INTERPEDANCE IN GERMANT.—At one of the last meetings of the congress of pastors of the Protestant Church, held in Bremen, to discuss such moral and social questions as come within their sphere of activity. Mr. Wald, the upperintendent of Koningsburgh, stated that drunkenness was the greatest vice of the lower classes of Germany. There are annually, he says, throughout Germany, 40,000 deaths from delarisations as in the Zollverein stone, 300,000 guarts of brandy are sold and consumed ; and in Hesse one-half of the grain groduced is used for distil-ation. And yet, is a fact that intemps-rance prevails to a much less extent in Ger-many then in England and America. INTEMPERANCE IN GERMANY .--- At one of his services, might have it in his power unfairly to devolve upon the Solicitor General the per-formance of duties which he would have pre-ferred discharging himself, if allowed to charge for them. The hon the Speaker then took occasion to contrast, most favourably for the present Solicitor General, (Joseph Hensley, Eaq.) the official character of that gentleman, particularly with respect to the moderation of his charges, with that, on the same score, of a gentleman who held that appointment several years ago, whose accounts, he said, were never either very small in amount, or few and far between. With respect to the Attorney Gene-ralship, how much weight soerer ought to attach according to the opinion expressed by one hon. member, to the consideration of the previous course of study necessary to qualify a man for the proper discharge of the duties of that office, and of the expense consequent upon maintain-ing a style of living in accordance with the dignity which was supposed to attach to the ap-pointment ; he (the hon the Speaker) was of opinion that the ligitimate advantages connected with the appointment, were more than sufficient to counterbalance all such considerations. In the first place, the appointment to the office of Attorney General placed a man at the very top 1 of his profession; and, in the next, besides in-resting him with such a reputation as seldom, if ever, failed greatly to extend his private professional practice, it place him in a positi-on, from which the next advance, in case of a vacancy, was to the Bench. To all those posi-tive advantages, there were no drawbackes what ever ; and, as had been said by the Hon. the Leader of the Government, if all the favorable circumstances connected with it, were consider-ed, it would appear to be the very best of all the Government appointments. The present in-cumbent of that admice, had not had, like the Co-lonial Screetary and the Treasurer, to abandon his hoine is the country, and, at an immediate sacrifice, although for prospective be the Government appointments. The present in-cumbent of that office, had not had, like the Co-lonial Secretary and the Treasurer, to shandon his home in the country, and, at an immediato sacrifice, although for prospective benefit, to establish himself in a respectable residence in town; and neither was he, as the same hon, gentieman to whose remarks he had already referred had said, debarred either from the private prestice of his profession or from hold ing other appointments, or engaging in other lucrative speculations, as was swident from the fact of his being at once Attorney General and yudge of Probate, and, beides Agencies, being engaged in the business of a private banker. As to the amount of his official Bills for the last year, (a full consideration of which, with those of previous years, would be necessary in deter-mining; for what amount of calary his fees ought to be commuted.), that could not, at pre-sent be determined, for the last quarter's ac-for that officer, the House, as he had already in the the set of the stat quarter's ac-ount could not be got ad-it was, in legal phrase, non set insectus. HONESTY.

A Quaker passing through a market stop-ped at a stall, and enquired the price of citron. 'I have none;'said the honest countryman, 'that will suit you; they are decayed, and their flavour is gone.' 'Thank thee, friend; I will go to the next stand.' 'Hast thou good fruit to day ?' said he to the dealer. 'Yes sir here are some of the finest nutmegs of my garden. They are small, but rich of their kind.'

Then thou canst recommend them ?'

'Oh certainly sir.' 'Very well; I will take two.' He carried them home, and they proved not only un-sound, but miserably tasteless.

The next morning, he again repaired to the same place. The man who sold him the fruit the preceeding day asked him if he

"Nay, friend, thou hast deceived me once, and now although thou mayest speak the truth, still I cannot trust thee; but thy neighbour choose to deal uprightly with me, and from henceforth I shall be his patron. Thou woulds do well to remember this, and learn by experience, a lie is a base thing in the beginning, and a very unprofitable one in the end !

WHAT THE LADIES OWE TO TEA .- That ladies owe to tea much of their present high social position in England, very little reflec-tion will show. How was it with them some tion will show. How was it with them some century, and a half since, when the squire, shortly after their departure from table, lock-ed the door, and pushed the bottle round un-til his guests had not only their baser, but their entire members under his mahogany ? There is no possibility of long and strong bibing now. Like tobacco to the Ottomans, tea has beneficially weaned us from those heavy potations in which our forefathers glo-rified. Nothing has ever wrought such mar-vellous transformations. On the continent, where light cheap and harmless wince are to be had, the want that tea supplies is not felt; nor have foreigners the art of making vellous transformer to be had, the want that tea supplies is not felt; nor have foreigners the art of making tea.
