COALITION LEADING IN BRITISH ELECTION

Returns Today Show Unionists to Have 127 Seats; Union Liberals, Next in Line, Have Only 56

By Courier Leeds Wire.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—Bulletin.—At 1.30 o'clock the election returns showed this result: Coalition Unionists, 127; Coalition Liberals, 56; Unionists, 5; Liberals, 2; Labor, 23; Irish Nationalists, 1; Sinn Fein, 25, and one Independent.

Mrs. Despard Not Elected.—The first election return received today shows the defeat of a woman candidate, Mrs. Charlotte Despard, sister of Viscount French, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. She was defeated in North Battersea by Richard Morris, Coalition Liberal. Morris received 7,294 votes and Mrs. Despard, who was a Labor candidate, 5,634 votes.

The coming parliament—the first under the new reform act—will have 707 members, or thirty-seven more than the last parliament. Of these, 122 have returned either unopposed or for the universities where conditions enable an immediate declaration of the results. Those returned comprise fifty-one Coalition Unionists; thirty-one Coalition Liberals; twelve Laborites; one Independent Irish Nationalist; and twenty-six Sinn Feiners.

The general indifference over the election justifies the explanation of small polls, and with the exception of the professional politicians, nobody is excited over the results.

Alderman Hurley entered the hall at this moment and signified his desire to address the meeting. As Alderman Hurley approached the platform the crowd apparently was of the opinion that the speaker was to address in the interests of Mayor MacBride.

ALD. HURLEY HOWLED DOWN BY LABOR MEN

Criticized Mayor's Policy at Meeting in Victoria Hall Last Night and Was Given Stormy Reception

Fireworks flew thick and fast during the meeting held in Victoria Hall last evening in the interests of Mayor MacBride and the other Labor Candidates. Alderman Hurley was present as representative of the Brantford Municipal League and during his address did not prove very satisfactory. The Mayor gave a lengthy resume of the business transacted by this year's council and of the work that he would endeavor to cover in 1919. The audience was composed largely of Labor men and the supporters of Mayor MacBride who gave him hearty support and applause.

Mayor MacBride opened the meeting with a brief explanation of the purpose of the gathering which he stated was to state his reply to some of the insinuations that were being made by the Upfilfers. Alderman Spence occupied the chair and invited many members of the Municipal League who might be present to the platform. None appeared and various uncomplimentary cries were heard from the crowd. Ald. Symons then proceeded to deal with the Municipal League stating that they had taken for their cry the huge tax rate that is being paid by the ratopayers of the city. Following this he gave a concise analysis of the present taxes stating that it had not been for the patriotic grants that were made this year the tax rate would have been below normal. Wages have enormously increased within the past few years and it has been necessary for the city to increase the remuneration of their employees in a like manner. This had been done and naturally necessitated a slight increase in the tax rate.

Alderman Hurley entered the hall at this moment and signified his desire to address the meeting. As Alderman Hurley approached the platform the crowd apparently was of the opinion that the speaker was to address in the interests of Mayor MacBride. This opinion however did not last long after the speaker began. Ald. Hurley got right to the point and began to criticize the actions of Mayor MacBride in the Council. As soon as he began to speak the audience began to heckle and it was only through repeated calls for order by the chairman that a hearing was secured. The mayor, Ald. Hurley stated had bailed up the poor situation and went on to explain the many different branches that he claimed had suffered as a result of the mayor's policy. He stated that the Mayor's policy was to support both the Conservative and Liberal organizations for the same purpose, that of being a canvasser. Then he was discovered by Labor and consequently became their candidate for the Dominion Government. Alderman Hurley continued to expostulate but the crowd continued to exert their vocal powers and he was howled down.

COURIER BIDS ADIEU TO ALL ITS READERS TODAY

With to-day's issue, The Courier bids its readers adieu after forty-seven years of publication as a daily paper. It had originally been intended to continue publication until Tuesday next, Dec. 31st but in order to accommodate a number of the staff who have already obtained positions elsewhere, this decision has been reached. It is with deep regret that the staff and readers of the paper alike will look upon its passing from the ranks of newspaperdom.

Forecasts: West: Westerly winds, some light local snow, but mostly fair and moderate to cold to-day and on Sunday.

Alderman Clement stated that the end of the war had been astonishing of democracy but apparently this was not true enough judging from the language that Alderman Hurley had used against the Mayor. He also explained that it was some of these scenes that caused the mayor to call a cop. The work covered by this year's city council, showed the great asset the city had in the person of Mayor MacBride. Considering the hard things that the city council had been up against and the way in which they had overcome them they had done remarkably well. In regard to the Municipal League, the speaker stated that he had no comment and that the literature that they were spreading about was sufficient for anyone to judge of the calibre of men that were at the head.

London, Dec. 27.—In his speech at the State banquet to President Wilson at Buckingham Palace last night, King George said: "This is an historic moment and your visit marks an historic epoch. Nearly 150 years have passed since your republic began its independent life and now, for the first time, a President of the United States is our guest in England. We welcome you to the country where stand the homes of those from whom sprang Washington and Lincoln. We welcome you for the one whose insight, calmness and dignity in the discharge of his duties we have watched with admiration. We see in you the embodiment of the gift of a scholar and a statesman. Your studious, academic and your full stream of an orator and your delivery of a breadth of world problems, a lofty diction and great orators of your own."

"You come to us as a spokesman of a wealth bound to our ties. Its people speak of Shakespeare and of the life of yours as a man and men of letters have joined in comparison."

RETROSPECTIVE
 As before related, the pioneer paper of Brantford was "The Sentinel," issued in the Conservative interest in 1833, and established by Mr. Keeler. In 1839, Mr. Thomas Lemmon, a brother-in-law of Mr. Keeler, arrived from Ireland and, acquiring the Sentinel plant, launched a more ambitious sheet, under the title of The Courier.

In 1840, a second paper was launched, "The Herald," edited by a gentleman of marked literary ability, Mr. Wellesley Johnson. Another editorial writer was Mr. Michael Foley, who later became Postmaster-General in the Government of Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald. The Herald changed hands more than once, and in 1861 expired, having at the time only fourteen names on the subscription list. Previous to its exit, a Reform paper, "The Tribune," was established by Mr. Steele, but it did not have a very lengthy career. Another paper, the "Conservative Expressor," was floated in 1852 by Mr. Henry Racey and Mr. C. E. Stewart. Mr. Racey soon dropped out and Mr. Stewart obliterated the prefix "Conservative," turned it into a Reform sheet, which the publication has ever since remained.

In June, of 1872, Mr. E. G. Hart floated another Conservative paper, called the "Brant Union." Later it became "The Telegram," and flourished for many years, but finally went out of existence, leaving The Courier and Expressor the sole occupants of the journalistic field.

Brantford once boasted a comic paper, the "Snapping Turtle," but it turned turtle in very truth after a short career.

The strangest chapter in the annals of the Brantford press was a sheet called the News. A man from the other side named Percy, was the editor, and he made it a custom to write insinuating articles with regard to well known citizens and then to show them the proof. If they paid him a certain sum, the attack was not published; if they failed to put up the cash, the slanderous effusion saw the light of day. This blackmail was thrashed time and time again, and on one occasion was so severely handled by a muscular gentleman that he was in bed for a considerable period. He was also once imprisoned for criminal libel, but still continued his nefarious trade. Finally, it was discovered that he had two wives living, and no time was lost in bringing them together. Percy got wind of what was coming and precipitately left the town, leaving a bunch of mourning creditors.

His office was artistically fitted up, but most of his callers did not have time to notice that.

However, it is of The Courier that these reminiscences have to do in particular. Perhaps a better idea of the length of its career can be more clearly brought home by reference to the fact that in 1839, when first issued under that title, Queen Victoria was in her twentieth year, and had only occupied the throne for two years. Gladstone and Disraeli were both young members of Parliament. Canadian Confederation was over a quarter of a century away, and the Crimean war was not fought until fifteen years later. These fragmentary references will serve to illustrate the lengthy period during which this paper has mirrored local and world events, and always thrown its influence on behalf of what it deemed to be measures best calculated to promote the welfare of this community, and in the larger Provincial and Dominion fields. It existed when Brantford was merely a village, and men resided here who had been well acquainted with Brant.

As before related, the first proprietor, Mr. Thomas Lemmon, came from Ireland, proceeding by boat to Toronto, and thence by stage to Brantford, for railways did not then exist. Upon the demise of Mr. Lemmon, his son, Major Henry Lemmon, became proprietor, and he continued in the ownership until 1890, when his two nephews, "Reville Bros.," assumed control. Their partnership lasted until some five years ago, when "The Courier Printing Company" became proprietors. This latter concern sold out to Mr. Southam, of Hamilton, some four months ago, and he in turn made the present disposal of the business.

The Courier was located in many places before the present building was erected, and the plant was twice destroyed by fire. The writer has seen many editors come and go, including the late Sheriff Watt, whose work on the Expositor was always of a notable description, the late Mr. Grayson and J. P. Jaffray (now in the States), of the Telegram, and so on. One of the most brilliant of the lot was Fred Swire, a graduate of Dublin University, and a regular Mark Tapley for cheerfulness. He caught a heavy cold while on a visit to Toronto, and this developing into pneumonia, he passed away there. Almost the last thing he said was: "I'm so glad I'm dying here, as there is a much better choice of graveyards than in Brantford." And that brings to mind the remark of the late Dr. Kelly, at one time a Brantford editorial writer who, towards the end, when asked which of two ministers he would like to see, replied with his well-known smile: "You can send 'em both round if you think I can do either of them any good."

It is not a vain boast to say that the paper has had a clean and honorable career throughout, with all financial obligations ever met in a most faithful manner, and with its influence absolutely unpurchasable. The retiring editor assumed control of that department over thirty years ago, and can affirm that The Courier columns have never been used for the venting of personal feeling, and that it has been a standing rule of the office that political opponents, in reports of their meetings and so forth, should be given the square deal, however much they might on the editorial page come in for that criticism to which public men are always subject. Hearty thanks are returned for kind expressions during the past few days, and it is a pleasure to have had such generous manifestations of the fact that the oldest business in Brantford says farewell amid the unfeigned regret of so many.

For the greater convenience of our employees, and in order to avoid the broken week ending with Dec. 31st, this will be the last issue of the paper.

A Happy and Prosperous New Year to all.
 Sincerely,
 F. D. REVILLE,

Samuel G. Robinson of Paris is Dead of Pneumonia

OTHER NEWS OF PARIS

Paris, Dec. 28.—The death took place in St. Joseph Hospital at Hamilton on Tuesday night of Miss Mary R. Finnelly, aged 48, who died of only two days from influenza. Deceased was born in Owen Sound. The late Miss Finnelly was a devoted member of St. Mary's Church, Hamilton, and very popular among the church workers there, in which she took an active part. She was a sister of Mrs. Robert Devereux Cameron St., and was known here having frequently visited her sister. The remains were brought to Paris yesterday, the funeral taking place from the G. T. R. to the R. C. cemetery. Requiem mass was held in the church of the Sacred Heart.

Another sad death occurred here from pneumonia following influenza in the passing of Mr. Samuel G. Robinson during Christmas night in the 34th year of his age. Deceased was born in Siblethwaite Township and came to Paris when a young lad, some 7 years ago he was married to Miss Annie Barrowclough of Montreal, who with 2 boys and one daughter survives. A sad feature of the case is that on Tuesday afternoon his five year old son Vernon Walter was buried, he having also died from pneumonia. He also leaves a mother, Mrs. Samuel Robinson, Sr., two brothers and three sisters.

The death took place yesterday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Muma of Mr. Fredrick E. Redfern after a brief illness. Deceased came here from England about eight years ago, and was employed at the Penman Mills, being highly esteemed by all who knew him. He has a brother Alfred who is over in France. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the residence of Mr. Ed. Muma Walnut St. to the Paris cemetery. The Rev. R. J. Seton Adamson of which church deceased attended will conduct the services.

Hicks secretary; John E. Lilley; S. W. Smith; Blakeley; J. W. John R. Watson; S. E. W. Richardson; J. B. Ed. Hayden, medical officer.

Much sympathy will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reeves, Hamilton, in the death of their little 4-year old daughter Elizabeth Emma, who passed away yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Mason were pleasantly surprised the other evening when his fellow workers of the mechanical department of Penman Limited, presented him with a hand-some leather upholstered chair and smoking set and a beautiful silver casserole. Mr. A. L. Davidson read an appropriate address, while Mr. John Milton and

WANT TIME EXTENDED.

By Courier Leased Wire
 Ottawa, Dec. 27.—Representative Ontario grape growers interviewed the Government to-day to urge that the time limit within which they are entitled to transport native wines be extended. Owing to ambiguity in the original order, some difficulty has arisen. The right to manufacture shanes at the end of the year and the order has been interpreted as implying that the right to transport wines within the province shall cease at the same time. The department asked what right ambiguity be removed, that they be given the right to transport so long as sale is allowed. Any such extension would apply only to existing stocks.

The Government promised consideration of the claims and an early decision.

Dentist Describes Crown Prince. THAT sort of man is the Crown Prince of Germany, "out whom so many different stories have been told," Dr. Arthur Davis, the American dentist who lived for several years in Berlin at the Crown Prince's court, was not favorably impressed by him. One would gain from Dr. Davis' remarks that the Crown Prince's statement made not long ago, the effect that he was no fire-eater was probably truthful, although the popular theory has been that the Crown Prince was the pal leader of the war party in Germany, and that he was the spokesman of this party forced the Kaiser's hand in July and August, 1914. Dr. Davis' idea of the prince was that he was something of a "sissy" more interested in jewelry and the latest clothes than in the war. Nor did the dentist subscribe to the theory that the Crown Prince personally is a brave man. Of course, it is probably true that the bravery that is displayed in a dentist's chair is even a rarer quality than the "two o'clock in the morning courage" that a general leads.

The first time the dentist and the Crown Prince met was in 1905, when the young man came to have his teeth fixed. It was a most satisfactory patient, for as he sat in the chair he trembled violently and was so fearful of the slightest pain that he never found it almost impossible to do the necessary work. He was exquisitely dressed, and had a habit of placing his hands on his hips, and he was wearing a shiny coat and a striped tie. He had a swag-gear appearance that was unusual with German officers. On this first visit he carried a copy of Life containing a cartoon which depicted his vanity, though it is difficult to believe that at any time the New York humorous paper ever presented the Crown Prince and any other role that that of ass or knave. He had two beautiful rings on his left hand and wore a wrist-watch. At that time the American dentist was considerably impressed by the prince's appearance. He took great pride in his own slim figure, and told Dr. Davis that he loathed fat people, and that he ate very little in order to remain thin.

The Crown Prince would make an appointment for 9.30, but would call up at 10 to say that he would be there at 11, and that he would turn up at noon. He had a tremendous love of the limelight, and was frequently stopping his horse or his car to give a coin to a child or an unusually professional-looking beggar. This, Dr. Davis thought, was merely ostentation, but he recalled that an English woman who traveled with the Crown Prince on his trip to the East, had seen him on a hunting expedition some years ago, was impressed by his love of children, and his almost fatherly interest in his subjects. The Crown Prince was the despair of the policemen of Berlin, as were his brothers. He drove at a reckless pace, and usually at the wrong side of the street. On one occasion his car was wrecked, but as bad luck would have it he escaped injury. On one occasion he rode his horse up to the balcony of the palace at Sans Souci, not a difficult feat, but one that was extravagantly advertised in the obsequious German press.

Dr. Davis saw him once driving up Unter Den Linden, but hearing the familiar sound of the Kaiser's car behind, he drew up to the side of the road and hid until the Kaiser had passed, not daring to precede his father. When the Crown Prince visited the dentist after the war broke out he was not at all interested in the much older than his years. His conversation was as flippant as ever and was full of hideous speculations as to the good time the men were having at home with the millions of German manhood at the front. He asked the dentist if he saw many good-looking girls in Berlin and he was at once interested in the subject that was deplorable in a married man. Dr. Davis said that criticism of the Crown Prince's behaviour with regard to the women of loose character who visited his headquarters was quite general. His own officers complained that he was setting a bad example by his conduct and that he was not only a military expert but in the inner circles, but the newspapers lost an opportunity of revealing to the world the true character of this man's great commander.

On this occasion he had new rings which he took great delight in looking at. He spoke about a new car he was driving and which he had just showed off a new raincoat to a number of royal and semi-royal ladies who had assembled in the dentist's waiting room to wait for him. The war he considered "a lot of damned nonsense." He spoke of his men at the western front standing in mud and water up to their knees as though it were rather a humorous situation. "We've been having a lot of fun pumping the water from our trenches into the French trenches," he said, and the dentist remarked, "Well, I suppose they pump it right back, don't they?" to which he replied, "You're quite right, quite right. That's exactly what they do. Really, it's a great lark." His conversation upon the war was of a jejune character, and it was plain enough that he was bored. He had penetrated his mind. He spoke unconcernedly of two million Germans growing up who would furnish reserves for the German army. He expressed the wish that the fighting were over. It would be interesting to know if this conversation took place after Verdun.

Australian Forests. Australia has extensive forests, but owing to lack of sufficient railways and shipping facilities, a comparatively small amount of the timber has thus far been cut.
