TO SMOKE OR NOT TO SMOKE.

We publish today a letter from a lady who objects to smoke. To a certain degree we must confess that our correspondent has our sympathy in her protest. Dawson has a superabundance of cigars of questionable ancestry and likewise is all too well stocked with pipes the age of which runneth beyond the recollection of mortal man. Positively something should be done to relieve the community of the combined effect of these two evils.

There are men who boast as something worthy of note, that they still are pulling away at the pipes they originally colored when crossing the plains in a prairie schooner, and there are others conducted with such neatness, taste and who point with pride to the tints imprinted upon bowl and stem while doing duty a generation ago in the African veldt or Australian bush.

We are prepared to enter with our correspondent upon a crusade against the use of such relics of antiquity. They should be abolished from society by due process of law. In fact we are ready to suggest that continuous use of heaven's pure air in the hall all day the same pipe for more than 25 years be made a penal offense. They should be prohibited in the free library and every other place of public assembly, into a hazzy den of tobacco fumes, any They might do good service as adornment to the walls of our public museum, but we can think of no other respectable occupation for a pipe that has reached such an advanced age.

that in some respects our correspondent is a trifle harsh. We are inclined to the opinion that she would accomplish great reforms with too lightning. We accept heaven's pure air in all its ed highly claud. Spencer shook his like rapidity. We are afraid she is a invigorating wholesomeness to read, but little sweeping in her condemnation, why could we not enjoy that liberty At one tell blow she would remove from the reach of the Klondiker the chief of the few joys that surround him about improving this century in science, in this snow-bedecked vale of unrealized enlightenment and culture, but this expectations.

Certainly our correspondent has never drawn from the weed consolation and comfort for all the misfortunes of life. old salivary pipe or eigar in his mouth, the bare bodkin as an antidote to the pangs of mis-prized love, he knew nothing of the flavor of the real Havana article-else his life would never thus have been placed in jeopardy.

Under ordinary circumstances a man who smokes in the kitchen is a nui sance; if he smokes in the dining room he is a double-dyed suisance; should tobacco nor gamble or any of the dehe desecrate the sanctity of the bed chamber with tobacco fumes he is simply intolerable and if he invades the parlor with his smoke he becomes a fiend incarnate.

But when the dividing partitions be tween these various apartments of the wellregulated household, consist entirely of imaginary lines, and he smokes in all four at one time, language fails to meet the emergency. He cannot be described. He can only be compared-to the woman who would send him outside to smoke when it is sixty-eight degrees below zero.

Such is the condition of affairs in the Klondike. To smoke or not to smoke is the burning question of the hour. For our part, we declare ourselves as champions of any movement directed tric lights at the Regina Club hotel.

against the ancient pipe or the malaria complexioned cigar. But to go beyond that, must give us pause. We shall have to think it over.

"The News does not delay its publication with any purpose of giving its competitors any advantage over it."—
The News, Feb. 2.

Certainly not. The News delays its publication with the purpose of taking advantage of the news published in the Nugget. That is patent to everybody, isn't it?

A copy of the Chicago American just received contains a rousing send off for the Nugget's presidential souvenir. Very few people on the outside imagined that anything so handsome could be produced in Dawson.

Several inquiries have been received at this office asking the date upon which Easter occurs this year. It comes on the seventh of April, the first Sunday in that month.

If we are to improve this century, let the library trustees set the example by engaging a librarian-one of that radical vim, one who does not use liquor, grading self-acquired habits and one who will enforce such taste and refinement and who is courteous to all people alike. There are some smokers who were brought up with the whole family, cats, dogs, pigs, poultry, goats and donkeys under the same thatched roof and who would estalbish that style of better go back and not practice their sense of ethics here. THE BLESSING OF JIM ROBBINS.

Under an Inspiration He Distinguished Himself. BY W. R. ROSE.

Spencer Gifford was quite too ready to admit that he was just an average sort of fellow. That was really all he cared to be. What he could do he did fairly well, but he did just as little as was decently possible. At college he had gone in a little for athletics, and made a very creditable record, but he shrank from anything really brilliant. He was a good scholar, too, but was quite willing to rank with the intellectual second raters. When he left college, he went abroad and dawdled about in an aimless way, and came home with few impressions that he cared to mention. Then he went in for society, and there seemed to be reasonably contented. Society amused him and wasn't too exacting. Society coddled him; he was young, handsome, clever and rich.

And yet he would admit that he felt a little conscience stricken when Anna Goldie gravely asked him one day about his future hopes. There was a look in her eyes that he didn't like when he laughed off the query. It set him to thinking, and thinking was an occupation he rarely indulged in. Thinking almost disquieted him. He avoided Anna Goldie for a time, and found that was still more disquieting. And then just as he was thinking he would invite another talk with her on the original disquieting subject she suddenly went away. She went, they told him, to visit an invalid aunt in the interior of the state. She might be gone some time. It was more a visit of duty than of pleasure, and its continuance would depend altogether upon the failing health of the aunt. In what part of the state did Miss Goldie's aunt live? Somewhere near Palmyra.

Falmyra? That was where Jim Robbins lived. Good old Jim Robbins. whom he hadn't seen since his last college year. Jim was somebody down in Palmyra. Member of the legislature. or something. He saw Jim's name in the papers occasionally. Jim was a rising man.

As the days were along the desire to visit Jim grew upon him. He had a standing invitation to come down at any time. There was a pressing note in his desk of quite recent date in which he was told of the treat he was missing in not making the acquaintance of Jim's matchless wife and equally matchless girls. He wondered libraries bave a part reserved for ladies if Jim would know the abiding place of Anna Goldie's aunt. If he was a politician, he probably knew everybody. He decided to go down at once and make Jim a visit, and he wrote to him to that effect.

Then he went to the bank and called on his father. And while he was there do object to their coming in contact his uncle Tow came in and the three were closeted for a long time in his father's private room. When they father shook hands with him in grave head a little doubtfully as he left them. Then he braced up with a swift stiffen ing of his fingers and clinching of his hands and accelerated his pace. He was going to his rooms to fill his dress suit case for the visit to Jim.

He arrived at Palmyra early in the evening. He had meant to reach there layed. He hadn't told Jim just what day he would start, and so his old friend wasn't bothering over his nonappearance. Spencer concluded he would look Jim up in the morning. He went to the hotel and had his supper. After supper he strolled up to the clerk's desk and inquired about his

"Oh, Jim Robbins?" cried the clerk. "Yes, yes. Jim is one of our leading citizens. Has a nice home up on the West hill. He's a great hustler Jim s. Going to send him to the state senate next fall. Friend of yours?"

"Yes," said Spencer, "an old friend. Came down to visit him."

"Tell you what you do," said the clerk. "Jim is the chairman, toastmaster, whatever you call it, of the big banquet at Raymond hall tonight. It's a complimentary feed given in honor of Colonel Jack Speed, who is home for a brief visit, and everybody, pretty much, is going. Colonel Speed is our congressman, you know, and he's in high favor in Palmyra. Hon. culture wherever they go, but they had Dwight Perkins from somewhere out west, one of the big national lights of the house, is to be the speaker of the occasion, and they'll have plenty to eat and good music. Better go over."

half hour later Spencer ascended stairway of Raymond hall. He noticed a number of ladies in the crowd that steadily marched into the hall, and he was rather glad to find that the banquet was not to be of the usual political for men only character. At the head of the stairs he noticed a door standing open, and looking through into the brightly lighted anteroom he saw his old friend. The tm pulse was too strong to resist, and he passed in the doorway and held out his hand.

"What's the matter with Jim Robbins?" he laughingly called. In an instant his friend's hand gripped his.

"Spencer, old man, so glad to you!" He pushed Spencer off a little and held him there. "You are looking prime," he said. "And, by George! you are just in time." He laughed as he spoke, and looked at Spencer with such a comical expression that it instantly recalled to the latter some amusing experiences of the dear old Reging Club hotel.

"What mischief are you up to?" he cried. "But, here, I'm in the way. Den't let me bother you. I'll see you in the morning." And he drew back and half turned toward the door.

"Hold on," cried Jim, with a plunge at him, "you don't get away from me tonight. You stay right here until I can properly dispose of you.'

Hon. Jack Speed was seated at Jim's right and Spencer at his left, much to the latter's increased uneasiness. Then the banquet commenced, and for an hour the clatter and chatter continued. without a break. Jim was as delightful as of yore, dividing his attention made, wherever the claim applied in ful as of yore, dividing his attention made, where for relocation upon the very equally between the guest of the appears open for relocation upon the very equally between the guest of the appears. The allowance of two weeks heart was filled with a vague distrust.

When the clatter finally ceased, Jim rapped on the table, and in a nice little speech told of the purpose of the ban quet. He introduced the mayor, who briefly welcomed back Hon. Mr. Speed their claims on or before the expiration to Palmyra. Then Hon. Mr. Speed re- of their tormer lease. sponded in a brisk speech, testifying to (Signed) his delight in returning home to such friends and such a welcome, a sentiment which was greeted with loud applause. Then Jim rose again, with a crumpled telegram in his hand. He much regretted, he said, to be obliged to announce that Hon. Dwight Perkins could not be with them. A telegram he had just received announced a railway accident that blocked the road and held back Mr. Perkins, 60 miles away.

"Our regret, however," said Jim, "is somewhat mitigated by the fact that we fortunately have with us as an honored guest one of the most prominent of New York's young political and social leaders, Mr. Spencer Gifford, who will talk to us on the question of the hour."

As Jim sat down a patter of applause ran round the hall and the long lines of faces assumed an expectant expres-

"Remember your old debating triumphs," whispered the perfidious Jim,

Spencer gave him a horrible scowl as he rose to his feet. Then he turned to the auditors with a pleasant smile. He put his teeth together hard. He wouldn't be bluffed. And fleep down in his soul he felt gratified that Jim, despite his consummate meanness, had confidence in him. Jim knew he wouldn't fluke. He would say a word or two and retire as gracefully as pos-

When Spencer, after an eloquent wind up, finally took his seat, the applause was vigorous and long drawn out, and Jim, his face flushed and his eyes sparkling, grabbed Spencer's hand under the table and squeezed it hard and said. 'Great, my boy, great! You ought to get down on your bended knees to me for bringing you out.

When it was all over, Jim said: "We must get our coats and hunt up Minnie. Minnie is Mrs. Jim. She's a little jealous of you now. Don't make her more so. By the way, she has a young woman from your overgrown town in tow tonight, and we'll have to escort her to her aunt's home. Know her? She's a Miss Anna Goldie." A little later they were out in the open air, Anna walking with Spencer and Mr. and Mrs. Jim going ahead, that acute married dame having apparently sized up the situation. "After hearing you this evening," said Anna softly, "I think this is the field you are fitted for." There was a pause. They fell back a little farther.

"Do you know," he asked abruptly, "what it is that has awakened me?" "No," she answered. "It is love," he said.

He looked down at her. Her face was averted.

"Do you know what brought me down here? Do you know what carried me through that speech tonight?" "No," she softly murmured. "You!"

A half hour later he stopped Mrs. Jim as she excused herself to the two men smoking in the library. "One moment," he said.

He was seen and recognized in a village about 20 miles away and was arrested and returned to jail. He offered a sum of money and his freedom if he would betray the guard, but he was silent.

No importance was attached to the pink stone, but it was taken away from him when he was locked up.

For two days the man was quiet and sullen. Then he began to shout and scream and rave, and to quiet him the stone was restored. As soon as it was placed in his hands the fellow was like a lamb. In order to clear themselves of ridicule the officials determined that Chilak should be recaptured at any cost, and messengers were sent in every direction, and a large reward was offered. In about ten days he was found 100 miles away. The first move of his captors was to take the pink stone away from him. He was brought back to Haidarabad and jailed, and he was offered various sums of money if he would give up the secret of his escape. Not a word of explanation would be make, and for four days he refused to eat or drink. He begged for the pink stone, and it was finally decided to give it to him. The stone had been taken to lapidaries and jewelers, but no one had been able to give it a name or to recall having ever seen one like it.

THE ST. CYR MURDER TRIAL

Opens This Morning With the Evidence of Clithroe

Who Tells the Story of the Tragedy on the Lewis River Near Hootalinqua Last November.

George L. Clark, charged with per jury, was before Justice Dugas this morning and elected to be tried by a judge and plead guilty. He will be up again tomorrow morning.

The prisoner on the 19th of November made application to the gold commissioner for a hillside claim adjoining 99 below lower discovery on Dominion, swearing at the time that he had previously staked the ground.

George Thomas St. Cyr, accused of having on the 17th day of November last, at a point near the Lewis river, murdered a man named James Davis was on trial.

Both men were wood choppers and the only witness was one Clitheroe, a partner of the murdered man, who had formerly been in partnership with St.

On the morning of the killing, Cli theroe broke his ax handle and about to o'clock went to their joint cabin to rehandle the ax, and told Davis before going that as the job would take some time, he would not return before lunch, which he would prepare,

After he had been in the cabin a short time he went to the door to throw out some dirty water at which time he heard a shot from the direction in which he had left Davis. He also heard a noise between a shout and a groan.

Seizing a gun he ran to where he had left his partner, whom he found lying part way down the steep embankment intervening between the river and where he had been working.

Quantities of blood ayed the snow surrounding a deep crimson, and a great flow of blood had poured down the hill.

Davis was found to be in a dying condition, and told Clitheroe that St. Cyr had killed him and that he did not know why. He also told him that St. Cyr would kill him also.

Davis was a very heavy man, and with 14 inches of snow on the ground thickly covered with stump and fallen timber, Clitheroe was unable to move the dying man, and left him to go to the Hootalinqua police detachment for as-

While going he with a surprise this morning saw St. Cyr leaving the place where he tound Davis dying.

There was a handsleigh th re but he found it impossible to use it because there was no trail

Referring to his past differences with St. Cyr the witness stated that at the time he had dissolved partnership with the prisoner there had been a quarrel during which St. Cyr had struck him over the head with a gun, after calling him a sneak and a cur. He had taken the gun from the prisoner and thrown it out of doors.

A Burning Chi mney.

Chair warmers of the night watch which fortunately for themselves, and incidentally, Tom Chisholm, turned out to be only a surprise, and not attended with any serious results.

It was all due to an alarm of fire turned in from the barbershop next firemen made their appearance in the back yard with the big chemical engine, but it turned out to be nothing of greater seriousness than the burning out of a chimney which was soon attended to and things went on with their accustomed serenity.

A Klondike Shell Game.

Out on the trail which skirts the Klondike between the bridge and the ferry, someone in memory of "Soapy" Smith days on the Dyea and Skagway trails, has posted up a sort of automatic shell game. It consists of a piece of cardboard suspended from the top of which by strings are halt walnut shells brightly gilded, and below them the legendary question: "Can you guess
