Deposits and Pops.
The New York World's article from Rome gives an interview between Chancery M. Dewey and the Pope. Mr. Dewey says he found the Holy Father vigorous physically, and intellectually of intense convictions, great learning and absolute fairness. He emphasized the reciprocal relations between employer and employee, and the duty of each to the other. He said those obligations were sacred; without them the world would go to pieces. So far as industrial and governmental affairs are concerned the church is founded on the doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and only in complete recognition of this doctrine could there be true prosperity or advancement.

Irish First in the Race.
New York, Dec. 6.—With the discovery of America still ringing in the people's ears, an Irishman, in the shape of Dr. George R. Howell of the New York state library, comes and sets forth logically and learnedly that Columbus was only a poor fourth in the race.
Dr. Howell's paper was read before the New York Historical Society at its stated meeting, held last night in the society's library in Second avenue, corner of Eleventh street.
Dr. Howell's paper places the Irish first in line as discoverers of this continent, the Norsemen next and Welsh, under Madoc, third. The lecturer quoted the statement of one Morgan Jones, who deposes, in 1635, that Indians in North Carolina, said and understood the Welsh language.

The Maslin Club.
"It has come to my knowledge," said Brother Gardner, after the snobs had been righted up and the windows lowered to let out the smoke—"It has come to my knowledge that Brother W. Down Bebe has just about done gone crazy on the subject of philosophy. I also found that Karel Johnson has spent $6 for books on that subject, although he is a philosopher of the first order. I don't know what he is doing with that money, but I don't think he is doing it for the sake of the money."

Small Fortune Between the Cracks.
A cigar dealer was recently compelled to move from his downtown stand, which he had occupied for 35 years, to the demolition of the old building.
He packed his belongings with many a sigh of regret. When he had got his things all out he turned to the workmen who were waiting to begin tearing down the building and remarked in a rather sarcastic tone:
"Well, boys, you may have all your money, but you can't have your health. The workmen began on the old floor, which had been worn into holes by age. It had not been replaced since it was originally laid.
One of the men picked up a board with his crowbar, raising a cloud of dust. When he got it out of his eyes he saw something shiny in the crack.
He picked it up and it proved to be a dime. Further investigation revealed the fact that the crack was lined with silver.
This was an incentive to the workmen. They plied their crowbars with remarkable energy for men poorly paid. In this instance they were very successful. In the course of the day they had a number of nearly half a century ago. The men gathered the coins in handfuls.
The cigar dealer, in speaking of the occasion, said that he had the slightest idea that so much money could be lost through carelessness and a poor floor, even in 35 years.
"But it won't happen again," he added. "When I heard of it I immediately gave orders to have my new store refloored with hardwood, and an cracks as my expense."

Brother Anaxias Had Pique.
DESPITE RIDICULE HE PERSISTED AND RECALLED A GREAT MAN.
It is not known, at least by the laity, that the late Brother Anaxias began his literary career under difficulties that might have disheartened any other aspirant not made of sterner stuff. As he joined the ranks of the Christian Schools when quite young he had no education worth speaking of. Anaxias manifested a taste in English composition. In his absence from the monastery some regular member would steal his literary performance from his desk and read it in a burlesque manner to all around. Brother Anaxias soon became acquainted with the fact, but persevered in spite of all ridicule.

The Napoleon of Billiards.
Frank G. Ives, the young Napoleon of billiards who made a new record at 14-inch ball table, with a run of 456, in the great Chicago match with Wizard Jacob Schaeffer, has arrived in New York. He brought with him his two favorite cues. They are both 30-ounce sticks, with small tips and fish line wound around the handles. Ives, although only 27 years old, uses as the weight of these cues proves, the hardest stick employed by any of the American stars. Ives spoke vigorously in answer to the criticisms aimed against his record run of 456 at the snooker table.
"It is nature to say," he said, "that this run was 'boomed' there was an indentation or a 'hole' in the cloth of the table. We played that Chicago match with the same cloth as I used in this run. I made that run with the ball on the left-hand side of the table, just where Schaeffer made his run of 343 points. But there isn't any hole in the cloth."
"The snooker snuff is a purely scientific shot. The run at snooker is made by striking the object ball delicately. If you just touch them, and you hit perfectly, you will not disturb the center of gravitation, and the weight of the balls keeps them in place. If you strike either of them too hard you lose the anchor marks. That is all there is about it. It is a shot that is called magic. It is simply an exhibition of the application of force to a spherical body."

Why No Scotchmen Go to Heaven.
"Long years ago, in times so remote that history does not fix the date, a dreadful war was waged by the King of Scotland. Scottish valor prevailed, and the King of Scotland, slain by success, sent for his prime minister, Lord Alexander.
"Well, Sandy," said he, "is there no' o'king we canna praye noo?"
"An' it please your majesty I ken o' a king that your majesty canna praye noo."
"Who is he, Sandy?"
"Lord Alexander, reverently looking up, said, 'The King o' Heaven.'"
"The King o' Heaven?"
"The King o' Heaven, not understood, but was willing to exhibit any ignorance."
"Just gang your way, Sandy, and tell the King o' Heaven to give up his crown, and let me be king, and I'll ding him out o' them and their empty. It was largely adopted for naval purposes, nearly all British men-of-war being fitted out with one or more of them. A ten-pounder shell will fire at the rate of a thousand shots per minute; a five-barrelled one, of course, just half that number. The whole mechanism of the Nordenfild is much simpler than that of the Maxim, and it is said therefore to be preferred by less civilized nations."

THE MAXIM GUN.
Nations which have attained to the highest state of civilization prefer the deadliest Maxim, a fact from which the maxim gun draws its conclusions. It is not, however, very common to see it used in the English army. The chief point in connection with the Maxim is its simplicity. Nothing has to be done to it to make it ready for use. It is simply a Maxim gun, and it will go on firing for any length of time. The Maxim has only one barrel, which contains 100 to 300, and this belt can be hooked on to the gun with the greatest ease.
A STREAM OF LEAD.
The Maxim fires 600 shots per minute. The bullets, indeed, smokeless powder is used that is seen issuing from the gun in a continuous stream. The cartridges used for the Maxim are all of the same length, and are packed in the same operating force, so that there is never any fear of the supply running short. Again, opposing armies shortly after the war of 1870-71, when the Maxim was first used, were in the habit of firing at each other with the Maxim. The Maxim falls into the hands of the enemy it is useless.
THE ADVANTAGE OF THE MAXIM SYSTEM.
The great advantage of the Maxim system is the utilization of the recoil, which does the work which in other guns is done by the hand of the man. In the Maxim the recoil is done by a gunner. There is, therefore, no fatigue in using it, and the man in charge can concentrate his whole attention on the aim, which, moreover, is not disturbed by the movement of a hand lever, as in the case with other machine guns. It can be easily moved about and directed in any way. The Maxim is fitted on various carriages, and can be carried on saddles, and some of them are so light in weight (50 lb.) that a man can easily carry one on his shoulders. The Maxim was used against the Matabele were on galloping or cavalry carriages. Unlike other guns, when anything is wrong with the Maxim it stops firing. It is impossible to jam it, and they have been known to fire as many as 60,000 rounds and practically be none the worse for it. It is a species of gun-metal which is more elastic than the Maxim will ever be invented. There must be a limit somewhere, and in the Maxim the recoil is of gun manufacture is believed to have been reached.
WASHINGTON BUDGET.

The Maxim Gun.
THE MOST DESTRUCTIVE, QUIET-FIRING AND EASY TO OPERATE OF THE CITIZEN'S, HALIFAX.
Each roofing wave of attack left a thin deposit of copper on the ground. The Maxim and the rifle were handled by our men with never-failing coolness and precision. Captain Harrell writes that he never witnessed firing so deliberate, and so appalling in its results. There was no waste with the Maxim. Often the Matabele were allowed to advance to some distance in the face of the rifle fire. Then the Maxim storm would burst with terrible effect. [Daily News Matabele War Telegram.

The Maxim gun has been a good deal to the front lately, not only in South Africa, but in Central Asia. It has been moving down the Mohammedan warriors in Uganda, as well as the impels of Lohengrin to Macebonald. As a death-dealing instructor that has no equal. The Maxim gun, however, has only a very vague idea of its character and construction, and a few particulars on these points may be of interest at the present time. Up to that time Nordenfild had been the most effective weapon. Before the Nordenfild there was the old-fashioned Gatling and the Montigny. The French emperor relied largely on the latter in the Franco-Prussian war, but the gun was not a great success. It was the Montigny, however, that did excellent service. One of the disadvantages of the general machine gun hitherto has been that if anything went wrong it usually took at least half an hour to put it right. That sort of thing would never be tolerated in the Maxim. The Maxim is continuously as long as good ammunition is supplied.

THE NORDENFILD.
The Maxim and the Nordenfild guns are now manufactured by the same company, who have extensive works at different centres in England. The Nordenfild machine gun consists usually of three or five barrels, but may have ten, arranged horizontally. They are worked by a lever which is worked by the hand of the operator. The Nordenfild is for with cartridges from the top by means of a hopper, which is worked by the hand of the operator. It is a simple machine, and is said to be preferred by less civilized nations.

A Vessel Stopping Service.
A Parvian inventor has endeavored to provide against the danger to which vessels are exposed when they are involved in collisions, or from other impending collisions, by designing a means of stopping a vessel suddenly. A vertically sliding frame on a post at the bow of the vessel, which will expand transversely when required. The wings are held in their normal position by means of chains attached to a forward projection of the frame and other chains connecting the free ends of the wings with the sides of the vessel. A winch, the mechanism of which is under the control of the officer in charge, is placed on deck, and holds the chains or ropes which actuate the wings. As soon as danger approaches a few turns of the winch will throw open the wings, and a resistance will thus be offered to the forward motion of the ship which will have a material effect in bringing it to a standstill.

From all Quarters.
The Queen has made Sir Charles Russell and Sir Richard Webster knights of the Grand Cross of the order of St. Michael and St. George for their services in the Baring Sea arbitrations.
Sir James Grant the new member for Ottawa, at a dinner the other night vigorously attacked the Protestant protective association. He said it was an embryo which he hoped would not obtain substantial rank on Canadian soil.
Prof. Fritch, lecturing in the museum of ethnology, Berlin, to 200 military officers, stated that with the aid of electricity he had been able to photograph projectiles in transit. He exhibited photographs showing the air waves caused by the missiles which form a light record of the velocity with which they have travelled. The apparatus used by the professor is the invention of a boy named Vernon, a resident of Hillsborough, New Hampshire.

A Horseman Who Exalts.
In every line of trade there is some man who stands out prominently for his superior skill or knowledge of a certain branch, and in one of these lines the case with Charles Marvin, the veteran trotting horse trainer, who was for so many years head-trainer at Palo Alto, the farm of the late Mrs. H. B. Marvin. Marvin is now with one of the largest farms in the East, that of Miller & Sibley, in Franklin, Pa. It was never conceded that Marvin was a superior race driver. He is a horse man who can beat him at that. But Marvin is thought to be the greatest colt handler of them all, and the quickest man to get extreme speed out of a horse, and to train a horse to the point of training and conditioning horses more than anything else are responsible for the success and world-wide reputation of Palo Alto. Marvin has published one that is able edited by a writer on one of the leading trotting journals, and in one of the most valuable additions to turf literature. It treats in an interesting way of Marvin's methods of keeping, conditioning, preparing and training horses, and is one of the most valuable additions to turf literature. Active Priests in the East.
INDIA HAS 1401; BURMA, SIAM AND MALAY 24,000; JAPAN, 15,000.
The publication of the Holy Father's recent letter, calling upon the Bishops of India, Siam and Malaya to erect seminaries in their dioceses for the training of native priests, has led many who are unacquainted with the history of the mission to suppose that there are not yet any native Catholic priests in India, Siam and Malaya. The fact is that an splendid beginning has already been made, but the Holy Father is anxious to further develop the good work. The following table shows the number of native and European priests in the missions of India and the East 1st of year, the figures being those of the official annual publication of the Propaganda, Missiones Catholicas:—

Mission	Native Priests	European Priests
India and Ceylon	288	671
Burma and Siam	283	513
China	375	630
Japan	15	70
Total	1961	1785

But this return considerably underestimates the number of native Catholic priests in India. The 283 priests in the table are only those of the mission directly under the Propaganda. To these must be added the native priests in the diocese under the Archbishop of Goa, of whom there are 700; and the 357 priests of the province of Siam in full communion with Rome in the vicariates of Trichinopoly and Kistavay. The total number is therefore 1401.
So that there are now 1400 native priests in India and Ceylon who are active in the country, a fact that speaks eloquently for the development of the Catholic mission.

DECEMBER.

J. B. MACDONALD & CO.

This month we must clear out the balance of our OVERCOATS AND REEFERS, for Men and Boys. We have a choice lot that we bought at a great bargain, that we will let go at ridiculously low prices. Don't you fail to see before buying elsewhere, and save your dollars.

We would ask special attention of anyone who purposes buying a Fur Coat or Sleigh Robe. There is no doubt we have real plush in this line.

Ladies should see our Astrackan Jackets—correct styles and cheap prices.

In our Boot and Shoe Store, adjoining our Dry Goods Store will be found cheaper and best in Charlottetown.

WELL, MR. GING!

BY HANCOCK LORER.

"Well, Mr. Ging," said Mr. Wyville, turning, "what is it?"

"One man missing, sir! not on board—he must have slipped overboard from the deck, and attempted to swim ashore."

"When did he come on board?"

"With the last chain, sir."

"Then he must be in the water still. He would drift for the mainland, not for the island."

"As he speaks, a soldier who had run up the rigging shouted that there was a hamper or basket floating a short distance astern of the ship."

Mr. Wyville asked one of the ship's officers for a glass, which he levelled at the floating hamper. He saw that it moved obliquely toward the shore of the mainland, contrary to direction, toward the island. He lowered the glass, and saw a man swimming in the sea. One of the bullets had struck him, evidently for he shouted, and flung about wildly.

All this had happened in a few seconds. The shouts had followed each other as rapidly as fire-arms. At the second shot, Mr. Wyville looked at the soldiers with a face of alarm and indignation. As the third shot rang out, he shouted to the soldiers; but his voice was drowned in the report.

Next moment, he saw the levelled rifle of another soldier, and heard the officer directing his aim. A word, Mr. Wyville seized the long and heavy marine telescope, which he had laid on the rack, and, balancing himself on the poop for an instant he hurled the glass like a missile from a catapult right into the group of soldiers on the top.

The missile struck true against the rifleman, and knocked him toward the mast, his weapon falling off harmlessly in the air. Consternation seized the others, and the young officer began an indignant and loud demand as to who had dared assault his men.

"Come down, sir," said Mr. Wyville, sternly, "and receive your orders before you act."

The subaltern came down, and joining Mr. Wyville on the poop, saluted him as he approached.

"I was not aware, sir," he said, "that I was to wait for orders in case of mutiny or escape."

"This man would be overtaken," said Mr. Wyville, "your glasses showed him to be a deserter. He has no right to kill him for his crime."

As he spoke, he brought the glass to bear on the unfortunate wretch in the water, to whom a boat was now being lowered.

"My God!" he said, putting down the glass, and turning from the officer; "the man is drowned!"

The struggling swimmer, spent with previous exertions, had been struck by a bullet in the shoulder, and though the wound was not mortal, it rapidly spent his remaining strength. Before the boat had reached him the poor fellow had thrown up his arms and sunk. His body was found and taken to the ship.

During this scene, Captain Draper had come on deck, unobserved. He had passed quite close to Mr. Wyville, as he spoke sternly to the military officer. A few minutes later, when Mr. Wyville stood alone, the captain approached him.

"Am I supposed to command this ship, or to take orders also?" he asked, not offensively, but with his usual hybrid smile.

Mr. Wyville remained silent a moment, as if undecided. The report of the shot had somewhat changed his plan.

"You command the ship, sir," he said, slowly, and fixing his eyes on Captain Draper's face. "Under me, so long as you stay in the ship, and my reference will be possible. It may be well to understand now, however, that there is a higher authority than yours on board."

Captain Draper bowed, then turning to his chief officer, who had heard the conversation, he gave orders for sailing.

VIII. FACE TO FACE.

The convict ship, with all sail set, before a strong quarter-breeze, ploughed heavily toward the South of England. And then spread her arms like a sun spirit as she swept majestically toward the deep southern seas.

No need to murmur at such on the wide continent between the tall ship, sobly said beautifully breathing the waves, and the hideous secret she bears within.

"Was it she, sister in the silver light, spreading her wings on the bosom of Allah, Alone on the deep, on the ocean in the sky, A phantom of horror, could deem with a sigh, That to lovely a thing is the monster of And that such are entities in her being?"

THE CHARLOTTETOWN HERALD,

ship, had been locked up in the punishment cell. They had first been sentenced to work at oaken picking; but they were within the bars, staring out at the crowd of convicts on deck, and singing and shouting. For this they had been again reported, and the officers had now come to take them out for further punishment.

GOOD Food - Digestion - Complexion are all intimately connected—practically inseparable. Though the fact is often ignored, it is nevertheless true that a good complexion is an impossibility without good digestion, which in turn depends on good food.

There is no more common cause of indigestion than lead. Let the bright housekeeper use

KEROSENE OIL!

The Best is the Cheapest.

Don't buy low grade, inferior Oil because it is a little cheaper in price than the highest grade. It is false economy as you will find it to be the dearest in the long run.

Poor Oil will not burn nearly so long as the better grades, and besides it will smoke your chimneys and make a very disagreeable odor in the house.

This fall we are selling the BEST AMERICAN WATER WHITE OIL cheaper than ever before, and we guarantee every gallon of OIL we sell TO BE THE BEST AMERICAN WATER WHITE.
