There was unusual excitement in Sweetwater. The new preacher, a young man of fine parts, accompanied by his wife had arrived a few days before, delivered a most effective sermon, and had been called upon with the promptness common to country communities where isolation renders local curiosity unbearable after twenty-four hours. The lady of the parsonage, whose husband was but lately a theological student and now engaged for the first time upon regular pastoral labors, came from the city, and dressed in a manner that was bound to win her the admiration or the hatred of half the village. Already that grand, interchangeable jury common to all comterm is used in a figurative sense, for wouldn't be noticed," the inquest was conducted from yard to yard, window to window and even across the one street along which Sweetwater was congregated. Wherever two or three were gathered together and two of the three happened to be of the cradle-rocking order of society, Parson Riley's wife was the theme. The climax was reached in the case when Parson Riley's wife sent out modest little notes inviting about twenty matrons to take tea with her next day. Then the jury let the main question pass while it resolved itself into committees of one, each of which began with almost frantic anxiety to look into the question of dress. Adaptation became the order of the day, for no time remained for new garments, even if Sweetwater could have furnished them. Twenty ladies drew out from their hiding-places twenty bonnots of varied shades, ages, and designs; comphored folds of twenty bombazines, alpacas, and venerable silks; and twenty pairs of hands went to work with needles, thread, hot irons, stain-eradicators, and all the household help that could be mustered, to turn the water of Parson Riley was half Irish, a little Welsh, and the rest American. Besides, he was young and inexperienced.

"Your case will be up next Sunday morning. You can come or not, as you please." He said this with a somewhat unclerical but very natural emphasis, and, turning on his heels, left the spot. The last words he heard were, "I ain't 'feared o' you ner all the Moun Zions in the world,"

As Parson Riely mounted his mare, colonel Todhuster crawled through the hedge a few yards off, looked cautiously around, securing his pipe from the porch, and went back silently the way he came. The men were ready for any except from the merciless lashing the women. Colonel Todhuster crawled through the hedge a few yards off, looked cautiously

Sunday morning brought an enormous crowd to Mount Zion church as the village edifice was called, This was natural, as on that day Presiding Elder was to deliver a sermon, and a visit from the Presiding Elder of the district always drew a crowd. But the fact noised about throughout the land, that Sister to be tried, also operated powerfully as an assembling factor, and many people miles sround came bringing their wives and daughters in their waggons. Young men in buggies with their sweethearts were numerous, and the grove about the church was full of vehicles and "tied. out stock" when service time arrived.

About ten o'clock a sudden movement at the doorway indicated that preaching was about to begin, and the congregation filed slowly within, the men on the left, the women to the right. Parson Riley, sitting in the pulpit with the portly form of Elder Hamlin beside him. watched with an abiding interest the faces of the comers. When the last was in and settled, he heaved a deep sigh of relief,-Sister Todhunter was not prehis left ear deftly with the transparent sent; she was going to remain at home and let the trial go by default,

He did not know Sister Todhunter Elder Hamlin at last arose, his red countenance glowing like a beacon above the sea of faces, and in a voice like a trumpet's opened the meeting with prayer. He asked Divine blessing upon Mount Zion Sweetwater, and the remainder of the world, invoking a helpof the cross" who had "come among these people to battle for the right, and upon "the young woman, just buddin' into matourity," who had "come to the excitement. In moving to the share his trials and minister with him," front Colonel Todhunter came within "Yes sir. To tell the truth, Parson, 1 share his trials and minister with him," was a little mixed,—had taken a little His prayer concluded with an appeal in doings they were about to consider.

'May she ba led to see the error of her way," he said, "an" turn her feet into the strait an' parrow path." And he thanked the Lord for the assurance given in those lines which declare that.

"While the lamp holds out to burn The vilest sinner may return. Elder Hamlin ceased, and amid the shuffling of feet that followed the deep 'Amen" which rolled from the prompt 'Amen corner" back into the dilatory recess beyond the last post, the congregation resumed their seats. Then Parson Riley stepped forward, and in the clear debating society tones his wife loyed so well, read the opening hymn :

"From Greenlands icy mountains,

Elder Bucker stood up in advance of the congregation and raised the tune in a strong baritone that at once sprang out boldly and challenged the whole assemb ly. He was instantly pursued and over taken by Mrs Culpepper's soprano, and Mrs Buckner's sweet contralto soonfound an entering place. After her came the deep tumble-bee base of Colonel Ledbetter, who adjusted his gold-rimmed glasses as he came in. This was the customary opening. No one in Sweetwater would have dreamed of invading the melody with any sort of a voice until Elder Buckner, Mrs Culpepper, Mrs Buckner, and Colonel Ledbetter had obtained a fair start. Any one so imprudent would have drawn the attention of the whole congregation upon himself. But the quartette well under way, every person was at liberty to rush in ; and so on this occasion, soon, born alof: by the united voices of the entire congregations the peaceful Sabbath heart of the wood-The last tone died away-as usual it

A Detective Story.

The weest thing I think I ever aid was to arrest a man in church. I took him right off his knees. It was a funny case there had been a systematic series of burglaries from the cars of the Pennsyl vania road, the robbers doing their worl in such a manner that it baffled the detectives. A whole carload of fine shoes had been side tracked at the city, and while there a case of fine shoes had been atolen from the car. There was no clue to the thief, and although we suspected the members of a pretty tough there was no proof. One notning I saw one of this gang walking along the street and I thought I d get close to him, for it struck me he had a new pair of shoes on He got onto me and popped into a church. It was Sanday morning and the church was crowled. He went in and knelt down near the door and I saw the bottoms of his shoes, with the mark of the company that had shipped the stol Lebber see. You remin' me ob her so slapped him on the shoulder and took him outside. Then I placed him under arrest and he gave the entire gang away so that we had no difficulty in breaking it up for good - Tom Furlong in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

> THE AGRICULTURAL BUIDINGS. - At a meeting of the public works committee
> Tuesday it was resolved to recommend that the tender of Geo Neibergall for the erection of the proposed agricultural hall, amounting to $2,750 be accepted. In addition to the main buildings, the sheds for stock will also have to be erected at a probable cost of $500. The other costs connected have been $1,000 for purchase of grounds, $800 for fenc-ing, together with the sum spent in levelling and seeding, and yet to be spent in draining. Altogether the new grounds will cost in the vicinity of $7, 000. At a special meeting of the town council Tuesday evening the contract for

A Judge's Kind Heart.—Apropos of the good-heartedness of the late Sir Matthew Cameron, a little episode has been related. In July, 1885, at Port Arthur, a young American was brought up charged with a rather serious crime. After a long trial, about ten at night, the judy gave the young fellow in the dock some good advise and calling him in front of the bench said: "You have now been some time in jail; you say you want to go to your friends at Ashland I expect you have not got enough money even toppay for a night's lodging. The problem of farming consists in making the soil increasingly fertile. Manure is the farmers' savings bank, and if more of them would have large neaps of it every spring to spread upon their lands, instead of money at interest, they would prosper better in the end.

Three thousand one hundred hogsheads of tobacco were recently burned at Louisville, Ky., by the destruction of a large tobacco warehouse. The gutters ran rivers of juice from the wet tobacco, and gallons of "sheep dip" and extract Three thousand one hundred hogsand gallons of "sheep dip" and extract of tobacco were wasted. The fertilizer men missed a big chance.

The New England Farmer says: Ten acres of soiling crop will give the same results as sixty acres of pasture; and during the hot dry months, of August and beginning of September, when the pastures are burned up, will prove vastly more satisfactory. One man for in hour during the early morning will out enough for two meals; and the feeding to the animals is only a very short chore.

How a Dude Caught Cold.

A slim young man in the height of fashion was violently sneezing in a street car, when a companion remarked, "Aw, Chawles, deah boy, how d'ye catch that dweadful cold." "Aw, deah fellah, left my cane in the lower hall tother day, in sucking the ivory handle, so dweadful cold, it chilled me almost to death." If Charles had used Dr. Harvey's Red Pine Gum his cold would not trouble him very much. For sale at J Wilson's prescription drug store.

Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair soft and pliant, imparts to it the lustre and freshness of youth, causes it to grow Iuxuriantly, eradicates Dandruff, cures all scalp diseases, and is the most cleanly of all hair preparations.

AVER'S Hair Vigor has given me nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Indeed, what little hair I had, was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my head is now well covered with a new growth of hair.

The answer is given as follows: To take burnt dry lumber and mix it with of it was in my case that it was just my stale beer or with water to which a little durned luck to leave the thing runnin been added; rub the wood is made by taking two quarts of rain such a miserable night in my life. water, adding three ounces sal sods, four ounces Vardyke brown, and 1 ounce biehromate of potassa, and boiling the mixture for 15 or 20 minutes. It can be applied with either a brush or a sponge. When dry, varnish (hot or cold). Woods that are atsized will finish up nicely if the first coat of varnish be a meliae varnish, which, being a spirit varnish, assimilates better with the stain coat and enriches it. It slso prevents the copal finishing or rubbing varnishes

The heroism of the battle-field is recorded in unfading story; but the thousands of exhibitions of the noblest individual heroism seldom cause more than a Passing tribute.

The most notable exhibitions of heroism are passing tribute.

The most notable exhibitions of heroism are often given by the engineers of trains in cases of serious accident. There are many instances within the memory of all intelligent citizens when locomotive engineers have heroically braved death to save the lives of the passengers entrusted to their skill and care; and it is a rare exception when the engineer does not first consider the safety of others in moments of grave peril to his train, leaving his own safety to chance. True, it is his duty; but how many are mindful of the full measure of duty when death confronts them?

The last words of the engineer on the New York Central train that was thrown from the track by a landslide a few days ago, were: "Boys, flag the train!" His engine had plunged into the river down a precipice of two hundred feet, and he was taken up in the agonies of death. He had performed his duty with a heroism worthy of the Spartan band of Thermopylie, but his last thought was for the safety of others, and knowing trial a train was due in a few minutes, he could only uter: "Boys, flag the train," when death ended his suffering.

The world is too prone to forget the heroism of the orghibited in Taken while I a train the last thought world is too prone to forget the heroism of the orghibited in Taken while I take tter: "Boys, flag the train," when death ended his suffering.

The world is too prone to forget the heroism of the world is too prone to forget the heroism of the heroism of bloody battle fields, where only the veriest cravell could be coward, but it gives scant and grudging justice to the heroism that accepts death in the line of duty, and even in the throes of death is mindful of the safety of others. There is a volume of grandest heroism in the last words of Engineer Kennar, who in the agony of death gave his last order for the safety of his passengers: "Boys, flag the train!"

And now the Knights of Labor in Chicago are complaining of and threatening to resist the despotism of the Carpenters' Council Among the strikers there are some Knights of Among the strikers there are some Knights of Labor who are ready to return to work, but who aver that "the Carpenters' Brotherhood is bossin them." These workingmen are beginning: realize the tyranny which may be, and has been, exercised over them by their own and similar organizations. The submission which is refused to a cognate body will be repudiated when required by the organization to which they belong. It will dawn upon the minds of these people that whoever commands idleness when work is to be had and fairly remunerated; whoever incites to violence; whoever encourages idleness and ill-feeling is to be disregarded. The thousands of wyrkthgmen now out of employment in Chleago, most of their self-imposed masters, will not continue to give into the hands of a few irresponsible and thoughtless officials their daily bread and the happiness of their homes. So cruel an autocracy as is exhibited by the hights upon occasion, and by other labor organizations at times, cannot be maintained for any greatlength of time in a land of liberty and of intelligence. As Miss Martha Murdoch was driving her sister Lizzie, who has not been well for some time past, to Sunday school in company with Miss Lizzie McMillan and two small children, Lovel Murdoch, and his niece Grace Cameron, while going down the hill the breeching broke both sides, letting the buggy run against the horse's heels, frightening him so that he ran away. A crowd-of boys ahead seeing the affair, stood in a line across the road to stop him causing the horse to at once take the ditch which was not very shallow. All at once the shafts which were attached to the rig with a spring, came out and the horse got clear, but not without taking Martha with him. She was dragged about 20 feet. She saw she could not hold him, and she let go but not without getting badly hurt. As luck would have it, Dr McCrimmon arrived on the scene at once while on his way to see a patient, but his services were not needed any further than to take her home, rest got off with a bad fright.
