyweight championship at a time and place to be named later. The contract which it is expected will finally bring the champion and his negro challenger together in the ring, is of the blanket type. It requires the heavyweights to box within 60 days after the acceptance of a satisfactory offer by a reliable promoter. The time and place for the bout will be announced at, or shortly after, the acceptance of such bid by the principals or their managers. An added clause to the contract permits either principal to take part in any bout that may be arranged for him during the continuance of the contract without further announcements for the bout entered into to-day.

There are many other cities and towns existing upon the brink of possible destruction, but the Vesuvian slope is the most notable place in the world for persistence of the human race in the occupation of situations of extreme peril.

Hot Water Geysers in Chilly Iceland.

There are hot-water fountains of Iceland. They are on mounds, averaging seven feet in height, the tops of which form a sort of basin. From these basins the steam of boiling water can be seen arising and the overflow is continuous. The contents of these basins is as clear as crystal and one can see to a great depth, while just below the surface are many wonderfully beautifully white incrustations. The petrification caused by the boiling water which streams from the geysers includes birch and willow leaves, grass and rushes seemingly converted into marble.

At no time is it entirely safe to loiter in the vicinity of one of these bottomless basins, for the geyser has a way of spouting and gives no advance warning. Sometimes there will be a shoot of boiling water to a height of 15 feet, followed by a succession of jets. The highest shoot of which there is any record was 90 feet.

Occasionally a basin will for some unexplained reason become entirely empty or will give forth a "steam-shoot," which is the form of a column of spray and vapor at least 60 feet in height presents a really magnificent spectacle.

Destroying Household Pests.

Muslin covers placed over milk jugs and other vessels containing food will prevent the flies settling on the food, but, of course, they do not help to exterminate them—the result which should be aimed at. It is unnecessary nowadays to urge the necessity for killing off flies—the dirt and harmful micro-organisms distributed by them being well known—but knowledge of simple means of effecting their clearance is not, unfortunately, widespread.

A most effective fly poison is formalin. A small teaspoonful of this should be added to a saucer of milk and several of these saucers should be left exposed in the rooms most frequented by the flies. A better method is to take a half-pint tumbler, nearly fill it with water, and add two teaspoonfuls of formalin and a tablespoonful of slaked lime. A piece of blotting paper, moistened with the solution, is placed over the tumbler. In this a small slit is made, through which is passed a strip of blotting paper which hangs in the solution, acting as a wick and keeping the large paper damp.

Easily-Made Fly-Papers. Fly papers, too, are easily made at home. A good mixture consists of 5 parts of castor oil and 8 parts of powdered resin. These are heated together without being allowed to boil, until the resin is completely dissolved. The solution is then applied, while hot, to sheets of glazed paper, which are exposed in a suitable place. This mixture can be stored indefinitely in a tin, but should always be warmed up before being used.

Living on Volcano.

The eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, which long ago caused the destruction of the famous cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum, are by no means a thing of the past. They recur every few years. The whole shore along the foot of Vesuvius has been repeatedly devastated and piled high with lava and ashes from volcanic eruptions, yet as soon as the material has cooled sufficiently the work of rebuilding begins. The towns of Barre, San Giorgio, Portici, Resina, Torre del Greco, Torre Annunziata, Boscoreale and several smaller villages all stand on ground that may at any moment sink beneath the sea or be buried 50 feet deep in lava, or a new crater may open beneath them. Craters have opened repeatedly within a mile of Torre del Greco, yet it is to-day a flourishing place of 35,000 population, and Torre Annunziata has over 25,000 all cheerfully awaiting the crack of doom.

There are many other cities and towns existing upon the brink of possible destruction, but the Vesuvian slope is the most notable place in the world for persistence of the human race in the occupation of situations of extreme peril.

The Long Pond Road.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Permit me a brief space in the pages of your widely circulated and popular Journal, to place my note, requiring the attention of the authorities, who are responsible for the making, repairing and embellishing of our country roads. For a number of years past, I have been a summer resident of the Long Pond Road, my permanent abode is on William Street. A short while ago I conferred in conjunction with a number of residents of the Long Pond Road regarding the condition of that part of it, near or opposite the home of Mr. David Murrin, which forms a bend or curve by which the view of the road is lost sight of for some considerable distance, in the going or coming to the city, enforcing on times great inconvenience, and special care on the part of the drivers of automobiles, carriages, carts, etc., and much precaution to avoid accidents has to be adopted. Owing to this bend, the trees which overhang the curve intercept the view of the drivers of these vehicles, causing as I have said much carelessness to be exercised on their part. It has awakened the belief in my mind, and in the minds of the other residents, and of many citizens as well, who have cause to frequent that vicinity, that in it, lurks the danger of collisions. To help, to prevent such accidents, is what mooted the idea of my writing to your Journal, to inform and to ask the authorities interested, if it be possible to have the trees removed and the curve narrowed. If this were done, it would forestall and avert the chances of accidents taking place and it would furthermore impart a pleasing aspect to the road, and general surroundings. Of late years much intercourse between the city and that part of the country has taken place, vehicles of all sorts pass and repass day and night and as I have herein mentioned, large numbers of pedestrians as well, on business, or on pleasure bent, all of whom I am sure would be pleased if the road were widened, knowing as they do of the possibilities of accidents happening while it is left to remain as it is at present. Believing as I do that it is only necessary to impart this information to the proper authorities, to have the evil remedied, and thanking you for your kindness in permitting so much space in the columns of your Journal, I remain,
Yours sincerely,
WM. J. MURPHY.

Harbor Grace Notes.

As mentioned in your columns last week, the members of the British Band will hold a Field Sports Day on Wednesday next, 19th inst., at Shanahan Park. The events of the programme will consist of the following:—
Football Sixes (Inter Town and Local Clubs).
Throwing the Hammer.
Field Regatta.
Football Place Kick.
100, 200 yards and mile races.
Throwing the cricket ball.
Football Relay.
High Jump.
Sack Race.

Competitors from any town are allowed to contest in the above. Teas, drinks and ice cream will be served at the Park, and a dance, to be held in the Masonic Hall, will conclude the items for that day. We are hoping the weather will be favorable for the Sports, but in the event of this not being so, the next fine day will be availed of.

Miss M. T. Gilbert, who is on the staff of Elliott School, Boston, is spending her vacation here, and is the guest of Mrs. D. F. Meaney. Her many friends are pleased to see her again.

Mrs. (Rev.) C. A. Mayer-Oakes and little daughter, Betty, arrived from Oakloosa, Iowa, recently on a visit to her aunt, Mrs. John Brunless.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henderson of St. John's, arrived in town on Saturday on a week-end visit to friends.

Schooner Willie K. Captain Barry, arrived in port on Saturday last for dockage.—COR.

Mistimed Applause.

Dorothy, who had attended a French finishing school, had taken her mother to see a French play.

Mother was determined not to give away the fact that her knowledge of French amounted to little if any more than her knowledge of Sanskrit or Assyrian. So when, before the second act, one of the actors came in front of the curtain and made a speech, she applauded vigorously, discovering a little too late that she appeared to be alone in her enthusiasm.

"Do you really understand French, mamma?" inquired her daughter, coldly.

"Certainly, why do you ask?"

"Because that man has just been explaining that the rest of his part will be played by an understudy, as he has to go to his dining father."

Tired in the Mornings

"How do you sleep?"
"Not very well. Lots of nights I lie awake for hours, restless and fidgety, thinking about everything, but not resting or sleeping."
"Have you consulted a doctor?"
"Yes. The doctor says I am anemic; the blood is thin and watery, and the nervous system run-down for want of proper nutrition."
"Why don't you try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?"
"I don't know just why, unless it is because I thought it was only for the nerves, whereas what I need is something to enrich the blood."

"Well, that is exactly what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does. It is only by enriching the blood that you can restore exhausted nerves."
"Perhaps I should try it."
"I certainly would if I were you, for I know it is wonderful the way it helps some people who are anemic and generally run down in health."
"I am sure you will not be disappointed, and if I were you I would not lose a day before getting started with this treatment."

Keeping Memory Green.

AVENUE OF TREES FOURTEEN MILES LONG AS WAR MEMORIAL.
A scheme is on foot to plant avenues of trees in honour and memory of all Australian soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice in the various theatres of war in all the large cities of the Commonwealth. Ballarat has gone even further than this by planting the first trees of an avenue which will eventually be 14 miles in length, and which will consist of 3,912 trees—one in memory of each soldier who enlisted from the district. Each tree is to be enclosed by a substantial wooden guard with a board attached containing the name of a soldier. Those who were killed in action will have special commemorative boards. The trees are of 23 varieties, and have been chosen from the countries in which each particular soldier fought or fell.

Sounding the Deep.

The U.S. destroyer Stewart, equipped with the Sonic range finder, used for sounding at sea, has made a practical test trip from Newport to Gibraltar. The new method is closely related to radio, depending on the transmission of sound waves through water, and is employed to measure depths of the ocean. Soundings are made by measuring the length of time required for sound oscillations sent out from the ship to travel to the bottom of the ocean and back again. Dr. Harvey C. Hayes of the naval engineering technical staff, who aided in the development of the new naval equipment, is making the trip on the Steward.

Daily reports from the destroyer, indicate that the apparatus was a great success. Soundings were taken at regular intervals without stopping the ship, and indicated depths from 90 to 3500 fathoms. These soundings correspond to those taken by the old laborious method with the wire and lead, which required the stoppings of the ship for one or two hours during the operation.

NOTICE!

Paul Ritter, Esq., writes of Dr. F. G. Kinsman's Heart Tablets and Dyspepsia Powders as follows:—

About five years ago I was taken with a severe case of Heart Trouble; after taking medicine for three or four months from my regular doctor and finding no relief, I decided to try your Heart Tablets and Dyspepsia Powders. I am proud to say that they cured me and my heart has not troubled me a bit since.

Dr. F. G. Kinsman's Heart Tablets and Dyspepsia Powders are obtainable at the following drug stores: T. McMurdo & Co., M. Connors, Peter O'Mara, Stafford's Drug Store, J. J. Kieley, P. F. Shortall, The Avalon Drug Store.

At the Outposts: The Wabana Drug Store (Bell Island), The Grand Falls Drug Store (Grand Falls), E. & A. Sweetland (Botwood), The East End Cash Store (Norris' Arm), R. W. Manuel (Lewistown).
