How Churches Mark Coming of New Year

Dwing to Sabbath Dawn of 1911, Methodists Hold Special Morning Services

-Watch Night Observed in Few Anglican Churches - Old Hymn Inspiration

Once every seven years the first of anuary is ushered in on Sunday, and his momentous happening takes place o-day. In consequence of this, the amiliar custom of ushering in the New Year with watch-night services is been abandone dby a majority of the churches of Toronto, with the ex-

The Methodist denomination all over city have mutually agreed to make specialty of the regular Sunday morning service, that has been the stom every New Year's Eve for the st six years. The clergy of the difent Methodist Churches have also anged for a general exchange of pits t the Sunday evening seres, in order to bring about a deninational feeling of solidarity and therhod in preparation for the man Alexander revival meetings Not Their Custom.

The viaduct across the Don at Bloor nd Danforth is the cheapest improvement before the people, and will pay for itself from the start. This hymn will be sung in Toront-Protestant churches this morning: O God, our help in ages past, Our hope for years to come; Our shelter from the stormy blast, And our eternal home.

TO THE BUSINESS MEN OF TORONTO

Wouldn't it be a nice thing if the business men of Toronto, the financial men, the manufacturers, the importers, the railway men. the men in the insurance companies and the loan companies and all our other large concerns, who are benefiting now by the marvelous growth of this city. were deliberately on New Year's Day to give Toronto a black eye by voting lack of confidence in its future, and voting against the by-laws which will be submitted to

Just think that over: that a few sore newspapers are asking men to give the city, which they pretend to have confidence in, a black eye on New Year's morning. The World does not think that you will do it, but that you will go out, and, as men who have confidence in your town, show it by voting for all the bylaws and a new year of progress.

TWO OPINIONS THAT COUNT

F. H. McGuigan has the reputation of being the leading traffic expert in Canada. He says that the Bloor-street viaduct cannot be built too soon in order to accommodate the business of Toronto.

"There will be such a pressure of business there in a short time," he said, "that even an additional bridge—perhaps the diagonal from Wellesley-street -will be necessary."

He regards the Winchester-street level crossing in the Don Valley over both the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk as absolutely calling for an overhead bridge.

Vote, therefore, for the viaduct on the testimony of a man with the reputation of Mr. McGuigan.

A member of the Builders' Exchange and a representative of a prominent loan company were talking together on Saturday, and they said to The World: "You can tell the voters of Toronto and the workingmen that in our opinion the mere passage of the bylaw for the Bloorstreet viaduct will be immediately followed by the greatest boom in building over the Don that has yet been in Toronto. And this business will be all additional to what is in prospect to the north and to the west of the city. It is just so much more business for everybody. As to the cost of the viaduct, it will more than pay for itself, and never will be a charge on the public."

I take this last opportunity of saying that the Bloor-street viaduct bylaw, if carried-in fact, all the bylaws, if carried-will give a lot of work and wages to the workingmen of Toronto.

These bylaws are in the shape of bridge building, road-making, harbor improvements, street railway building and sewer improvements. In fact, nearly every dollar of all of them will go for wages. More than this, the whole building trade of Toronto will be stimulated by new houses to be erected over the Don the moment the viaduct is in sight. What does this mean for the building unions? I think I can also ask my friends who are on the police force, who are in the firehalls, the letter carriers, the men of the railway brotherhoods, to take my word for it that these bylaws are all in the public interest, and that every patriotic citizen ought to vote for them.

Review of Significant Events of 1910

The year 1910 will go on the record as, relatively, one of the most uneventful in the history of the world. It has been a year of peace and of some notable peaceful triumphs.

And of some notable peaceful triumphs.

Pre-eminent amongst the great world events was the session of The Hague Peace Tribunal to adjudicate on rival claims of Great Britain and the United States re fishing rights in Newfoundland. This dispute was of a century's standing, and had given rise to many irritating incidents, yet the two greatest nations of the earth were content to submit the question to a tribunal consisting of independent jurists. The fight was by men of legal acumen and wit rather than by men of war. The decision of The Hague Tribunal has been accepted by both parties without a murmur of objection. Surely the nations are at last learning the inventor of war.

parties without a murmur of objection. Surely the nations are at last learning the insanity of war!

Movement for Universal Peace.

To its lasting honor, be it said, that the United States of America and its foremost citizens are taking the lead in investigating the possibility of a permanent armistice between the nations, leading eventually to disarmament. Congress, during 1910, appointed a commission on this subject, appropriating $10,000 for the expenses involved. Andrew Carnegie is now devoting himself largely to the promotion of permanent peace between the nations. It is noteworthy that Great Britain and the United States having kept the peace for practically one hundred years, a movement is on foot to have some form of celebrahundred years, a movement is on foot to have some form of celebration of this glorious record.

Rationalism and Republicanism.

The movement towards Rationalism in France has been followed by Portugal. Rationalism and Republicanism appear, in the estimation of the Latin nations, to be true hand-maidens of liberty. Portugal has abolished the monarchial system by a practically bloodless revolution, has separated Church and State, and has secularized education. And already Spain has shown signs of a restiveness that is causing much alarm to King Alfonso and his ministers.

Aviation Records.

Of special significance is the record of aviation successes during the year. Some marvelous feats of aviation have been accomplished and already the airship is regarded as a potential factor in peace and war. Flights across country and across water have proven that, even in the experimental stage, the airship is much more than an interesting in the experimental stage, the airship is much more than an interesting mechanical toy. Bleriot's pioneer aviation trip across the English Channel was merely a nine days' wonder, so quickly was his flight reduplicated by other aviators. Other records that might be mentioned duplicated by other aviators. Other records that might be mentioned are: Paulhan's trip of 23 miles across country and return, at Los Angeles; a flight by the same aviator of 125 miles across country in France; Glen Curtiss' flight from Albany to New York; Moissant's trip from Paris to London; Glen Curtiss' record flight of 60 miles over water; Chanez's trip across the Alps. Other important events in the aviation world were the feats of high flying, all attempts in this line being capped by Drexel, who soared to 10,000 feet. Count Zeppelin did some pioneer work in utilizing dirigible balloons for passenger carriers. The attempt met with a great deal of success altho several of the balloons were put out of business by serious mishaps. Walter Wellman made an unsuccessful attempt to cross the Atlantic, being rescued at sea by an ocean liner.

United States Politics.

Some extraordinary developments occurred in United States politics. Notable amongst these was the setback to Cannonism, Speaker Joe Cannon of the United States House of Representatives being ousted from the all-powerful committee on rules and narrowly escaping loss of the speakership itself. All of which was made possible by a revolt of Republicans against the odious tyranny of the party achine." Later in the year the Democratic party swept New York

"machine." Later in the year the Democratic party swept New York in the state elections, despite the strenuous efforts of Theodore Roosevelt on behalf of the Republicans. Of special significance also was the movement for closer trade relations with Canada, which led to conferences between Secretary Knox and Finance Minister Fielding.

Gatherings of World Interest.

Early in the year a great convention of Sunday school workers from all parts of the world was held at Washington, U.S.A. Justice McLaren of Toronto was appointed vice-president. No less significant was the World's Missionary Congress, held at Edinburgh, Scotland, and attended by representatives from every Christian Church, except the Roman Catholic.

Of more than ordinary interest was the trip of Theodore Roose velt to Africa, and his heart-searching talks to the nations visited on

During the year such leading personalities as Mark Twain, Dr. Koch, Florence Nightingale, Prince Francis of Teck, Mrs. Mary B. Eddy, Count Leo Tolstoi and Dr. Goldwin Smith passed from the stage

Reference must also be made to the great flood which did $200,000,000 damage to Paris, and the earthquake which caused the death of 1500 persons at Cartago, Spain.

King Edward Passes.

The outstanding feature of the history of the British Empire was the death of Edward the Peacemaker, in May of 1910. The announcement of the passing of the King and the occasion of the obsequies caused such mourning as the world has never before witnessed at the cessation of a single human life. King George V. was proclaimed to succeed his great father.

The modification of the Coronation Oath to satisfy the demands of

The modification of the Coronation Oath to satisfy the demands of British Catholic subjects, and the establishment of the Imperial India Council, to satisfy the increasing demands of the King's Indian subjects for an amendment in their form of government, are significant of broadening influences at work in the minds of imperial statesmen. Late in the year the federation of the British possessions in South Africa was signalized by the opening of the first parliament of United South Africa at Capetown by the Duke of Connaught. Botha, the erstwhile leader of the Boers in the war with Great Britain, was first premier of the new confederation. premier of the new confederation.

During April of 1910 the parliament of the Dominion decided to create a Canadian navy.

During April of 1910 the parliament of the Dominion decided to create a Canadian navy. Two ships, the Rainbow, for the Pacific Coast, and the Niobe, for the Atlantic Coast, were taken over from the imperial authorities and tenders were also called for for the construction of four "Bristol" cruisers and six destroyers.

Canadian Politics.

Drummond and Arthabaska election provided the political surprise of the year, the Liberal candidate being defeated by the Nationalist, mainly on the naval question.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier made a record political trip thru the west; Hon. W. Fielding was presented with $120,000 in securities; stringent regulations were passed to keep out undesirable immigrants.

The abortive strike of G. T. R. trainmen, The Herald disaster at Montreal, the announcement of the plans of the C. P. R. to spend $1,000,000 on irrigation in the west, the announcement of an I. C. R.

surplus of $600,000, and the inauguration of the Hydro-Electric System of Niagara power and light at Hamilton, London and Preston were important events of 1910.

Canadian Church Congresses.

Special mention must be made of the three great church congresses held in the Dominion during the year. At Montreal the Eucharistic Congress called together many eminent Roman Catholics, the Pope being represented by a special delegate, Cardinal Vanutelli. The Methodist Church held a general conference at Vancouver, B.C. An important change was made in the discipline and Dr. Chown was appointed as associate with Dr. Carman in the general superintendency of Canadian Methodism. The Anglican Church celebrated the bi-centenary of its work in Canada by a great gathering of its dignitaries at Halifax, N.S., where the new Cathedral of All Saints was dedicated.

During 1910 virtually all the Protestant churches of Canada voted

RING OUT, WILD BELLS.

Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky, The flying cloud, the frosty light; The year is dying in the night; Ring out, wild bells, and let him die

Ring out the old, ring in the new, Ring happy bells, across the snow; The year is going, let him go: Ring out the false, ring in the true.

Ring out the grief that saps the mind For those that here we see no more; Ring out the feud of rich and poor, Ring in redress to all mankind.

Ring out a slowly dying cause. And ancient forms of party strife; Ring in the nobler modes of life, And sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out false pride in place and blood, The civic slander and the spite; Ring in the love of truth and right, Ring in the common love of good.

Ring in the valiant and the free, The larger heart, the kindlier hand; Ring out the darkness of the land; Ring in the Christ that is to be. -Tennyson

TO THE CITIZENS IN AND AROUND TORONTO

We wish you all a most Happy New Year, and trust that yours may be a generous portion of Toronto's growing prosperity in 1911.

On Monday the New Year brings to you all a Civic Duty-a Home Duty---that you can discharge with the ballot. When this duty is presented at the ballot box, take the opportunity of being a Greater Torontonian and vote for all the by-laws that will develop a Greater Toronto.

Cast aside any petty inclination to vote for only that by-law which affects your particular part of the city; but be broad-minded and vote for the general development of the entire city--east, west and north.

The Toronto of Yesterday expanded to the Toronto of To-day, because the Torontonians of Yesterday acted upon their vision of a Greater Toronto. Greater Toronto of To-morrow depends upon YOU broad-minded men to provide the bridges, the roads and all improvements for the city as a whole, and not as a fraction.

Don't allow a tiny tax cinder to prevent the eye from viewing the larger and more beautiful city, wherein your property will be greatly enhanced in value and convenience.

Meet the New Year at the Ballot Box on Monday and wish your City of Toronto, Prosperity and Growth, by voting for Better Roads. Bloor Street Viaduct, Storm Sewers, Increased Hospital Accommodation, Street Railway Extension and an Improved Harbor for 1911.

ball player that most of the fans imagine he is indifferent as to the result of games. The fact is that it hurts him as much as anyone to lose. He seldom kicks, but once he made a kick at Tim Hurst-whereby hangs this tale.

Patrick Henry was at bat late in the game, when a hit means a lot and he was anxious to deliver the safe drive. He played the pitcher out to the limit, and, with two strikes and three balls called, he eighted down the groove ready to spank the ball squarely between the seams. He saw the ball shoot five inches away from the corner of the plate, let it go, and started to trot to first base. Imagine his surprise when Hurst said: "Strike three; you're out."

He pleked up his bat and remarked:

Nagging umpires often gets to be a fine art. It requires an artist to get away with it. One of the reasons that the crowd always thinks the umpire is exceeding his authority when he chases an offending player off the field is that the player who really hurts the umpire's feelings is the nagger, who seldom does anything that amounts to much, but keeps at it. For instance, many spectators have criticized Klem for banishing Johnny Evers of the Cubs often, many times, seemingly, without cause. Evers seldom speaks to Klem, yet Klem has put him out of games oftener than all other umpire's capital and J. A. McNevin.

Farmers' Co-operative Store, Limited, Springbrook; capital $10,000.

The Port Rowan and Rural Telephone Controller T. L. Church will probably be re-elected. Last year he was a few votes from the head of the poll. Few can show, such a list of public measures, in the interests of the people carried, and reforms introduced.

Amongst the gayest of gay lives is that of the "bush league" umpire. This is a tale of the joys of an umpire's existence, and of the ways of southern justice, writes Hugh S. Fullerton.

There is a pitcher, Reagan, we'll call him, who now is in another league. He is of nerve and courage, with a temper that fits the Reagan exactly.

A season or so ago he was pitching for Mobile. A few days ago I met him, and back somewhere in the dim recesses of memory was the recollection that he had some trouble down south.

"What was that row you had?" I asked.

"Say," he said, "wasn't that the rawest"

pires combined. The chief reason is this:
Once Klem made a bet with Evers. He bet Evers & that he (Evers) was afraid to call on the president arrived the wager, and was waiting at the office when the president arrived the next morning. and spent a couple of hours with him. He claimed to call on the president arrived the next morning. And spent a couple of hours with him. He claimed to call on the president arrived the next morning. And spent a couple of hours with him. He claimed the wager. Klem did not pay promptly, so for weeks, every time Klem looked at him, Evers held up five fingers and look. Klem paid. Then he carried the $5 bill in his uniform, and waved it at the umpire every chance he got. Finally that wore out, and Evers began to look at Tinker every time Klem came on to the field, memory was the recollection that he had some trouble down south.

"What was that row you had?" I asked.

"Say," he said, "wasn't that the rawest"

And yet they wonder that unpires existence, and on the Evers was afraid to the league. Evers accepted the wager, and was waiting at the office when the president arrived the next morning. The league. The east end boys to did very well during the first half, but faded as the game progressed. Teddy has gathered together, a fast young team that will be hard to beat. This club have been championship contenders for some tirne, and this may tenders for some time, and this may be their year for the ribbon. Happy New Year! To bowlers, one and all, we extend the compliments of the season, and here's that in the year just dawning your scores may never be low and that your errors and splits be like the proverbial hen's teeth—few and far between.

The closing week of the old year was a holiday as far as league rolling generally was concerned. Those that made no halt in their schedules at Christmas time kept their engagements and provided such excitement as there was, aided by a few teams who took advantage of the holiday lull to clean off the slate with regard to postponed games. Outside of the leagues there was plenty doing, with bowning parties, friendly contests, and the like. Several annual affairs, such as office tournaments, club handicaps and old boys' matches, were held during the week, so that the alleys were not allowed to vegetate or run to weeds from lack of use. Instead, some of them worked overtime to satisfy the desires of the bowling enthusiasts.

Down at the R.C.B.C. alleys the benedicts and bachelors drew up their opposing forces in battle array and engaged in their annual struggle, with the succulent oyster supper as the reward for the victors. In this case both conquerors and vanquished shared in the spoils but—the expense was borne by the victims, hence the keenness displayed by the contestants. About seventy champions entered the fray and words fall to convey any idea of the commotion and noise caused by the participants and spectators. Articles of every description were brandished over the alleys as the excitement increased, and all that the bowler could do was to roll the ball in the direction where the pins were supposed to be and trust to luck for the rest. The result of the melee proved to be a repetition of that of a year ago, the care-free laddles for the second time trimming the hapless benediots, being 65 pins ahead at the finish, compared with 75 a year ago.

A new league has been organized and will start this week at the Athenaeum Club. It is called the Mercantile League, and is composed of 10 teams of well-known business firms. The season starts off on Tuesday night when four of the teams hook up in the initial contests. The schedule for the first week is as follows:

Jan. 2—Steele-Briggs Co. v. Consol. Jan. 3—Steele-Briggs Co. v. Consol. Optical Co.; Thompson Mfg. Co. v. P. W. Ellis & Co. Jan. 4—J. F. Brown & Co. v. Adams Furniture Co.
Jan. 5-Sun Life Ins. Co. v. Domin ion Express Co.

F. Harty & Co. The competition at the Brunswick alleys for the trip to Buffalo goes merrily along. The members of the Central League are all after the big scores so that they may qualify for the trip. Whitesides, Castor and Croft have chalked up the most of the high games so far, but the contest is a keen one and the bowlers will all put up a warm fight.

Canadian day at the Buffalo tournament will witness quite an exodus of bowlers across the line. Canadian cities in general will be well represented at the big event, and it is thought that the number will total over half a century. Toronto, of course, will send a goodly number, and alley managers are nearly all marshelling their their are nearly all marshalling their cohorts for the onslaught on the huge prize list. Saturday, March 4, is the date on which the charge will be made.

The race in the individual competition is a very close one and will pro-bably be, up to the finish. Seager still lolds first place, but four others are chasing him fast and will make him travel some, a thing which Bill is quite capable of doing. Fryer is winning quite frequently, and is climbing the ladder. McMillan, Bob and George Stewart and Tom Bird are the other BRACEBRIDGE, Dec. 31.—At 6.30 is morning a fire was discovered in for the lead before the end of the strongly in the Payne League and have gained several laps on the Lackawanhas. A close struggle is being waged for second place, three teams making bids for the position.

This week will see a few more teams in action, but not until the next week will the whole itst be rolling again. All will the whole itst be rolling again. All those leagues which are still in their first series will complete them in two or three weeks. The Printers, evening section, have one more game to roll, and the two leading teams clash next Thursday night. The Toronto Typesetting have a two-game lead on Mac-Leans, so that the latter will have to make a clean sween to with events. make a clean sweep to win out on this series. The remaining four teams do not play until the next week.

not play until the next week.

The Business Men's Learne will also furnish an interesting finale curing the next two or three weeks. Langmuir's and Eaton's have only one same between them, and Emmett's are close behind. Whichever wins will have to work hard and bowl consistently.

Parkdale Pickups.

The Parkdale Club are putting up this month for monthly competition a pair of trousers and a fancy vest for first and second respectively. The following have qualified for the roll-off on Monday, Jan. 9, 1911: S. Griffiths 597. Adamson 590, Alkens 592, Sharpe 561, Wilkes 568, Stokoe 558, Wray 561, Daly 596, Wills 571, Lendrum 570, Pengelly 543.

The management are putting up a valuable prize for monthly competition for novices, to be run the same as the open monthly competition.

Ward Bros., tailors, of 658 West Queen-street, have donated the prize for next month of a suit of clothes or an ulster. This is the best offer made yet, and already several good scores have been put up, the best of which are W. Griffiths 602, J. Wilkestow, and E. Scott 614.

CANADIAN CUSTOMS INCREASE Twenty-Five Per Cent. Duty to Protect Re-rolling Mill.

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—Customs collections for the month of December were $5,727,576, an increase of $470,962 over December, 1909. For nine months of fiscal year which closes to-day collections have totaled $53,124,488, as compared with $44,367,181 for same period last year, an increase of $8,757,307.

An order-in-council has been issued abolishing 25 per cent. ad valorem customs duty on rails used in rerolling rails used in railway tracks and weighing not less than 56 lbs. per yard, and substituting therefor regular duty on rails of $7 per ton. Reason given is that a mill has been established in Canada equipped for rerolling such rails in substantial quantities.

The number of animals concerned in this compliation was 74, and the Tivures disclose a considerable increase over those of 1909, when 59 horses carried off 100 races worth $110,000 H. P. Allusion is made to Sir Martin and to Mr. Winans is due the sympathy of every good sportsman on the series of misfortimes which have prevented him from enjoying the reward of enterprise. Whether Sir Martin would have won the Derby or not, it is idle to discuss, tho a subsequent running certainly appeared to demonstrate that the accident which befel him upon rounding Tattenham Corner robbed him of victory in the world's greatest race. In 1910, too, the Jubilee Handicap seemed to be at the mercy of the son of Oxden and Lady Sterling, but for the most melancholy of reasons that much-coveted prize could not be run for. Subsequent victory, however, at Epsom, where he won the Coronation Cup, beating Bachelor's Double, Louviers, Mustapha, Dean Swift, Sunbright and others furnished Mr. Win-Louviers. Mustapha, Dean Swift, Sunbright and others, furnished Mr. Winans with substantial solatium, but the laudable, tho mistaken, desire to win the Ascot Gold Cup, left its mark, with the result that nothing has since been seen of Sir Martin in public.

Mention of the performance of Mr.

Winan's good horse at Ascot serves as a reminder that his failure was acas a reminder that his failure was accepted as further and conclusive evidence that the American-bred racehorse does not stay over a distance of ground, whatever may be his merits over short cuts. Another American jumper, too, Wychwood, won the National Hunt Steeplechase (4 miles) in March, 1909, and as there was nothing fluky about the performance, and the horse has won frequently over distances of and 3½ miles, it does not do to deride the equine product of the United States too freely. At the same time, however, the balance of evidence is clearly against the possession of stemina by horses of either native or imported blood reared this side of the Atlantic, and it can hardly beg7.lasA h?Fez o cmfwy cmfwypdoes have escaped observation that during his two seasons across the pond Joyner has seldom entered his horses for races over a mile in distance, and he has not as vet won on Brittist sell.

State of the Horse Trade

Business Fairly Well Sustained During the Holidays -Bright Prospects for the Future-Sales for the Week.

The Xmas holidays are practically over and The Sunday World advertising columns pretty well indicate the confidence of horse dealers and auction-eers in the future. During the past week the business has been scattering and of a jerky disposition. Taking ad-vantage of the situation, that is of the usual lull in transactions, and consequently drop in prices, some few buyers have been hovering around picking up an animal of some value here and there. It has been, however, a season principally for the pedar, junk dealer and people looking for bargains. Still at the principal marts several sales of some importance have been made to visitors from a distance and to those making up car-load lots. and to those making up car-load lots. There are always a number of people who, having taken advantage of the cheap railway rates that prevail, seize the opportunity to secure their re-quirements and thus help to sustain trade and keep things moving. Not a few private sales have been made during the past few days, principally of left-overs, or horses that consignors would rather sell under value than lose expenses or keep with profitless chances at the end.

As to the Future.

Managers of the principal auction marts and commission houses are undoubtedly tight. It seems to be all horse trade in the early days of 1911; but whether their hopes and expectations will materialize is a question of doubt and moment. Money is undoubtedly tight. It seems to be all going into mining and this state of things must have en affect if not upon the size of transactions at least upon As to the Future. dom entered his horses for a mile in distance, and he yet won on British soil any eding that distance. Lookhe long list of Americanhas not as yet won on British soil any event exceeding that distance. Looking thru the long list of American-bred winners of the past season. It is impossible to find more than one or two—Columbus and possibly, Merry Task—who have done anything to remove this reproach.

Sales for the Week.

Monday, Jan. 2.—At Maher's Horse Exchange, 225 horses, draughters, expressers, carriage and saddle horses, a contractor's consignment and a gentleman's stable outfit.

Tuesday: Jan. 3.—At The Repository, Simcoe-street, 250 horses, mainly stable conditions.

In the week are not like the general run of merchandise. With them figures are governed to a considerable degree by the distance in amount purchasers are willing to go and by the fancy and judgment of the man who buys. Pretty well all things except horses, dogs, cats and pet stock have stated and quotable prices but these animals have not. The Sunday World, therefore, does not quote figures that are sure to be misleading, for breeders and first holders are far too prome to set too high an estimate on their stock and to think they should have the outside to figure. All that can be truly said is that trade has been above the average for this season of the year and that present prospects promise on the whole a conditions.

It will surprise many people to hear that there is a splendid demand for carriage horses, in view of the large number which will be wanted for the Ccronation and other state ceremonies next year. There is more than a possibility of only horse-drawn vehicles being used at the Coronation drawing-rooms, levees, etc., which promises to make the 1911 season one of the most brilliant within the memory of living man. In consequence not only the sale yards but livery establishments in all pants of the country are being scoured in search of horses which are suitable for use during the London season." for use during the London season."

The spoils went to Comedy King, but the honors were with Trafalgar, whose grandsire, Carbine, occupied a similar position to Bravo in 1889, and next year ran home the winner, under the crushing impost of 10st. 5 fb., in the best time up date. Trafalgar, the he cannot be h ed as the winner of the jubilee cup, a worthy descendant of the greatest horse that ever trod the Australian

The field this year comprised 30 runners, and, with one exception—34 started in 1904—was the largest since 35 horses followed Auraria home in 1895.

Taken all round, the cup field this year was not one of "class." It was hardly worthy of the occasion, but the best horses available in Australia, besides one from New Zacland wat in an sides one from New Zealand, put in an appearance. On performances Alawa stood out, and on appearances the and the winer, Comedy King, were the most notable members of the field. He received two bumps between the sheds and the home turn, losing ground on each occasion, and he must have been seven or eight lengths behind Comedy King at the bottom of the straight. He stretched out in grand style for the final tussle, and 50 yards from the post it looked as if he would reach Comedy King, but he falled by half a neck, and McLachlan landed his second successive Melbourne Cup.

Comedy King came out from the rails towards Trafalgar in the last 50 yards, but there was no actual inter-Chutes, both G.T.R. and G.P.R. at Sta. bile Doors. Take ference. It was a fine race, and, considering the size of the field, there was very little interference, the one or two horses were unlucky, and the bumps sustained by Trafalgar near the home turn undoubtedly cost him the race. His trainer, the veteran Walter Hickenbotham, who, by the way, was 63 years old recently, thought that in another few strides Trafalgar would have won, but possibly the wish was father to the thought. No better sustained run in a big race has ever been witnessed than Trafalgar's, and he may have reached the end of his tether as the judge's box was passed.

BOXERS MUST DO THEIR BEST King's Bench Division Upholds Ruling

and Referee's Disqualification. LONDON, Dec. 31.—Boxers in this country and those who follow the game will be interested in a decision by the King's Bench Division, in which in dismissing an appeal from the decision of a judge of the Westminster County Court, Justices Darling and Bucknill, upheld the action of the referee at the National Sporting Club in disqualifying Jack Goldswain for "not trying" in a contest held in the club house last March.

The contest, was for the walterweight last March.

The contest was for the weiterweight championship, and by the terms of the agreement entered into by the boxers it was arranged that each should put up floo, and that floo should be added by the club. Of this sum the winner was to have floo and the loser foo. It was also arranged that each man should be allowed f25 for training expenses, but that in the event of either man "not trying" he should receive nothing, the agreement further providing that the decision of the referee should be final, and not subject to an appeal in any court of law.

Goldswain was disqualified in the 11th round, and then brought an action against the National Sporting Club for foo due him as the loser, the sum of flo, which he said was the balance of f25 due for training expenses, and for a further flo, which he said was the balance of f25 due for training expenses, and for a further flo, which he alleged that his opponent had agreed should be deducted by the club and handed to him.

As Mr. Lesile Scott, K.C. Goldswein's counsel, was beginning an interesting account of the fight, Justice Darling asked ount of the right, Justice Darling asked him to wait a moment.

"My brother judge" he said, "is going to explain the technicalities." Then Justice Bucknill, whose interest in sport is generally known, whispered to the presiding judge.

"I gather," said Justice Darling later, "that it is the duty of a putilist who up.

"that it is the duty of a puglist who undertakes to fight to go on committing assault and battery as fast and hard as possible. Occasionally he refuses to do this, and becomes a peaceable citizen. He hangs upon the neck of the other combatant and then this is objected by the referee and others who come to see the fight. He is accordingly ordered to resume assault and battery, and if he does not do it he is disqualified—for being a peaceful citizen." (Laughter.) takes to fight to go on committing as

(Laughter.)

Mr. Lesile Scott explained that the case arose out of a 20-round boxing contest for the welterweight championship. Goldswain was unfortunately knocked about rather badly in the tenth and eleventh rounds, and the contest was then stopped by the referee, who disqualified him. The plaintiff was "punished" so much that in the eleventh round he was said to have been "holding" his opponent.

The referee, in his evidence, said he saw Goldswain was not "doing his best," and disqualified him.

The judges intimated that in their opinion the referee had full power to decide if the man was "trying" and they dismissed the appeal. Judge Da ling said the county court judge was right in his view that the referee had the exclusive power to decide whether or not a man should be disqualified for "not trying," and consequently deprived of any part of the purse.

TO GROW HAIR ON

A BALD HEAD

BY A SPECIALIST.

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair tonic and hair grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. The feeling of unrest generated by the election, however, is already dying away, and the markets are obviously in a healthy condition and ready to respond to all favorable influences, which may de-ing the stock exchange in its more confident temper.

As regards general factors, markets have nothing to grumble at. The monfavorable. The healthy technical confidition of markets and the decline in money rates has encouraged insiders to put values forward fairly substantially all round in the wake of consols, and they have experienced little difficulty in taking this course, the stale "bull" element having been quite eliminated.

Student Disorders.

ST. LUMBER CUT

British Columbia Increases in 1909-Quebec Output Smaller.

The lumber cut of British Columbia during the year 1909 showed an in-crease of 22 per cent., while the cut of Quebec decreased 7.7 per cent. British Mill-feed—Manitoba bran, $19 per ton:
shorts, $21; Ontario bran, $20 in bags.
Shorts, $22, track, Toronto.

Columbia now holds seiond place as a lumber-producing province, a position which, because of the rapid exploitation of the fir and cedar forests, it will likely maintain. The decrease in the Quebec cut was due largely to a much lighter cut of white pine, red pine and cedar. If the cut in Quebec had in-170 creased in keeping with that of the whole of Canada, that province would 4 55 still have dropped to third place. Had it not been for a greater increase in 4 20 the cut of balsam, Quebec's showing 4 20 would have been much poorer. Que-bec remains the chief spruce produc-Car ing province, the total cut there being nearly a third that of all Canada. In Nova Scotia the cut for the year showed an increase of 26.2 per cent. There was also an increase of 47.2 per

FOREIGN ENTERPRISES

Drain of Capital Into Outside Investments Increasing Rapidly From Year to Year.

Foreign Investment," The Investors Chronicle (London, Eng.) says:

As to the fact of the disproportion between the amounts of British capital invested abroad and invested at home there can be no question, so far at least as new issues are concerned. In 1909 the money invested in domestic undertakings was only one-tenth of the total sum raised for new issues. But 1909 was in some respects an exceptional year, and in the first nine months of the present year the home proportion had increased to one-third. Yet the "drain of capital" into foreign and colonial channels, the not proportionately, has been actually larger in East Buffalo Live Stock.

The following figures of the money subscribed for new capital issues in the first nine months of 1908 and 1910 will show the changes in this respect:

Wheat shipments 165,090 884,000 to $5; wethers, $3.56 to $4.15; ewes, $3.00 to $6.000 Corn récelpts 65,000 65,000 65,000 65,000 Corn shipments 65,000 600 32.76 sheep, mixed $2 to $3.

The final report of the department of agriculture on Canadian crop of 1910 stress the total production as follows: Fall views, 1,5,610,000 bushels; spring wheat, 18,25 to $8. stockers and fedders, $2.56 to $3.00 to $5.00 to need involve no neglect or disparage-ment of domestic industries.

FAVORABLE CONSIDERATIONS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.-An adjustment of railroad rates seems likely during the next few weeks, tho it is impossible to speak of the changes with much assurance, from the railroad point of view. But the most important problem before the country, perhaps, is the settlement of the trust Finnish Jews Blamed by Nationalist Speaker for Recent cases which are now pending before the U.S. Supreme Court. They may not be disposed of before the end of the next spring. Doubt about the outcome con Ill tend to keep business in check. Even with this source of disturbance removed we will have the tariff issue as a factor for a year or more to come. This cannot be ignored in any consideration of the stock market outlook

Favorable considerations are: The large crops of the last season and the great accession of wealth which they bring to the farming community and the nation as a whole; the improving tendency of our foreign trade and evitendency of our foreign trade and evidences of greater national economy, and the probability that the coming year will see at least some reduction in prices of commodities and in wages, pald by railroads and industrial corporations—a field in which liquidation has not yet occurred.

Good judges believe that we are soon to lay the foundation for a period of considerable prosperity to follow the working out of the railroad and industrial problems.—Hudson's weekly letter to J. G. Beaty.

The power of the market to digest securities has been on the wane for some little time now. The public buying movement has fallen off to a great extent, and as this is the real backbone of the exchanges, a difficulty in absorbing stocks on offer has been concurrently experienced. When prices once showed a disposition to slump to an almost alarming extent, there was a scramble to get out of holdings, and in the endeavor to cut losses an added factor in ruling the tendency of movement was brought into play. The collapse of the pool which had been holding upwards of a million shares of Right of Way had an influence all its own in relation to this issue, and served to inspire liquidation in certain other sections of the list. The following compilation shows the course of the market during the week and also for two months past:

Civility to Passengers

That the management of the Toronto Railway Company is fully seized of the importance of civility to passengers on the part of employes could be proved by reference to the frequent notices sent out to the men on this subject within the past few days. A further order was issued from the Head Office to this effect:

"For some reason many complaints have recently been received at the Head Office regarding incivility to ssengers on the part of Conductors and Motormen.

"The Company has never issued any rule or regulation having any connection with the passengers traveling upon the cars that cannot be carried out by the Conductor or Motorman in a courteous manner.

"The management frequently receives letters commenting upon the courtesy and kindly acts of some of the men towards aged and infirm passengers and others that may require some little assistance in boarding or leaving the car; and would much rather receive letters of this nature than complaints stating that Conductors and Motormen were rude, or neglected to perform such little duties as these that ordinary consideration and courtesy should prompt them to do.

Will the Conductors and Motormen please bear in mind that the Company does not wish them to quarrel with the passengers on their cars? If there is a point of difference, say, as to the issuing of a transfer, or of a transfer being late, or that the proper fare is not being tendered it is easier for the Conductor to perform his duty in a courteous way than to make himself objectionable to anyone in the car by unnecessary and uncalled-for remarks. In the case of Motormen there is still less reason for there being any reports received for incivility, as they are less in contact with the public; but, notwithstanding this, reports would lead the management to believe that some Motormen seem to go out of their way to cause annoyance to passengers."

Everything is given up to action, and, what may be called for lack of a really comprehensive word, outline. The best hackneys give a considerable impression of showy power, if the contradiction in terms is permissible. They step high, they have high shoulders, well-rounded withers, and planty of hope. rounded withers, and plenty of bone; that is to say, the narrowest part below the knee is as much as eight inches. These are great virtues; but we have to remember that very different virtues are held high in other court. are held high in other countries, and the visit of the Americans, whose ideals are in some respects the opposite of ours, and of the Belgians, may help to redress our insular balance. The chief virtue that we have disregarded in England is necessary

American breeders at one time thought of nothing but pace. The typical American trotter of a few years ago were like a greyhound in slimness, but entirely without a with which it pumps nectar from the flowers. The dragonfly's appetite is never satisfied, altho that amazing insect, with its 50,000 microscopic eyes, eats continuously from daylight until dark, capturing thousands upon thousands of flies and other noxious insects during the day. But the digestive apparatus of the dragonfly is such that all it takes into its long stomach is digested instantly.

Simmless, but the was greyhound's grace. He was lanky, emaciated, uncomely in every way, and probably the stallions were not capable, so to say, of founding a family. But to see an American trotter by the side even of that splendid English hackney which won all it takes into its long stomach is digested instantly. limness, but entirely without a trotter could, as the phrase is, leave the hackney standing. Competitions are held in America for which no horse can enter who has not trotted a mile can enter who has not trotted a mile under two minutes 15 seconds, a pace thought prodigious in England. We do not wish to see the breeding of trotters carried to the American excess. That is even less desirable than that our jobbers should, in the Elizabethan is even less desirable than that our jobbers should, in the Elizabethan fashion, fasten implements to the horses' legs to teach them the gentle art known as "ambling." We do not want a breed of animal that looks half-way between Don Quiyate and Don want a oreer of animal that looks half-way between Don Quixote and Don Quixote's "Rosinante," even the it can pull a pair of feather wheels over a mile course in under two minutes; but lars, it may not be generally known that Great Britain is the largest holder of American stock among the other nations of the world. Her holdings amount to about $3,500,000,000, Germanq next with $1,000,000,000. deny. But, however they are bred, thy are useful and valuable horses, with a turn of speed of which we know next to nothing in England.

A PARADISE OF BREEDING. Ireland is a Far Greater Country for Stallions than England.

The records show that many stal-lions which failed to realize expecta-tions in England on being located in Ireland worked their way to the front. The most notable instance was that of Kendal, for whom the late John Gub-

LENGTH OF PARLIAMENTS. Longest and Shortest—Some Christmas Day Measures,

From The London Globe, From The London Globe,
The shortest parliament on record is that which on September 30, 1399, deposed Richard II. The very act of deposition dissolved the parliament, and six days later Henry called together without the formality of an election all the old members. He gravely styled it a new parliament. The fourth parliament of Charles I. sat only for three weeks, and this after the country three weeks, and this after the country had been without the blessings of representative government for eleven years. But his fifth parliament atoned years. But his fifth parliament atoned for the brevity of the previous one. It sat off and on for nineteen years, "a parliament which many, before that time, thought would never have had a beginning, and afterwards that it would never have an end." Opinion, as we know, differed as to the character of this renowned long parliament. Macaulay declared it to be entitled to our "gratitude and reverence," while Corbett described it as the "scourse

Orbest described it as the "scourge of the nation."

One of the shortest lived of administrations was the "Ministry of All the Talents," which only lasted thirteen months. It was on Feb. 5, 1896, that Greville formed his cabinet, which had to include Charles James Fox. King George III. Is reported to have said to that unwelcome minister, "Mr. Fox, I little thought that you and I should ever meet again in this place, but I have no desire to look back upon old grievances; and you may rest assured that I shall never remind you of them." Fox died in the following autumn. When the king demanded an assurance sures for the relief of the Catholics Greville resigned. This action prompted Sheridan to remark: "I have known many men knock their heads against a wall for the express purpose of knocking out his own brains against it."
The shortest lived "party" that ever obtained a footing in parliament was the Tichborne issue, polling 6110 votes to the Liberal candidate's 416s and the Conservative's 3901. He lost no time in carrying out his mandate, moving on April 23 for the re-opening of the case before a royal commission. But in spite of all his eloquence he and Mr. Whalley of Peterboro, as tellers for the motion, would have had no one to count if Major O'Gorman had not him self taken pity on them, and the noes were 433.

UNIONISTS in BLUE

The Sunday World Guide to the British Elections

ON-UNIONISTS

On this page The Sunday World publishes a vivid color picture showing at a glance the distribution of political sentiment in the United Kingdom. The key to the numbered constituencies will be found on the next page and will be found highly instructive to those of The World's readers who are interested in the great constitutional struggle between the people and the peers. The blue denotes the Conservative party, or as it now prefers to be called the Unionist party—the red includes the various parties who make up the coalition that supports the present Liberal government. No distinction is therefore made among the Liberal, Labor and Nationalist parties, but this will be found immaterial since Ireland returns no Liberals and the Labor members are to all intents and purposes the advanced section of the Liberal party. With this explanation no difficulty should be experienced in seizing the salient features of the map. Red in Ireland is Nationalist, in England, Scotland and Wales it is Liberal and Labor. Blue is Unionist wherever it is found, whether the constituency is free trade or for fiscal reform.

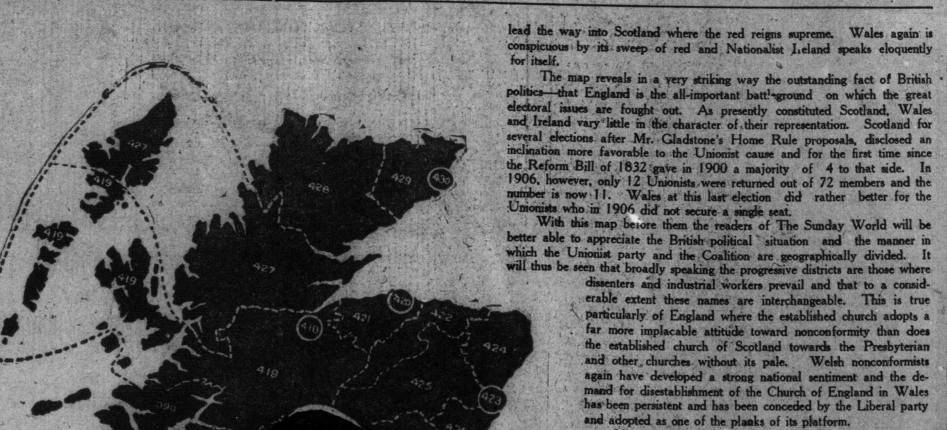

Taking the Unionist blue first it is at once seen that the main strength of that party lies in the south and southeast, but Cornwall at the extreme southwest and another section south of the Upper Severn estuary show a predominance of red and blue scretches solidly along the middle west of England north to Liverpool, also strongly Unionist, the curiously enough it elects the only Nationalist—T. P. O'Conor—returned by a British constituency. In the southeast almost the only break in the expanse of blue in London which at this election made an even break between Unionists and Liberals. Blue travels north again thru the eastern midlands to the Humber River whence another strip of black runs northwestward right across the country thru Yorkshire, Westmoreland and Cumberland. Generally speaking, the Unionists in England are strong. Where the church and the landed interest predominate this largely accounts for the solid south and the strength of that party in the agricultural counties.

Coming to Scotland the weakness of the Unionists is clearly manifest. Only a few blue spots diversify the expanse of the Liberal red. Wigtownshire at the extreme southwest, one of the divisions of Ayrshire, the island of Bute, Perthshire West, the university seats and a few scattered burgh constituencies represent the Unionist strength.

Ireland again is easily followed with its solid Nationalist representation. except in the northeast where Protestant Ulster stands staunch to its colors and the spot on the east coast marking Dublin and its university returning in all two Unionist members.

Turning to red, the coalition color, in England it is the mark of nonconformity and industry. Cornwall is mostly

red. Somersetshire and the Bristol district contribute another red area. Liberalism is strong in the central midlands and widens out bravely in Yorkshire and Lancashire, the here it was where several notable Unionist victories were gained. Durham and Northumberland

Many reforms must be introduced before the basis of the existing electoral representation can be admitted to rest on reasons of equity or to be truly democratic. The registration law is very complicated, there are many varieties of qualification, plural voting is allowed and the period over which elections are spread permit of plural voting to an extent which in numerous cases defeats the residential opinion. Constituencies vary in size to an extraordinary extent—South Essex for example having close on 53,000 voters while Kilkenny city can only boast of a little over 1500. Inequalities to that extent are without justification and must be allowed for in regarding an electoral map showing the geographical division of political parties.

Democratic tho the parliamentary form of government is, at least when the electoral qualification is wide enough to include the mass of the people, social lines are strictly drawn especially in country districts. Classes are sharply demarcated and place in life is accepted almost as absolutely as in the caste system of India. Certain individuals may force their way into society so-called, but they are in it not of it and the distinction is there, however much it may be concealed from casual observation. In the great centres of population the dividing lines are obscured or forgotten and there is little opportunity for influence either by patronage or coercion. In rural districts, especially those of the south of England the lot of the man courageous enough to be a dissenter, and a Liberal, and his family is not a happy one. Landed proprietors freely and sometimes unscrupulously in aid of the aristocratic party. This mainly accounts for the curious way in which the party colors are grouped and makes the political field of social as well as political significance. But the dry bones of British politics have been severely shaken up of late and the end is not yet. Britain is becoming a democracy in fact as well as name. This is in entire consonance with the progressive spirit of the twentieth century and is entirely necessary if the great social reforms, the time requires, are to be accomplished. Already more advance has been made during the last five years than in any previous quarter of a century and now that hereditary qualification has been abandoned by those holding it, the immediate future will see vaster changes.

people are much more concerned about the things they are beginning. Of course it is a much wiser philosophy that leads one to begin something, than the had been curious enough to find out something of the learn something about his own people and country, that he had been curious enough to find out something of the creatures and the world around that leads one to sit down and make no effort whatever. "Keep moving, and thinking about something else. That's the trick," as "Glad" has it, to whom Miss Gertrude Elliott has introduced some of us so charmingly. But it is a philosophy of ignorance after all, and should not lead us to despise the more definite guidings of an informed intelligence. Unfortunately so many suddes and leaders and systems lay claim to the possession of informed intelligence, while they have no better instruction than Glad's, the discovery of the real thing is not to be accomplished in a moment. Very few children are taught to think. I never was, and am inclined to the opinion that the art cannot be properly acquired in after life. There are converted about the had been interested enough to that he had been curious enough to find out something about his own people learn something about his own people learn something about his own people learn something about his own people and country, that he had been curious enough to find out something of the creatures and the world around the that he had been curious enough to find out something about his own people learn something about his own people and country, that he had been outerous enough to find out something of the creatures and the world around the trathe had been observant enough t cannot be properly acquired in after life. There are crowds of people, always in the most influential circles, who profess to be thinkers, whose performances tend to confirm this view. Their thinking is merely the repetition of what others have thought. Their minds are only mirrors, and not direct. m'nds are only mirrors, and not first-class mirrors either, but full of twists and cracks and distortions, so that the original thought, however apt, becomes changed into an absurdity. The people who think they are thinking, never see the absurdity, but follow the perverted folly to its dismal end.

the people are mainly following brok in and contorted images and fragmentary reflections of thought, instead of thinking out new same thoughts for themselves are halfed as great geniuses. But of course the same old mistake is made over again, and instead of starting to think originally as Tolstoi did those who admire his originally begin the old method of reflecting his thought, filtering it down, shadowing it and coloring it till by and by, or if his memory survives long enough, he is regarded as a heaven-born philosopher or a divine teacher. All men cannot be Tolstoi's but all men have the capacity in their own degree of original thinking. The city dweller as a rule is less original than the rustic altho he may be more fully informed. But he has lost his own particular special point of view, and the rule is that he would be ashamed to recover it. So fashions in clothes, in food, in politics, in religion, in disease, in vice, in amusement, in living, in dying, and in burying are set. So Wordsworth, who lived in the country and developed genius out of mediocrity abhorred the city world with a great cry: "Great God! I'd rather be a Pagan suckied in a creed outworn!" We commonplace idiots prefer to be suckled in a first more resolutions, but resolutions where she are greatinged, and the parsons understand things differently. the people are mainly following broken and contorted images and fragmentary

When the parents are all part of the machine it is difficult for the children to escape from the social moulds. We are brought up to see things from the outside and to regard the veneer and polish more than the solid materia Mark Twain makes a note of it some Mark Twain makes a note of it somewhere, and I suppose it is true of most boys who have kept a diary, which no boy would do to begin with, unless he nad been constrained to do so by the well-meant reflections of his elders; that all boys make the same entries. I did it myself and I would like to know how many boys before the age of twelve have been able to avoid the absurdity. "Jan, I," it begins, "Rose and washed my face and combed my hair and dressed. Jan. 2. Rose and washed my face and combed my hair and dressed. Jan. 3. Rose and dressed. He tried in vain to overcome His lack of equilibrium, and dressed. Jan. 3. Rose and dressed. Back to school. Jan. 4." No entry. Why should all boys make the same entries? Just because of the wrong emphasis. At the time the boy is making these inane entries he is also making the most wonderful discoveries about life. His parents, his mother especially, have been impressing upon about life. His parents, his mother especially, have been impressing upon him however that the most important things in life are to rise for breakfast, wash himself, particularly behind the ears, brush his hair and dress, and naturally these highly important function, when performed, are duly noted in the unspontaneous diary. If the boy could only write down what he thinks, and what he sees, and what the other boys tell him, the result would be of more value than half the memoirs that load the library shelves, and would rival in interest Boswell and Rousseau and him the result would be provided in interest boswell. and would rival in interest Boswel and Rousseau and Franklin and Amie and perhaps throw light on some of th and perhaps throw light on some of the dark places of education and parental training. Of course one does not intend it to be thought that such admirable processes as rising and washing, particularly behind the ears, and combing and brushing and dressing should be abandoned but there are should be abandoned, but there are other things in the world besides and the emphasis would appear to be unduly laid. These things should ye have done and not left the other unduly laid. done. The boy who could spontaneous ly write in his diary and without priggishness—for the boy who keeps a

So at New Year, whether one keeps a diary or not, it might be well to pay some attention to emphasis. There appears to be a tendency in some quarters to make new resolutions. But the trouble is you cannot make new resolutions. They make themselves, except in such cases as Harold Begble tells about in "Broken Earthenware." Resolutions are almost invariably the result of a long series of resolvings in resolution. So, after all, the puny little te pledges that men make and break January after January make a rubble foundation for something more solid in the future. It is said that the read to hell is paved with good intentions. It must be a rotten pavement. The good roads all lead in an opposite direction. And they too are paved with resolutions, but resolutions which have been baked hard. The emphasis should

It required five or six weeks of desperate activity to place about 15,000 men in Cuba. Almost every stand here has its sixer, Almost every stand here has its sixer, and many of these are of such low power that one questions the wisdom, of producing six-cylinder engines with the power absorbed in the frictional resistance to the pistons in comparisons with the power developed. That small six-cylinder cars are sweet to handle and pull well at slow engine speeds will not be disputed, but in practice the full benefits of the type are only obtained in engines of fairly substantial power.

One day recently W. Alonzo Craig proposed to Mr. Sam Foreman, of the body with which this car will be equipped it is hardly necessary to speak. The name, "Guy," is intimate-benefits at the would climb the two flights of concrete and stone steps on the north side of the Paducah court house, go thru the court house hall and down the steps on the south side of the building and yard, he (Craig) would buy a Ford the best automobile bodies in use in Canada, several of the Canadian automobile firms having given practically all their body building to the Guy Company.

ARMORED STEEL CAR FOR BANKS

This car which is otherwise known as a motor bank car is manufactured by a New York firm and consists of a special body upon a chassis of the ordinary type. The body is made to suit requirements and the chassis models can be had equipped with either 20 or 40 h. p. The entire car is an armored steel vehicle protected by a system of electric alarms which operate should the car be attacked at any point either by drilling, wedging or cutting the steel walls or grill work. The walls and roof are built of steel and the body is fire proof. The body is enclosed and divided into two distinct sections, the forward one being for the driver and a passenger and the rear containing the banking room. One door on each side of the car gives access to the driver's section and a door upon the right hand side opens into the banking room which is equipped with a large er's section and a door upon the right hand side opens into the banking room which is equipped with a large steel safe having a Yale combination lock, a desk extending the full width of the car and containing the money hardwood is used in the interior. A vestibule at the rear of the car is so designed as to allow but one person at the cashier's window at a time. The platform itself is 14 inches from the ground and folding gates are proom Jan. 7 to 14, will be vided which open inwardly. An automatic device operated from within closes these gates and locks them secure ly when the vehicle is in motion. Steel shutters protect the cashier's window, opening and closing automatically by means of a device operated from within. Owing to the many safety devices with which the car is equipped and the great strength of the armored steel body it should prove very useful in transacting business of banks, such as collecting deposits and carrying bullion as well as in carrying the pay roll of large corporations.

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Tho Dubuque is on the Mississippi River, and has one of the finest harbors between New Orleans and St. Paul, there has been little or no ice skating in recent years. Several times attempts to conduct a private rink have failed, principally owing to high prices of admission.

Ald. John O'Rourke plans to utilize the whole of the harbor, which is 1400 feet long and 500 feet wide. The harbor now is frozen over, and as soon as it is deemed advisable this surface will be flooded from the city's water system, thus giving it a surface as smooth as glass.

Along the shores it is proposed to build shelters, where skaters may be adjusted, where skaters may rest and get warm and where they may have their wraps checked. Policemen will be present at all times, and representatives of the woman's clubs of the city will be assigned to regular duty as chaperons. Municipal Ice Rink.

The Cost of Excessive Weight When a layman gives an order for a larre touring car, the last thing he will think about is total weight. He will inquire carefully, it is true, concerning the weight of the chassis, because he has been educated to the fact that unnecessary weight in the chassis means unnecessary expense to limself in tire maintenance, and a reduction in the liveliness and hill-climbing qualities of liveliness and hill-climbing qualities of the machine. He knows that the post chassis makers will bore out, at great expense, the centres of shafts and will otherwise cut down to the last ounce the weight of a chassis, and he therefore insists on a chassis being light in proportion to its horsepower. Thus far he is educated, says a writer in The Car. But his education does not lead him to understand that the weight of bodies, accessories, and luggage should be considered in ounces just as much as the weight of chassis.

When the buyer of the car luxurious is asked what accommodation he requires in his car, he will light heartedly reply: "I must have seats for a total of seven persons, and when we are touring we shall carry some luggage as well."

Some idea of the extent of that change is given by Isaac T. Marcosson, who in a regent tion."

The effect of the innovation is thus set forth: "It has made agricultura; life more attractive; it has destroyed the isolation of the rural worker; it has brought the market to the farm's door and in various ways it is working out a social and educational revolution." by Isaac T. Sir William Ramsay's exhibition of fi1,000 worth of the precious substance is the sequel to the discovery. What further results will follow it is impossible to prophesy. Radium, apart from its monetary value, is a source of extraordinary powers which probably even now have only been partly revealed. Mr. Francis Darwin, when he was president of the British Association, pointed out that radium was millions of times more powerful than dynamite, and that there was energy enough in a pound and a half of it to drive a cruiser 6000 miles at high speed.

Besides which, of course, the effect of radium discoveries upon medical menace. "The gyroscope, on the other hand, is not limited to any particular period of the boat; it simply responds to whatever motion the ship has, sychronous or non-synchronous," said Mr. Sperry. "The question is often asked, Why is a gyroscope better than a moving weight in a ship for roll-quenching? Every can be made to do the work of from 150 to 200 pounds and directed in any desired line or plane, whereas when we use water or any other form of moving weight each pound represents a pound only and only in a vertical direction." Explaining the method of work and its results, Sir William Ramsay said that the pitchblende ore was obtained from the Trenwith mines, and delivered in a concentrated form at Limehouse. There the uranium and iron are dissolved, and the next stage is to precipitate the radium out of the clear liquid. When precipitated, the radium is converted into radium bromide, and by repeated crystallization this bromide was separated into various grades of commercial saleability. "The actual time occupied in getting the radium liquors is a week," said Sir William, "and the crystallization which goes on afterwards takes a couple of months. The latest continental process which I saw described last week occupies a year."

As illustrating the certainty of the process in use at Limehouse, he mentioned that of 530 milligrams produced only one milligram was left behind in the liquid. Up to now just over hair a gram had been extracted at Limehouse, but the process is now going on continuously, and the works are laid out to produce one gram per month. So far only five of six grams are known to have been produced in the whole world.

"It has been supposed," said Sir William, "that Austrian pitchblende is particularly rich in radium, but it is no richer than any other. Moreover, the supply of plitchblende in Cornwall, as Journal-Couric."

The discovery that it was possible to obtain radium from one of Cornwall's deserted mines reads like a chapter of romance. For about fifty years there had stood on the outskirts of the town of St. Ives a heap of refuse—clay and stones taken from the old Wheal Trenwith copper mine and thrown aside as useless. It was in this heap that pitchblende was first discovered and gave the clue that the old mine might changes in connection with lines af-fecting the stability, decreasing this factor and favoring decreased resist-ance, aiding the attainment of higher Radium, of course, is extracted from ranium, which in its turn is obtained rom the ore known as pitchblende—a sign.

"The problem is to hold the ship from rolling by neutralizing with the gyroscope each disturbing influence as it reaches the ship while availing ourselves of all the aid possible thru the design of the hull and the disposition of the masses. . . A great many ships as they now stand could with profit utilize the gyroscope steadying gear, which is at present available, and some important installations are now being contemplated."

Mr. Sperry told of seeing Russian uranium, which in its turn is obtained from the ore known as pitchblende—a very rare substance and in appearance resembling solidified tar. For years upon years heaps of this valuable substance lay unrecognized and untouched save by small boys who secured pieces as curiosities, for when rubbed and held in a dark place the ore gave off a curious duli glow. Once it is stated a resident in the district sent a lump to a leading scientist for examination, and was told that the ten pounds of pitchblende were worth f10 in gold. Nevertheless, it was left to a firm of mining engineers unconnected with the

So the flooded areas were pumped out, machinery installed, and workmen were shortly engaged in delving radium from the depths where their forefathers mined for copper ore. when it gets out of time it turns

Beskies which, of course, the effect of radium discoveries upon medical science is little shore of revolutionary. Sir William Ramsay alluding to the uses to which radium is being put by doctors, said that it had been used to cure rodent ulcer, which was somewhat allied to cancer. "An application of 1) milligrams of radium bromide for ten minutes once a fortnight makes the ulcer disappear after three applications. Then there are gases given off called radium emanations, which dissolve in water, and these have been found axtremely effective in cases of rheumatism, gout and neuritis. They have been largely made use of in Germany, but not in this country up to the present. Practically every mineral spring contains some of these emanations, but they are in very result to an discoveries upon medical mr. Sperry gave a very interesting. Mr. Sperry gave a very interesting.

The gyroscopic principle applied to the compass has proved invaluable, Mr. Sperry said. HER FATHER'S HONOR

JANUARY 1 1911

I closed the hall door gently behind me and hung up my coat and hat. Then a faint sound from the dining-room made me start. I opened the door, switching on the light. "Don't move or I must fire."

"My dear Sir Peter, you must have been reading a penny dreadful."
"My offer's open. If it isn't accepted within a quarter of an hour I'll take that cheque by force—"
"I went to the bell, keeping my finger on it till at last, after a long silence, a helf-coled and very record." or I must fire."

The words were threatening enough, but the tones were a woman's-low, trembling, very sweet.

"I'm Lady Helen Mahon, daughter of Lord Lavant, the man you've wronged, Mr. Henty. My father was a soldier. I'm not afraid."

"May I shut the door?" I asked. "I promise not to-"
"I can't trust you," she said bitterly.

"One member of a family who trusts you is one too many."
"It's so late for compliments," I said.
"Believe me, Lady Helen, I've no wish to be shot." I shut the door as I spoke, and then went forward into the room.
"Burgle wil" I piagulated "Burglary!" I ejaculated.

"Burgiary!" I ejaculated.
Some splinters of wood lay on the floor by the window. A chisel was on the knee-hole writing-table; the lock of the middle drawer had been forced; a quantity of papers lay on the floor.
"Tell me exactly what you want?" I

"You know," she cried. "You know better than I do! For twenty years you've threatened, blackmailed, tortured my father! For a young soldier's indiscretion, for a discreditable story, of which he is ashamed and bitterly repentant, you've made him pay in pay in the pay in the money—in tears—for twenty years!"

"Tell me the story as you know it,"
I said. "Who knows? I might be able help you." "He was young, wild, foolish; oh, there are a hundred excuses' and he gambled, gambled and lost and plunged deeper and—they were trust funds, Mr. Henty, and you knew of it. Into Mr. Henty, and you knew of it. Into your hands thru a trick came a cheque—a cheque which could damn my father for ever—" She faltered, her eyes filling with shamed tears. "He forged at eighteen, he forged, and for twenty years he has paid for his sin. He's ill now—dying. His last hours are being made wretched, so hopelessly, terribly wretched by the knowledge you hold and the proof which—which you hold and the proof which—which I came to steal."

"Was this your father's proposition?" I demanded, suddenly.
"Do you imagine he would have let me come?" she replied, simply.
"Did he suggest any method by which you could carry out the trust ne imposed on you?' She blushed vividly scarlet. The re-volver dropped for a second. Then she look up bravely. "One other," she said.

"Tell me." "To marry. A rich mar an acquaintance of yours, a Sir Peter Wain

Again she did not answer me.

Suddenly I held up my hand.
"Go behind the curtains. Oh, yes, cover me with that revolver if you will. Wait there—someone is coming."
I heard the scrape of a key in the a half-cled and very scared footman came to the door.

"Wake my man," I ordered. "Tell him to pack and get the car round in as few minutes as he's able." "Yes, sir." The man withdrew, and I glanced at my watch. Henty was leaning against the mantelpiece, staring at the floor. Then he sprang at me, his long arms round me, his lean fingers clutching at my throat, his weight bearing me backwards. He had taken me by surprise, and his extra weight and the unexpectedness of the assualt gave him an initial advantage.

Then, as we crashed against the wall. I heard Lady Helen's quiet tones. I had forgotten her presence, and they startled me almost as much as they astonished Henty.

"Stop! Stop!" she cried twice. The revolver was hardly a yard from his flushed face. He stood back from me gasping, holding out his trembling hands.

"The cheque," she said. "Now-or I fire. I swear-I fire." He stumbled to his writing-table. He thrust hand and arm into the drawer, pulling some secret trigger. A small flap at the back of the table shot up. I picked up an envelope which lay there, glanced at its contents, and handed it to Lady Helen. From the garden I heard the sound of my car as it whirred up to the door. I went to the window, opened it, and called out:

"John, here, please." Then, as he came in, "Drive this lady to the address she will give you. You're answerable for her safety," I

Then I turned to Lady Helen. The cheque was in her hand, and her fingers were fumbling at a box of matches; the revolver she still grasped

She struck a light, ignited a corne of the cheque, dropping the flaming sheet into a china bowl and reducing its ashes to powder,

"Good night, Lady Helen," I said.
She looked at me. A little color crept into her wan cheeks.

"I'm—I'm nervous—please come,"

Then I went out with her to the waiting car. Silently we got in, sliding away into the night toward Lord Lavant's house. "I'm ashamed of what I said." she "I'm ashamed of what I sald," she whispered. "I had never seen him—I wronged you. I wronged you, too, in thinking you knew all the plot."

"You've achieved your end," I sald slowly. "You ought to be very happy and content, Lady Helen."

It seems to me that if this were the proper position to occupy, Jesus would cease to be the example for us to follow. If on the start He was so far wonderful revelation burst upon them proper position to occupy, Jesus would cease to be the example for us to follow. If on the start He was so far ahead of us in the race for immortality and eternal life, it is unreasonable for anyone to expect that we would ever reach the zenith of His side. We have thought that the people of the world have ofttimes been discouraged when they have been commanded to come up and reflect the character and mittate the life of Christ. In their humanity, in their weakness, in their darkness, in their blindness they were expected to do that which a Divine One accomplished; but when we reflect upon the life of Jesus from the cradle to the grave, we see a different picture from that which has been represented to us in the years agone.

The subject of this discourse is One who has endeared Himself to earth's children by the sthat death cannot sever. He is considered by many as the hero of every struggle, and while we represent Him this evening as a humble ambassador, we wish to try to riflect some points that were prominent in His character and that won for Him the respect and love of the won'd which knew Him best. We desire to night to present Jesus to you in His humility. It has been taught that Jesus was conceived and born under such peculiar circumstances that He was altogether different from other people, that the weaknesses that were piaced upon the sons of men were unknown to Him; that He was God and therefore could not do wrong, had no desfre to err, and that it was impos-

Jesus as a Man.

We hasten on to Jesus as a man, a rul charactr, a real figure who acted His part in the great drama of life upon the stage of humanity; one we see environed by all the trials and temptations, and the tears and darkness, and the sickness and gloom that has come to the sons of men; not a figure that came from heaven to represent divimity without having trial, but as a man with all this human propensities. Isalah, in talking of this character, tells us that He "was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." "He was a mode buy meat." It seems to evidence a trial candidate in the second of the sold of the second of the sold in the famous place called Jacob's well. I want you to notice the evidence of humanity here. fun compressed into two hours and forty-five minutes of riotous laughter, that's the play, and it's coming to the Princess Theatre next week.

"A veritable conspiracy of fun," is the way Louis V. De Foe, dramatic critic of The New York World, des-cribed this comedy. Said he in his re-view: "'Seven Days' is filled with uproarious fun, with never a dull sec-ond. It convulsed its audiences. It contains every element of uncommonly good entertainment. The wonder of the play is that the authors, Mary Roherts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, could have started their fun flowing so spontaneously and kept it going so unflaggingly." Now in the second year of its run at the Astor Theatre, "Seven Days" has kept New York in paroxsms of more related than the country in the second of the country in the second was the country in the second of the country in the country of merriment since its opening night, as for six months it created a hurricane of laughter in Chicago, Every-body agrees that it is the best comedy produced in this country in a decade, and it will be seen here under exceptionally attractive conditions, for Messrs. Wagenhals & Kemper are send-ing a brillant New York cast and a gorgeous Astor Theatre scenic equip-ment. So get in training for this comedy, because, as Harper's Weekly said, "Seven Days" makes one weak—from laughing."

However beautiful a gown or splendid a gentleman's evening get-up, it is the height of bad taste to pin the napkin up to the bodice or tuck one end into the waistcoat. The place of the guest at the table The place of the guest at the table is a matter of sex. A lady generally sits at the host's right hand, a gentleman at the hostess' right hand. The host carves, the hostess serves the soup (if there is a tureen) and gives the signal for beginning the meal by taking up her soup spoon. If a guest is tardy in finishing at the end of a meal, she must still make a little pretence of eating, so as not to confuse the visitor. When the meal is over she makes the first move to leave the table, but this must not be done until there is a surety that nobody is still engaged with the business of the knife and fork.

The guest may lay down his or her eating implements at any time, but the napkin is not taken from the lap until the hostess removes hers.

It is the thing to leave the last plate or the finger bowl—a very necessary detail for a smart house—in its place, lift the napkin, partly fold it, and lay it on the table edge; then rise quietly and slowly and leave the table without pushing the chair back to it—that is, if there is a maid or man servant; otherwise in the matter of the chair it is a good thing to follow the lead of the host and hostess.

In one of our daily journals I read with elevated eyebrows these words referring to the cheap running meeting at Jacksonville, Fla., under the management of Curley Brown: "For a paltry sum Brown is withholding news, paltry sum Brown is withholding news, creating hosts of enemies, getting horsemen disgrunted and raising trouble generally, which may end in cutting out the reports of the Jacksonville races altogether by some of the newspapers." These races give employment to a few people who need employment, but to what extent they help the improvement of the breed of horses I confess ignorance. and those who know me know that I was not born yesterday. Prof. S. Alfred Mitchell, professor of astronomy in Columbia University, in a lecture declared that the spectroscope, an instrument used for analysing rays of light, was of more impor-

ing rays of light, was of more importance to the human race than the Darwinian theory. He said it showed the sun was rapidly wasting.

Prof. Mitchell's subject was "Evolution as Revealed by the Spectroscope." He said that the sun was becoming so weakened by diffusing light and heat that in a comparatively short time the earth would be so chilled as to be unfit for habitation. He said:

"It is only a question of time when the earth as a star will be burned out. The rest of the planets are vitiated now, and in a little while they will be destroyed. The spectroscope shows them to be radiating light and heat rapidly. The earth will grow cold and life will cease."

The public will get some rare bargains, as we buy direct from the Diamond Cutters in Amsterdam for spot cash, and mount all our goods in our own Factory on the premises. Therefore, the original prices at which the Diamonds are marked, are exceedingly low, and the reductions made from day to day will be just that much extra real money saved on your purchase.

He could spare that, he who had forty thousand to his credit, free of liability, at the bank around the corner.

"Twenty-one!" retorted Cochrane, almost before the words were out of Cadogan's mouth, and favoring the young man with a prolonged and evil glare, he turned his back and again faced the rostrum.

The most popular and the most practical plan for Bible study, together with a prize Bible contest, is running in The Sunday World.

In short, the Sunday School Lesson must be read each week for 52 weeks, also the "Suggestive Questions," and the coupon should be cut out each week and signed, certifying that this has been done. Then any five of the week and signed, certifying that this has been done. Then any five of the questions that are indicated to be answered in writing must also be answered on bonding propositions; the Gaewar of Baroda, (India) gave the women of Baroda, (India) gave the women of ed, and at the end of the term the coupons and written answers, duly signed with name and address, must be delivered to this office. The prizes will be awarded according to the number of coupons sent in, and the merits of the written answers. You can get all the help you want with the written ans-

Greetings came to us one day last week from our sister suffrage associa-tion in Montreal thru its first vicepresident Mrs. Henderson, who has spent a year in England studying the English conditions and the suffrage situation. Mrs. Henderson also spent six months in New York and took part in the shirt walst strike there last winter.

Dr. Gordon entertained Mrs. Hender- ner to Mrs. Snowden. A thousand son at dinner and a small inform covers were laid and the affair was luncheon was harriedly arranged at one of the most brilliant seen in that the suffrage headquarters at 261 Yongestreet. The "Votes for Women" dishes quite amused her and she took away a cup and saucer as a souvenir of her visit here.

Mrs. Henderson is unusually bright and has the true suffrage spirit, intending to devote her time and talents to the cause and with the purpose in view she is leaving no stone unturned to make herself a credit to the cause she stands for. This wonderful anx-lety to be worthy is shown in so many women to-day. At the last monthly meeting of the Toronto Suffage Association two suffragets from England spoke. They were both able, splendid women. One had bought no new clothes for four years prefering to declothes for four years prefering to devote every penny to the cause. "Ten righteous might have saved a city once." A whole army of consecrated women are trying to save England. It is bound to come. The general electron is now over in England and the result prese two features of interest to the suffragists. Over two-thirds of our teachers are

Miss Martin kept up the reputation of the sex for a good many years and we have the promise of a couple of bright women that they will study up the question and allow their names to stand next year. The fear of defeat or incompetence keeps many women out of public life but if we would better the world we must enter the arena where the struggles take place. If we would better our common children we must be prepared to work in a place directly interested in all that should be vital in a child's life. Dozens of men can condemn the way things are done and yet if asked to run for office they have a thousand excuses. Why?

No. 105 - NEW YEAR BEAUTY RESOLUTIONS By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty. ME. LINA CAVALIERI believes in New Year resolutions. She advises every woman to make at least one New Year resolve, to neither waste nor neglect her good looks. She suggests as a resolution to lead all the rest: "I will make the most of my good points and do my best to strengthen the weak ones." Another is: "I will never retire without having carefully made my night toilet." Next week Mme. Cavalieri will discuss "Midwinter steaming of the face, because I believe that it makes the skin flaccid and in time causes wrinkles and a baggy appearance about the eyes and chin. But cleanliness is of even more importance than firmness of skin and flesh. This is as good protection as a veil, but if you wear a veil too you will be doubly protected.

Resolve—and cling to the resolution—that you will not permit your lips to grow shrivelled through neglect to anoint them often with cold cream or lip salve before going out into the cold. Withered looking lips detract from the beauty of the loveliest face, from the charm of the most fascinating

Give much attention this New Year to an appraisement of your face and figure and determine to make the most of what are undeniably good points and to try to correct the weak ones. You observe, for instance, that your figure is too thin, that there is the suggestion of hungriness and emaciation about it. Resolve that you will adopt the four best means for plumpening the figure, more rest and sleep; more sweets and sort for thinning the body, such as vapor baths, which may be taken in a cabinet at home if desired;

much dieting, which for the stout woman means cutting down the supply of food a third or a half, and avoiding sweet and starchy foods; and keeping the body well irrigated by drinking much water. Gentle and safe laxatives are an aid in reducing flesh, but they should not be taken without first consulting a physician as to the nature of the laxative and the frequency with which it is taken.

A reduction regime is helpful in such a case, for the face is the expressionless reflects thought and emotion when it becomes thinner.

It is as though the features had been muffled in a thick veil through which the light did not penetrate. Also by studying your you can teach it to light up at the right moment, you can use the right features for the expression of

The Influence of Books.

The most influential books, and the truest in their influence, are works of fiction. They do not pin the reader to a dogma, which he must afterwards discover to be inexact; they do not teach him a lesson, which he must afterwards unlearn.

They repeat, they rearrange, they clarify the lessons of life; they disengage us from ourselves, they constrain us to the acquaintance of others; and they show us the web of experience, not as we can see it for ourelves,, but with a singular change—that monstrous, consuming ego of ours being, for the nonce, struck out,

It is a tale of the Monmouth rebellion England, and several characters familiar in history appear prominently on the stage. Story of the Stealing of U.S. Timber and Coal Lands-Destruction of Flocks and Herds-How "The Freebooters of the Wilderness" are Robbing A Great Republic - Told by Agnes C. Laut in her New Book

For ten years the powers that stand for law in this country have been marking time behind the firing line, while the other fellow got away with the goods.

A Roman ruler had fiddled while his imperial city burned. What was the many-headed ruler of the great republic doing, while enemies burn-ed and cut and slashed and wasted in wantonness the property of the public for the enrichment of the

Upon this awful sight looked Wayland and Eleanor together, having become aware of the dastardly trick too late to warn and save the boy.

Now we follow Wayland and Matthews in a long chase after the outlaws. "We've got to fight this thing

For, if we are to believe this story (which is emphatically prefaced by a statement of the author that all is true, and more), senators are among the chief stealers; sheriffs help to evade the law not to carry it out; the press of the country is man-handled, bribed and muzzled; and the men who are supposed to see that the resources of the country are conserved, are so placed that they can do little or nothing but look on at robbery, and job-

The question of a new grazing area for MacDonald's sheep and a few the missionary has, is discussed. There are some technical points to be overcome, and Senator Moyese intimates that if MacDonald will take out papers of citizenship and support him, there will be no difficulty. The only way to get the sheep to the new grazing land is over the senator's ranch. The senator takes Wayland aside and tries to win him over from the opposition he has made for four years to the senator's schemes. When he leaves, Bat Brydges stays and tries to further his master's cause.

Next comes Jack Matthews, an oid frontiersman, looking for Missionary Williams. Matthews is a man of strong views and sermonizing tendencies.

Lands are stolen under guise of homesicading, how coal-lands are declared worthless by experts (?) and then grabbed by robbers, how slander and the smothering of evidence is used to keep clear the skirts of the free-booters.

Then, as this is but a novel, the villain meets his Nemesis and the hero and heroine are "happy ever after." But we stop to wonder how much of this freebooting is yet going on unpuished.

Francis Macmillen, the celebrated violinist, who comes to this city on January 12 as soloist at the Toronto tected, who recently died of hardship tected, who recently died of hardship in Paris, "The Etude" has the following very sensible comment to make. The editors' remarks apply just as well to gagement this season by every orchestra of importance in America. In his Toronto program the erchestra will ac-its attitude against the custom of sending our girls, with insufficient means and slight protection, thousands of miles away from home, to secure an education in foreign cities: Had we not personally encountered cases of students in distress in European capitals we might not be so emphatic. It is wrong, wrong, wrong, horribly wrong. Our girls are too precious to be sacri-fleed in this imbecile manner. Self-reliant, capable and ambitious as they are in comparison with the young women of some other nati-ons, they are nevertheless girls, and need sufficient support and the pro-need sufficient support and the protection of the home.

The Etude is not a journal for "muck-raking," nor does it predict danger when none exists, but we should feel that we were neglecting our duty if we failed to call the attention of parents to these conditions. Naturally cities afford musical advantages which in some cases cannot be found in the small town. The Symphony Orchestra and the opera demand the support of millionaires. A part of our musical education must be obtained in the city, but parents of young girls should no more think of sendgirls should no more think of send-ing them to continental cities un-protected than they would of put-ting a thrush in a serpent's cage for safety.

The "Emperor" Violin

The celebrated "Emperor" violin, the finest instrument ever produced by the master of Cremonese instrument makers, Stradivarius, has become the cherished possession of the great virtuoso, Kubelik. The "Emperor" has been universally acknowledged to possess unequalled qualities of tone, and for forty years it has been in the possession of the Haddock family. It was acquired by George Haddock, well known as a violinist and the founder of the Leeds College of Music, in 1873, and on his death it was bequeathed to his family, of whose members Mr. G. Percy Haddock and Edgar Haddock (now directors of the college) are the best known; Mr. Edgar Haddock being eminent as a violinst, composer, and musical "entrepreneur." The "Emperor" was recently valued at £10,000, and the price at which it has changed hands is the highest ever paid in the history of violins for any Haddock being eminent as a violinst, composer, and musical "entrepreneur."

One can open the throat perfect. It without a perceptible opening of the mouth, merely by the power of respiration.

It is the ability to take in an adequate supply of breath and to retain it until required that makes—or, by contrary, mars—all singding. A singer with a perfect sense of pitch and all the good intentions possible will often sing off the key and bring forth a tone with no vitality in it, distressing to hear, simply for lack of breath control.

The voice is naturally divided into three registers: the chest, medium and head. In a man's voice of lower quality this last is known as "falseptto," but in the case of a tenor le may use a tone which sounds like falsetto, but is really merely a mezza voce, or half voice. This legitimately belongs to a man's compass; a falsetto does not. The most important register is the most important register is the most important register is the of his range, if rightly produced. Singers, especially tenors, are very apt to throw the head forward in producing the high notes, and consequently get a throaty strained voice.

According to custom, the small hours of the first morning of every New Year witness oceans of splashed table cloths and forests of empty bottles; also thousands of hilarious, staggering men and women being assisted into their motor cars and taxicabs. Ministers of the Gospel and moralizing editors annually deplore this dreadful saturnalia, for the time being forgetting that never in history, in any land, was the "water wagon" in such general use as nowadays in this country. By way of comparison, here are some facts of history showing what drunkenness and gluttony meant in ancient times:

Caesar, on a certain occasion, while drunk on wine, is said to have given Eutychus, his charioteer, a tip amounting to $75,000, the largest money tip on record. The most reckless of our modern millionaires thinks he's making an awful splash when he tips his chauffeur $25

One of the Caesars fed his charger on wine and barley in a golden vase. One of his dinners cost more than half a million. His supper bill for four months was twenty million dollars.

Philip of Macedon was a drunk erd. He always left the banquet table strggering. Alexander the creat, his son, inherited the weak-

Dionysius, the younger, tyrant of Sicily, went on sprees which lasted three months at a time. He lost his eyesight through overindulgence. Nero was in the habit of sitting down at noon and sticking there un-

Tiberius was a sincere drunkard. After becoming Emperor of Rome, he was drunk so often that his army nicknamd him "Biberius," meaning "tippler." He had two pals, Flaccus and Piso, with whom he went on sprees. At the weeping stage they deplored the prevalence of drunk-

One time Tiberius had a vacancy for the quaestorship, and there were many applicants for the job. The man who got it drank a whole pitcher of strong wine which Tiberius himself had filled. The successful applicant had neither position nor "pull," but Tiberius said the man who could drink that amount of wine was the man for the place.

Tiberius was as cranky about eating as drinking. He gave Sabinus $10,000 for writing a sketch in which an oyster, a thrush and a mushroom figured as characters. Tiberius was very fond of mushrooms and died from eating the wrong

Nowhere in all the world to-day will you find as many confirmed drunkards as there were among the Thracians, the Iberians, the Celts or the Sythians. The man who didn't get drunk every day or two was re-

The Romans carried overindulgence to an extreme never equalled in another age. Gluttony and in-temperance reigned and huge fortunes were spent in single repasts. Claudius was noted for the rare wines he served. He often had six hundred guests at his table. Like Tiberius, he died from eating the wrong kind of mushrooms. Caligula owes his niche in the hall of fame to the drunken banquets with which he made even Rome marvel. The excesses made fashionable by such potentates as Lucullus, Apicius, Nero, Verres, Ti-berius, Caliguia, Vitellius and Domitian really began in the days of Pompey, and they marked the be-ginning of the end of the republic. Of the many feasts given by Vi-tellius not one cost less than $500, and his reign was almost a continuous debauch. Commodus was a no-torius drunkard, and Septimius Severus was not much better · Severus died of overindulgence in the flow-as seen in conjunction and contrast with the abbreviated and narrow skirts. And now that we have learned our lesson and acquired a new smartness thereby, I hope that we shall never forget it, even when our skirts become sufficiently lengthy again to afford a certain amount of concealment for our boots and shoes. Such added length and consequent elegance are already to be noted in the latest reception and afternoon toilettes, one just newly arrived from Paris, of which I am sending you a picture, touching the ground in front and at the back forming a distinct, though somewhat diminutive train. But, at the sides, where the soft folds of cloth are draped upward, the under skirt is cut sufficiently short to display the antelope shoes and all their American smartness of shape.

Contrasting Fabrics In This Gown.

Well, any way, the result of this new scheme distinctively piquant, more especially as the contrast be the Latest tween the length and the shortness of, respectively. one skirt and underskirt, is accentuated by a further contrast between their fabrics. For, while the dress is, for the most part, composed of the softest and most supple of cloth, in a wonderful shade of blue-green, the underskirt, of which just that piquant peep is afforded at the eddes, is of a white slik striped with black velvet another talling the striped with black velvet, another telling introduction of this striped and smart material being achieved with equal success, you see, in the corsage. Nor is this the only claim which the gown can make upon your attention and admir-tion as a novelty, for that little square train is finished off and weighted, too, at each corner by a long and handsome tassel of silk, which blends the two subtly suggested shades of blue and green, giving to each one the definiteness denied by the close and shot interweaving of the cloth. Nor must you by any means omit to note and imitate those buttons, which are covered in the white silk, with just one velvet which I have just made in crepe de soie of softest cloud-gray coloring, and combined, as you may see, with black velvet, the scheme, as far as self is concerned, being completed by a bordering of skunk fur at the skirt hem. The toque is of turban modelling and made entirely of the fur, while there standing out in bold and beautiful relief, high at one side, is a huge aigrette of vivid cherry color. For the rest stelle and muff display a new and rather effective rest, stole and muff display a new and rather effective blending of ermine and white satin, whose rival whiteness, as doubly veiled with black chiffon, is softened into a mere suggestion. Tassels,, blending black and white cord and silk, also add to the length of the And now I have another word or two of news for you about furs, a second and smart ermine set, which is, I think worthy of chronicling, being first denuded of the decorative little tails, so that after an unbroken and exquisite expanse of white, they may be all the more effectively grouped together as a bordering fringe. Here again, too, the fur is divided, or the scarf, by a central and wide band of white satin, veiled only snugly, this time, however, with black chiffon, but further ornamented with a plaiting of black satin. This trimming is repeated on the huge flatly hanging must, on which two bands of the satin and chiffon are introduced, while its final curves are all followed by

An Effective Use of Furs.

Skunk, in its turn, is still well to the fore, being worked in the softest and most supple of strands, when used alone for the making of long, wide stoles and giant muffs, though never, I think, have I ater advantage than when combined with chinchilla For the contrast between the two furs is marked to a degree, not only as regards their coloring but also their texture, and the heauty of each seems to be accentuated and increased by this very fact. The chincentuated and increased by desired part of the stole, chilla forms the widest and central part of the stole, the skunk, of course, being used as bordering bands, which not only outline the long front, but also envelope points at the back, the stole being of entirely new shaping and hanging in two other deep points below the waist. The scheme is not only effective in itself, the transfer of acilitates adjustment it below the waist. The school and the school in itself, but, furthermore, facilitates adjustment, it being most difficult for the average woman—as I have always admitted—to manage easily a really elegant and becoming arrangement of a long and absolutely straight scarf

A new black and white scheme, too, which is sufficiently striking to hold its own even in these days—and nights—of lovely and almost lurid colorings, adorns and nights—of lovery and announced furth colorings, adorns black satin with a bold Byzantine embroidery of white floss silk and borderings of white and black fox fur, the lining in its turn being of white satin, veiled with black chiffon. Or again, how do you like the dea of a veritable josephus model in royal blue velvet shot with gold, the lining, on the other hand, being of gold shot with blue, and in both on the other hand, both of gold not being sufficiently insistent to clash in the least with the lovely silvery gray of the chinchilla clash in the least the whole coat. > You will be interested, I feel sure, in the evening dress, which is the subject of this week's photograph and which I have specially designed for wear at little dinners or theatre parties. There is a quaintness about it which is somewhat fascinating. I think, and you see the Oriental suggestion and inspiration are once more in evidence. The straight and scanty little under-dress is of white satin and the short tunic of silver tissue broidered with spots of gold and edged, too, with a lace-like device and then a long fringe, both entirely carried out in the silver Folded about the waist is a scarf of green chiffon, embroidered in gold and edged with a fold of palest blue.

Don't You Pity the Poor Ostrich?

WOMAN who is fortunate enough to own ostrich plumes doesn't usually bother herself much about the manner in which these highly regarded feathers are obtained, but the process is a very interesting one nevertheless.

There seems to be a serious difference of opinion as to whether the operation is a painful one as far as the bird is concerned or not, some declaring that it is as painful as the pulling of a tooth is to a human being, while others compare it to the cutting of a person's nails The truth, however, lies between the two, for while the process of plucking the tail feathers and the largest quill feathers of the tail is absolutely painless, sharp pruning shears being employed for the purpose, the remaining two or three rows in the wing are plucked by hand, and the operation is undoubtedly a most painful one to the bird.

Plucking ostrich feathers is quite a dangerous task unless great care. is taken. The big bird does not willingly submit, and he has power ful weapons in his strong legs, with which he can easily break a man's leg and even kill his tormentor if the kick is planted in the chest

For this reason a novel method is employed on small ostrich farms where the specially constructed pens found on the larger establish ments are not to be had. The os-trich is blindfolded by means of a black stocking which is readily thrown over his head. He is then run up against a haystack and the free end of the stocking is made fast to a stake driven in the hay. As the ostrich cannot kick backward, but only forward, he is absolutely helpless in this unusual situation, and the men may work on him with impunity. As is shown in the illustration, two of the men pluck the white feathers and tips from his wings, while the third one grasps the bird's tail firmly and presses it forward to prevent the ostrich from turning

This method is effective, but where large numbers of birds are handled, as they are on the Los Angeles and other California ostrich farms, elaborate pens are employed for the purpose. The bird is driven into the pen, which is as small that he has no room to krea and his eyes are blindfolded by means of a stocking The workers handle the bird from the outside of the enclosure. In the big farms of Los Angeles thousands of birds are thus plucked every year, and their plumage is distributed throughout the country to adorn women who have no word of pity for the poor bird who provides them with their ornaments.

The hockey season is once more in full blast. It opened under happy auspices on Tuesday night and promises with favorable weather to be the busiest and most successful on record. True to British instincts we have become a thoroly sporting people devoted mainly to outdoor pastimes, for hockey presents. In other words in a city of upwards of four hundred thousand people only 62 are known to have exceeded reasonable bounds in their appetites, on a festive day. This is very far from being the one in four that a certain minister prated about some time ago. On the contrary it is just one in every 6450 persons, which the majority of people will think a good showing and one that Toronto as a moral and lawabiding city has little to feel extra ashamed about. If local option or prohibition had been in force it is doubtful if the returns would have been any less. Sir Alfred Pearce Gould, senior surgeon to the Middlesex Hospital, stated before the Royal College of Surgeons that men who indulge in intoxicants are more subject to cancer than those who don't. At the same time he stated that there are more cases of cancer among women than among men. Does this mean that more women drink than men and that therefore the sex is more subject to cancer, or that the fact that more men who take an occasional drink are so If they were asked to kiss a good, clean, wholesome man, would turn up their pretty little noses in pious and holy horror. Such are the contrarieties and inconsistencies of a perverse world.

It reads: "Rules and regulations for the government of racing, trotting and betting, as adopted by the principal turf associations thruout the United States and Canada." A sub-line states, "Compiled at the office of Wilker' Spirit of The Times," an old-time journal of the same title, is now but a memory. The publishers and printers were M. B. Brown & Co., then on Williams street, New York, nearly opposite Robert Bonner's Ledger. The late Martin B. Brown founder of the firm, was a road driver and yachtsman, rather than a turfman, but his part seems to have been only to copyright a book that would sell and also appeal to advertisers.

St. Louis; Suffolk Park, Philadelphia; Hartford, and the Forest City, of Portland, Me. Races for thorobreds are alone considered in the rules of the Passiac County Agricultural Society of Paterson, Laclede Blood Horse Association of St. Louis, Saratoga Association, California State and the Metairie Jockey Club of New Orleans.

In the following instances there are dual running sets of rules, to reveal that both running and trotting races were in full sanction: Avon Driving Park Association, Avon Springs N. Y.; Chillicothe, O., Trotting Park Association: Chicago, (Ill.) Driving Park Association: Woodlawn Race-course Association, Louisville, Ky.; Olentangy Park Association Columbus, O.; Michigan Association for Improvement in the Breed of Horses, Detroit; and the West Canada Turf Club. West Canada Turf Club. St. Lawrence Course. Cornwall. It is like a role-call of the dead, this list of sonorous names, for there are few to survive the lapse of time. Yet the summary has some historic interest, and it will also rouse the blood of some old sports as a clarlon blast. The ploneer tracks, too. did their part well in establishing racing, and those to be wiped out have been succeeded by new arenas for the same and the rule that "no negro or mulatto shall be permitted to make a nomination in any stake to be run for over this course."

Betting is generally ignored by modern racing officials, but forty years ago the clubs arrogated to themselves absolute authority as to the disposition of bets. This is revealed by the context of the rules issued in weights for age then were: Two-year-olds, seventy-five pounds; 3-year-olds, ninety pounds; 4-year-olds, 104 pounds; 5-year-olds, 114 pounds; 6-year-olds, 120 pounds; 7-year-olds and up-wards, 124 pounds Three pounds were allowed to mares and geldings. The starting was by the tap of a drum, after which there could be no recall, but at Passiac, when the start was not at the judges' stand. Rules of Twenty Tracks.

The rules of twenty tracks are printed in full, altho only sixteen are indexed. This suggests that additions have been made from time to time on the original edition, which may have antedated the imprint by some years. Only regulations governing trotting and pacing are printed for the Fashion and Union courses on Long Island, altho each had been the scene of great races long prior to 1866; Riverside and Mystic Parks, at Boston; Mound City, St. Louis; Suffolk Park, Philadelphia; Hartford, and the Forest City, of Portwere the usual form of the sport and the rules do not give attention in much detail to straightaway races.

Nowadays the sole duty of the judges is to place the horses, but forty years ago they had to acquit themselves of the many duties that now devolve on the stewards. A uniform and somewhat peculiar clause in the statement of their duties is that they should refrom the officers of the day-the patrol of distance judges, starter, clerk, etc.
As to the Ladies.

A savor of the patrician elegance of the sport on the Metaire course of New Orleans appears in the by-law of the club: "The ladies' committee shall receive ladies visiting the course at the

A Spade Was a Spade.

In the "rules for running and betting" the stipulations as to weights and definitions need receive only a passing glance, for, with somewhat different wording, they reappear in the present turf rules. The frank recognition of betting, however, as a proper part and parcel of the sport is novel to modern racegoers. More than one sportsman will declare that the evident intent to be fair to all is less pernicious of country clubs, lakefront mansions will declare that the evident intent to be fair to all is less pernicious to public morality than the mealy-mouthed intolerance claimed for the "uncoguid" of the present time. The sportsmen of 1866 did not hesitate to call a spade a spade, as instance the following statutes on bets enforced by the Saratoga Association of that time.

the following statutes on bets enforced by the Saratoga Association of that time:

"The Field—The person who lays the odds can choose his horse or the field; when he has chosen his horse, the field is what starts against him. In all sweepstake premiums, if one horse is backed against the field and only one of the field start the bets must stand. In all pay or place races, or pay and play bets, the bets on the field must stand for a walk-over.

"Bets Between Heats—All bets made between heats are off, unless all the horse that have the right start in trans theat.

"Play or Pay—When a bet is made on a horse play or pay, the horse must start or the party betting on him loses the bet.

"Off Bets—A confirmed bet cannot be off but by mutual consent, except in cases hereinafter mentioned.
"Making Stakes—Either of the bettors may demand stakes to be made, and, on refusal, declare the bet to be vold.

and for some seasons thereafter, nor of many clubs of that period to give meetings which are reported in H. G. Crickmore's compilation, privately printed by the late William C. Whitney. But while the little racing hand book of forty years ago may be somewhat hap-hazard in the contents, it is of interest as a sporting relic and for its glimpses of old racing and trotting customs.

it back that he neglected to ask their permission when he took the money. In a week or two he discovered that he was not as good a stock prophet as he had supposed, and that so much of the borrowed money was gone that he could never hope to pay it all back. So he put what was left into a suit case and went to

But although temporarily safe from pursuit, he was not out of reach of a torturing conscience. He reflected that the money really did not belong to him, and that he ought to have consulted its owners before he borrowed it. He thought it would be a good idea to pay back as much as he could and to try to make up the rest later on.

So he wrote to the bank that he wanted to come back, give up all the money in his possession and make a fresh start. He was deeply grieved when he discovered that he would be prosecuted and probably sent to prison. It was the first indiscretion he had ever committed, he said. He did not see why a man who was really convinced of the error of his ways should not be permitted to make a new

This young man will have an opportunity to start life anew, but he will have to start it with the fifteen dollars and the new suit of clothes allowed to every convict who leaves the penitentiary discharged.

He will have to start it with the stigma of a convict upon him.

Unless he possesses some far higher talent than the gift of borrowing other people's money this stigma will stick to him through life. He may secure an excellent position and by hard work and attention to business begin to climb toward success. And then some day he will be recognized and an outraged emproyer, demanding how he dared associate with honest men, will turn him out into the Life is full of incidents like that. The really penitent criminal, eager to be honest, to begin right and remain right, is driven from one place to another, always frowned upan, always dismissed as soon as his secret is discovered.

And at last, finding that honest men refuse to welcome him, he will turn to men who are not so honest, and in time become one of the chronic offenders, who get the long sentences at hard labor.

It is true that our system of punishment for many offenses is barbarous, and often results in the wholesale manufacture of criminals. But it is also true that no man needs to begin wrong. The first start can be the right start. And the man who makes it so will have a far easier time than the man who thinks that there can be a second and a third beginning. and that the first really doesn't count.

The mania for getting rich quick is contagious, but there is no necessity for exposing oneself to it. The clerk who is ambitious to be president of the bank may achieve his ambition, perhaps, but not by dipping sticky fingers into the till.

And better never be president or vice-president or cashier or even a head clerk than by making a beginning that will lead to disgrace and perhaps ruin for life.

The time to begin a career is in youth, when enthusiasm refuses to admit that there is such a word as impossibility, when even the wearisome details of business seem promising steps to something higher.

Starting afresh at thirty or forty is bitter. discouraging business, even without the handicap of a criminal record.

If you could ask all the discouraged, tired men whom you meet why they find life so hard, they would answer that they were not interested in what they were doing. They

The man who is plodding along in a business house at a salary that makes no headway against the mortgage on his home bitterly repents his choice of a "white-collar job" when he was young Had he not been so desirous of getting something "genteel" to do, he might have begun as a machinist and developed the mechanical ability he knows he possesses. But he feared the ridicule of his "friends" when they saw him in overalls. He was afraid of the dirt and grease of the machinery, of the hard work after hours at mathematics and the theory of mechanics. And so when something "clean" was offered he took it. And now at forty he knows that he lacks the moral and physical courage to make a second beginning.

Another man-a stock broker's clerk, on a salary which would just about suffice to keep the head of the firm in cigars-was attracted by the lure of Wall Street. He had executive ability, a good education and abundant native industry. With these he thought he could easily make a fortune in the "Street."

But as the years went by he discovered that the men who were advanced by his employer were those with the suave address and "mixing" ability which made acquaintances easily and as readily persuaded his acquaintances to

Had this man gone into one of the great department stores his qualities would have counted, and he might to-day hold a highly paid and important position. But now it is too late. He started wrong in the beginning; he must go wrong through life.

Everywhere you go you will find misfits. and always they are among the ranks of the discontented. Present advantage led most of them wrong at the start, misdirected determination kept them from making a change the instant they discovered that they were not on the right track. And always before their eyes was the hope that should they at last fail at what they were doing there would be the chance of making a second beginning-a new

But to the man with his way to pay the years pass before he knows. And when at length he sees unmistakably that he would have been better in something else, he must have almost superhuman courage to undertake a fresh beginning.

Now and then a general in our army, with plenty of time to ponder on opportunities for promotion, suggests that it would be a good thing if we copied the Continental plan of compulsory military service.

This would mean that every young an, at the time he ought to be making a right beginning, would be compelled to make a wrong beginning.

One or two or three of the best years of his life would be taken from him for the purpose of teaching him a trade that would prove utterly useless in later life.

While he ought to be thinking and planning and studying for the work he is to do in life he would have to drill, polish his rifle, brush his clothes and shine his shoes or pace to and fro guarding a garrison that no one on earth had the slightest intention of disturbing.

In a time when competition is keen and when parents are wondering how their sons are ever going to make a comfortable living a young man needs every hour of his youth to equip himself for the fight he must make for

It would be a beautiful piece of idiocy to rob him of his best years in order to start him in exactly the wrong direction.

Beginning Is Possible, of Course, but Only at a Heavy Expense of Youth and Energy.

The reader of middle age needs no warning about making a wrong start. Most men have made them, and spent long and unnecessary efforts in retrieving themselves.

A boy who intends to be an engineer had better study engineering and work at engineering. A course in a law school will do him no good whatever.

The boy who expects to be a lawyer is wasting his time clerking in a shoe store, unless he must thereby earn the money he needs to

Any youth who begins life in this rushing, energetic, excited age will find he has all he can do to make headway if he starts right. He cannot achieve any great success unless he does something that has never been done before, and he will soon learn that this is by no means an easy task.

The only way is to start right. Let the man who has started wrong make the second beginning. For him there is no alternative save utter failure. But youth, with all life before it, CAN start right, and it is far wiser, as well as far easier, to make one start than two.

For no man can be happy or successful or of use to others unless he does what he is best fitted to do. Instinct will tell him what that is. It is for him to think long and seriously before he begins his life work, and then begin it without any false starts.
