Smallman & Ingram, Limited

And Now We Turn Busily Towards the Summer Garb for the House

No sooner have many of us finished with providing ourselves with summer raiment than we have to turn about and perform the same office for our homes.

And now it begins. There are fresh, cool curtains to be hung, slip covers to be provided, awnings, screens and veranda blinds to be thought of; new floor coverings, delightful in their freshness; wicker- and rattan furniture for living-room and porch, not to speak of the new supplies of summer bedding and draperies that are probably needed. In all the varied branches the SMALLMAN & INGRAM Store is abundantly prepared to be of service.

But we can do more, too, than supply the furnishings; our expert decorating staff can assume the whole responsibility of setting your house in order, from putting on the wall paper and laying the carpets to the designing and choosing of the draperies and decorations.

Big Carpet Sale Begins Monday

Wiltons That Are Today $1.65 Value, Sale Price $1.25 Yard

New spring goods, but bought before the recent advance on these yarns, enables us to quote this extraordinary low price. These Carpets are made of the best worsted yarns, which produce the most durable and best-wearing carpets, and the designs and colorings we are showing in this range at $1.25 are the most desirable for parlor, hall or dining-room, among which will be found two-toned green—green ground with rosebud design—fawn ground with design in browns and rose—brown Oriental with stair to match—also borders to match every design. These Carpets at present market prices would be good value at $1.65, and this is a rare opportunity to make quite a nice saving on the covering of your room while these are selling, at per yard... $1.25

Special Axminster Rugs

Scotch Axminsters, woven in one piece; a Carpet that is renowned for its great weaving qualities, and a texture that lends itself to the most beautiful colors and makes an ideal rug for the parlor. They include the beautiful greens, rose and fawns, and for the library or dining-room there are Orientals in a variety of designs, including medallions. This beautiful collection is priced extraordinarily low. Sizes 8 ft. 3 in. by 11 ft. 6 in. and 9 ft. by 10 ft. 6 in., for $21.00. Size 9 ft. by 12 ft. for $24.00, and size 10 ft. by 13 ft. for each... $29.00

Special Tapestry Rugs, $10.00 and $11.50

SEAMLESS IMPORTED TAPESTRIES—Made of the finest wool yarns, in beautiful floral medallion designs, suitable for parlors. This is an exceptionally fine collection, and the prices on these two sizes are exceptionally low. Two of the most popular sizes, too, will fit into a great many different sized rooms. See these Monday. Size 3x3 1/2 yards for $10.00. Size 3x4 yards, for $11.50

Crex Rugs for the Porch, Summer Cottage or Bedroom

These are absolutely sanitary, and have proven a most practical floor covering for summer use by reason of their durability, cleanliness, economy and attractiveness. Ask for a catalogue illustrating the different colorings, sizes and designs.

THE MERGER MOVEMENT.
The tendency toward combination in the field of industry has been very pronounced in Canada in the past few years.

The merger movement in Canada follows an apparently irresistible and world-wide tendency.

THOUGHTS OF SUMMER.
June has come in May this year, bringing already the apple blossom and even the booming June bug.

tal people. They must be realized. The use of crowding cities and intensified activity demands imperatively that the tired brain and body be recruited by a lull, a retreat from cares, a change of scene, a prospect of occupation. Some little time at least is needed in which to put by reserve force to draw on in the long months that are to follow.

There is a reproach to society in the contrast between the increasing tension of modern life, in the cities at any rate, and the growth of labor-saving devices and of scientific discoveries which should relieve the strain on human nerves and muscles.

Where is the best place to go for the rest? That is a big question. Newspapers are already filling up columns with advertisements of attractive resorts. Some say that home is the best place, if it is agreeable, and in a beautiful city like London, with its miles of shade trees and boulevards. Home is indeed a change from many from the business street, to the commercial traveller the greatest luxury.

ELECTION PREPARATIONS.
It is more than whispered that an enormous fund is being raised to fight reciprocity in this country, and that the Opposition managers have decided to force an election this year if possible.

The Advertiser, for one, has been disposed to believe that the Opposition wished to avoid an election on the reciprocity issue, and that obstruction would collapse before the Government could frame a redistribution bill, based on the new census. It may be that Mr. Borden's visiting Toronto and Montreal advisers have convinced him that he would have more hope of defeating the Government before than after the reciprocity agreement went into effect.

The country is not to be congratulated if events are shaping toward an election on the question of reciprocity, and there is the best of reasons for saying that the Government would welcome it, though efforts to put the agreement through the present Parliament will not be relaxed, as a matter of good faith with President Taft.

Mr. Balfour has taken to aeroplane flying. Politically he has been up in the air for several years.

Present-day opponents of reciprocity try to explain Conservative advocacy of it in other days, by saying that Canada is a different country. So it is, and it may be more than a coincidence that it has had different rulers.

A POINTER FOR THE UNIONISTS.
The Unionist party in Great Britain will never regain its position in the country by a policy of mere negotiation and reaction. It must first of all be a party in service for the people.

(New York Journal.)
Our idea of the height of affluence is to have money enough to have the rugs sent out to be cleaned and the kitchen floor painted by an expert.

Excused Lady (at the telephone)—I want my husband, please, once.

"Any no one else does, either," responded the promoter.

CARLING'S CREEK IN BAD STATE.
Deputation Asked the Board of Health to Improve It at Once.

DECLARED A NUISANCE.
City May Get Power to Tile it Properly and Charge Cost to Property Owners Benefitted.

The condition of Carling's Creek was again brought to the attention of the board of health Friday night when a deputation consisting of Messrs. T. G. Calder, and W. P. Nolan, appeared to ask the board to improve it.

Who Owns It?
In the meantime, the secretary will find out who owns the creek, and while the council has to force a tile sewer down there, Mr. Wright, city engineer, will furnish estimates of the cost.

"Fruit-a-lives" Completely Cured Me.

Lakelet, Ont., May 12th, 1910.
"It is my firm belief that every woman should take 'Fruit-a-lives' if she wants to keep herself in good health."

It is wonderful how quickly women get better when taking 'Fruit-a-lives.' These famous fruit tablets relieve headaches and tone up the nervous system. They regulate the bowels, strengthen the stomach, stimulate the appetite, and take away that pain in the back.

SCOTCH PIPERS MADE HIT AT ARMORIES.
A Splendid Concert Held on Friday Evening—Some Presentations Made.

A large audience thoroughly enjoyed the programme held concert given in the armories Friday night under the auspices of the Seventh Regiment.

The musical programme, which consisted of a number of fine selections by the band of the Seventh Regiment, was enjoyed throughout.

When the pipers, in command of Sergeant Thomas McDonald, marched in and then paraded around the armories several times playing the stirring Highland tunes, they were accorded enthusiastic applause.

AYLMER.

Aylmer, May 12.—Richard Wright has been engaged to teach the Dunborne school for another year at a substantial increase in salary, and expects to move there next week.

Mrs. F. H. Trim is spending the forenoon with her daughter, Mrs. Foster T. Cook, of St. Thomas.

George Durke, of St. Thomas, formerly a resident of this place, is spending a few days here.

A case of unusual interest to the residents of this township, Johnson vs. Henry, is being tried before Judge Ermatinger in the division court here today. Johnson is a farmer residing in Malahide, and Henry is a Springfield merchant. Johnson went to Mr. Henry's store to purchase some cow milk, but claimed he was given some other substance instead. He gave it to the cow, which died shortly afterward. The plaintiff is suing the defendant for the amount of the damages. E. W. Scattergood, of London, is appearing for Henry, and W. H. Darvum, of Aylmer, for Mr. Johnson.

Bowling has again started in Aylmer and much interest is taken in the game this year than ever before.

An Aylmer gentleman is considering the purchase of Mrs. Kennedy's property on Talbot street, next to Trim's butcher shop and should the deal go through he will open up a business there, making the third store of the kind in the town.

Malahide, No. 140, A. F. and A. M., was honored last evening with a visit from Rt. Wor. Bro. J. C. Spencer, of St. Thomas, J. G. M., of London District, No. 5, on his official visit. A large number of the craft turned out to do honor to the right worshipful brother. After routine business, a second degree was conferred on one candidate, by Wor. Bro. E. D. Howly and his capable staff of officers. Rt. Wor. Bro. Spencer in an able address, complimented the brethren and his officers on their efficiency. After lodge was closed the brethren repaired to the banquet room, where Bro. W. C. Talbot attended to the honor man, after which a short toast list was introduced and a pleasant hour spent in speech and song. Among the visiting brethren were noticed Wor. Bro. E. Crawford, London; Bro. L. D. Gillett, T. L. Cochran, D. M. Sterling, L. J. Robbins, St. Thomas; J. W. Hays, Ingersoll; and Samuel Weir, Harrisville.

The fine soil, the excellent, but not rigorous climate, the shipping facilities, and the many other advantages of location are strong factors in the popularity of Lambton County, and there is no doubt that good results will come from the enterprise shown by the residents of this district. The booklet will be distributed throughout the United States and Great Britain, and every effort made to induce settlers to come to Lambton.

FIRE AT HARRIMAN'S. Arden, N. Y., May 13.—Lightning struck a large workshop on the estate of the late E. H. Harriman here last night, setting fire which destroyed the shop and a stable. It was reported that a large quantity of gasoline, stored underground, caught fire, and exploded, with painful injuries to a laborer named Yeoman, who was fighting the flames. Both workshop and stable were levelled to the ground as a result of about $100,000.

CHARGES CAPITAL MISAPPROPRIATED

Sensational Charge in Connection With Cement Merger.

COMMITTEE HOLDS UP BILL

Sir Sanford Fleming, Former President of Company, Makes Starting Assortment.

Ottawa, Ont., May 12.—Sensational charges in connection with the Canadian cement merger were made today in the Commons private bills committee in a letter from Sir Sanford Fleming, who has resigned the presidency of the company, to the effect that a "certain gentleman" and his associates should account for $13,000,000 of watered stock alleged to have been secured improperly and "by artifice in guise of law."

Sir Sanford's bombshell came in a letter in connection with the company's effort to secure power to create $11,000,000 of debenture stock to be exchanged for preference shares.

S. J. E. Gude, K. C., for the company, referred to by Sir Sanford was a perfectly legal deal.

Sir Sanford's Letter. After Hugh Guthrie had protested that there should be more time given for the consideration of the bill on account of its importance, and Mr. Tupper had protested that this was a merger which should not be passed lightly, while Mr. Crosby had rather favored the bill, the chairman, Mr. Smith, said that he had some correspondence to read.

The first letter was from Sir Sanford Fleming, which in part was as follows: "As president of the International Cement Company at Hull, and associated with other cement companies up to the time of the formation of the Canada Cement Company on Sept. 10, 1909, I feel it a duty which I owe to thousands who are situated as I am, the holders of 7 per cent preference stock of the Canada Cement Company, to warn them against the passing of a bill which has been introduced into parliament, and has for its object to create an issue of $11,000,000, 6 per cent debenture stock to take the place of $11,000,000, 7 per cent cumulative preference stock now outstanding."

Sir Sanford went into the history of the Canada Cement Company, which, he said, was a merger of eleven companies with a capital of thirty millions, of which eleven were preference.

Col. Smith stated that three documents were before the meeting. One was the resignation of Sir Sanford as honorary president of the Canada Cement Company. Another was a copy of a letter which had been sent to each director, and another was an appeal to Sir Sanford to have a searching examination made into the matter.

"In these documents will be found evidence to establish that an extraordinary misappropriation of capital had been effected through the agency of the very inception of the Canada Cement Company, and that such misappropriation was effected by a deliberate artifice under the guise of a bona fide business transaction."

Moreover, as a result, the first act of wrongdoing appears to have led to the necessity of seeking power from parliament to substitute 6 per cent debenture stock for 7 per cent preference.

"It will be seen," the intermediary continued, "that through an intermediary agency large amounts have been appropriated and not accounted for."

A STRIKING EULOGY OF DEAD PRELATE

Sermon of Bishop Fallon Over the Bier of Archdeacon McEvay.

Toronto, May 12.—At the funeral of Archbishop McEvay today the Right Rev. Bishop Fallon preached the sermon, taking as his text the words, "You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you, that you should go forth and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain."—St. John, chap. 15, verse 16.

He said the vocation of a child for the priesthood was one of the most mysterious creations of Divine Providence. The child who heard the voice became changed in heart. His ideas and ambitions changed. To his friends he was an altered being. To his mother and father, once his thoughts became known, the son became divine. For him they were ready to make themselves poorer than the poorest, that their son, being chosen, might go on.

"Oh, brethren, what a thing this is when God himself comes down into your human heart, and the glory of that house becomes your glory."

"Such a one is surrounded by holy, competent guides, which, with his every step, he follows. He is surrounded by an object almost of veneration. Such a boy was Fergus Patrick McEvay. He was a boy upon whom God's hand had rested in love. He sent the family priest to bless the family. Under the guidance of that venerable mother, who remains to follow the body of her beloved son to his final resting place, under the guidance which only a Christian mother can give to a child, he grew up, meeting his Christian duty, he grew up, meeting his duty with a ready and a ready of purpose and firmness of will that never left him until he gave it back to God. Oh, brethren, you cannot know how he loved the will of God. In the last days of his disease, when his friends begged to have him special care, to save him from the inevitable, his answer was: 'God sent me here. Do you think I should wish to stay when He sends for me to go away?'"

His Work For the Church. Bishop Fallon gave a graphic description of the whole career of the deceased prelate, from early childhood, when he first heard the call to serve at the altar to his elevation to the exalted position which he held at the time of his death. His long and his life, he said, was a life of prayer, of a great many hours of prayer, of a great many hours of prayer, of a great many hours of prayer.

He was a strict disciplinarian, but his orders, never given in a harsh or haughty manner, were at all times cheerfully complied with by clergy and laity alike. He loved his people and was beloved by them. He was always solicitous for the welfare of the children and their education. During his reign in the Diocese of London, besides of all manner, he perfected the Catholic school system there. He recognized that education was the supreme gift after the grace of God, that it gave joy to the individual, it illuminated the home and exalted the nation.

Among the lights of his life that have passed none shone brighter than the light of his work for education. Well he knew the church was not to live unless it served God here and now, to love and serve God here and now, to love and serve God here and now, to love and serve God here and now.

When he passed on, he left behind him a church that was more than ever a church of God, a church that was more than ever a church of God, a church that was more than ever a church of God.

When he passed on, he left behind him a church that was more than ever a church of God, a church that was more than ever a church of God, a church that was more than ever a church of God.

SUNSHINE FURNACE

The Sunshine is differently and better constructed than common furnaces. It's stronger, safer, more healthful.

The dome, the two sections of the fire-pot and the frame of the ash-pit are all securely fastened together by our famous "cup joint." Three "cup joints" in all, you see.

All sections, you will notice, fit together perfectly, and are lined with a layer of asbestos cement, which unites them so firmly together that they become, in every purpose, one solid piece of metal. Can never slip or fall apart.

And that's not all! The top of the dome is fastened to the sides with cement and boiler rivets, making the Sunshine just as smoke, gas, heat and dust tight as a steam boiler.

From a hygienic standpoint it takes precedence in the furnace world.

Notice, too, the Sunshine is equipped with an automatic gas damper. This damper automatically opens when the gas in the furnace reaches a certain pressure and allows it to escape up the chimney. Eliminates all danger of an explosion or gas escaping through the registers.

Safest as well as most healthful, easiest managed, cleanest, greatest labor-saving and fuel-economizing furnace you can buy.

If your local dealer does not handle the Sunshine write direct to us for free booklet.

NO DISSENSIONS IN THE CABINET

Story of Split One of a Number of Canards.

FOSTER FOR CORONATION

Conservative Camp Row Over Parliamentary Delegation Has Been Patched

Ottawa, May 12.—The stories published during the past few days in some of the Opposition papers to the effect that there is dissension among the members of the government on the reciprocity proposals, and that Hon. Mr. Fielding has threatened to resign unless parliament remained in session, despite the absence of the premier and the coronation contingent next month, are on a par with numerous other canards of a similar nature that have been periodically sprung on the innocent readers of the Opposition papers during the past few months. Most of these stories are speedily refuted by ensuing political developments and are merely laughed at by members on both sides of the House here.

A Fabrication The last fabrication in a case in point. Hon. Mr. Fielding is in entire accord with the decision of the Government for a short adjournment, as announced by the premier this afternoon. There is absolutely no dissension in the government ranks on the reciprocity issue, and the stories of inner strife and dissension among the members of the Government or their followers in Parliament, in respect to any of the large issues now before the House are absolutely without foundation in fact. With the exception of the detection of Messrs. Sifton, Gorman and Lloyd Harris on the reciprocity proposal, Mr. Fielding stated with authority that the party was never more united or more confident as to the result of the next appeal to the country than it is at the present time.

Another canard which has been going the rounds during the past few days is that Mr. A. W. Campbell, deputy minister of railways and canals, has tendered his resignation. There is no foundation in fact of this story either.

Taft's War Secretary HAS RESIGNED JOB

Dickinson To Be Succeeded by H. L. Stimson, New York Lawyer. Washington, May 12.—Secretary of War Taft has appointed Mr. Henry L. Stimson, recently Republican candidate for governor of New York, in his place. Mr. Stimson's resignation was dated April 28, and his action is due to the pressure of his private business in Tennessee. Mr. Stimson is sixty years old and a lawyer. He is one of the counsel for the United States before the Alaska Boundary Tribunal, and is a past president of the American Bar Association. Mr. Stimson is a mighty hunter, and his favorite stamming ground is the Canadian Rocky Mountain district.

OPPOSITION SQUABBLE

During Mr. Borden's Absence Some of His Followers Again Break Loose.

Ottawa, May 12.—Once again tonight, as usual in the temporary absence of Mr. Borden the Commons witnessed the unseemly political spectacle of one faction of the Opposition publicly rebuking and criticizing the other faction of its own party. This time the bill incorporating the Grain-Growers' Grain Company was the cause of the split, and the westerners, represented by Mr. Staples, administered the rebuke.

The conduct of the time being by Messrs. Reid, Lancaster and Middlebro, renewed its attack on this measure on the ground of its extensive powers. They argued that it simply gave to the western farmers the powers granted under the companies act to all eastern grain incorporations. Mr. Rutan's suggestion that the opposition was engendered because it was a farmers' organization and opposed to the anti-reciprocity interests brought from Dr. Reid the assurance that he did not oppose it because the farmers were interested, but because it was dangerous legislation. The name of the company would enable the farmers to be "worked" as they objected to the bill.

Mr. Lancaster said the only aim of the incorporation was for advertising purposes. The men in control knew nothing of farming. Nine-tenths of them had nothing to do with practical agriculture. The idea of the name was worse than the Farmers' Bank, and Mr. Knowles said he had never heard of the Grain-Growers' Company. Mr. Knowles said he had never heard of the Grain-Growers' Company. BASEBALL DRIVES COUPLE INTO COURT

Defeat of Tigers Made Husband so Mad He Left Home.

Detroit, May 12.—At last baseball has become a despoiler of homes. Baseball has driven many a man to drink, some to the asylum, others to the bankruptcy court, and a case of a man swallowing a lighted cigar in his excitement over the game has been recorded.

But it remained for the St. Louis Browns and the Tigers to break up a home. They have the fame of driving the first pair of fans into the divorce court and Judge James O. Murfin, another enthusiast, completed the separation yesterday.

Hazel M. Buck came before Judge Murfin yesterday and told a pitiful tale. Mr. and Mrs. William M. Buck were fans. When the team lost to the other clubs they usually accepted defeat as best they could. But when the Browns, that insignificant team which stayed at the bottom all the season, took seven games out of nine, that finished it.

The first game of that disastrous series was the beginning. As soon as the game was over Mr. Buck took seven games out of nine, that finished it. The first game of that disastrous series was the beginning. As soon as the game was over Mr. Buck took seven games out of nine, that finished it.

RELIGIOUS MAN Listowel Man Starving in Order to Carry Out a Vow. Guelph, May 12.—A story of religious fanaticism was told to Chief of Police Randall this morning by a young man from Listowel. The man came to the police station shortly after midnight, and asked for shelter for the night, which was readily given him. This morning he was questioned by the chief and the story was as follows: He was a wife and family of five children living in Listowel and apparently well-to-do, and claiming to be a member of the Church of God. He had a religious vow, not to eat, sleep or drink, and he made a solemn vow, not to do these things, and he had kept it for a long time.

Rheumatism Relief Fund. Many in this vicinity have not only found relief, but a cure in the following prescription, which was printed last year in the newspapers. Anyone suffering with rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, indigestion, neuritis, and all the ailments of the nervous system, would do well to clip and present this advertisement to the Dispensary, an ordinary character, but the peculiar combinations or compounding seems to effect results little less than marvelous. Have a druggist mix it who will supply the true and pure ingredients only, and results are assured.

A Great Peace Meeting at Guildhall Asquith and Balfour Speak Eloquently

Promoting Anglo-American Amity—Notable Gathering Called by the Lord Mayor of London—Premier Moves Resolution and Opposition Leader Seconds It—No Utopian Proposition.

A GREAT meeting, worthy of a great occasion, that was the unanimous verdict upon the gathering in the Guildhall on April 28, called by the lord mayor to welcome the proposed treaty of arbitration between Great Britain and the United States of America.

Gog and Magog have witnessed many famous scenes in that venerable hall, scenes connected with the pride and power, the ambitions and the pomp of the great city of which they are the legendary symbols. But here was a gathering unlike anything that had gone before. It was a gathering suffused with a new and splendid vision of the future. It was the vision of the prophet of old, so aptly quoted by the chief rabbi, that vision of the day when "they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

As one listened to those immortal words, and thought of all the blood-stained centuries that had intervened since they were uttered, one felt the immense significance of the moment. Here at last the dream that had seemed so long a dream was before the world as the scheme of practical statesmanship. Here at last we stood before that

Arch, where through Gleams the untravelled world.

The seers of visions and the dreamers of dreams had come into their own. From the most representative gathering ever assembled in the heart of the great city—a gathering representing every interest in the national life, politics and religion, finance and commerce, labor and fashion—they won a unanimous verdict against war; an enthusiastic indorsement of the plea that the sword shall be sheathed for Anglo-Saxon brotherhood. It was as though one saw the visible fulfillment of the prophecy—as though in that august assembly the sword was thrown into the furnace, and in this great compact of peace between the English-speaking races there was no challenge to the other nations. The Prime Minister, in his impressive address, made it clear that this treaty is not a menace but an example to others. The friendship we offer to receive from America, all may enjoy on equal terms. The Anglo-Saxon brotherhood have been the path; but all the roads of men may tread it. And though there may be many halts, and many disappointments, will tread it, doubtless, to the end. And in this new time sounded the note of the blood-rusted key.

It may be said that no meeting ever more truly reflected the mind of the nation. On the platform, over which the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes were hung, stood the gathering of the leaders of every movement, political, social, religious, commercial. The high commissioners from the overseas dominions, the heads of great churches, the managers and commercial institutions, the lord-lieutenant of Ireland, and many other representative men were assembled, and in the great hall and in the gallery beyond were massed a crowd of men of all shades of opinion, moved by one common enthusiasm. How deep the differences of approval were, and how entirely the differences that divide our common life were submerged by this supreme cause, were apparent when, robed in scarlet, and preceded by the band of his office, the lord mayor emerged on to the platform, followed by Mr. Asquith, Mr. Balfour, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Prime Minister, New Zealand, and other statesmen. It was something found the city cold, but yesterday it rose above all the littleness of politics into a serene atmosphere, and it was equally generous to Liberal and Tory, churchman and non-churchman.

A Call For Peace.

The Guildhall was crowded when the lord mayor, Sir Verey Strong, wearing his robes of scarlet and gold, and attended by Sheriffs Johnston and Buckingham, took the chair, over the platform were suspended the English and American flags.

The Folly of War.

The lord mayor, who was received with applause, said it might fairly be claimed that the interests of the British nation. The great object which they had in view was to promote further progress in civilization. "This," said the lord mayor, "necessarily implies fear appeals to the arbitrament of the sword, and more frequently to the arbitrament of the fist. It is frequent appeals to the right should be considered in priority to might, and that law should rule where force has previously been alone recognized. War, by its very nature, debases the course of civil life, and tends to set back the clock of the world's progress. It is as foolish as it is futile.

"The Anglo-Saxon race, on both sides of the Atlantic, is coming more and more to feel that at all events we are learning from the records of history that, just as many wars might have been avoided by a little more painstaking patience, so future wars may be averted if we now set up the requisite machinery for securing such settlement of national disputes."

Suffered Greatly From Colic

Mrs. Aime Guenette, L'Annamouelle Conception, Cayman, My little boy suffered greatly from colic. I gave him castor oil and other medicines without helping him. One day I saw the "Own Tablets" advertised, so wrote for a box. I found them so good that I always keep them in the house and never use any other medicine for baby. The experience of Mrs. Guenette has been that of thousands of other mothers. Not only do the tablets cure colic, but they also make teething easy, banish worms and make baby bright, active and happy. The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"It is an axiom that in English law a man cannot be a judge in his own cause. We wish to apply this principle to national disputes, where they arise. The distinguished head of the American people has made an important proposal to secure this end. This meeting represents the answer of the city of London, the centre of our world-wide Empire, to that proposal. Great Britain and Great Britain are here together today, and the voice and decision of this meeting will travel across the seas to our kinsmen in America as the voice of the united family of the British race.

"More than a generation ago" continued the lord mayor, "one of America's most distinguished sons addressed the late President Grant, truly said that 'War between England and America would be in the nature of a civil war.' Time had developed a conviction that they must, therefore, feel that a great responsibility and a very special duty rested on them all to use every effort to make the perpetuation of such a criminal and senseless war impossible in the future." (Cheers.)

Mr. Asquith.

Mr. Asquith, who was received with cheers, proposed the following resolution: "That this meeting of the citizens of London, representatives of its majesty's dominions overseas and religious and civil bodies assembled in the Guildhall, cordially welcomes the proposal of the President of the United States of America in favor of a general treaty of arbitration between the United Kingdom of Great Britain and the British Empire, and pledges its support to the principles of such a treaty as serving the highest interests of the two nations and as tending to promote the peace of the world." (Cheers.)

Mr. Asquith said: This venerable hall has been the scene of many demonstrations and ceremonies of momentous importance in the history of the state and of our country. But I doubt whether it has been the privilege of any of your lordships' predecessors to put it to their purposes as I have done today. The great responsibility which rests upon this morning this large and representative gathering. (Cheers.)

The situation, the unique situation, which we are not overlooking for the moment all distinctions of party and of creed (applause) to recognize and to welcome the existence without any ostensible or covert arrangement. It has not been organized or engineered by the apparatus of diplomacy. The initiative was taken by the chief magistrate of the United States of America. (Applause.) But the seed which he cast for us to receive, ground that was sown by the great and that which a few months' ago might have been regarded as the dream of idealists, has now become the settled purpose of two great democracies. (Applause.)

My Lord Mayor, the modern world has been doing its service to the gospel of peace for the best part of two thousand years, and yet there has never been an era in human history in which the innocentest nations, the most civilized of mankind have been more lavishly employed on war and in the preparation of war. Nor need I remind you here that some of the fiercest wars have been waged between men of the same blood, language, and religion.

The Lesson of Conflict.

Little more than two hundred years ago we were in England were ourselves in the throes of civil strife. A century later, on the other side of the Atlantic, we were in deadly and kindred in the struggle which led to the foundation of American independence. And within the lifetime of many of us here today, that great federation itself was almost and devastated by a fratricidal conflict.

Surely it is a lesson to those of us who are apt to despair of mankind, who have lost faith in the progress of reason and of justice, and attempting to see in the course of the generations of mankind little more than a succession of trials and tribulations, an iron shore, surely it is a matter of encouragement that we should now see the two great English-speaking peoples, over 120,000,000 of souls, with the overlordship direct, or indirect, over a large proportion of the surface and resources of the globe, in common in the future, could be an unthinkable crime (cheers) and prepared to enter into a solemn compact which will make it impossible for the future an impossible contingency. I do not think I am using language of exaggeration when I say we are here in the Guildhall today to record the most significant step in our time in the international sphere of the world, the sense of brotherhood.

Arbitration is, of course, already a familiar expedient of diplomacy for settling or averting disputes. It has been, and it is, frequently applied to specific matters of difficulty between civilized countries. Further, of with arbitration treaties of a more general character, but hitherto general character have been a conspicuous feature of the scope of these engagements. I am not, however, referring to the matters of vital interest and of national honor. What is now proposed—and that is the departure therefrom—is the new departure, a compact which is that between the United States and the United Kingdom, no matter what may be the gravity of the matter which may be the subject of the arbitration, whatever may be the political or feeling it arouses, there must be a complete and final settlement of the question of the arbitration (cheers), of war as a political question, and the suspension of judicial methods of the old order of battle.

No Utopian Proposition.

That one should know, to some people a paradox, but the paradox is really entirely the other way. There are many people still living in quarrel on the members of the time when quarrel on the members of honor between two private gentlemen, according to the usages of polite society (laughter), could only be settled by fighting, and it still the opinion, and I believe in some degree the practice of some nations at the present day. My Lord Mayor, the taking of life in a duel was, of course, always contrary to the Decalogue, and technically punishable as murder. Yet, for centuries, the church and the law strove in vain to put an end to it, and it is one of the most curious and, I think, one of the most encouraging chapters in history, that in the lifetime of a single generation in this country it became extinct. It has disappeared from private life. We sometimes hear the Fifth Duke of Devonshire, or we try to do so (renewed laughter), but we do not use them (cheers and laughter), and if the Prime Minister in the reign of King George the Fifth were to challenge a political opponent (laughter), as the Duke of Wellington did as lately as the year 1828, to exchange pistol shots with him in the open air, he would be regarded as a fit inmate of a lunatic asylum. (Cheers.) Well, gentlemen, that I say, has disappeared to such an extent, that it is now an extravagant or Utopian proposition that, even in regard to so-called points of honor, we may, as between ourselves and men of our kind, resort to a duel to international duelling? (Cheers.)

War Ruled Out.

I need not say—and this shall be my final remark—I need hardly say that such a compact as is suggested, in other words, is not even an alliance aggressive or defensive. It simply means that within the vast area, for which, as states, we are severally responsible, war is ruled out, the possible arbitrer of conceivable differences. (Applause.) Other things, we may hope are left behind. It is not for us to dictate to other nations, as some of us, while things remain as they are, forego the precautions which are needed for the wise and vigilant stewardship of a world, not to do so. (Applause.)

My Lord Mayor, it is the privilege of great nations, as of great men, not only to follow precedents, but to make them. If the United Kingdom and the United States of America formally agree that as between themselves war and the possibility of war is once and for all renounced, a step will have been taken which will be incomparable in significance for the onward progress of humanity. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. Balfour.

Mr. Balfour, who was received with cheering, seconded the resolution, remarking at the outset that he rejoiced to have an opportunity of taking an active part in this solemn and historic occasion, through all his political life, has been near his heart—the cause, not only of arbitration as between different civilized communities, but of a general compact of arbitration which should for ever make impossible the contingency of war between two great English-speaking communities of the world. (Applause.)

"We have always both political parties, whatever their other differences in other spheres of speculation or of action—been at one in our belief in the absolute necessity of peace for the last quarter of a century, in which had there been any other, which has been carried into effect, your predecessor, my Lord Mayor, would not have been able to convene in this great hall an assembly of this nature. I am, of course, not a private or public speaker, but I shall leave no stone unturned to further the progress of this cause, which is not more nearer its ultimate fruition than it has ever been in the whole history of the world.

There were, therefore, proceeded Mr. Balfour, who thought that preserving peace, and locked with some suspicion upon what they regarded as idealistic dreams, and who thought that it was not their business to do so. It was, however, in the strain and stress of international rivalry came, all these things would be secured, but that they would have to part for ever with the dream of a world which is not more nearer its ultimate fruition than it has ever been in the whole history of the world.

Public Opinion.

Thus it was folly to attempt to make every positive law or international law go too far in advance of public opinion, or international opinion. Law and treaties could not be made to go further than public opinion. It went further, and said that when a law or a treaty went far in advance of public opinion of the people, it might be good, but it would be done than good by well-meant attempt to embody impossible ideals in paper provisions. "I can't imagine a greater disaster to come than that after such a treaty as we hope for has been carried into effect, it should be broken by either of the contracting parties, not merely to international faith, but to civilization and progress, under which we should stagger for generations. That if public opinion is quite ready to grant, that if the law is not ripe for this great development it would not be wise for statesmen to endeavor to do so far as to make the law go—no, I don't think I am too sanguine—this gloomy view of the situation by no means represents the facts. (Cheers.)

The Church of Rome.

Archbishop of Canterbury, the resolution, said the object of that meeting was a matter which for centuries past had been dear to those who claimed religious freedom. He had, in looking back many instances might be recorded in which those of whom he spoke had appealed to the nations over and again to settle their disputes, not by force of arms, but by reasonable agreement and adjustment. They were not to give voice only to sentiment, but to give voice to the fact that there were those who give force and strength to those who had it in their power to carry those aspirations into effect. They were, therefore, in looking back many instances might be recorded in which those of whom he spoke had appealed to the nations over and again to settle their disputes, not by force of arms, but by reasonable agreement and adjustment.
