CHATHAM. - - - SEPTEMBER 27, 1883. In Memoriam. DIED JUNE 11TH, 1883. See sorrow o'er my heart and life
Has her dark mantle spread,
O Lord, I bow me in the dust,
My brother, he is dead.

Could I have seen him at the last, Oh! could I have been there, His gentle voice had eased my heart And lessened my despair. My heart is broken at the thought His face no more I'll see Until we meet in that bright home Where all from pain are free.

All is of God, I know quite well, When the command he gives, We must the summons then obey And in his presence live. Oh! little did I think how soon His soul would soar above.

To those bright realms of endless day
Where all is peace and love.

Father of mercies, hear my cry, Th, orphans shield, and widow stay, And guide and guard their coming years For this to Thee I pray. Wife and his mother look to Heaven, To Christ our Saviour there, The Rock of Ages now will be Our refuge in despair, Excellent Suggestions.

PRIVATE ROWING. Mr. Courtney, who is alleged by imagto accomplish the feat of beating Hanlan. He is to do this not by rowing a match with Hanlan but by rowing over a given distance in less time than Hanlan has ever after meals, and all the perplexing and rowed over a like distance. This is an admirable plan for Mr. Courtney, and it estion, are dispersed by this salutary s pleasant to find that he has discovered the true way in which to display his skill | purifier. as an oarsman. His great feat will, of course, be performed in private. There are so many bad men who spend their whole time in poisoning Mr. Courtney, in band with sendelphs.

His wife is also dead. and saws are asleep; and he will be his own starter, time keeper, umpire, stakeholder, committee of arrangements, and judge's steam launch. Rowing in such rcumstances there is not the slightest doubt that Mr. Courtney will beat Hanlan's best time and forever put at rest the pretensions of that impertinent person. If all other public nuisances, such as Mr. John L. Sullivan, Mr. Slade, and the pedestrian pests, were to follow Mr. Courtney's example and perform their Provisions great feats of "slugging" and walking in private, decent people would be under great obligations to them. If a man wants to walk a preposterous number of niles in six days or to "knock out" another man in four rounds, let him do it

8,200 and then selected Mr. A. E. Killam as .$2,253,650 their candidate. In Dominion politics Mr. Killam is a Tory, but Liberals and Tories alike accepted him loyally as a pledged supporter of the Local Governent. This did not suit the stalwarts of the Tory camp. They could not allow their more moderate brethren to associate with the enemy in any way. With them, a Liberal is to be avoided as a dangerous element in the community. There is too much "live and let live" about him and they fear that association with him might lead to apostacy from the ranks of the faithful.

A Committee to provide accommodation for Visitors has been appointed. Strangers wishing information as to lodgings may apply at the office of the Secretary, C. S. Melick, at present in the City Building, afterwards in the Exibition Building. It is the intention of the committe to provide ample accommodation for all visitors.

One of the greatest attractions of the Exhibition will be the Model Working Dairy, which Messrs. Manchester, Robertson & Allison are bringing from England. Prof. Sheldon will be in horse of this exhibit and deliver a course of Lecures during the Exhibition. It is intended to have a FINE DISPLAY

OF FIREWORKS on one or two evenings of each week, also one or more Baloon Ascensions. The Baloon is said to be one of the finest in the world. There will also be a PROCESSION OF THE TRADES.

BANDS OF MUSIC will be in attendance.

said she, in protest.

"Do you think I was going to let you leave without saying good-by?" he answered. "You are looking a little better this morning, Yolande—but not well, not well. Are you sure you won't reconsider? Will you not wait a few days, accustom yourself to think of it, and then go, if you will go, with Mr. Shortlands?"

"Oh no, that is all over, papa," said she. "That is all over, papa," said she. "That is all settled. I am going this morning—now."

"Now? Why now? It is only half past six!" he exclaimed.

"I wish to have enough time at Gress," she answered, calmly, "to explain all the arrangements to Mrs. Bell. "But he compelled her to sit down and have some breakfast, while he remained at the window, anxious, disturbed, and yet for the most part silent. There was no doubt he regarded her going with an undefined dread; but he saw that it was no use to try to dissuade her, her purpose being so obviously settled and clear. There was another ing on—"

Stood there for a long time regarding them, until the dog-cart disappeared at the turning of the road, and Yolande was gone. This, then, was the end of that peaceful security-that he had hoped to find at Allt-nam-ba!

Yolande was not driving this morning; she had too many things to think of. But when they reached the bridge at the lower end of the loch, she told Sandy to stop, and took the reins.

"Here is a letter for Mr. Leslie," she said. "You need not take it up to the house; put it in the letter-box at the gate."

Then they drove on again. When stood the regarding them, until the dog-cart disappeared at the turning of the regarding them, until the dog-cart disappeared at the turning of the regarding them, until the dog-cart disappeared at the turning of the regarding them, until the dog-cart disappeared at the turning of the road, and Yolande was gone. It's the way o' young people never to be satisfied. And here is Mr. Melville going away just when everything was ready for his taking back the land that belonged to his own people, and settling down on it the dopring after the departing vehicle—and perhaps rather regretfully too, for she had taken a great liking to this bright young English lady who had come into these wilds; but presently she was recalled from her reveries or regrets by the calling of Mr. Melville.

He was firmer than she was; he regarded her calmly, though still his face was of a ghastly paleness.
She hesitated for a moment or two; then she glanced around.

"I wish you to—to give me a flower," she said, "that I may take it with me."
"No," he said at once. "No. Forget everything that has happened here, except the duty you owe to others."

"That I have deserved." she said, in a low voice. "Good-by."

She held out her hand. He took it and held it; and there was a great compassion in his eyes. To her they seem.
