The Mystery of Rutledge Hall OR "The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER XXVIII

Any one who had watched Sidney Daunt drive from her own home on that wintry morning would doubtless have seen only a prosperous and happy young matron possessed of all this world's goods in profusion, with nothing in the world to wish for. She lay back in her pretty carriage, letting her groom drive, wrapped in her costly dark furs, a great brass rug over her knees, a Maltese lace veil shading her face, but not concealing its loveliness; and yet, for all her outward seeming, she was a desperate woman, with a desperate purpose in her heart, who envied the poorest cottager's wife who looked out at her and courted as she passed. Young, rich, and beautiful as she was, how gladly would she have changed lots with the poor, hard-worked, ill-clad, ill-fated woman to have possessed her peace of mind!

When they reached the outskirts of Ashford, she told the man to stop, and alighted from the carriage. "You need not wait," she said, quietly. "I have some business in the town, and shall not need you again." The groom was too well drilled to show any surprise, however much he felt. He touched his hat and drove away, concluding that his mistress would drive back again with his master on his return home.

Meanwhile Sidney Daunt walked rapidly into the town. The weather was hardly tempting enough to bring any one out of doors who was not obliged to leave his or her friends, and she met but few pedestrians; but even the few she met in the quieter part of the town, through which her errand took her, glanced at the swiftly-moving graceful figure wrapper in costly furs which seemed so unfamiliar in the muddy, slushy streets. Sidney heeded little as she went on swiftly, unhesitatingly, a desperate woman with a desperate purpose at heart.

CHAPTER XXIX

At one of the windows of the first floor of the Excelsior Hotel, a man stood looking out upon the scene before him—not a very interesting one at any time, but now drearier than usual, owing to the slush and mud caused by the melting snow. The hotel stood in a small square in one of the quieter quarters of the busy little town, a square where a kind of miscellaneous market was held twice a month, where provisions, clothes, boots and shoes, crockery, and that quiet square. Closely veiled as she was, there were an elegance and a richness in her dress, which was perfectly simple, which could not fail to strike them, and, as she walked on quickly, there was a refinement, a grace in her gait which would have attracted attention, even without the costly sealskin and furs.

The commercial traveller, or rather G. Hoggood of Scotland Yard—for it was he—turned away from the window, pulled one of his packages from the corner of the room, and was busily unstrapping it upon the table when the chambermaid opened the door and announced:

"A lady for you, sir," and Sidney Daunt, closely veiled, entered.

Mr. Hoggood bowed low, desisting immediately from his occupation, and his visitor inclined her head slightly; then, as the door closed upon the chambermaid, she came forward slowly to the table and threw up her veil. "You wish to see me, Mr. Hoggood?" she said, quietly.

"Yes, madam," he answered; "I have some exquisite specimens of old lace here which I shall be happy to show you."

He spoke in rather a raised tone, and, walking softly across the room, he noiselessly slipped the bolt of the door, then as noiselessly returned to his place by the table.

"It is always best to be on the safe side," he said, quietly, noticing Sidney's glance of surprise. "One never can be quite sure that doors have not ears and eyes."

"True," she returned, briefly. Glancing at her furtively as he toyed with the straps fastening the goods that he professed to wish to sell, the change in her appearance struck him almost with as much sorrow and surprise as it had Lloyd Milner. Even her swift walk through the cold air had not brought any color to the thin cheeks, any light to the dim eyes, while her manner was characterized by the same composure and entire want of emotion which had struck Lloyd Milner an hour previously.

"Have you any special news to tell me?" she asked, in a low, measured tone, refusing by a gesture the chair that he placed for her, and not raising her eyes to his as she stood by the table, resting her little gloved hand upon it. "That is a superfluous question, after all, since you would not have asked me to meet you here had you not something to communicate."

"You are right, madam," he answered, with some significance in his voice, quiet as it was. "I should not have troubled you had I not wished to see you. I thought," he added, "that you would rather come here than that I should wait upon you at Easthorpe."

"It did not much matter," she said, somewhat wearily. "I preferred coming this morning, however. Have you—have you discovered anything?" she added, leaning heavily against the table as she asked the question.

"What do you wish me to say, madam?" he asked abruptly, looking at her keenly. "Do you wish me to tell you what I have discovered or do you not?"

At the unexpected interrogatory she looked at him suddenly with great questioning eyes full of surprise and fear. Had it not been impossible for her to grow paler than she already was, he would have thought that the colorless cheek had taken a yet more ashen hue. As it was, he hurriedly pushed a chair toward her. She did not take it, but stood facing him, her eyes fixed upon his impassive face; and there was silence between them for some minutes. The detective, with some pity and compassion now upon his quiet face, was the first to break it.

"Mrs. Daunt," he said, gravely, "when I had the honor of my first interview with you, the clearing up of the mystery which surrounds the murder of Mrs. Rutledge was a matter very near your heart. It may be that since that time circumstances have arisen which have altered your wishes. Pray sit down," he added, hastily, seeing that for a moment she swayed backward as if about to fall; but she recovered herself immediately.

"No, no," she said, hurriedly. "I am not ill; but I do not quite understand," she went on, trying to brave it out, although her dread was so great that she could hardly force her white lips to form the words.

"Are you sure you do not understand me, Mrs. Daunt?" he asked, seeing, notwithstanding all her efforts to the agony of dread she was suffering, and pitying her as he had rarely pitied any one in his self-contained eventful life.

Race 4,600 Miles for Rabies Cure

TWO BRITISH OFFICERS BITTEN IN NIGERIA ARRIVE IN LONDON.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Capt. Nicholl and Lieut. Cartwright, two British officers, have arrived in London from Calabar, Southern Nigeria, after a race of 4,600 miles against hydrophobia. Both went immediately under advanced treatment according to the Pasteur method, but it will be some time before it can be learned whether the delay incident to the voyage was too great.

The officers were bitten nearly a month ago. The dog, suffering from rabies, appeared at Capt. Nicholl's home and bit him. Lieut. Cartwright went to the assistance of his superior and was bitten in turn.

After such first aid as the station afforded, both men were ordered to London, escorted by friends. The first leg of the journey was a motor trip of 500 miles over very rough roads from Calabar to Lagos. During this trip their luggage lorry plunged into the River Niger and two servants were drowned. The party, without luggage, arrived in Lagos in time to catch the African liner Abinsi.

Both officers show the effects of the terrible strain they have been under but the Minister of Health officials who have their eyes on the case are hopeful that they can be saved from the dread disease.

Dodging the Census

It is no joke being a census official in Kenya Colony, where, according to recent reports, the natives have objected to the enumeration of the population because they think it is un lucky to count themselves or their wives. In other countries the counting of heads has sometimes presented difficulties. The first Chinese census showed a total population of 28,000,000.

It was taken to serve as a basis for the imposition of a poll-tax. Some years later another census was taken, the object this time being to organize the provision of relief in a period of famine. The population had grown to 105,000,000. Probably the most remarkable census ever taken was that of the island of Java, which are contained in Tompkins' "The Book." It gives a complete and interesting picture of the England of that day, and has been described by one author as "your honour can supply thoughts at discretion."

Wonderful! Wonderful! THE ACROBATIC FEATS OF THE LUBY TRIO.

A crowded and most enthusiastic audience greeted the Luby Vaudeville combination at the popular Star last evening, and the applause that greeted them at the close went to prove the appreciation of their work. Mr. Luby and Mr. O'Toole have during the past week shown in their musical and acrobatic feats that they are and past masters of their work, and the same may be said of Mr. McDonald, but this boy just went "over the top" last night. When we come to think, here is a legless war veteran doing tricks in a way that few of any kind in the best of physical condition would attempt is little short of marvelous; yet this one ask the question "Is he human?" To see him go through his acrobatic work, made the audience sit and wonder, and as we state at the finish the house rang with applause.

As will be seen from the ad. they are remaining over for Monday and Tuesday and in addition to this, that high class singer, Christian Holman, who will in his usual way render some classy selections. With such an aggregation it is to be presumed that for Monday and Tuesday, all roads lead to the popular Star Movie.

"Dante's Inferno" at the Majestic

IMMORTAL STORY MODERNIZED IN A MOST SPECTACULAR MANNER.

"Dante's Inferno" is the title of the super special which will be shown at the Majestic Theatre on Monday. Mortimer Judd, cruel, tyrannical millionaire, abuses family and friends until there seems to be no hope for him. Finally a business man, driven almost to suicide by Judd's oppressive methods, sends the millionaire a copy of the celebrated Dore edition of "Dante's Inferno," which describes the great poet's journey through hell. In a rage, Judd opens the book at the title page where the sender has scrawled these words, "If there is a Hell, this, my curse, will send you there."

Judd, as he breathlessly sweeps through page after page of the fearsome book, watches Dante, led by Virgil, make the famous trip through the abode of the dead. He sees sights fantastic beyond all belief; he travels through its circles of Hell, becoming more and more frightened. He decides to mend his ways—but, alas, it is too late. The curse has begun its work. His wife dies; he kills his own son and goes to the electric chair for his crime. As the deadly current is turned on, a troop of fiends from Hell rushes forward to seize his soul. He is conducted to the great judge Minos, who condemns him to everlasting punishment for his greed and hardness of heart.

Well, anyhow, the audience comes out of the theatre smiling and wiping away a glad tear, which means that Henry Otto, director, Edmund Goulding and Cyrus Woods, scenario men, have given this picture a novel and happy twist. Make no mistake about it—"Dante's Inferno" is well worth the seeing. The cast includes Pauline Starke, Ralph Lewis, William Scott, Winifred Landis, Josef Swickard, Gloria Grey, Lorimer Johnston, Lon Poff and other well known screen players. Lawson Butt plays Dante, and Howard Gaye is seen as Virgil.

Special Conference of United Church

At a political convention the first four seats are greatly desired. It seems that at all church gatherings there is general heed given to the admission in regard to "taking first the lowest seats." This may be an expression of modesty but is not conclusive either to efficiency or enthusiasm. But this handicap was not sufficient to mar the impression made by Rev. Edwin Moore's opening prayer. A reported does not even need to be an adherent of the body whose deliberations he reports to catch their spirit. It was true in this case.

Immediately after the minutes, Mr. H. N. Burt, who has been for a good many years the chairman of the Business Committee, moved the House into Committee of the Whole to consider the budget for Maintenance and Extension. Mr. Albert Soper, who is the recognized organizing expert of the denomination, presented the report. First it was shown that the amount raised last year was $40,000. The goal for the current year is $51,000. This covers Missions, Aged Ministers, Home Missions, and the several other smaller general funds of the denomination.

Mr. A. Mews, C.M.G., who had just returned from the General Board meeting at Toronto, spoke on the general aspects of the question from headquarters' viewpoint.

The increase was due to deficits on missionary operations and especially to the needs of Presbyterian ministers who had gone out for conscience sake. In some cases, Methodist ministers had given the evicted Presbyterian minister half of his own parsonage. Others with large salaries had divided their stipends. In spite of these local helps there had been great suffering on the Presbyterian side. He believed that with a little effort we could catch the inspiration, even though we had to look across to Canada to see its actual operation. We are in communion with these our brethren in the Body of Christ. The view of our church expands from China and Japan to include, because of the union interests, Africa, South America, India, and the Isles. Again, the spirit of Mr. Morris' prayer was felt in Mr. Mews' address.

On discussion of the plan of a budget was adopted unanimously. The question of the goal set, $51,000, caused a general discussion. The veterans Fagan and Newman led off. They were on opposite sides. There was no one in their fire. Mr. Howse was a pessimist, save on the missionary department. Mr. Jackson pointed out correctly enough that an "objective" ought to be taken seriously, even if it were not called an assessment. Mr. Lench as usual lightened matters up with a bit of humor, humor that was true. Mr. Will Peters was the first layman to speak. He was honest and enthusiastic. Dr. Darby spoke of the intense interest with which he had been questioned on the Union question, while in Europe the past summer. Mr. Joyce asked an illuminating question. Dr. Curtis threw himself into the debate followed by C. H. Johnson and Dr. Fenwick.

THE COLLEGE BOARD OF GOVERNORS.

On the order of the day it was proposed that the name Methodist College be changed to the Holloway College of Newfoundland, both as a convenience of nomenclature and as a tribute to a great principal. There was much discussion, the most striking speech being that of the mover, Mr. Joseph Peters, who stated that when in 1892 the old college was destroyed, Mr. Holloway received in one day four telegrams from Canada offering him a position. Dr. Macpherson seconded the motion showing how a tribute could be paid to brains rather than to money. To say more was to paint the lily. Dr. Curtis thought that the decision should be postponed because of present uncertainties. Mr. Horwood seconded Dr. Curtis' amendment regarding postponement. When explanations of procedure were fully given it was decided that this was best. It is quite probable, however, that this change of name will come about within a year or two.

When conference reassembled in the afternoon, Dr. Chown answered two questions, stating first that the maintenance fund contemplated one appeal for all denominational funds, and second, that the time and method was to be set by each local board. Mr. Bennett clarified the discussion by a well put statement. Dr. Fenwick showed that in future there would be but two classes of circuits, namely, independent and mission circuits. Dr. Chown made an impassioned appeal not longer than five minutes in length, but mighty in spiritual power. One striking sentence said, "It is a case of dollars scattered here and there against the prayer of Christ." The vast majority of the delegates sprang to their feet at the challenge of a rising vote. Others made a slower decision, rising as though they carried a weight. Perhaps in the end they will make the best showing.

Berenice Ackerman, who does a great share of the "glorifying" in the Follies.

She writes: "The hair achieves an amazingly smooth and lustrous beauty when Stacomb is used. I wish every woman and every girl could know what remarkable things this delicate cream can do."

Mr. Strothard, Secretary for S. S. work, who has been campaigning in the Twillingate District for a month, came before conference. He is one of two specialists working in about 2,000 Sunday schools east of Montreal. That is not too great an overhead charge. After five years of continuous travel, Mr. Strothard will return to the pastorate next conference. He said in part: The self expression of youth must be guided. There is a parental privilege as well as responsibility. Children's sermons and scripture memorization should be used. Worship and decision must be kept close together and the great field for both, worship and decision, is with the children and the young people. Mr. Jackson moved a resolution of appreciation for Mr. Strothard's work during the past five years. This was carried most gladly.

On motion of Mr. A. Mews, the first step toward union legislation was taken. The objectives for the maintenance fund were set so as to ask increases over last year's benevolent funds in round numbers.

EVENING SESSION.

All day as the reports of Presbyteries came in, or as matters were referred to special presbyteries, your reporter had the feeling, which is perfectly justified, that the new church is more Presbyterian in all its organization than anything else. To-night as the service opens with Psalm 121, the impression is deepened. Presbyterian organization was always good. Joined with Methodist doctrine which is fully preserved, there is going to be a strong combination.

The audience is much better and there is a choir and organ. It is ordination night. That is a spectacle. Yes, but such a solemn one and after all the crowd loves the awesome and the truly reverent. Dr. Darby led in prayer. After another hymn, Mr. Roland Baggis was called upon to speak of his call to the ministry. As a boy he was impressed with some aspects of family worship. Sunday school added its influence and led first to decision to live for God, then candidacy for the ministry. Mr. Gilbert Ivany, next spoke of a boyhood's decision at twelve and a further consecration at fourteen. A Christian home, nine years at sea, and overseas service, all left their mark.

Very solemn was the series of questions addressed to the young men. Very seriously they made their answers. In deep silence the audience prayed for long minutes that God's blessing might rest upon these men. Then responsively other prayers were said, after which the officers of Conference laid their hands in blessing upon the heads of the candidates, God's Word was placed in their hands, and their hands were taken and given in reception into the ministry.

THE CHARGE.

Jesus Christ made little of opinion but much of character. Jesus would say to those who inquired are there, millions alive who will never die, "what is that to thee follow thou me." What difference, bring men to Jesus or bring Jesus to men. Jesus and men must meet or the soul dies. To save souls there must be a baptism with fire and the Holy Ghost. Change of heart comes only by melting. The burden of service cannot be carried while the burden of sin is carried. The audience laughed at two stories and laughed audibly and then immediately were conscious, as he said the old preachers were, of the solemn presence of God. The young men must preach on "Now is the day of Salvation." They were to go into the pulpit for business. In the language of business they must learn to close contracts. Prayer was another charge. His own experience had seen a night of prayer followed by an ingathering of hundreds. Third, seek the people out. Mark those who are under conviction and seek them out. There must be conviction, repentance, conversion and consecration. These were the rungs of the ladder of experience and the old men praised the bridge that carried them over. That was testimony. Over all these things there was passion. A truth preached without passion might as well not be preached. Here for example the old hymns fitted, "I am poor and weak and blind." "My God is reconciled," and in that order.

The vision must now widen. Personal needs must lead to the perception of missionary requirements and the social application of the teaching of Jesus.

A few words to the laymen and the simple and great charge was over.

The ballot for members of the next general council resulted in no election on the first round. Mr. Vatcher

The Law's Tragic Blunders

AMAZING CASES OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

The methods of the police, combined with the high standard of the men of the force and the application of modern science, have, happily, reduced the possibility of error to a minute degree. Yet, the "very terrible mistake" as the Recorder at the Old Bailey called it, by which, on a recent occasion, an Army officer was wrongly identified as a man who had robbed a woman—and was arrested and charged—only goes to prove that where human judgment is called upon to do its part, mistakes can still be made.

The history of our criminal courts shows that, in the past, more than one innocent person, trapped in a web of circumstances, has suffered the penalty for crimes committed by others, while there have been frequent examples of innocent men sent to spend a term in prison for crimes they have never committed.

At Inspector's Error.

Many prominent lawyers have declared that no one should ever be convicted on purely circumstantial evidence, especially on a capital charge, and it is surprising how frequently reputable and honest witnesses have blundered. It is difficult enough for whole lives to be devoted to the study of crime and the criminal, to be accurate. How ordinary witness be? To say, as so many witnesses have done, "Yes, I am sure that is the man," after they have seen him for perhaps a fleeting moment, is distinctly unfair to the prisoner.

One of the most illuminating examples of a blunder in identification was told by the late Chief Inspector Littlechild—and it was against himself, too!

He held the warrant for the arrest of a man he knew quite well. He was on an omnibus, travelling in the same direction as a tram, on which he was seated, as he thought, the man he wanted. He kept sight of the man until he alighted, and then lost sight of him near Blackfrairs Bridge.

Explanations And Apologies.

Three weeks later he saw, as he believed, the same man, and took him into custody in Queen Victoria Street, at almost exactly the same spot where he had last seen him. The man offered no explanation, and behaved just as though he were guilty, until he reached the police station, when explanations by the man and his father proved that the detective had made a mistake.

After the due apologies had been made, Detective Littlechild, in Islington one day, saw, as he believed, the man he knew and wanted, but fearing lest he should make a second mistake, he introduced himself with a "How d'ye do?"

Imagine his surprise when the stranger turned and exclaimed: "I want nothing more to do with you!" It was the same man that the detective had erroneously arrested only a short time before.

It is extraordinary how many times women, after swearing that the prisoner is the "wanted" man, have been proved to have been entirely wrong.

"That Is The Man!"

In 1824, for instance, a youth named Robinson was charged before Mr. Justice Burrough with larceny from a dwelling house to the value of £4 12s.—a capital felony—and one woman witness swore, "He is the person. I have no doubt or I would not swear it." Yet another woman declared, "I know the prisoner and I am positive on my oath that he is the person." But the youth, on evidence of character, and an alibi, was acquitted.

The amazing experiences of this youth Robinson provide an interesting chapter in the history of the courts. Shortly after his acquittal, he was arrested again, and charged with stealing ten shillings, when a witness said: "I have not the least doubt of this being the man." Unable to prove an alibi on this occasion, Robinson fell on character and a mistake in identity to get him off, but he was found guilty and then respited.

He was tried again, this time before Mr. Justice Gaselee, for larceny, when witnesses declared: "I am certain he is the man." Yet again an alibi was proved, and the youth was once more acquitted.

The frequency with which this youth was arrested only to be acquitted was extraordinary, and after a similar experience had befallen him he was arrested for the fifth and last time and charged with larceny when a woman swore, "I am positive he is the man. He has a peculiar twitch with his mouth. He wears a dark olive or puce coat, a light waistcoat, a small key to his watch ribbon, and light-colored trousers."

Fortunately for Robinson this woman's minute particularity for dress came to his aid, for he was able to prove that he never possessed such clothes as he was supposed to have been wearing at the time the crime was committed.

Coincidences In Clothes.

He was recommended for a free pardon for the one occasion out of the five when he had been convicted, and strangely enough, shortly after this had been granted, the real culprit was caught.

This last example of mistaken identity bears a striking resemblance to the Beck case, perhaps the most notorious blunder the law has ever made. After Adolf Beck, a Norwegian, had been twice convicted of mean frauds on women he was granted two King's pardons and compensation to the amount of £5,000. He was first sentenced in 1895 to seven years' penal servitude and it was while he was awaiting sentence for the second time, in 1904, that the real culprit was caught.

Beck wore similar white vest slip and spats and similar patterned boots and frock coat to "Smith," the other man, and it was this which undoubtedly influenced so many of the witnesses to declare that he was the man. This shows, then, what a great deal of importance clothes play in cases of this sort, and it is fairly safe to say that if the youth Robinson had, by some freak of fate, happened to have possessed an attire similar to that described by the witness, he would never have been acquitted and pardoned as he was.

A Dying Man's Confession.

A dying confession by a waiter in a London garret revealed a tragic blunder which the law had made.

Five years before this confession, the landlord of the King's Head, Babury, had been hanged for the murder of one of his guests. This landlord was heavily in debt. One night a rich old gentleman stopped at his hotel and over drinks foolishly mentioned that he had the sum of £500 with him and hoped that it would be safe.

In the middle of the night Bradford, the landlord, with a long knife in his hand, crept into the old man's room, intent on getting the money, even if he had to kill the man for it. When he flashed his lantern on the bed he was amazed and horror-stricken to find the man had his throat cut from ear to ear.

A Charles Peace Episode.

In his terror Bradford shouted for help. Attracted by his cries, guests and servants dashed into the room, and found the landlord lying across the victim's bed with the knife in his hand.

With such evidence, no jury would acquit, and Bradford was hanged. Then came the confession, five years later, which showed that a serious error had been made. The confessor was employed as a waiter at the King's Head. He had overheard the story the rich man told the landlord and had anticipated his master in the grim deed.

Notorious Charles Peace was responsible for many foul deeds, but he was the means of saving one man from perpetual shame and humiliation. This man, William Habron, had been sentenced to death for the murder of a police constable, and was at the scaffold, for the sentence was afterwards commuted to penal servitude for life.

William was charged with his brother John, but the latter was acquitted. Yet in the court, when sentence of death was passed, was the actual murderer—Charles Peace—who confessed later that he was responsible for the constable's death. He drew a plan of the house where the crime was committed, marked on it where he encountered the constable, and also pointed out the method of escape.

As a result of this confession, William Habron was granted a free pardon and £5,000 compensation for the wrongs he had suffered.

Was He Innocent?

Another case over which the fierce fires of controversy have raged was that of Oscar Slater, who was convicted in 1909 of the murder of a Glasgow octogenarian, Miss Marion Gilchrist, by a majority verdict of nine against six.

Many prominent men, chief among them Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, have interested themselves in the case, and maintained that Slater was innocent. Here, again, conflicting evidence was given by various witnesses, and perhaps the most extraordinary thing about the whole case was that Slater would probably never have been arrested at all had he not pawned a brooch which the police believed to have been taken from Miss Gilchrist.

It transpired later that this brooch had nothing to do with the old lady, so that if he was guilty, it was a remarkable coincidence that the police were put on the right track by a false clue.

Sent Innocent To The Gallows.

One of the best known tragedies of the law, in which an innocent man was sent to the gallows, was the execution of William Shaw for the murder of his daughter, Catherine, at Edinburgh.

The girl's dying words and circumstantial evidence appeared to be conclusive (says a writer in "The Birmingham Weekly Post"), and the man was convicted and hanged for an apparently brutal and unnatural crime. It was shown that Shaw had for some time objected to the girl keeping company with a certain man, and attempted to influence her to marry one of his own friends, to whom the girl strongly objected.

She became sullen and morose when she learned that her father was determined that she should marry the man he chose, instead of the one to whom her heart was already given, and quarrels between the girl and her father were frequent.

A Terrible Revenge.

Then one night Catherine was found with her throat cut in her father's room, and by her side was her father's razor. With her dying breath she declared that her father had murdered her. In spite of his protestations of innocence, William Shaw was executed.

Shortly afterwards some letters, which proved conclusively that the father was innocent, were found. They had been written by the girl, and in them she declared her intention of committing suicide to escape marrying the man she did not love.

In order to get her revenge on her father for spoiling her romance, she arranged the suicide so that the blame should fall on him for her death—and then made certain of sending him to the gallows with her dying words.—Tit-Bits.

The picture tells a smart, sophisticated story of the manner in which two men manage their romance in life. Things are about to go to smash, and the partnership seems about to be dissolved, when the younger man discovers the state of his friend's domestic affairs. From this point the picture arrives at an exciting climax, which is said to offer many fine acting opportunities for the cast.

Pit Prop Cutting

With the forbidding of pulp wood and pit prop cutting on Crown lands or the Three Mile Limit, the first step, it is to be hoped, has been taken towards placing an embargo on the export of the raw material, and preserving for home manufacture and for use in our other industries the local product which is to-day feeding foreign mills.

A war measure, this authority was granted for a specific purpose. It was in the nature of a sacrifice of one of the country's chief assets, and like many another war measure, it was admittedly an economically unsound policy. It was continued after the war ended to provide work for the unemployed, but so badly were the operations bungled, that they produced the minimum of relief to those who were most in need, and heaped a mountain of debt upon a country struggling desperately to keep its head above water.

Such blessings, however, did these operations bring to a few—not, of course, with their connivance—that they prospered exceedingly and their fame became known through the land. The money which poured into their pockets was manna from above, their just reward for services rendered!

"They that have done this deed are honourable. And will, no doubt, with reason answer you."

To explain satisfactorily certain comments made by the Auditor General would, it is feared, be a somewhat difficult matter for these honourable men, even if they felt so inclined. Take the following, for example:—

PIT PROPS, RELIEF OF UNEMPLOYMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF SEED POTATOES.

"The above account is perhaps the most unsatisfactory, the most difficult and the most perplexed of any which I have had to deal with during my tenure of office as Auditor General. The irregularities which I found in the administration of the public fund under the above heading were so frequent in occurrence, so grave in character, and involved such large sums of money and such important principles of finance, that I was finally compelled to withhold my assent to the withdrawal of the sum of $1,000,000 allocated by the Loan Act of 1923 for the repayment of losses in that account. . . . I cannot in a report to be presented to the Legislature deal with all the matters which excited my disapproval, but I shall endeavour to set forth the most salient particulars which illustrate the general mismanagement of the account."

Admitting that conditions in the Colony were abnormal, the Auditor General remarks:—"But the circumstances do not, in my opinion, go to justify such large sums of money and such important principles of finance, that I was finally compelled to withhold my assent to the withdrawal of the sum of $1,000,000 allocated by the Loan Act of 1923 for the repayment of losses in that account. . . . I cannot in a report to be presented to the Legislature deal with all the matters which excited my disapproval, but I shall endeavour to set forth the most salient particulars which illustrate the general mismanagement of the account."

"I estimate that the loss to the colony from these several activities" comprised on this account will be in the neighbourhood of $1,500,000, irrespective of any claims for breach of contract.

Referring to the absence of vouchers to account for the moneys expended:—"It is apparent that the whole situation had got out of hand, that expenditures were being made recklessly and with little regard to the public interest, that those persons who should have been most concerned to conserve the public interest were prominent in promoting the demands made upon the Colony's purse. Total expenditure $1,679,461.41 Total receipts . . . 467,132.44

Loss $1,212,328.97

Now what became of that which was lost? That is the question which only the honourable men concerned can answer.

This remarkable Report for the year ending June 1925 has many interesting paragraphs dealing with the methods adopted of providing relief, further particulars of which will be given later. It is even more illuminating from a public standpoint, since it was not restricted by iron bound terms of reference, than the historic document presented by T. Hollis Walker.

Had Both Legs Broken by Motor Engine

Miss Annie Goodwin, of Hr. Grace, was the winner of twenty dollars in the Life Saver Guessing Contest, conducted during the Fair at the Life Saver Booth. During the evening free samples of the popular Life Savers were distributed to the many admirers of this delicious confectionery.

Motor Association

MEETING POORLY ATTENDED. The final general meeting for this year, of the Nfld. Motor Association, was held at the Sterling Restaurant yesterday, and was very poorly attended. Mr. P. E. Outerbridge, secretary-treasurer, read his reports, which showed that the past season had been a most successful one and that the Association is now in a healthy condition. A general discussion took place as to a means whereby the members would take more interest in the Association, and several plans were talked over. After the disposal of routine business, the sum of $20.00 was voted as a donation to the Permanent Marine Distaster Fund, after which the meeting adjourned.

Bread-fried in fat, or bread and butter with molasses or preserve.

Give a little cod-liver oil every day; 5. No tea; 6. Teach them to wash their hands before meals; 7. Teach them to wash their teeth after every meal. C. W. A. Oct. 31, 1925.

A Remarkable Record for Renowned Goods

ONLY ONE LADY IN THOUSANDS DOES NOT USE THREE FLOWERS.

According to the Daily News this morning, only one woman of the thousands who visited the Three Flowers Booth at the Fair did not like the dainty Three Flowers toilet preparations, which no doubt explains why this popular perfume has been called the "Odor of Universal Appeal." The manufacturers of this renowned odor have evidently hit upon a combination of flower scents of extraordinary appeal for unquestionably most ladies here as elsewhere, show a decided preference for Three Flowers. Not only perfume, but talcum, face powders, vanishing creams and many other toilettries are marketed under the Three Flowers name, all being scented with this beautiful odor. Anyone who moves in good society knows that Three Flowers Perfume and other cosmetics are decidedly in fashion to-day.

FISHING PROPERTY DESTROYED. ED.—Mr. Woodford, Chairman of the Road Board for Hr. Main, who is at present in town, reports that much damage was done to fishing stages on the south side of Bonavista Bay in the big gale on Friday last.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

October 30th.—The weather colder than it has been this fall, and a high wind, such as we have had since the season, and peeples the very warmest clothes. Peppy gives me news of the Municipal election and of new candidates knows only Mr. Smith, Dr. A. Tait and Mr. Murphy. It is little like that there will be a contest for the mayoralty. Indeed, 'tis a position that no man envies in these days when the chief task of a mayor is to keep the city's spendings within its gettings. Do find this droll child story to-day methinks is mighty amusing: Betty—"May I take my best doll to Heaven?" Mother—"No, darling." Betty—"May I take my second best doll to Heaven?" Mother—"No, darling." Betty—"Well it looks as if I shall have to take my gollivog and go to hell."

Late news of the Canadian elections do give little further information and it is now a certainty that another election will soon be held, being held whatever Government there is cannot last under existing conditions. It do seem a strange thing that one of the chief manufacturing provinces, Quebec, should support a free trade party as it has done. Too cold to go abroad this night, so I at home, and do take much pleasure from reading in the War time diary of my lord Bertie that was Ambassador at Paris during the war years.

The vessel was in ballast and took a cargo of coal to Codroy. She was on the return voyage when the disaster overtook her, and was to be delivered to Capt. Dicks, who was negotiating for her purchase. It is likely she will be refloated.

The Liquor Question

Dear Mr. Editor,
Some time ago the writer read with deep interest, as letter to our daily papers relate, to some of the effects of the present Liquor Control Bill, and hoped that many whose hopes and wishes are a clean, pure home, a prosperous land, would follow, and with pen or tongue, strive to arouse public opinion so that definite, concerted action would take the place of apparent apathy on this same question.

Again and again one hears muttering and often times loud complaining as to the prevalence of drunkenness; we see records of a few punishments meted out to unfortunate whose appetites for strong drink make them forget their duties to children or partners; we see young men who should be the pride and bulwark of our city, and men who have borne the burden and heat of the day, reeling in the streets in open daylight. We are told of the numerous bottles a day sold to men and women who desire it, and yet we see silence or merely wonder that it shall be so.

True it is, that those who framed and passed the Liquor Control Bill had set aside the Prohibition Law, which had helped provide better housing, better food and clothing for our children, were trying an experiment in my mind that experiment has been a costly one.

Who again begin where our ancestors began and strike for Bone Dry prohibition without any further delay. Are the friends of Prohibition contented? Let us arise and show by deeds and words that we are not, and that we intend to have this land a land where the King Alcohol will reign no more.

Sunday, November 1st, is World's Prohibition Sunday. Let us all unite and make effective prayer and effort, let messages proclaimed from pulpits and platforms the wide world over. Yours for our Country's good.
JEAN E. JOHNSTON.

Are Christian people one in their opinion that such change is necessary? Answer—please.

The Clark-Bourlanaque Gold Mines Limited

Dear Sir—notice a letter in last issue of your valued paper relative to the above Company, signed by a man in plain "Secularist." The name in which your correspondent speaks are most reasonable, and I shall be pleased to answer them personally if Senator calls at the Cochrane garage (excepting Sundays) between the hour of 3 and 4 o'clock. As you are aware I notified the stockholders of the Bourlanaque the day after arriving in St. John's, and through the press, that my express purpose in coming here was to reply to any questions they (the stockholders) would put to me relative to their investment and, at the same time, assure them of the soundness of the same as well as of the bona fides of the management.

Yours very truly,
FRANCIS J. HUNTER.

Infantile Mortality Correction

Dear Sir—May I correct an error in Mr. Paton's statement of the infant death rate in his lecture of Tuesday evening last when he gave the death rate per thousand for St. John's for 1924 as 190. The correct figure is 141. The rate for the first half of that year was the lowest on record, 78, but the severe epidemic of "summer sickness" in the autumn, when the death rate for August was 414, brought the rate for the year up to 141. The following figures for the past ten years may be interesting:—

1913—300 deaths per 1000 births
1914—265 deaths per 1000 births
1915—259 deaths per 1000 births
1916—264 deaths per 1000 births
1917—142 deaths per 1000 births
1918—159 deaths per 1000 births
1919—114 deaths per 1000 births
1920—126 deaths per 1000 births
1921—121 deaths per 1000 births
1922—126 deaths per 1000 births
1923—110 deaths per 1000 births
1924—141 deaths per 1000 births
1925—100 deaths for the 10 months
Miss Anderson has some interesting charts showing the rise and fall of the death rate month by month as well as yearly, which she will be glad to show to anyone who would like to see them. Thanking you, I am,
Yours faithfully,
M. SOUTHCOTT,
Pres. C.W.A.

Murder Made Easy

THE LAW'S DANGEROUS LOOP-HOLES.

Is our system of death registration a peril to the community? At the Sanitary Inspectors' Conference, Sir W. E. Collins, M.D., intimated that this, and nobody who knows the facts is likely to cross swords with him. One of the great evils of the system is that a doctor is not obliged to see the body of a person whose death he certifies, and that in consequence many "dead" people are still alive.

A medical student simulated certain diseases, for which he consulted a doctor, who was completely deceived. Shortly afterwards the patient, having disguised himself, called on the doctor, and actually got from him a certificate of his own death. Another medical man was tricked over a child he was attending for scarlet fever. Relatives of the patient, coming to his surgery, reported the child's death, which he certified without seeing the body. Only a few days afterwards he was called to the same house to see another child, and then certifies, and that in consequence many "dead" people are still alive.

Presumably the motive was fraud on an insurance company, which has undoubtedly been the object of many similar deceptions. A curious case happened in the East End of London. Two neighbours in a block of dwellings each had a child ill, and, while one of the patients was insured, the other was not. The uninsured child died in the middle of the night, whereupon the body was carried into the adjoining tenement and the insured child took its place. Next day the mother of that child reported its death, and the doctor gave a certificate, again without seeing the body. So one child was buried in the name of the other, and the two neighbours divided the insurance money. There is an even more serious aspect of this looseness. It affords great facility for the concealment of murder. No doubt in some cases a doctor's suspicions would not be aroused if he did see the body; but there is often a possibility that a trained eye would detect something sinister. A nurse poisoned her mother with atropine, and the doctor, without seeing the body, certified that she had died from cerebral haemorrhage. On such certificate she was buried; but subsequently the nurse's crime was discovered, and two other cases of poisoning were also brought against her.

Murder is made no less easy by a different kind of slipshodness in connection with death certificates—slipshodness that makes it possible for people, supposed to be living to have been buried unknown to the authorities. Roguery Without Risk. A South London coroner was once notified that in a case where he had held an inquest, his burial order could not be found. As he was certain that he had issued it, the registrar went to the undertaker. "Oh," remarked the latter, carelessly, "perhaps it is one of these."

Treatment for Cancer Improve

New York Physicians Discover New Method For More Effective Use of Radium. NEW YORK, October 23.—Physicians of the Memorial Hospital, New York, announce that by filtering out 90 per cent. of the caustic beta rays emanating from radium and the high voltage x-ray tube and using principally the heating and stimulating gamma rays, radium treatment of cancer of the tongue, lips, nose, ears, or other parts of the head, has been greatly improved. This achievement is regarded by some of the highest cancer authorities of other institutions as one of the most important advances that has been made in the treatment of cancer since radium came into use for that purpose. In the six months since the new methods has been under experimentation, more than 100 cases have been treated with what are considered very satisfactory results. Owing to the elimination of the caustic rays, much stronger application of the beneficial rays can be used and painful effects are largely obviated.

THE COURT OF KING'S BENCH IMPOSES PENALTIES.

Nine men and one woman were sentenced in the Court of King's Bench to jail terms from nine months to seven years, totalling thirty-eight years. Five men convicted of crimes of violence with revolver and knife were sentenced to seven and five years, one getting seven years each and the four others five years each. The woman convicted of manslaughter in connection with an illegal operation received two years.

A youthful chauffeur who was indicted for murder by the Grand Jury, but against whom manslaughter was returned, was the first in ten to receive his sentence. Lyon W. Jacobs, K.C., asked that the good record of the prisoner be taken into consideration by the Court passing sentence. Mr.

Justice Wilson praised his counsel for shooting his uncle over money matters. "If the immigration authorities want to deport you they will know where to find you," remarked Mr. Justice Wilson in giving his sentence.

Another man who was driving a car while intoxicated and crashed into another car killing an infant child and severely injuring others, was given a year in jail.

When the woman was sentenced she failed to hear her sentence and waited in suspense as she faced the bar of justice. The constable at her side whispered loudly in her ear, "Deux Ans." Then she heard and understood.

A poker game in a "blind pig" establishment operated by an Italiano was the cause of serious trouble with a knife and a gun in which another son of Sunny Italy got five years for the able manner in which he defended him, but told the prisoner who had killed a man by his reckless driving, that he was against the law in many ways and that the jury added a strong plea for mercy, therefore, he would sentence him to nine months in jail.

MET TERRIBLE DEATH IN MOTOR SMASH.

A youth of 20 years, of Shawinigan Falls, Que., met a terrible death when he was pinned underneath the motor car he was driving and slowly burned to death before assistance reached him. He failed to take a curve in the road near the Pont de Lile Bridge at 2:45 in the morning. The young man was caught beneath the car which caught fire when gasoline leaking from the tank became ignited. The legs were burnt from his body, as it was ten minutes before any help arrived. Three other occupants of the car were severely injured and had to be taken to the Notre Dame Hospital.

The motor party had left Shawinigan Falls en route to St. Jerome to attend the Passion Play there. The driver did not know the road and thus failed to take the curve.

THE OLD VICTORIA RINK DEMOLISHED.

The old Victoria rink built in 1882 and which enjoyed considerable patronage as a place for great and stirring hockey matches, during its sixty-two years in operation, has been demolished. A modern garage will be erected in its place.

JUDGE REPRIMANDS PARENTS.

The number of juvenile delinquents is rapidly increasing. Nothing is too large for them to tackle in the way of robbery. Last week a couple of them got away with $140 stolen from a woman. This week five boys under fourteen were arrested for stealing $1,200. They entered one of the 5, 10 and 15 cent stores and broke open the safe after discovering the combination by chance. They had a glorious time for three weeks with the money. Spending it on bicycle, automobile drives, chocolates, tips, cigarettes and the "movies." The quintette played a real abusive part in evading the police and detectives. They held a private caucus and decided to stick together on every occasion and give no information nor form friends with any others. The taxi cab driver, who was hired for the third time, informed the detectives that the leader of the gang had quite a roll of bills when he paid for the joy ride, though on the two other occasions the fare was paid in five and ten cent pieces. The detectives rounded the bunch up in a few hours, but not before all the money was spent and they were broke. Their trial comes up next week.

Three others under fourteen who appeared for stripping clothes lines and pilfering from refrigerators were returned to their parents for safe-keeping by Judge LaCroix, with a severe lecture to the parents, warning them that if they should be brought before him again, the fathers and mothers would feel the effects of the law as well as the children. "Seven clerk is had-time for children under 14 years of age and I want you to remember what I say and keep your children under proper control and don't let me see them again brought to the Juvenile Court by police detectives," said the Judge.

C.N.E. NEEDS MORE PEOPLE.

Calling himself a doctor of industry, one who devoted himself to the correction of commercial ills, Sir Henry Thornton in addressing the Association of New York Central surgeons, diagnosed the trouble of the Canadian National Railways, as a case of indigestion—too much mileage for the population served, and offered as the proper therapeutics, intense effort for immigration.

Rising to an outburst of applause after an eloquent eulogy by the chairman, Frank V. Whiting, general claims attorney for the N.Y. Central, Sir Henry insisted that the medical fraternity had no monopoly on the curing of ills and that others, with no degrees, had much the same problems to solve as accredited doctors. He was, he said, called upon to minister to the ills of industry and gave his prescription frankly.

"We are suffering from indigestion from the consumption of too much mileage," he said, "more mileage than is necessary, and the remedy is a liberal dose of immigration. When our population catches up with our mileage—if we can accomplish that rapidly enough, all of our symptoms will disappear. Had we 25,000,000 in Canada, our difficulties would cease, even though problems did continue."

LIQUOR LAWS GOOD IN QUEBEC.

Le Canada, the French morning daily, says: Since the liquor laws have been in force in our province, there has been a constant diminution in the number of cases of drunkenness; public morality is becoming more and more respectable and proper. The same cannot be said of the United States where drunkenness is becoming more common instead of dying out.

HE HAD ONLY A LITTLE NAP.

He was "broke." He had no place to lay his head. He didn't want to go to a police station, although many do so now that the nights are frosty.

"Ah, an idea," he thought. So he walked into an uptown hotel as though he owned the place, went upstairs, when no one was looking, and camped in an out-of-the-way nook.

There, house detectives found him, his coat for a pillow, his hat reposing by his side. Awakened from his slumbers, he refused to give his name or address. "I'll tell it to the judge," he retorted. He had that opportunity when charged before Recorder Semple with loitering. He said he was Victor Swanson, of Winnipeg, and on his promise to return to that city he was given a suspended sentence.

NOTRE DAME DE GRACE TO WAR UPON MOTORISTS.

Alderman Watson of Notre Dame de Grace said that the authorities have declared war upon speeding motorists and mischievous boys in his ward. There have been constant complaints that drivers of cars are exceeding the speed limits despite sundry warnings. Hereafter the police will do some intensive curbing of the speed demon's enthusiasm and disregard of the pedestrians' rights. Loss of their licenses will have a salutary effect on the pests.

Mischievous boys and cheap mashers are also due for some attention, from the minions of the law. The boys have been in the habit of stealing tomatoes somewhere and using passing cars for targets, much to the annoyance of the motorists, especially as the tomatoes are verging on the ketchup stage. These boys, after their enthusiasm for the tomato has waned, resort to stringing cord or barbed wire across the streets in an effort to test its strength against the onrush of the cars.

Cheap mashers and youths, who park themselves every evening on different corners of the ward and ogle every girl that passes by, flatter themselves that their attentions are being reciprocated and that they are the only living rivals of Ruddy Valentino, are also due for a shock. Some fine evening they will find themselves flitting with the sergeant as he inscribes a charge of loitering against them on the police blotter.

SELFISHNESS ONE OF THE EVILS OF THE DAY.

Dear Readers—Selfishness is one of the great evils that afflict modern society. The selfish person is proud, haughty and arrogant. He keeps aloof from his fellow men and gives no thought for the extending of a little kindness or happiness in the lives of others. He fails to bring a little of the sunshine of life, a little bit of heaven even to deserving cases. He has not treated others as he would wish to be treated by them. The selfish person should often meditate on the following verse:

"If I have made one weary life the brighter,
If I have eased another's toil and pain,
If I have made some comrade's burden lighter,
I have not lived in vain."

Clergy Retort to Primate

POOR SERMONS

EASTBOURNE—Are poor sermons keeping church pews empty? Whenever the official discussions at the Church Congress at Eastbourne were not in progress, clergy and laity were exchanging views on the Archbishop of Canterbury's condemnation of the inadequacy of present-day sermons.

Points of differences centre round questions whether sermons are as important as the Archbishop painted them, and whether the clergy have not ample excuse for devoting less time to them.

One clergyman with a generation of experience in an East End parish, for instance, told me:

"If a clergyman went to the East End with the belief that his rhetorical gifts would win his church a big following he would be grievously disappointed."

They want first of all a man's man, one who can be a judge, adviser, pension expert, athlete, and talker of sound common sense in an easily understandable way.

Other views included the following:

Ven. T. W. Cook, Archdeacon of Hastings: I do not agree that clergymen are too overworked to produce good sermons. It is their duty to prepare them. Everything else, such as conferences, meetings, and so forth, must be secondary, and, if necessary, must be neglected.

Puzzled Bishop.

Bishop of Winchester (Dr. Woods): To-day the parson is speaking to congregations which are often as well educated as himself and probably know more about the world. Unfortunately the parson's life to-day is so full of mechanical work that he gets no time for study and resection. How can this be mended? Frankly, I do not know.

Bishop of Chelmsford (Dr. Warrman): I agree that modern sermons are not as good as they should be. The Archbishop performed a great service to the clergy when he uttered this warning.

Rev. E. W. Mowll, Southport, next year's general secretary of the congress: How can the clergy shut themselves up in the forenoon with the present amount of mechanical work waiting to be done by them?

Take my own case. For five days a week I keep a secretary constantly employed for mechanical work, and even then am myself kept as busy as can be. Income-tax people admit this work by letting us call a household room our office.

The pressure of work results from a grave shortage of 5,000 clergy, and the position is getting worse. The petrol age is responsible largely for smaller congregations.

20-Minutes Limit.

Other views of the Archbishop's critics of sermons are:—

Bishop Welldon (Dean of Durham).—Good preachers always draw large congregations. Too many sermons are preached in the Church of England. They should seldom exceed 20 minutes.

Canon T. Houghton (Vicar of Eccleall, Sheffield).—In these days when churches are under-staffed and clergy are under-paid and unable to buy books many difficulties arise. The average clergyman has so many things to do that it is very difficult for him to devote all the time he ought to careful preparation of sermons.

Dean of Manchester (Dr. Hewlett Johnson).—A clergyman is often short of money and short of time. The best books are very costly, and he frequently has an impossibly large parish to control and too many parochial organizations to run.

Serious sermons are like serious music. Many people look on them as "highbrow" and do not turn up to hear them.—Daily Mail.

Churchill Sees Brighter Times

Outside Abnormal Conditions in Coleridge Situation Has Improved.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—(Star Special Cable by J. E. Poole, Staff Correspondent).—Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, speaking last night, declared: "Although there are many cases of anxiety, there is no justification for panic-stricken, methodically exploited cries of pessimism and alarm." He pointed out that there had been no increase in unemployment for five months. Yesterday's returns showed a diminution of nearly 40,000 in a week.

Outside of the abnormal situation in the colonies, there actually had been a decrease of 150,000 unemployed in other trades. Revenue officials had advised him that for the next three years he need not expect anything remarkable, but might expect a gradual improvement in income taxation.

The consuming power of the population was increasing steadily, he said. So far as private thrift was concerned, the people's deposits in savings and other banks had increased, and the sale of national savings certificates showed a net increase of £7,000,000 sterling. He believed there was a great probability that things would get better in the next year.

The newly arranged Locarno agreements are certain to give a decided fillip to the courage of the masses of Britain as well as to business men and financiers.

How often do you clean your teeth?

The frequent washing of the teeth with a pure, non-gritty dentifrice, is just as important as the regular use of a good soap on the face and hands.

For the preservation of good looks as well as good health, the teeth MUST be cleaned night and morning, and, if at all convenient, after every meal too.

Colgate's cleans teeth the right way. Its non-gritty chalk removes clinging particles of food, while its mild, pure soap gently washes them away, leaving the mouth pleasantly refreshed.

Its delightful flavour encourages regular use.

Treasures for Twopence

ROMANTIC BOOK BARGAINS.

The discovery of a valuable book of poems among some old volumes that had been sent as waste paper to a London firm of booksellers is an interesting even in these days, when so few rare treasures of art and literature remain concealed for any length of time from the keen eyes of prying book collectors.

Now and again, however, priceless copies of literary masterpieces turn up under romantic circumstances in the most unlikely places, and a trifling outlay secures for the lucky finder a volume worth its weight in gold.

The untidy counters and "odd lot" boxes of second-hand bookshops have been prolific sources of such literary treasure-trove, and many a rare and coveted work found in these unpromising surroundings has later become the gem of a public or private collection.

Some years ago a blacksmith noticed an odd-looking volume lying among some others on a second-hand book-stall in Camden Town, and out of curiosity bought it for one penny.

When he got home, one of his lodgers, to whom he had shown his purchase, remarked that it looked a valuable book, and suggested taking it to the British Museum to have it valued.

The blacksmith ridiculed the idea, but after persuasion took it to the Museum, where he was astonished to receive an immediate offer of £20 for it. The volume proved to be a copy of the first book printed by Gutenberg in the fifteenth century.

Another romantic find was the Coverdale Bible, one of the most valuable books in the British Museum Library. It was bought by a book collector from a butcher, who was delighted to set ten shillings for it, as he was on the point of tearing out the priceless pages to use them for wrapping up his meat!

The keen eyes of another amateur collector secured for him a literary bargain which for long had escaped the notice of the less observant. He had been rummaging unsuccessfully among the littered shelves of a second-hand bookshop, and was on the point of leaving when he kicked accidentally two small volumes lying on the floor.

They were taking the place of a missing castor to support an old table, and the collector, on picking them up, found them to be the first edition of "The Vicar of Wakefield." He bought the lot for four-pence.

Even more romantic, and, incidentally, more profitable, was the astonishing find of an art dealer in Antwerp, who had been called to a house to value some picture. He had to climb six flights of steep stairs, and on the way up he sat down to rest on one of the landings.

Bound With Human Skin
Happening to glance into a poorly furnished room, he saw a table with an old book supporting one of its legs, and his practiced eye noticed that the volume was bound with human skin. He bought it for four-pence.

parchment made from human skin. Closer investigation revealed the astonishing fact that the book was a very old Latin work, only three copies of which were known to exist. The woman occupant, who could neither read nor write, informed him that she had picked up the book because it was just of the right thickness to keep her table steady. The book was sold, and the dealer and the woman shared £10,000.

Twopence was the price paid not long ago for the eleven numbers of Thackeray's "Snob Papers," and a penny secured a first edition of Milton's "Lycidas," which was valued at £40.

Credit of Mme. Casares

NO EVIDENCE AGAINST WHISKY SHIP LADY.
WHY CHARGE OF FRAUD WAS INSTITUTED.

Formal proceedings at Marlborough-street brought to an abrupt termination the charge against Mme. Gloria Casares, part owner of the whisky ship General Serret. It was alleged against Mme. Casares that on May 23 she obtained by false pretences from Messrs. Selfridge, Ltd., Oxford-street, two-piece gown, valued at 14 guineas. No evidence was now offered against the lady, and the charge was withdrawn, and she was acquitted in a crowded court. On the charge sheet she was described as a married woman, aged 29, and an Argentine subject, of Trent-gardens, Old Southgate, Middlesex.—Mr. Walter Frampton, for the prosecution, stated that on Sept. 14 a warrant was issued for the arrest of Mme. Casares. The false pretence, and the only false pretence set out in the information, was that she represented to Selfridge's that she had an account there. On May 23 of this year Mme. Casares went into the gown department and selected two gowns, a 14-guinea and an 8½-guinea one. The assistant asked, "Have you an account, madam, or will you pay cash?" "Oh, no," replied Mme. Casares. "I have an account." Thereupon a bill setting out the details of the purchase and the price was presented to her to sign, and she signed it "C. Casares." She gave the address "The Cottage, Neasden," and as she signed the account remarked, "You had better take my other old address, because the account may be at Moorgate Hall." She Took The Two Gowns With Her, and a few days later returned the 8½-guinea one, saying it was not considered suitable. The only account Messrs. Selfridge had containing the address of Moorgate Hall was one in the name of E. N. Casares, and in due course the account was rendered to E. N. Casares. Mme. Casares' father-in-law, He wrote saying that he was not responsible for it, and that no one had authority to obtain goods in his name. Inquiries were then made at The Cottage, Neasden. It was unfortunate for Mme. Casares that she was not found there, otherwise those proceedings would never have been decided upon. No doubt that was her address when she gave it, but they could not find her there. On those facts action was taken, but it had since been ascertained that in 1922 Mme. Casares had an account at Selfridge's, in respect of which litigation resulted, and at the end of that litigation the account was automatically closed. Mme. Casares heard nothing of this, but from that time onwards Selfridge's had never had an account with her and never intended or proposed to give her one in the circumstances. There was a time when she gave orders from Moorgate Hall. That was before 1922. Selfridge's ascertained that she had not been informed of the closing of her account, and took the view that she might well have thought she was still on their books. They were further impressed by the fact that one of the dresses was returned voluntarily, and in these circumstances they did not think any jury ought to convict. Counsel accordingly had been instructed to offer no evidence.—Sir Henry Curtis Bennett, for the defence, also pointed out that Mme. Casares had had an account at Selfridge's. She had not been informed of the closing of that account, which was automatically terminated in 1922 owing to certain litigation.—None of these big shops gives long credit in these days, commented the magistrate. "She had had nothing for three years."—"I hope it is clear that this lady leaves the court quite clear of an allegation of fraud," urged Sir Henry.—"Certainly," replied the magistrate.—Mme. Casares was then discharged. With a little smile she left the court and jumped into a taxi-cab.

SENSATIONAL WRESTLING.
DENVER, Colo., Oct. 24.—Wayne "Big" Munn, the Nebraska giant, pinned the shoulders of Joe "Tooth" Mondt, Colorado cowboy, to the mat twice in forty minutes and won a spectacular wrestling match here last night.

One spectator, Dr. George T. Richmond, of Denver, dropped dead from excitement just before Munn captured the first fall.

Corinne Griffith
Love's Wilderness

In "LOVE'S WILDERNESS"

THE FIRST NATIONAL ATTRACTION we see CORINNE GRIFFITH in the greatest dramatic role of her entire career. It's a picture that every woman longs to see. A story of a Bigamist. Married two men—and both of them meeting when true love calls to her. Such a picture as only an actress of Miss Griffith's ability could play and such a film as only First National can produce.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

WHAT IS A HAPPY DISPOSITION?

What do we mean by a happy disposition? We all know the person who is always cheerful and contented. He is the one who is always smiling and who is always ready to help others. He is the one who is always happy and who is always contented. He is the one who is always smiling and who is always ready to help others.

Perhaps the contented disposition is really the happiest. Or is it? To be dissatisfied is to be unhappy, so surely to be satisfied is to be happy. Yet if you are dissatisfied that means that you have wants to gratify and when you gratify them that gives you happiness. But only for a little while. Then you are dissatisfied and unhappy again. Whereas if you have the contented disposition you are not always reaching out, you are happy with what you have. I suppose the true answer is that it's a matter of lights and shadows. You can't get the high lights without some of the shadows of contrast. And you have to decide which you want most, even brightness, or high lights and shadows. Or rather your disposition has to decide for you. There's one thing about a contented disposition that you must make up your mind to. It is not associated with driving force. I know a woman who complains because her husband hasn't a contented disposition. She wishes he had that easy going, contented disposition that makes her best friend's husband such a delightful companion. Nevertheless she is proud of her husband's business success and she thinks would be unwilling to surrender the ease and luxury it has brought her. And his dissatisfied forward-reaching disposition is largely what has made him successful.

No Care And No Shirt.

Do you remember the old fable of the king who was told that if he could wear the shirt of a man who was perfectly happy he would be cured of his melancholia? He sent his courtiers out to find such a man. They finally found him but he proved to be a homeless wanderer who had nothing and wanted nothing. Incidentally, he had no shirt. So the king was not cured. Now that man may have been a great joy to himself, but I have my doubts if his family considered him an asset.

New Europe Will Arise From Parley

FACE CERTAIN TO BENEFIT GERMAN, IS HERR STRESEMANN'S BELIEF.

Locarno, Switzerland, Oct. 17.—Exchanging congratulations over the most successful of post-war conferences, in which old enemies met—equals and each nation was benefited and satisfied, Europe statesmen, who yesterday initiated the treaty of Locarno, are indulging in a round of ceremonial dinners before leaving for their homes.

The Germans, with thoughts of revenge cast behind them, and the way open to new credits and industrial rehabilitation, are leaving to-night. The French, who at last have a pledge of security, and the British, who have laid a new foundation for trade with Europe, go to-morrow.

"That harmony was achieved on such a broad basis in the construction of all the treaties, even the delicate Polish-German convention, came as a surprise to all the participants in the deliberations."

"We were carried off our feet, and seemed pushed forward to success by some mysterious constructive force," was the way one of the delegates described the situation. Dr. Stresemann, the German foreign minister, joined M. Briand, France's foreign minister. In declaring that Locarno must mark the beginning of a new era in the peaceful development of the lives of nations, based on mutual confidence and good will.

"A new Europe must arise from Locarno," said Briand. Then, referring to Germany and France, he added: "Between our two countries there remain indications of the friction of mis-understanding. The pact signed to-day must be a balm for these wounds. All difficulties must pass away."

With reference to France's occupation of the Rhine, M. Briand said that Life has many ways to travel, and it's difficult to choose. And the joys we pray so hard for seem to come to us in the most unexpected ways. Success that's told in money, any banker's clerk can add. But God may judge the father by the failure of the lad.

When at last my time is ended, that I'm poor I shall not mind, if there's something to be proud of in the son I leave behind. I can say I wasn't clever, wise men thought my judgment bad, but I didn't fail the youngster in the father that he had.

Classic Education

This slight sketch is the outcome of a desire to probe to the bottom a prejudice which surely is a detriment to the cause of progress. I refer to the antagonistic attitude which does actually exist in the minds of most people as to the value of a classical course in our schools.

The term classical is used rather loosely and one is tempted to express the belief that by far the greater number of folks who are so intense in their opportunity to the higher education quite fail to grasp the purpose and meaning of the classics as a course, and as a result there seems little use in contending against the critics the bulk of whom are to be found among those who in their own early days suffered through the handicap of limited educational facilities and who, though they wish to secure for their children the best that is going in education, yet are ready on all occasions to criticize the methods and personalities of those to whom they entrust the training of their sons and daughters. As to this innovation which we term the higher education one would like to reason out just what the term implies, and find a definition such as the Headmaster of one of our schools would employ, were he asked by some honest enquirer to give a solid reason in support of the classics as a scholastic course. His reply would in effect be something like this:

The chief aim of a classical course is to foster in youth a love for the best work of the greatest minds of our oldest civilizations, and to impress upon the minds of students that culture is only another word for development, which may well be upon quite different lines than we have been used to study. And indeed one might easily add surely the Headmaster of any school is well qualified to decide on his own authority what subjects are of most benefit to his pupils as a course of study, although, indeed the man in the street may hold pronouncedly opposite views. However, the result of each educational year is to break down the barriers between education and industry felt everywhere.

In the Greece of the ancients there are names which even to this day stand out like jewels defying the ravages of time; and these men were noted as much for their accuracy as for their profundity of learning. Among these great men exactness of detail and thoroughness was as their mainspring of action. Youth and intelligence are the only gifts worth having, and one may conclude with the words of the great Horace, "make the best of youth's little hour, and take small inconspicuous with a smile." To this one would like to add be faithful to your employer and see to it that you will be considered worthy to sign a bigger receipt for your salary each year, and so one closes, fearing lest one's enthusiasm may lead one to occupy too much space dealing with a subject which has of late been so ably dealt with by rather distinguished educationalists. And indeed one is sometimes tempted to ask rather gloomily, is the game worth the candle?

War on Winged Death

STAMPING OUT THE MOSQUITO PERIL.

The recent opening by Sir Ronald Ross, the great authority on tropical diseases, of the new British Mosquito Control Institute, on Hayling Island, Hampshire, has shed light on a remarkable undertaking.

For some time past there have been carried on in the island researches and experiments that may go far towards stemming the mosquito plague not only in this country, but in those tropical regions where it is an unrelenting menace to human health and life.

Five years ago, a Hayling Island resident, Dr. J. F. Marshall, now Director of the Institute, determined to combat a serious plague of mosquitoes that occurred in the locality. The insects bred in stagnant pools and ditches, and Dr. Marshall found that the best time for dealing with them was in the larva stage—that is, before they took to the air as fully-fledged insects.

Oil Film Facts.

With the help of a small army of residents, among them a number of school children, Dr. Marshall caused to be deposited on the surface of pools and ditches a film of oil, which prevented the larva from rising for air. In this way the plague was stamped out, and to-day a mosquito is seldom seen in the district.

At that time it was concluded that the film of oil brought about suffocation of the insects by excluding the air. Recently, however, it has been found that what happens is that the oil destroys a certain fatty substance that normally prevents water from entering the larva's breathing organs, so that the insect is actually drowned. The point is one of interest to scientists; all that the layman need note is that the oil film "does the trick."

A Blood Parasite.

It was not until the middle of last century that insects were proved to be carriers of disease. In 1850 Dr. Laveran made the important discovery that malarial fever is caused by a minute parasite in the blood. The disease had been connected from the very earliest times with stagnant pools, but it was not until the 'nineties, when Sir Ronald Ross was carrying out his epoch-making researches, that the mosquito was definitely found to be the deadly intermediary.

Following this, Colonel Gorgas, of the United States Army Medical Service, went to the Panama Canal zone with orders to combat the mosquito plague that was ravaging the country for many miles around, and resulting in the death of hundreds of people and almost complete paralysis of the work on the canal.

Colonel Gorgas's men sprayed with paraffin oil every pool and every damp spot they could find, until in a few weeks the only cases of malaria in the canal region were those contracted before war was declared on the pests that caused them.

Two wealthy bootleggers have met the blackmailers' demands and fled, says the Herald and Examiner today. Dan Perry, wounded recently by assassins who escaped, made settlement and fled to Florida, while another bootlegger, whose profits are placed by the newspaper at $1,000,000 in the last few months, paid

New Light on the Mound Builders

The Prehistoric Mound Builders are in the news again. Near the town of Bainbridge, in southern Ohio, excavators have discovered what is probably the most remarkable tomb of this vanished race that has ever come to light, writes Dr. E. E. Free, editor of The Scientific American, in the New York Times. In it lie, he tells us, the skeletons of four persons, evidently nobles or chieftains of distinction. Two of these skeletons wear helmets of hammered copper, among the most precious of all objects to the warriors of the Mound Builder days. Fragments shell, as well as some composed of bears' teeth, a prehistoric forerunner of the familiar elk's tooth of today. Most remarkable of all, the Bainbridge graves contain a great profusion of pearls, some of them reported to be as much as a half-inch in diameter. Evidently the great men who were buried here so many centuries ago went to their graves surrounded by all the greatest gifts which their compatriots could provide. Even from the partial preliminary accounts of the burial which have been published so far, it is apparent that American historical science has been enriched by a discovery of high interest and importance. Dr. Free goes on:

"Racially the Mound Builders were merely Indians. The majority of the pipes, pots, tools or weapons found in the Mound Builder graves might have come from any Indian workshop. But in some of their arts and customs the Mound Builders were very different from the Indians of Columbian days. These Indians built no mounds; they worked metals very crudely, if at all; they had no great liking either for gold or for pearls; they did not carve stone. The Mound Builders did, and liked all these things. Furthermore, there are facts which suggest that they had a religious ritual and a political organization quite different from that of the Columbian Indians. How are we to account for these traits and Customs? Whence came the engineering skill and the constructive enterprise which led an Indian race to build all those thousands of mounds?"

"It is probable that both the customs and the enterprise came into the country as the possession of a class of foreign rulers. These rulers were probably never very numerous. In the beginning they were not especially warlike. Yet they had much power over the native Indian population; enough power to command the labor of many men to erect the mounds and to gather the treasures which have been found in the tombs like that now discovered one at Bainbridge."

"This power was won and held, we may believe, by what the Indians remembered as 'magic.' We would call it science or engineering. These mound-building rulers from outside the Indian country knew things—useful things—which their Indian subjects did not know. They knew, for example, how to predict the seasons; that is, they had a calendar which fitted the motions of the stars and of the sun. They knew of Indian corn and how to grow it best. They understood irrigation and the use of fertilizers. It is probable that they had knowledge of medicinal herbs and of a rude kind of surgery. No wider basis would be necessary for a reputation of possessing magic power. It is probably four of these ruler-scientist-magicians who lie buried amid their copper and their pearls in the grave at Bainbridge."

"From what country did these rulers come? In all probability, thinks Dr. Free, they came from the great Empire of the Mayas, once a highly civilized and well-organized power in what is now southern Mexico and Guatemala. Why did they come? It is suspected, he says, that they came as adventurers, as mining engineers, as merchants. They were seeking gold and copper, turquoise and mica and pearls—always, and everywhere, the pearls. He continues:

"The presence of pearls in the Bainbridge graves and in other Mound Builder tombs is no accident. It was the reason, many scientists think, for the mound-building Mayan rulers being there at all. 'In the rivers and streams of the eastern two-thirds of the United States there lived, in prehistoric times, a vast profusion of the pearl-bearing mussel. Prof. W. J. Perry, the distinguished British anthropologist, is chiefly responsible for the suggestion that in these mussel beds of the streams of Eastern North America was one of the great pearl fisheries of the ancient American world, an industry quite comparable in magnitude with the present-day pearling of the South Seas."

"Directing these ancient fisheries, organizing the trade in pearls with the home cities of Maya land, equipping and conducting mining expeditions to the copper deposits of the Lake Superior country or to the mica mines of western Tennessee were scores of promoters, captains and engineers who came. Professor Perry believes, from the Mayan cities. These were the rulers whose traces we find, who trained and directed the Indian population, whose magic kept them safe from red-skin hostility, whose rituals of worship or of burial caused the erection of the famous mounds."

"Gradually the Indian country was made a colonial empire of the Mayas, just as it became, between 1500 and 1700, a colonial empire of the European Powers. From the multitude of mounds that have been left to us we must imagine that it was a great empire and a busy one. Some of the mounds were erected, we know, as tombs. Doubtless most of the Mayan colonists and rulers were buried thus. Other mounds appear to have been ceremonial places or temples, similar to the stone pyramids which existed in every Maya city and many of which have been preserved. Still other mounds appear to have served as forts or protected places. In much the same way, we doubtless did the later blockhouses of our own pioneers."

"If we are right in accepting Professor Perry's idea that the Mayas colonized Eastern North America for the sake of the pearl fisheries, these colonists must have retained, for a time at least, a certain degree of contact with home. Pearls gathered at the present site of Louisville or of Columbus would be shipped back to the Mayan cities. Copper ore, or even melted copper, would go along. In return would come knives of obsidian, objects of hammered copper like the two helmets of the Bainbridge graves, beads of turquoise, fine cloth from the Mexican looms, probably a hundred other articles so perishable that we have not yet found any trace of them. 'It is even possible, indeed, that

What Social Betterment Costs Britain

$5,000,000,000 Expenditure in 5 Years—
Annual Cost Equals Total of Pre War Debt.

The British national government is now expending upwards of £150 million a year in various forms of social betterment. Grouping together expenditures of this character by the national government and local authorities (that is, cities, towns, counties and other minor civil divisions) for the five years which have elapsed since the commercial crisis of 1920-21, the aggregate over a thousand million pounds sterling according to the figures just completed by the Foreign Information Service of the Bankers Trust Company of New York. At par of exchange, that is equivalent to five thousand million dollars—an average annual expenditure as great as the total of our pre-war debt. In the five year period, apart from other current running expenses, nearly £400 million went for education; £240 million for old age and other civil pensions, for health insurance and for unemployment insurance; £220 million for the poor relief of the unemployed, in addition to the payments from the unemployment insurance fund and for £200 million for housing, road building and land settlement. In addition these expenditures £441 million were used for pre-war war pensions and for their industrial re-education.

Expenditures for social betterment by the national exchequer alone have grown in the last century much more rapidly than have expenditures as a whole. In 1835 Great Britain expended £50 million for all national purposes and of this sum only £13 million went for social betterment—on their poor relief. Total disbursements for the present fiscal year are expected to be about £697 million, of which nearly 27 per cent, say £186 million, will be devoted to social betterment.

THE HISTORY OF A CENTURY.
The interest in the betterment of the condition of life for the working classes has a history of just about a century and may be dated from Sir Robert Peel's factory act of 1802, which was followed by other remedial legislation for improving the conditions of the mines and factory workers. In 1815, 1819, 1825, 1832 and at frequent intervals since then.

In 1839 the first appropriations for public education were made by parliament. By 1858 there were a million children in public schools while today over five million enjoy the benefits of free education at a yearly cost to the state and to local authorities of some £50 million.

As early as 1841 the first steps were taken for improving the condition of the homes of the work people. This legislation was followed by legislation which steadily made for better factory housing conditions, until, in 1919 the local authorities became directly responsible for the housing of the working classes and provision was made for generous financial assistance from the state.

of pensions to insured men and their wives, and insured women, upon obtaining the age of 65; of pensions to widows of insured men; allowances to widows of insured men in respect of certain children; the pensions in respect of orphans of insured men and women. The scheme is established upon a compulsory contributory basis and applies to about 15 million persons. The benefits are provided from contributions paid by the insured persons and their employers, supplemented during the first ten years by grants from parliament. The new scheme is grafted on the old non-contributory scheme. Mr. Churchill explained that his object was eventually to put the scheme on a full contributory basis and thereby to reduce to a minimum the burden of the taxpayer, but he pointed out that in the interval the £26 million which the non-contributory scheme cost last year would be increased so that in the 26th year the new scheme would cost £21 million, the old scheme £56 million, bringing the total up to £77 million, after this date the tide would turn in favor of the exchequer. As against this growth in the cost of the old pensions, Mr. Churchill pointed out that the cost of war pensions would steadily decrease and would be virtually extinguished in 50 years. How fast these are running off may be seen from the fact that war pensions and war veterans industrial rehabilitation cost the exchequer £112.4 million in the fiscal year 1920-21 and £101.3 million; £85 million, £72 million, £70.5 million, respectively, in each subsequent year to 1924-25, with an estimated expenditure for the current fiscal year of about the same amount as in 1924-25.

HEALTH AND UNEMPLOYMENT SCHEME.
The year 1911 is notable as the time from which dates two of the most important measures of social betterment which have been put upon the statute books of Great Britain. The national health insurance scheme and the unemployment insurance scheme. National health insurance is administered by the Ministry of Health through authorized friendly societies and local insurance committees. It applies practically to the whole industrial population of some 15 million persons. There are four types of benefit; namely, medical benefit, which provides a doctor's services and medicines from the beginning of the time the person begins insurance; sickness benefit which, provided the recipient has been insured for 26 weeks, entitles a man to a pension of 15s a week, or a woman 12s a week for 55 weeks, after which these qualified receive disability benefit if they are still unable to work. This disability benefit is at the rate of 7s 6d a week, dating from the end of the sickness benefit, or until the age of 70 is reached. The act also provides maternity benefits. The total cost of benefits and the administration of health insurance is about £6 million a year. In addition to its functions as administration of the health insurance scheme the Ministry of Health carries on other activities which conserve the health of the population at an added expense of about another £6 million.

LOYD GEORGE'S SCHEME EXTENDED.
Perhaps the most startling departure from the methods pursued in other countries was the contributory unemployment insurance scheme set up by Mr. Lloyd George at the end of November, 1911. This scheme applied, in the first place to only four groups of trades; building, construction of works, shipbuilding and mechanical engineering. In those employments 2 1/2 million men at once became insured. The scheme functioned at a cost of about a million sterling in the terms of the original act until 1920, in the fall of which year it was extended to practically all industrial occupations, except agriculture and domestic service, and by further modifications under the terms of the act of 1924, the scheme compulsorily applies to nearly 12 million persons who, after three days unemployment, if no suitable work is available, are entitled to receive 18s a week if a man, and 15s a week if a woman, with additional allowance of 5s a week for a dependent wife or husband, and 2s a week for each dependent child. The annual income of the fund is now about £50 million sterling, of which about £27 million is received from the employers and employees, in nearly equal amounts, and £23 million from the exchequer. On account of the unusual amount of unemployment following the commercial crisis of 1920-21 for two years the fund was operated at a loss; the receipts for the year 1920-21 amounting to about £12 1/2 million, whereas expenditures were £24 million, and in the following year receipts were £42 million and expenditures nearly £53 million. The amount required to make both ends meet was advanced by the exchequer as a loan. The highest point was reached in March 1923 when the amount due to the exchequer from the fund was £17 million. By September 1924 the amount due had been reduced to £4,670,000, but since that date the contributions have again been unequal to the burden, so that the fund at the close of June of the current year owed the exchequer £8,100,000. A very interesting feature of the collateral services rendered by the Ministry of Labor is that through employment

"WHILE ON DUTY as a police officer in Boston, I was hurt in an accident and lost a large quantity of blood. When able to be up I found myself in a weakened, nervous, and anemic condition. My condition grew worse. In the meantime my neck and back broke out with boils. I tried about every possible remedy without success. One day a friend suggested that I try Fleischmann's Yeast. I did. In two months my boils had completely disappeared. In two months time I was starting to feel like myself. Today my health is the best it has ever been."
William B. F. Lee, Dorchester, Mass.

"CONSTIPATION was my deadliest foe. I always had the tired, sluggish feeling characteristic of this ailment. Impaired appetite, a sallow complexion and pimply skin also contributed to my misery. After fighting this condition for years, I gave up in despair. My mother was employed by a prominent Boston physician who recommended Fleischmann's Yeast. I finally consented to give it a trial. I continued for two months, when I noticed a slight change. At the end of the fifth month I had regained my lost vigor and my appetite had improved wonderfully. All signs of ache had vanished and the tired feeling was gone—thanks to Fleischmann's Yeast."
Lawrence A. Perry, Medford, Mass.

All around you people know this secret

"I AM THE OWNER of a grocery store and recommend Fleischmann's Yeast especially to my customers who mention having indigestion or nervous trouble. Because it was when I had those troubles myself that it so much helped me. Life was a torture to me. I started using Fleischmann's Yeast with only a half-hearted hope that it might help me. In two months I was eating and sleeping normally. Today I have better health than I ever had before. In fact I believe I am in perfect physical condition, and that Fleischmann's Yeast has been a great factor in helping me gain that ideal condition."
Mrs. Robert Carr, Toronto, Ont.

Clear eyes, strong bodies, a new zest in living—all through one simple fresh food

Not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research booklet on Yeast for Health. The Fleischmann Company, 201 Duckworth Street, St. John's, Newfoundland.

"HAVING MARRIED somewhat late in life, I soon found myself doing daily the thousands of physical tasks it is necessary for a mother of four children to perform, at an age when most women are able to conserve their strength. I looked and felt at least ten years older than other women my age. I was not broken-spirited, but I must admit I was disappointed in myself. I did not want to take medicine. To make a long story short, I began to take Fleischmann's Yeast. And when we found that it was toning up my system and rebuilding what I had unwittingly torn down, the cake of Fleischmann's Yeast acted as a leaven to the whole lump of happiness at our house."

exchanges which are functioning all over the country those unemployed are registered and are assisted in finding suitable work.

The burden of the employer and the employee for the three schemes of social insurance; namely, health insurance, old age, widows' and orphans' pensions, and unemployment insurance is comparatively light, amounting at normal rates, in the case of men to 2s 6d a week, 1s 5d for employer and 1s 4d for employee, and in the case of women, to 2s 2d a week, 1s 2d for employer and 1s for employee. The employee is in each case provided with a card and at the end of the week the employer is required to affix stamps to this card equivalent in value to the amount due to the fund. These stamps the employer purchases from the appropriate government agency. He is entitled to deduct from the amount of wages paid the employee's share of the contribution, but is forbidden under heavy penalty from deducting the share which the employer himself is required to pay.

WILL CHURCHILL'S SCHEME DEVELOPED ACCORDING TO PLAN?
The schemes for social insurance, The Bankers Trust Company observes, have come in for a great deal of discussion and on the part of some people there has been considerable adverse comment. The unemployment scheme especially comes in for adverse criticism; payments out of the fund to recipients being frequently spoken of as "doles." It is too soon to determine whether these latter schemes are going to prove to be workable, and to achieve the purpose aimed at by their authors; namely, to prevent poverty by inculcating thrift and by educating the people during their productive year to set aside a portion of their earnings for their protection when sick or out of work and when old age arrives. With the exception of the non-contributory phase of the old age pensions, which as explained above will gradually disappear when Mr. Churchill's scheme becomes fully operative, there is nothing in the nature of a dole connected with these schemes, but it is true that a certain amount of money from the public exchequer is used to supplement the contributions of employers and employees. It was probably necessary to arrange for such contributions in the earlier years of the operation of these schemes, but it is quite conceivable that as time goes on it may be found possible to somewhat increase the contributions of the benefited and by employers, and gradually to reduce the contributions from the state. The whole scheme of social insurance is more of less daring, and more or less untried, in a tentative stage of development. The manner in

I would like to instruct the Colleges and Schools in St. John's City. I will call at the Colleges and schools and give one lesson each week to every pupil for 12 weeks, for the small sum of $2.00 a pupil; would also like to instruct the schools in outside towns and villages. Will call at every school once a month for three months, and give every pupil 4 lessons and instruct the teachers how to guide the pupil through the 4 weeks' lessons. Would do all of this for the small sum of $1.00 a pupil. I don't see any reason why this could not be arranged. Now I am making this a special offer to Newfoundland. I will leave this to the public to think it over. It would only take me one year to improve the population of Newfoundland 100% physically; six months to wake you up, and six months to teach you. I could easily arrange offices and training room, where I could give four thousand lessons to classes daily and give every pupil proper exercise to improve his or her body 100% if he would follow my instructions. Of course this requires great thinking power and wonderful physical endurance. If you doctors, lawyers, clergymen, business men, and men in every profession and walk of life, were built up physically you would find that your success would be much greater in life, you would find that you would be able to set aside some of your little worries, fears, and about everything else that was in your way. I am talking from experience. I would like to see you short time and if you would like to look, feel and act like a real man, I can help you. Will you let me develop that little neck, arms and limbs of yours? If you are too fat, I can reduce you without overworking you; it is a pleasure for me to teach you. Don't be shy about starting your first lesson. Most all of the leading men and women in the world to-day endorse physical culture. Can you make an effort to help yourself. I instruct personally in classes and by mail to all parts of Newfoundland, full three months course for the small sum of $10.00.
Special notice to the people in Bonavista, Elliston, Catalina, Port Union and Trinity East:—I will be performing in Bonavista Friday night, October 30th; Elliston, Saturday night, October 31st; Catalina, Monday night, November 2nd; Port Union, Tuesday night, November 3rd; Trinity East, Wednesday night, November 4th. It is well worth your while to see this performance once in your life. Bring your small children and let them see the performance, they will always remember it. I guarantee you a real good time.

Halifax Chronicle, Oct. 27.
TEXAS CO.—PHILLIPS PETROLEUM.
Combine Would Be Rather Logical Step for the Companies Viewed From Trade Standpoint.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—While the oil trade is hearing considerable talk and rumors of a merger of Phillips Petroleum Co. into Texas Co., with an exchange of stock reported as basis, heads of the two companies refuse to deny or confirm whether the trade is being discussed.

Basis for merger talk results largely from reports from the independent district that Texas Co. has engineers looking over the Phillips properties. In addition, such a combine would be a rather logical step from the trade position for the companies.

Texas Co. is one of the largest independent oil organizations, with completely rounded-out facilities, starting with production and running through to world-marketing position. Phillips is primarily a producing organization, with its properties mostly centered in the light districts of Oklahoma and Kansas. In addition it has the largest facilities for production of casinghead gasoline, representing about 20 per cent of the country's total of 2,000,000 gallons a day.

Should a merger develop Texas Co. would immediately add daily crude oil output of about 30,000 barrels and thus bring its own crude production closely in line with its large refining needs. Phillips not having any refinery or retail marketing stations of its own, there would not be any element of duplicate facilities to be worked out.

Texas Co.'s capital consists entirely of 6,578,000 shares of $25 par. Phillips has $2,000,000 bonds and 1,925,666 shares of stock.

Few Years Ago
MOST POPULAR PRODUCT, TO-DAY

Up to a few years ago very few families in Newfoundland used Crisco, the pure vegetable shortening. According to the records of the Company very few shipments of Crisco found their way to Newfoundland until recent years. When the present local representative took over the Crisco Agency, only a few grocers were handling the line and some of these expressed the opinion that Crisco would never be a big seller in this country on account of the price being higher than charged for other shortenings. An aggressive newspaper advertising campaign was then launched and as soon as Newfoundland women were made acquainted with Crisco's superiority and its economical qualities, the product became a fast seller. It is without question the biggest seller in Newfoundland here to-day. Not only in St. John's but all over the Island has Crisco become popular, and there is little a settler here who does not have in Newfoundland a tin of Crisco cannot be obtained now. Women who cook say Crisco has many advantages over ordinary shortenings, and cooking butter. It neither makes nor smelt, and is always pure and sweet, never becoming rancid. To the superior qualities of Crisco and the aggressive newspaper advertising put behind it, Gerald S. Dote, the local agent, attributes the spectacular success which this product has achieved on the Newfoundland market in the short space of a few years.—Oct 31, 1925

Not a Case of Conscience

In connection with the theft which occurred at Cochrane Street Church on Wednesday evening we are informed that the bag taken was not returned by the culprit, but was picked up in the churchyard by Miss Violet Squires, who handed it to the caretaker and received a reward. Everything was intact in the bag. Evidently the thief, disgusted with having lifted the wrong receptacle, decided that it was not worth keeping.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR SPRAINS

BOYS' AND GIRLS', READ THIS!

You know the Majestic Theatre will give a Pony to the Boy or Girl who gets most votes in the Pony Contest. This will tell you how you can get thousands of votes without much trouble, so read this carefully.

If you have any Lux Packets, Sunlight Soap Wrappers or Swan Soap Wrappers, or Red Balls off Lantic Sugar Packages, keep them safely until the Pony Contest starts. Go right now to your grandmothers, your aunts and your other relatives and friends, and ask them to save up their Sunlight Soap Wrappers and Swan Soap Wrappers and empty Lantic Sugar Packages for you. Ask them also for Hudson's Super-Soap Packages. Why, if you have only one each of these 5 articles you will have 500 votes right away.

You won't have any trouble collecting Lux Packets or Sunlight Soap Wrappers; everybody uses Sunlight Soap and Lux. If you find anyone who doesn't use Swan Toilet Soap, tell him or her that Swan Soap costs only 10 cents for a large cake. Swan Toilet Soap is made by Lever Brothers, who are soap makers to His Majesty the King, so it must be good Soap. Swan Soap is white as snow and it floats. You'll find it easily when you're taking a bath. You won't have to dive for it, 'twill be floating on top.

The Red Balls on Lantic Sugar Packages are easy to get; the best shops sell Lantic. People who want really clean, pure sugar, free from germs or dirt, always buy Lantic. You know Lantic Sugar, in full weight 2 and 5 pound packages, comes direct from the Refinery to your table unsoiled by contact with anything unclean. Each package is sealed, dirt cannot get into it. You'll get 2 Red Balls on every package of Lantic granulated, and 2 on every package of Lantic Icing.

Tell Your Friends Lantic Icing Sugar is Best for Christmas Cakes

Now let us tell you about Hudson's Super-Soap Powder. It costs only 3 cents. You ought to be able to get a lot of these empty packages. This is the part you want, the front part

Hudson's Super Soap Powder is Made in England

It is real powdered Soap. No sand or lime in it, and it may be used for soaking soiled clothes in. No boiling is necessary.

For washing greasy dishes and greasy dish cloths, you cannot get anything better than Hudson's Soap and Soap Powder.

It is great for washing windows, it makes 'em shine. In fact you may use Hudson's Soap Powder for any purpose that you use soap.

'Tis cheaper than any soap for scrubbing floors. You know how quickly a cake of soap melts away in a tub of water or on a wet floor.

All you have to do with Hudson's Soap Powder is sprinkle a little of the powder on the floor and wash off with a wet cloth or a mop.

HUDSON'S

SUPER SOAP

IT'S SO EASY YOU REST---IT WORKS

Go ahead now collecting Lux Packets, Sunlight Soap Wrappers, Swan Soap Wrappers, Lantic Red Balls off the Lantic Sugar Packages and Hudson's Super-Soap Package Fronts.

If you have any in your possession now, keep them carefully; they will all count. Next week, when the Pony Contest starts, you will see an advertisement in this paper, headed—

Swan Soap

Look out for that advertisement. It will tell you what to do with your wrappers, etc.

DON'T DELAY—COLLECT ALL THE WRAPPERS, etc., you can and keep on collecting them every day while the Pony Contest is on. Get busy now!

Each Sunlight Soap Wrapper that you get will give you 100 votes. Each Swan Soap Wrapper will give you 100 votes. Each Hudson's Super-Soap Package Front will give you 100 votes. Each Lux Packet will give you 100 votes, 50 for the front and 50 for the back.

Each large Lantic Red Ball that you get off an empty Lantic Sugar Package will give you 50 votes. There are two large Red Balls on each package, so you get 100 votes for the 2 Lantic Red Balls.

In addition to the votes which you will get for the Wrappers, etc., you will get an extra thousand votes every time you or your mother, or anyone of your friends buys a dollar's worth of Lux or Sunlight Soap, or Swan Soap, or Lantic Sugar in Packages, or Hudson's Super-Soap, or any assortment of these goods, provided you have a Swan Soap Coupon with you when you are buying the dollar's worth of goods. You will get one of these Coupons at the Majestic Theatre when the Pony Contest starts. We shall tell you more about it in the Swan Soap advertisement next week.

Don't be deceived by anyone who tells you that other soapwrappers or other sugar brands will give you the greatest number of votes in the Pony Contest. They won't.

Take care, then, to get Lux or Sunlight Soap or Swan Soap, or Hudson's Soap Powder, or Lantic Sugar pkts., and look out for the Swan Soap advertisement later.

Go right ahead now and collect Wrappers, etc., mentioned above. Watch for the Pony Contest Banners which will appear in all the merchants' windows.

The Favored Four

Because of Supreme Quality, New Performance
Results, Advanced Engineering, Superior
Workmanship.

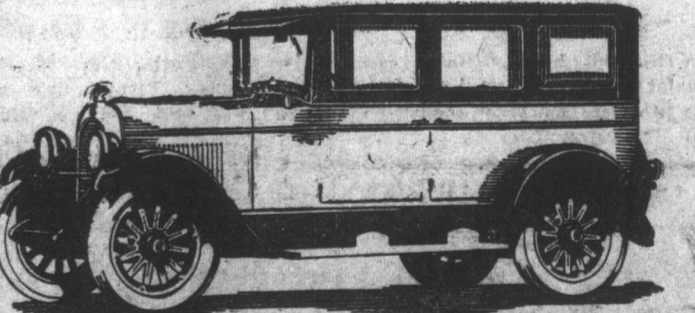

Out of Chrysler engineering and manufacturing skill come the extraordinary performance and value of the Chrysler Four—plus quality and beauty never before equaled in its price class.

The Chrysler Four is, in the most precise sense, a fine car—fine in principle, fine in materials, and fine in its standards of manufacture and assembly.

It is built with painstaking care, and to a degree of accuracy and precision, heretofore unknown among cars of its price—in the most modern and scientifically equipped manufacturing plants.

Obviously, when such quality is combined with the unusual roadability which results from Chrysler designed spring suspension and balloon tires; with low center of gravity, pivotal steering and the option of Chrysler hydraulic four-wheel brakes to give utmost safety; and with Fisher bodies for maximum comfort—the result is unsurpassed motor car value in the thousand dollar class.

Everywhere, men and women who know motor cars are favoring the Chrysler Four. Women, who like fine things, say it is a delightful car to drive and to ride in. Men are enthusiastic over its extraordinary performance, its economy and its durability.

AT THE FAIR

The Industrial Fair, after a successful run of twelve days, closes at 11 p.m. to-night. The attendance yesterday afternoon and night was very good. It is expected that large numbers will be present for the close as several changes in displays have been made during the past few days. One of the attractions last night was the Crisco Booth, where a French chef was telling all about Crisco. Whilst not talking the chef conveyed volumes with his eyes and moving lips. It is an ingenious electrical contrivance and well worth seeing. Last night seven door prizes were offered, the lucky tickets being ticket No. 5012, 10 lbs. Orange Pekoe Tea; ticket No. 5109, 1 case Dorothy Milk; ticket No. 5833, 1-2 dozen gramophone records, from Hutton's Music Store; ticket No. 6281, a Christy hat, from Geo. F. Kearney; ticket No. 5257, 1 gallon Matchless Paint or Floor Enamel; ticket No. 6336, 2 lbs. Necco chocolates, donated by M. J. Keam, won by Beatrice Moulton; ticket No. 5292, baby grand range, supplied by W. J. Clouston, won by Daniel Coombs, 24 Mullock St. Beatrice's prize was won by Miss Inkpen, on ticket No. 1016; Thursday's prize for ticket No. 318 was won by Mrs. Chipman, Flower Hill, but Wednesday's prize for ticket No. 833, is still unclaimed. The prize of twenty dollars in the Life Saver guessing contest was won by Miss Annie Goodwin, her guess being the first correct guess registered at the Life Saver Booth—1160—that being the number of packs of Life Savers in the case. This contest was a very popular one, over 7,000 persons registering their guesses. After the announcement last night, complimentary packages of Life Savers were presented to all visitors to the Fair. Those who have entered for the various competitions, such as the essay on Ayre & Sons Booth, and the guessing competition for the Ingersoll watch, the error competition at Geo. F. Kearney's booth, etc., are asked to have their entries placed as soon as possible.

Our Dumb Animals

REPORT OF THE CHIEF AGENT,
WEEK ENDING OCT. 30.

Read a message from Mr. Cantwell of Cape Spear informing me that he had in his possession, a pony, that he had found wandering around the Cape grounds, in the stormy weather, and asked him to take it in and I would advertise it. I have been informed by Mr. Cantwell that Mr. George Ross has taken possession of the pony. I am very thankful to Mr. Cantwell for his great kindness, and care. I have seen Mr. Ross about the pony. Attached to the landing of forty head of cattle from the S. S. Hethpool. The cattle came through all right, the cattle were carried between decks and were very comfortable. Also attended to the landing of 80 head of cattle, 12 horses, and a lot of sheep, pigs, and poultry, from the Canadian Sapper, 2 of the sheep died on the passage. All the cattle were taken immediate delivery of. Attended two sales of cattle at the St. John's Abattoir Co's premises, weather conditions were very unfavourable for cattle, being so long on the wharf, it is very necessary at this season that cattle should be under cover. Humanely put to death a horse for Mr. Haty, Freshwater, this horse had been suffering from internal trouble. Also a horse with an injured leg, that was ordered to be put to death by Dr. Bishop and another horse belonging to Mr. Hing Lee of Casey Street. It had fallen on Prescott Street and was reported by the police, it had been taken into the Imperial Mfg. Co's yard where I called Dr. Bishop's attention to it. He said that the pony was past its labour and ordered it to be put to death, the owner said for having it carted away. I also put to death three unlicensed dogs. Spoke to several drivers for leaving their horses out late after work. I am very thankful to the police for taking this matter in hand. Ordered in a horse belonging to a firm on Water Street, also one belonging to a man on the higher levels. All complaints as far as I know have been attended to. I wish to thank all who are taking an interest in the dumb animals and I hope that the sale at the Canon Wood Hall for the benefit of the S. P. A. will be well attended.

J. BARTER,
Chief Agent.

"So this is Your Birthday, Grandmother."

"YES, dearie, I am seventy-five years old to-day. It doesn't seem possible, for I don't feel old."

"And you certainly do not look old. Besides, you are always so happy and cheerful that you do not seem at all old."

"A woman is only as old as she looks, you know, and I have always tried to keep young and healthy."

"And were you never sick, grandmother?"

"Oh, yes, indeed, there was a time in my life when I never expected to live to be fifty, say nothing about seventy-five. When your mother and my other children were small I had my hands full and got run down in health. I got so nervous that I could not sleep and had frequent headaches. Every little thing the children would do seemed to annoy and worry me until, finally, I gave out entirely, and was in bed for months with nervous prostration."

"Did you have a doctor?"

"Yes, dearie, I had two or three doctors, but they only told me that it would take a long time for me to regain strength. One day your grandfather came in with some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. He said some one told him that it would restore me, and he went away to the drug store and bought half a dozen boxes."

"What did your doctor say about using it?"

"Well, what could he say? He only said that he had done all he could, and that he had run across a great many cases in which the Nerve Food had been used with excellent results. So I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and it was not long before I was on the way to health and strength."

"And did it make you well?"

"Well, the best evidence is that I am here to-day, well and happy, after all these years. And I am more than ever enthusiastic for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for I have used it several times during the last few years when I felt that I needed some assistance to keep up vitality. As a person gets older I think their blood gets thinner, and they seem to need something like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to increase their strength and vigor."

"That is something worth knowing, grandmother."

"If you will take my advice, dearie, you will not forget about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when you get run down, tired out and nervous. This has been my advice to a great many people, and I know that it has done them good."

Woman's Life in Mombasa

The routine of daily life is never dull for a woman in Mombasa, the "key" to Kenya. At 5:30 o'clock in the morning you will be awakened by your personal boy. He comes in, unties your mosquito net, and places your tea tray upon the table by your bedside. As he pours out tea and milk he inquires, with all the solicitude in the world, whether "Memsahib has slept well?" Then as he moves deftly and noiselessly, bare-footed and clad in a spotless long white shirt and cap, about your room, collecting your white shoes and your topee (sun-helmet), you lazily drink your tea and bid him hurry with your bath. Half an hour later you are calling for your topee and your shoes, which your boy has cleaned and put in the sun to dry.

Golf Before Breakfast

When you are dressed you can go for a round of golf on one of the finest links in the world. At 8 a.m. or thereabouts you arrive home, breakfast heartily on popo—a delicious fruit, similar to, but nicer than, melon, which, by the way, contains enough quinine to keep you safe (you hope) from an attack of malaria—and bacon or eggs or fish later, with home-grown coffee excellently brewed. Afterwards you send for the cook and write out your "chits" for him to go shopping at the bazaars. "Chits" are notes which you allow to accumulate at the butcher's, the baker's, and the grocer's till the end of the month, when everyone comes to be paid. Any directions concerning the day's meals you give to your cook before he departs, because he likes to know how he stands as regards his leisure hours.

The lunch hour for everyone is always at noon, because then the sun is at its very hottest. After lunch every living creature, man and animal, takes a siesta. At two o'clock the machinery of life begins to work again. There are many little things to be seen to in the house, sewing to be done, letters to be written, or a journey to be made by rickshaw to the bazaars to buy materials for dressmaking.

Tea is served at four o'clock, the hour when all the offices close. Everywhere there is a feeling of alertness in the atmosphere. The golf caddies congregate in front of the club house waiting for their sahibs and mensahibs. The tennis courts begin to fill up, and on the sports club verandah women chat together. Goggles are the heavy-looking topees and blue or orange sun glasses. Smart hats from home adorn the heads of the women, whose eyes give the impression that tropical life is essentially a healthy one.

At Sundown

Sundown comes suddenly at six o'clock, when, either in club house or home, nearly everyone partakes of sundowners. Too soon comes dinner, the chief meal of the day, and after dinner come bridge, music, and dancing, until once again it is time to draw down the indispensable mosquito net upon the affairs of the day.

Are the citizens of St. John's satisfied with existing conditions? If not, why are they silent?—oct21,11

Who do you think, Little Jack Rabbit? Fans who read my stories in the papers and in my books, as I ended yesterday's story, came and the Nutting Picnic? Why, Professor Jim Crow. Under his wing he carried his Wisdom Book and on the end of his long beak a pair of spectacles. Stopping for a moment to watch the bunny boys and rabbit girls fill their sacks and baskets with the beech nuts which the kind Ranged Rabbit Giant had shaken from the tree, he suddenly saw:

"Wait a moment. I needs must look at page 23 in my Wisdom Book." Then opening it, he turned to page skidob and read aloud: "Farmers fatten their pigs in the autumn by turning them into the woods. Beech nuts are the very best food for pigs. Beech nut bacon is highly prized, and the pig that feeds on these nuts is worth more than a pig who eats only corn."

"Ha, ha," laughed Little Jack Rabbit, "on the way home I will stop at the farmyard and tell the Kind Farmer to bring his pigs up here." "Better leave a few on the ground," advised the wise old crow. "Don't make him a lot of trouble for nothing." Then away flew the professor bird, after closing his Wisdom Book with a clap and his long black beak with a snipperty snap.

By and by when all the sacks and bags were filled, the little rabbits started to hop back to the old ferryboat. But, isn't it strange. They had gone but a few hops, maybe a dozen or two, when back came Professor Jim Crow. "Wait a minute," he cawed, "I must read you something more. A little knowledge every day will make you wise when you are gray," and he opened his Wisdom Book, and he read, until all the little rabbits girls and bunny boys were quietly seated on the grass. Then turning to page 24, he began.

"Most of us who have tried to eat the acorns from an oak tree have found them very bitter. But the nuts from oaks with finger-pointed leaves are sweet and good. Only the oaks with spiny-lobed leaves bear acorns that are bitter and unfit for food."

"Thank you, Professor Jim Crow," cried Little Jack Rabbit, politely lifting his khaki cap. "I will have lots of new things to tell Mother to-night when the stars are shining bright," and away he hopped, his little knapsack bouncing up and down on his back and his red-striped candy cane swinging from his left paw for just then the old ferryboat whistle blew loud and shrill.

"Thank you, Professor Jim Crow," cried Little Jack Rabbit.

"Hurry, hurry," advised Cousin Cottontail, as her five little bunnies stopped to pick some wild flowers, "we must not linger a moment here, or we'll miss the boat. I very much fear."

So on they hopped, aunts and mothers, big sisters and grandmas, until, pretty soon, not so very long, they reached the dock to which was moored the Billygoat's nice old ferryboat, and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.
