LADY LAURA'S RELEASE

THE STORY OF A SPOILED BEAUTY.

CHAPTER IX.

Lady Rooden sat that same evening in her boudoir alone, a brooding smile on her face, a low light shining in her eyes. She had gained her heart's desire; she was going to marry the man she loved with such deep passionate love. Yet, in the midst of her present happiness she could not keep her thoughts from reverting to the past, she could not curb the memories that swept over heart and brain.

It was not much more than eighteen years since she had passed through a similar scene with her dead husband. She remembered his passion of delight when she accepted him, and how he had loved her with the same deep, tender love until he died. But that love had been more the romantic fancy of a young girl; this was the earnest love of a woman.

The past, that held the story of her first love and her marriage, seemed to fade away like a dream; the entrancing vivid present was the only reality.

"Strangely that I should love him so well," she said to herself. "But my heart went out to him when I first saw him, and it has never been my own since. I knew it was not true that he loved Gladys Rane. As his wife, I shall be the happiest woman in the world."

The only drawback to her happiness was the thought of what Angela would say. The woman who only a few weeks since had worshipped the girl, and loved her above all and everything, had now a vague feeling that her daughter stood between herself and happiness. For the first time she wished that Angela would soon marry and yet in the same moment her heart reproached her for the wish.

Lady Rooden decided it would be better to impart her news at once. Captain Wynyard had been very urgent about the marriage, and on her part she saw no reason for delaying it. He had urged her to let the ceremony take place before the end of the season, the fact being that he was heavily in debt and very short of money. Her ladyship was much flattered by his importunity, but would not hear of the wedding taking place before August. She would not be married from the old Abbey, whither she had gone as a girl- bride eighteen years before, but would be married in town. She knew that in all probability the news of the engagement would be known and discussed in fashionable circles on the morrow; she concluded therefore that it would be better to tell Angela herself that evening than let her hear it from strangers. Yet Lady Rooden shrank from the task. Her heart beat faster and her face paled unwontedly when she sent for her unsuspecting daughter.

"Come and chat with me, Angela," she began. "I do not want the lamps lighted yet; this soft gloaming is the fairest light of all. How sweet the air is! Oh, Angela, I am so happy, I am so happy that words fail me." "Angela looked up, her face bright with smiles. "I know why, mamma," she said. "This beautiful night has made you think of the Abbey, and that has brought papa to your mind. I always think of him on these lovely summer nights."

If she had suddenly dashed cold water into her mother's face, her ladyship could not have started more violently. The words came to her like a staggering blow. She remained silent. Her task was rendered doubly hard now, and she moved uneasily. She laid her white, gemmed hands on her daughter's hair. "Your papa's memory is sacred to me always, Angela," said her ladyship; and the girl looked up in wonder, noting the constraint in her mother's voice. "But it was not of him I was thinking just then, but of some one whom I hope you will learn to love as much as you did him."

papa, and I were always one. It is just the same now as though he were living."

And again Lady Rooden felt as though some one had suddenly thrown cold water on her, and for some moments she was silent. She rallied her courage presently by reminding herself that she was doing no wrong, that she had been a loyal and loving wife to her husband while he lived, and that she had a perfect right to marry again if she chose to do so. Why, after all, need she fear anything that her daughter could say? Yet she trembled with emotion as she continued:

"Nothing, I am sure, can ever come between us, Angel. We may differ in opinion, but we are always one in heart. I want you to please me; I want you to make me happier than I am by trying to like some one whom I have learned to love."

Still no glimmer of the truth came to the girl, who loved her mother with the single love of a loyal heart. "I always love your friends, mamma," she answered; "they are the same to me as my own."

"But the person of whom I speak is nearer and dearer than a friend, Oh, Angela, it seems hard to tell you; yet I cannot tell her it should be! I am young yet, and I have, I hope, a long life before me. I have the right to please myself in all my actions."

Angela took the white, gemmed hands in her own and kissed them with passionate love.

"Why do you say such strange things, mamma?" she cried. "I do not understand."

Lady Rooden's lips grew stiffer and colder as she continued: "Let me tell you in few words, Angel. I love with all my heart, and I have promised to marry Captain Wynyard."

A dead silence seemed to fall over the room, a terrible chill silence that was broken only by a passionate cry from Angela—a cry so full of anguish and despair that Lady Rooden's heart was touched by it.

"It cannot be true," the girl gasped; "is it not true? Oh, mother, darling, I would rather die than believe it!" "It is true, Angel, and it makes me happier than words can tell."

With a cry even more despairing than the first, the girl slipped from her mother's arms and fell to the ground. Deep, passionate sobs shook the slender figure; it was a tempest of grief that setled the girl and rendered her helpless for the moment.

At last Lady Rooden said, sadly: "Oh, Angel, do not weep so bitterly; you will break my heart!" (To be continued.)

SIDE TALKS.

ON MEETING SANCHIA.

"Any now I hope I don't meet Sanchia. But I bet I will!"

The lady who said that had been shopping with me. She had found some plants which she could carry home, and she had loaded her arms with them. She also had an umbrella. She did look unlike her usual trim self. But it wasn't her appearance that I laughed at. Why should I? I was her best friend. Sanchia, I have the same fear.

And I'll wager you do. Of course you don't know Sanchia. And neither, for that matter, do I, except as a friend's friend. But I have my own Sanchia. And I'll wager you have.

Sanchia is the person we always meet at certain times.

When we carry so many bundles that we make ourselves look ridiculous.

Always when we look our worst. When it's a rainy day and we wear the old hat that we keep for such days, and our old coat and rubbers, and carry an umbrella.

When we have been shopping all the afternoon in a Christmas crowd, and we are afraid our hat is on at a bad angle, and we know our hair is out of curl and that we are looking our worst and ugliest and haggard.

"Neptune's Mails."

(Glasgow Weekly Herald.) The Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries has recently liberated from stations in the North Sea, a number of "drift bottles" containing a request to the finder to post back an enclosed card recording on it the date and place at which the bottle was picked up. From the date thus obtained, valuable information concerning ocean drifts may be gathered. Bottle messengers have served for seamen as a simple method of communication with the outer world since ships sailed below the horizon, and many tragic stories have "Neptune's Mails" carried ashore. Numbers have sunk to the ocean's depths, or been broken on rocks or coral beaches. A well-known author gives a graphic picture of one of these messengers. "Drifting on the broad Atlantic the little bottle rose and fell with the waves, travelling shoreward with every incoming tide, with every ebb drifting back—back. The merest speck on a watery expanse, bobbing, rolling, spinning, somersaulting, like a crazy, drunken man."

Some lie unheeded on lonely shores, and it is on record that a bottle containing a message despatched in 1827 was picked up on the Irish coast twenty-one years later. How many miles this had drifted it is only possible to conjecture.

In the drifts of the North Atlantic are two marked features. First, from the Equator on the south to the parallel of 43 deg. on the north, there is a vast whirl that engulfs a wide waste of waters between the Trade and anti-Trade Winds. Here is to be found that strange growth the Gulf weed, and part of the waste is known as the Sargasso Sea, much favoured as a setting by writers of sea adventures, and through which the historians of old stated that mariners had to chop their way with hatchets. Second, there is an extension of the Gulf Stream, which moves from the main eddy in the neighbourhood of 30 deg. W., and continues on to skirt the coasts of Scotland, Iceland, and Norway.

To show something of the extent of these drifts, a bottle thrown out in mid-ocean between Brest and Newfoundland was picked up at Antigua after travelling nearly 5000 miles in two years. It had passed close to the Azores, Canary Isles, and Cape Verde. Another of "Neptune's Mails" covered 6000 miles in four years, and a third, sent off near Sierra Leone, under the influence of the current setting eastward on the African coast, reached the Shetland Isles, after a drift of 8000 miles, in just over 1000 days.

Derelict and waterlogged ships take similar routes to these bottle messengers.

An interesting but tragic feature in the study of drifts is the strong easterly set of the sea from Cape Finisterre to the Scillies. This dangerous current, the source of much wreck on the old "wreckers" on the coasts of England and France, has in consequence of its insidious motion towards the rock-bound barriers of Land's End drawn many a good ship to destruction. That the liner, the Drummond Castle, lost near Ushant, went on to the rocks through the agency of this drift.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE WHITE OAK. The white oak keeps its leaves till spring when other trees are bare. And who will take the time to look, will find the young bud there.

The young bud needed snug and warm against the winter's cold, The young bud being sheltered by the knowledge of the old.

And when the spring shall come again—and gentle turns the day, The youthful bud will swell with strength and thrust the old away; The youthful bud will seek the breeze and hunger for the sun, And down to earth will fall the old with all its duty done.

Then heedless of the parent leaf, the owner has aroused much interest throughout the country. The plaintiffs were invited by a sister of the owner of the machine to accompany her on a ride, during which the accident happened. The guests sued the owner for damages. The case has given rise to considerable discussion because of the issues involved.

How like man's life from birth to close! How like the white oak tree! Which seeks a shelter for its young against the storms, are we! We guard our children through the day, and watch them through the day, And when at last our work is done, like leaves, we fall away.

of "Neptune's Mails" is less the farther away from the Equator. Near the Bay of Biscay, about 15 miles a day, in the latitude of Scotland and England about 6 miles a day.

But many of "Neptune's Mails" have carried messages of despair and sorrow from those who have found themselves in dire peril on the wide expanse of some mighty sea. From shipwreck and fire, from thirsting, starving souls adrift on the waters, menaced by burning suns or towering waves, from mutiny and plague-stricken seamen, the little bottle messengers have safely borne to the land their messages; messages scribbled hastily on sea-stained paper, on the margins of leaves torn from books, on scraps of sail cloth, on splinters of wood, written swiftly and thoughtlessly in pencil, and more than once in blood. "In collision with iceberg," "Captain, all crew, but me John Williams died yellow fever," "Ship burnt only me Sam Thomas left in boat."

"Dying, no water. God bless my mother," "Whoever picks this up will know barque Caller On, Hull, run down steamer. No more time, Dawson." "Ship Buckingham. Captain killed by coolie off Shetland Isles."

What stories can be conjured up from such tragic communications, and, if found in some far-away cove, what a valued, historical relic would be the little roughly-shaped bottle which, after placing in it a message to his Queen, that ancient, intrepid explorer, Columbus, cast into the sea on his voyage across the Atlantic.

GAINED 65 POUNDS!

"Five years ago when I was first married, I had wonderful energy. I could be on the go all day long without feeling the least bit fatigued. I had a great appetite and could eat anything. I weighed 147 pounds. I used to be busy every minute of the day and, when the day was over, I could go to bed and never wake once during the night. Thirteen months ago my first baby was born. After that my energy seemed to leave me. I was tired all the time. I had to force myself to do my household duties. Instead of being a pleasure as formerly, these duties became a real task. I lost all desire for food and nothing would tempt me. I had to make myself eat. I would go to bed at night and toss from side to side for hours at a time. After a while I would doze off only to find that I had been sleeping for ten or fifteen minutes. Covered with morning came, not having slept. I started the day completely tired out. I was shaky and nervous. The least noise would startle me and make my heart race along. I could see that my husband was worried. I was losing weight every week and had already lost 65 pounds. I tried all kinds of tonics, but they didn't help me. One night a night I shall never forget because it started me on the way to health and happiness again, my husband brought in a bottle of Carrol. A friend told him that Carrol had saved his wife's life, so he insisted upon my trying it. Six weeks after I began taking Carrol, my weight increased from 88 pounds to 153, an increase of 65 pounds. And, am I well these days? Every morning I fairly jump out of bed ready to tackle anything and within minutes of the day is a joy to me now."

Carrol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money. 2-8-22

Guests Hurt! WIN SUIT AGAINST HOST.

LONDON.—The recent decision of an English Court allowing $14,000 damages to occupants of an automobile against the owner thereof, as a result of a motor accident which occurred while they were the guests of the owner, has aroused much interest throughout the country.

Spoons That Are Valuable! On Wednesday, February 14, Messrs. Christie, Manson and Woods, the well-known auctioneers, of street, St. James's, London, sold sides other costly articles, of which were called Apostles' on account of their having been embellished with figures of the preachers of Christianity, one of which was a common present to a child at its baptism during the tenth and seventeenth centuries, whole lot was purchased on the case for a total sum of £110, more than £64 18s. each.

How like man's life from birth to close! How like the white oak tree! Which seeks a shelter for its young against the storms, are we! We guard our children through the day, and watch them through the day, And when at last our work is done, like leaves, we fall away.

Bottled Relief is the title thousands of people have given to SLOAN'S LINIMENT. It is unequalled as a counter-irritant. Its beneficial and soothing effect when applied to any painful part is immediate. It is highly penetrative, relieves pain quickly, is clean and easy to apply and will not blister or cause soreness in the case with mustard plasters.

Silver that is badly tarnished should, before it is cleaned, be washed in soapy water to which one or two teaspoonfuls of methylated spirits have been added.

PLANS ECONOMIC CONFERENCE. WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—An official dispatch received here from London says that arrangements are being made for holding within the near future an economic conference between the different parts of the British empire. Present plans contemplate the appointment of delegates by the various overseas governments, but British commercial associations are insisting that the great business organizations of the empire should be invited to send representatives of their various organizations or trade associations.

Minard Liner Reports Worst Voyage in Her History—Sydney Strike Situation Less Tense—Escaped Capture One Way to Meet it in Another.

CALLS FOR ASSISTANCE.
NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The fury of the storm which day after day has been blowing from the north-west has now become a deluge of rain and snow. The Italian freighter Monte is being washed by heavy seas and the crew are suffering from the cold, according to the message. The Sempra is going to meet the Tampa from Boston and the Carlipa from New Orleans is en route to her position. The cutter Modoc is on the way from the Rockland, Maine, schooner Ship, with lumber from New York. The freighter Manhattan, from New York is reported being in heavy seas making five miles an hour. An unidentified schooner, recently abandoned, is reported off the coast of the cutter Gresham, which is being investigated.

SHARDER HAD STORMY TRIP.
HALIFAX, Feb. 15.—The Comander Saxonia arrived in Halifax this afternoon, fifteen days late from Hamburg, Cherbourg and Southampton, and reports the worst voyage of her history, fighting waves of the harbor yesterday morning. She was forced to put to sea to-day.

FOUR VICTIMS IN PACIFIC.
SEATTLE, Feb. 15.—The North Pacific graveyard for ships claimed four victims to-day as follows: the Nika, burned to the water's edge, the freighter Santa Rita on a rock ledge off Vancouver Island, high and dry; the British freighter Tuscan Prince, dashed to splinters on Estevan Point, British Columbia, and the motor ship Cochla, grounded by huge waves on a reef near Albert, British Columbia.

IRISH IRREGULAR LEADER MARRIED.
BELFAST, Feb. 15.—The Irish irregular leader Boffin, against whom Free State troops are executing an encircling movement in the Arigna Mountains, County Cavan, was married on Monday in the village church at Lettrick, according to a report received here to-day.

Central European States IMPROVE FINANCIAL RELATIONS.
PRAGUE—Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia have come together in financial matters in a way that undoubtedly will prove mutually beneficial. There will be created a permanent banking organization to control all financial matters common to both states. Individual banks will subordinate themselves to the organization, and endeavor to induce industry to effective and far-reaching co-operation.

Municipal Council. WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. The meeting was a very short one, only routine matters occupying the attention of the Board.

Mayor Cook presided, Councillors Martin, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present.

Superintendent Morris of the St. John's Light and Power Company advised that the work of disconnecting the electric wires at the closets during the coming week. Such action was necessary, as the lamps and wires in these buildings were destroyed by some persons unknown.

Tenders for the supply of C. I. Pipe and Specials, required for alteration to water system were opened but consideration deferred.

Application of James Sharp to repair building, Sheehan's Shute, was referred to the Engineer.

The Health Officer's report showed 3 new cases of Diphtheria and 5 of Scarlet Fever in the city during the past week.

The City Clerk submitted statements of Revenue and Expenditure for the year 1922. The revenue for the year amounted to $417,268.70 and the expenditure $415,774.54. The Council met all its obligations on Current Account as well as liquidating the deficit left by its predecessors. The past year's work was considered most satisfactory and the Mayor and Councillors are to be congratulated on the result. The collection of outstanding arrears of taxes was the best in the history of the Council. During the past few weeks the public were notified through the daily papers of the intention of the Council to take legal proceedings against delinquents in arrears at February 10th. Already some 25 writs have been served.

Twenty-nine young men who failed to pay their poll tax appeared before Judge Morris yesterday forenoon and were fined $1.00 and costs. In future proceedings the full penalty will be asked for.

The Venturi Motor still shows the abnormal rate of eight and three quarters million gallons of water per day coming into the city, at one time during the past week it registered almost 10 million gallons.

After reports of the different officers were read and the weekly accounts ordered paid the meeting adjourned.

Calamity on The Yorkshire Coast.

A very sad calamity occurred on the Yorkshire coast on Thursday, February 16, 1871. An unusually large fleet of vessels had passed southwards, many of them bound for France with supplies of fuel, when, early in the morning, a strong gale began to blow from the south-east. One or two vessels contrived to reach Bridlington Harbour in safety, and the better built and manned of those that remained, succeeded in riding out the gale at sea; but the rest, unable to do either, ran ashore, and became total wrecks. Unfortunately, instead of choosing the north beach, which was partially protected, most of them made for the south beach, which was exposed to the full fury of the wild sea, that was running, so that shortly before noon the scene was heart-rending, there being no less than nine vessels pitching about at the mercy of the winds and waves in the basin at the north side of the pier, and in all some eighteen or twenty vessels were lost. Two lifeboats—that belonging to the National Society, and a small private boat presented some years previous by Count Bathynan—were at once got out, and manned by willing hands. Both these boats performed good service, the latter bringing off the crews of no less than five vessels. A brig was then observed to be in trouble to the south, off Wisthorpe. Four of her crew launched a boat, but in trying to reach the shore their craft was swamped, and they were all drowned. It was seen that a solitary man was still clinging to the doomed vessel, and Mr. Purden, the builder of Count Bathynan's boat, resolved to save him. They succeeded in getting alongside, when a tremendous wave overwhelmed the gallant crew. The poor fellow whom he had striven to save was also lost.

Great Photoplay in "Lavender and Old Lace."

RICH IN SENTIMENT AND HAS GOOD COMEDY.

"Lavender and Old Lace," which was the attraction at the Nickel last night, is rich in sentiment. It is the history of a woman whose love endures through years of neglect and weary waiting for the lover of her youth who had promised to return from sea and make her his wife.

Every critic who has seen the production is unanimous in declaring it to be one of the sweetest, cleanest, finest, most entertaining pictures ever brought to the screen. And the comedy that director Lloyd Ingraham has worked into it will give you many a hearty laugh.

Another very interesting item is the current episode of "The Hope Diamond Mystery," featuring beautiful Grace Darmond.

Tax on Household Servants.

MOSCOW—Russia's tax on luxuries has been extended to include servants. By recent decree a tax of 400 million rubles a year was levied upon all families having one servant, and 500 million rubles for each additional maid or butler in the house. At the present rate of exchange 100,000,000 rubles is the equivalent of $3. The minimum wage for servants in Moscow to-day, by a ruling of the central trade union, is 200 million per month. All servants must be secured through a government labor bureau, and failure to register each household worker, or endeavor to avoid paying the servant's tax, is punishable by imprisonment and fine.

An Open Letter. TO THE FISHERMEN OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

Fellow Countrymen.—We are about to start a campaign throughout the Northern Districts for the purpose of demanding a reduction of taxation. As you are aware at the present prices of outfits the fishermen cannot hope to make two expeditions. It was utterly impossible last year to catch enough fish to pay expenses and feed and clothe our wives and families. Unless the taxes are reduced the same state of affairs will exist this year. There is no hope for the country under present conditions. Our young men will leave their native land for foreign shores and on the older people will fall the burden of carrying a weight of debt and taxation that will be unbearable. It is time for us to be up and doing. The House of Assembly must open and the taxes must be reduced twenty-five per cent. to allow the merchants to supply for the fishery next summer. This is our whole object—the saving of our country for our children. Will you help us? We are confident you will. We hope to address you shortly on these matters.

(Mr. Edwin Scrymgeour, the Prohibitionist M.P. for Dundee, has arrived in London.)

To the lady of the village a prodigal spoke
"Now Scrymgeour's awa' . . . hoots! the Pledge can be broke!"
Let all who are dying of thirst follow me,
And—up w' the elbows in bonnie Dundee!

"Come make up your minds as to what ye will hae—
The nice air in clover when pussy's away!
Wi' Scrymgeour in London it's dry it will be,
But the drought will be broken in bonnie Dundee!"

There was popping of corks from the morn to the night
On the day Scrymgeour left for the South full of fight
It was: "Sandy, another—a sma' yane—w' me!"
Aye! The night was a braw ane in bonnie Dundee!
"So 'Three cheers for Scrymgeour!'—he will hae a clack
Wi' 'Countess Astor, who's on the same track!
We did a gud job when we made him M.P.
So we'll keep him in London—and not in Dundee!"

New Invention. PROMISES SECRET AIR MESSAGES

STOCKHOLM—A remarkable machine which automatically turns radio telegrams into secret code at the sending station, and transforms these messages into straight text at the receiving station, has been invented and is being tried out in Sweden, thus signalling another stride in the rapid advances made in wireless communication. The new machine, called a cryptograph, in receiving the message as originally written by the sender and deciphering it mechanically, eliminates the human factor of the code clerk, who is liable to error, and avoids the delays which have been costly annoyances under the old systems. One of the purposes of this machine is to make the message undecipherable by those for whom it was originally meant if picked up while in the air, thus helping materially in the solution of the crucial problem of secrecy for radio messages. The cryptograph probably will be installed at the new high powered radio station at Grimeton, near Gotherburg, Sweden, designed for service between Scandinavian countries and America, which will be ready for use before the end of the year.

Princess's Adventures

Strange Story of The "Princess Caraboo."

Princess Caraboo, the story of the girl who was brought to England from a remote island in the South Sea, has been a favorite story for many years. The story is told in a simple and straightforward manner, and is a good example of a well-told tale. The Princess Caraboo was a girl of about fifteen years of age, and was brought to England by a ship's crew. She was found on a small island, and was brought to the ship by a crew member. She was then taken to England, and was kept in a room in a house in Bath. She was very quiet and reserved, and was known as the "Princess Caraboo." The story of her life in England is a very interesting one, and is a good example of a well-told tale. The Princess Caraboo was a girl of about fifteen years of age, and was brought to England by a ship's crew. She was found on a small island, and was brought to the ship by a crew member. She was then taken to England, and was kept in a room in a house in Bath. She was very quiet and reserved, and was known as the "Princess Caraboo." The story of her life in England is a very interesting one, and is a good example of a well-told tale.

Little Devonshire Village of Witheridge, her father and mother being respectable laboring people. From childhood the girl had been wild and strange. Her mother taught her to card and spin wool, and, in the summer, she was employed by a neighbouring farmer to weed the fields. But from the first Mary cared only for boyish occupations, wandering half-naked through the woods, and swimming like a fish in every pond and stream. What remains as so extraordinary is that, in spite of this running wild, the girl sometimes acquired a knowledge of human nature and human habits which enabled her to play many parts—and play them well—in the years which followed. Mrs. Baker soon despaired of Mary as a useful member of society. As the girl would not help her in the house or garden, her mother got a place for her as a domestic servant in Exeter, but she ran away after a few days, and embarked upon a series of the most amazing adventures. Mary Baker must really have been one of the greatest amateur actresses the world has ever known! She rarely begged outright; that would have been inartistic. She depended rather upon her prettiness and her pathos to excite pity and gain help, food and money. In this way she was assisted during her wanderings by many private persons, by the Stranger's Friends Society, and by the Chaplain of a London hospital, where she was carried when seized by fever. This chaplain found her a situation as servant, which she accepted gratefully, and left very soon after. For Mary had come to the conclusion that life in service was too dull to be endured—at any rate as a girl. She put on man's dress and actually took the place of a footman in her own native village of Witheridge, at a large house near to her father's cottage. Here she remained for a long time, without being discovered by her parents, for the future Princess Caraboo possessed the extraordinary art of so altering her features as to will as to be utterly unrecognisable. After several years of a footman's life, Mary was sent one winter's day on a message to a village some miles away, and was overtaken by a terrible snowstorm. Overwhelmed in a drift, she was nearly frozen to death, and only rescued just in time by country people, who took her to their cottage. In their efforts to revive her, her sex was discovered—and once more Mary ran away in search of further adventures. ADVENTURES IN SCOTLAND. She found them this time in Scotland, where she played the part of a pretty "war widow," saying that her husband had been killed in the Napoleonic wars, and giving her name as Mrs. Mackrinnam. She held various situations, provided by people who took pity on her apparent helplessness, and sympathised, as patriotic Scots, with her assumed nationality. For—and here is where her cleverness is so amazing—this Devonshire girl who had never before been across the Border, managed to speak with such an unimpeachable Scottish accent that she deceived all who met her. After a year or two, Mary wearied of Scotland, and set off towards the South again, tramping the roads, sleeping under hedges or in hayricks, but often obtaining comfortable shelter by means of those appealing eyes of hers. It was in this way that she reached Bath, and suddenly formed the scheme of impersonating the Cannibal Princess, Caraboo—a scheme which succeeded so well that, even after her exposure as a fraud, many people refused to believe that Mary Baker and Caraboo were one and the same person.

Her part, as we have seen, was sustained amazingly well. The language which she talked was not more gibberish—so many scholars affirmed—but something which had definite words and phrases and sounds, though they must have been of her own invention. And the same must be said of her written language; it could not have been obviously rubbish, since it deceived the learned students of the two Universities.

How this girl obtained the requisite knowledge is a marvel, since she had had practically no education, and since she set out to deceive not ignorant and easily-fused people, but a society of clever and well-read men and women.

When the imposture was discovered, as we have said, Princess Caraboo vanished—and so did Mrs. Mackrinnam, Mary Baker, and all the other aliases which she assumed.

After she left Bath in the character of the savage Princess, no more was ever heard of her. That she played many parts we can scarcely doubt.

for Mary had surely as many lives—and as many roles—as a cat.

But as Caraboo, the lovely savage, she flutters into the limelight for one brief moment—and then disappears.

ADMIRAL STARK GOES TO SEA.

MOSCOW—The Bolshevik papers are advertising the loss of Russia's Far Eastern Fleet, which, under the command of Admiral Stark, left Vladivostok when that port was occupied by the Reds last month, and has not been heard from since.

It is declared by the Bolsheviks to have sailed to the coast of Kamchatka with the object of establishing an anti-Bolshevik naval base for itself there.

Despite his Teutonic name, Admiral Stark is very Russian, being the son of the Admiral Stark who was in command of Russia's Port Arthur Fleet at the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war, but who lost that appointment owing to his negligence in letting Admiral Togo attack him unaware in the outer harbour of Port Arthur on the night of February 8, 1904, and torpedo three of his cruisers.

Stark is a sturdy imperialist bent on setting up a Czar. All his officers and men are of the same way of thinking, so that when Vladivostok was restored to the Soviet Government Stark and his sailors steamed out to an unknown destination.

He has plenty of provisions and ammunition, as well as a considerable number of infantry soldiers; and, according to the information received by the authorities in Moscow, he has occupied a small port on the Kamchatka coast, landed most of his men, and fortified the passes inland in such a way that it will be difficult for the Reds to attack him this winter.

BARRACKS AND FAMILIES. Large barracks have been constructed ashore, and the inexhaustible forests, growing down to the water's edge, provide him with all the timber he wants for fuel and for building purposes. Game is abundant, and the skins of bears provide the members of the little colony with warm clothing and comfortable sleeping bags. There are many women and children in the colony.

The Bolshevik leaders here do not see any romance at all in Admiral Stark's exploit, and denounce the admiral with considerable heat as a traitor who is working hand-in-glove with the Russian people's worst enemies, the Japanese. An order has been sent out by wireless from Vladivostok on the chance of Admiral Stark picking it up offering a full amnesty to Stark and his officers and men if the surrender by January 1st. Otherwise they will be declared outlaws.

The fleet probably consists of two cruisers and half a dozen gunboats and destroyers as well as several tramp steamers filled with women and children. Live stock, and provisions.—Daily Mail.

To Clean Piano Keys. When piano keys become discoloured they may be whitened quite easily in this way: First of all rub the keys well with a paste made of finely powdered pumice-stone and lemon juice. Then, with a cloth, apply peroxide of hydrogen until the keys look white. Use an old silk handkerchief to give the keys a final polish and they will then appear as they did when new.

Smallest in the World.

The smallest shop in the world is a jewellery shop in New York. It has a frontage of only six feet, but even that flatters the size of the little store, as it is triangular in shape.

The proprietor of the store has been growing fat, and recently put on five pounds, bringing his weight up to 160 lbs. There was no space to spare at any time, so that alterations have had to be made to allow for his increase in size.

He has one employee, a slender young man, who acts as "general manager." They cannot both be on duty in the shop at the same time. If a customer comes in whilst both happen to be in the shop, one of them has to press against the wall, and squeeze himself out.

Should, by any misfortune, a customer happen to drop a jewel whilst he is examining it, the shop has to be literally turned upside down to recover the stone. The counter has to be taken down, and the proprietor of the shop has to crouch on the floor with his feet out of the doorway to pick it up.

The rent of this unique shop is the highest in the world in proportion to the space occupied, and in consequence only the most precious stones can be sold by its proprietor. Diamonds, emeralds, and platinum are practically all that will pay their way, the cheaper jewellery would simply cost more than its value in expense of warehousing it outside the premises. The proprietor does business of over $50,000 a year.

Mummy's Paint. Mummies have their uses, especially those of between 2,500 and 3,000 years of age, for one of the richest and finest of brown paints is manufactured from these old mummies.

The paint is made by grinding the bones of the mummies with the bitumen with which they were embalmed. Each mummy, when ground up, makes sufficient paint to last for about five years. Besides its wonderful rich color, it has the advantage of being practically permanent, and for these reasons it is in great demand amongst artists, especially portrait painters whose subjects have brown hair.

Unfortunately, the supply of suitable mummies is getting scarce, for it is only those of between 2,000 to 3,000 years of age that will produce the beautiful brown paint so loved by artists. It was during that period that the art of embalming was at its best.

After the embalming process had been carried out, the body was coated with bitumen and subjected to a slight heat. It is this warmth, in combination with the great age of the bitumen, that has produced the wonderful brown that makes the paint produced from it the finest in the world.

Portugal Anxious About Africa. LISBON.—Portugal is threatened with the possible loss of her important African colonial possessions, according to Admiral Lote de Rego, who has caused something of a sensation by giving an interview to the Diario de Lisboa in which he declares that Mozambique, on the east coast, and Angola, on the west coast of Africa, may be invaded by troops of the South African Union. "The Union intends to obtain possession of these territories by fair means or foul," the admiral declares. "It is time that the people of Portugal know the truth. They should prepare to defend their interests before it is too late. It is reported," the admiral continues, "that General Smuts is concentrating troops on the frontiers, and that he means business. Portugal, deprived of these possessions, will be without a place among the nation of the world, for her colonial holdings constitute her importance." The press is demanding that the government inform the people as to what really is transpiring, alleging at the same time that all questions raised in Parliament on this subject are dismissed with vague and unsatisfactory answers.

Indigestible Figures.

Distortion and shiftiness ever are features of the arguments advanced by our not over veracious evening contemporary. Misrepresentation and the changing of figures and lines to suit its own pernicious purpose of misleading its clientele of fishermen readers in the out-ports is a trait which it has developed to the tenth degree, nor are its staff writers over particular in their statements which are rarely supported by facts. Of course suffering from such a bad attack of journalistic rabies, this phase of conduct is not to be wondered at, and it would be a miracle indeed if anything intelligent, or removed from the taint of personal abuse, were to emanate from the Augean stables, this term being a definition of the minds of those who daily turn the mental crank and grind out the pabulum which is handed out as an example of modern thought and illustration for the benefit of the "loyal" element. Figures have no significance whatever for people who will not, through stupidity or deliberation, or both, accept them. Hence it is that the Advocate does not want any correct comparisons. The ratio of increase of the Canadian National debt, as compared with that of Newfoundland has no bearing whatever on the subject of liability. It is the sum of the per capita debt that counts. And if Canada did increase her debt by as many hundred per cent. as the Advocate claims, the increase was in the cause of Empire and was patriotic. It is quite correct that Canada's war debt mounted by leaps and bounds. The reason is not far to seek. But the debt all round is Federal, and not Provincial or Municipal. The sum of that debt divided amongst the population is two hundred and seventy-five dollars per head. The assets of the Dominion, natural and otherwise, go against that. The Provincial and Municipal debts, notwithstanding the per contra opinion of the wisecrack of the Advocate, are separate from this. Each Province, each Municipality has its own debt, and against their liabilities go all the assets and resources of such Province and Municipality, and each has to bear its own burden. We did not state that Provincial and Municipal debts were not borne by Canadians. That assertion was conceived in the tortuous mind of the writer of the 'Advocate's article. What we did say was that for purposes of comparison the Provincial and Municipal debts of the Provincial and Municipal administrations in Canada, should be left out of all calculations of computation in figuring the per capita amount of the National debt of that country. We have advanced the reason previously. There is no occasion to labor the point. Intelligent people will readily perceive it. Only the atrophied brains that direct the destinies of the Advocate fail to accept it, and they not because they do not know differently, but because they are so blinded by prejudice and political spleen that they will not. We are quite content to let the public be the judges as to whether the Telegram has jumbled its figures, or whether the Advocate is guilty of that offence against good sense. Two hundred and seventy-five dollars per capita is the exact figure of Canada's National debt. Two hundred and fifteen dollars per capita that of the little Colony of Newfoundland with 260,000 people, against Canada's nine millions.

Ming's Bight Gold.

TO GET THE CHANCE IT DESERVES.

For the last 40 years people have been talking and know of gold at Mings. A Company formed by W. H. Taylor has secured some 57 locations or 2 1/2 miles and will start operations on a large scale immediately spring opens up. Some 20 different townsmen are interested in this boom and will receive substantial amounts for their different interests. The money put up is English and American. The Co. will be known as the American-Newfoundland Mining Co. It is understood Chas. P. Taylor of this city, well known in the mining world, will be the President; W. H. Taylor, Director and Managing Director; Commander J. T. Randall, D. S.O., Director; W. Piercey, Director; J. M. Devine, Director and W. H. Hynes. Successful business men of the city have been asked to act as directors and there are 3 American directors. The property has been extensively prospected and over twenty different assays gave gold in quality to average over $18 to the ton, whilst placed gold in the valleys gave over $11 to the ton. Those that really know mining locations and are competent to judge, predict big things for St. Barbe District. Mr. Taylor returns by S.S. Rosalind. When asked on the deck of the Labrador gold find he said there sure will be a big rush to Labrador next summer, and I look for big surprises and some rich findings. Asked what big mining propositions he had on for Bay St. George, he said "Mum is the word" just yet. "Well, you started the timber boom years ago, are you in for a big mining boom." "Yes, Nfld. will see a very big boom in mining soon. When I started the timber boom people doubted; well, let them do likewise now. Mines are made not found." "Few knew that to you the credit of the Port au Port quarries that employ hundreds are due you, and what of Hawke's Bay? It was put on the map by you and many other industries." "Forget it," he said, "I prefer letting others talk."

Newfoundlander Reach Miquelon.

WALKED TO SHORE ON ICE.

Superintendent Saunders of the Anglo, received the following message from St. Pierre, which he kindly passed on to the Evening Telegram:—"Sable I. arrived off St. Pierre at 5.30 p.m. Wednesday, when Harvey Gillies and Green boarded her. Please report them all well. Sable then proceeded to search for boat with four men off Miquelon. She returned early this morning and left again about 9 a.m. for west of Miquelon to continue search, and will probably report again to-day the results, and will then continue trip to Port aux Basques. All coast blocked with ice. Will advise you of any further developments."
 (Sgd.) H. HAGEN.

A message received by Mr. Saunders this forenoon reads as follows:—"Understand Newfoundlanders managed to reach Miquelon, having walked to the shore on ice. No further particulars."

MRS. THOMAS FITZGIBBON.

Died at her residence, Water Street, West, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Mary J. Fitzgibbon, wife of Mr. Thos. Fitzgibbon well-known merchant and highly esteemed citizen of the West End. The deceased lady was a daughter of the late Thomas and Mary Brennan, one of the pioneer families of the West End and for half a century was known as a leader in philanthropic and church work, and a woman of sterling qualities. Her most noted work that stands out as a monument to her genius and constructive ability, was done at the time of the erection of the Deanery. Many a work of this nature was accomplished by her and many a needy soul will miss her helping hand. We extend to the bereaved our deepest sympathy. The funeral takes place from her late residence, 430 Water Street, West, on to-morrow Saturday, at 2.30 p.m.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR DISTEMPER.

Fearing U.F. Influence.

F.P.U. MEN REFUSED HIRE OF HALL.

We have it on good authority, that fearing the spread and influence of the United Fishermen's Movement, and believing that it is a political plot against Coakerism, and all that cult stands for the Orange Members of the F. P. U. at Flat Island, Bonavista Bay, voted solidly against hiring the L.O.A. Hall to the U.F. Delegates, when the latter had arranged to hold a meeting in that settlement. So far as Unionism is concerned, in this, and other instances, despotism is the hall mark, but when Coakerism dominates the free principles of Orangeism, it is time for the Provincial Grand Lodge to stir up and take notice. Newfoundland has surely not come to that pass when a community can arrogate powers to itself in such a manner as reported by our correspondent. If Coakerism and Orangeism in Newfoundland are to be synonymous terms in future, then the quicker the Sovereign Grand Lodge of British North America takes cognizance of this phase, the better. No comment is needed on this factitious act. The very fact that F.P.U. men dominated the Lodge proceedings is sufficient proof that in Flat Island at least, there is a recrudescence of sentiment, which is not at all in keeping with the principles to which the L.O.A. lays claim.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

POLAND ASSERTS HERSHLP.
 VILNA, Feb. 16.
 Polish authorities have begun to take possession of the neutral zone allotted to Poland. Polish frontier guards have clashed with Lithuanian franc-tireurs near Puskariai, and there was considerable shooting, one officer and two soldiers being wounded.

FRENCH OCCUPY ESSEN.
 DUSSELDORF, Feb. 16.
 A company of French infantry, with machine guns, occupied Essen City Hall, yesterday. With a declaration of a twenty-four hour general strike against recent arrests, street cars and electrical plants continue to function.

PASSIVE RESISTANCE.
 ESSEN, Feb. 16.
 All the Municipal officials of Essen decided, yesterday, to suspend work for twenty-four hours as a protest strike against the arrest of Vice Lord Mayor Schefer. For the same reason schools closed their doors, and shops ceased business for several hours.

COMPELLING SERVICE.
 ESSEN, Feb. 16.
 General Fournier, French Commander, notified Lord Mayor Luther, yesterday, that French occupation forces had been authorized to help themselves, in public houses and shops, if the proprietors refused to serve them, and that any establishment where service is refused will be closed.

A STUMBLING BLOCK.
 LONDON, Feb. 16.
 The hesitancy of the British Government to permit the French to operate trains through Cologne, which would virtually sanction the Ruhr occupation, is believed here to constitute a stumbling block in conversations between the French Mission and British Cabinet Ministers.

JURISDICTION GRANTED.
 PARIS, Feb. 16.
 Sovereignty over Memel District in the Baltic Area, detached from Germany, and since the war under inter-allied jurisdiction was granted Lithuanian by the Allied Council of Ambassadors to-day.

WATCHFUL.
 DUSSELDORF, Feb. 16.
 French headquarters is keeping a watchful eye on Gelsenkirchen, where there is evidence of increasing friction between military and civilians and several arrests have been made in consequence of an attack upon French officers.

AUGMENTING FUNDS.
 TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 16.
 The World's Presbyterian Alliance, meeting here, passed a resolution suggesting and authorizing each Presbyterian Church in America to devote sums ranging from one hundred to two thousand dollars for building churches in Europe, and sums from one hundred to one thousand dollars to supplement the salaries of ministers in Europe, and sums from fifty to one hundred dollars for the purchase of theological works for the benefit of ministers and theological institutions in Europe.

Supreme Court.

King vs. Basha.

(This morning's hearing.)

On the resumption of the hearing this morning Superintendent of Police P. O'Neill was called and examined. His evidence was in connection with the investigation which, he said, followed as a result of a report of the fire insurance adjusters. Partly as a result of this report, the arrest of Basha was made on a charge of arson. Six days before his arrest his premises had been handed over to him, and between that time and the 13th of the month, when the arrest took place, the owner of the building started repairs, and in doing so removed some 13 loads of burnt goods and debris. This was possibly the reason for the difference in the valuation made by the Fire Insurance companies, and that subsequently made by valuers appointed by the crown. The Superintendent gave evidence that there were no electric wires near the hole which was found burned in the floor. Mr. F. Rendell of the Phoenix Insurance Co. was next called. He gave evidence of a policy for $10,000 on stock issued to Basha in 1921, and renewed at the end of the term, and also a policy for $1,500 issued in March, 1921, and renewed in 1922. Two other witnesses, Messrs. Fred Knight and W. Collins, were called and examined. This closed the case for the crown. Recess was taken at 1 p.m., and it is probable the case will finish this evening, as there are only two or three witnesses to be called for the defence.

United Fishermen.

MEETING AT HEART'S DELIGHT.

A meeting of the U.F. Delegates, held on Wednesday at Heart's Delight, is reported in the following message:—

Heart's Delight, Feb. 15.—Messrs. Roberts and Bragg, United Fishermen delegates, held a very successful meeting here last night. Most of the people strongly endorse the movement.

JAMES REID, Secretary.

S.S. Silvia had not reported to Harvey & Co., up to 1 o'clock to-day.

IN LOVING MEMORY

of my dear father, Thomas Dulaney who lost his life in a snow storm, Feb. 16, 1921.

We do not understand God's ways, They seem so strange to us; But we shall still confide in Him And in His all just trust.

Oh, shall we meet him yonder, On that eternal shore; Where all is peace and happiness And joy forever more.

IN LOVING MEMORY

of Edward Lundrigan, who departed this life February 15, 1923, at his home at Peter's River, St. Mary's Bay. May his soul rest in peace.

We miss thy bright and cheerful smile We see thy vacant chair; We miss thy kind and willing hand, We miss thee everywhere.

—Inserted by the family.

TAKING FULL FREIGHT.

S. S. Portia is taking a full general cargo at the Coastal wharf for Western ports. The ship will get away to-morrow forenoon should ice conditions permit.

HOUSE MAY MEET.

—There is a rumor that the House of Assembly, which stands prorogued until the 28th inst. will meet for a short session. Should this be the case the anticipated Spring Election may be deferred until the usual time in autumn.

TO-NIGHT'S GAME.

The following line-up will meet the Brigus sextets in to-night's game:—Goal, Halley or Brown; defense, G. Halley, E. Phelan and Tobin; forwards, Muir, Collins, Power, Clarke and Field. The Brigus team had a workout at the rink to-day and feel confident of putting up a good game to-night. The game starts at 7.30.

Sagona Off Scaterie.

EXPECTED TO MAKE LOUISBURG TO-DAY.

S.S. Sagona, which left Port aux Basques yesterday morning at 3.30, reported in the afternoon as being 64 miles south by east of Channel Head in thin ice, with lakes of water around and making fair progress. This morning the ship reported as being 20 miles east of Scaterie and expecting to reach Louisburg early in the afternoon.

The Postal authorities should consider the contingency of ice blocking the shore from Cape Race to St. John's and have instructions issued that if such were imminent the Sagona should make Placentia, from where foreign mails, now over 15 days hung up, could be forwarded without further delay.

City Team

Defeats Brigus.

SCORE 6-3.

The first inter-town game was played at the Prince's Rink last night, when a team picked from the Guards and Pelidians defeated the Brigus team by 6 goals to 3.

The first period started at a fast clip and hardly had the puck been put in play when Jerratt shot from centre ice, and scored the first goal for Brigus. The Brigus team worked well but they could not withstand the combination work of the City forwards.

Payn on a pass from Munn scored the equalizer, and at the face off Duke Winter took control and after a pretty run scored No. 2 for the city, just before the end of the period.

In the second period the Brigus team came back strong but the City boys had it all over them on territory play and literally bombard the Brigus goal. Duke Winter, who played a great game, beat Roberts three times in this period, and Herder on a pass from Winter added another to the City's score.

The score at the end of the second period was City 6 goals; Brigus 1. With a five goal lead, it looked as if the City would pile up a double figure score on the Brigus boys, but Roberts in goal was unshakable and saved like a veteran.

The line-ups were as follows:—City—Goal, N. Hunt; defence, Duke Winter, J. Paterson; Centre, T. Payn; wings, Erol Munn, H. Coultas; spares, Ralph Herder, E. Ewing, Hubert Rendell.

Brigus—Goal, F. Roberts; defence, G. Pomeroy, G. Meaden; centre, R. Gushue; wings, G. C. Jerratt, S. Manderson; spares, E. Jerratt, H. Payne.

PENALTIES. City—Herder (2), Rendell (1), Winter (1). Brigus—Manderson (1).

NOTES ON THE GAME. The Brigus boys are a strong aggregation and with a little more practice will give the city team a run for their money.

Meaden and Jerratt were in great form and starred for their team. Duke Winter was the goal getter for the City team and played his best game for the season.

Rendell and Paterson played a good defence game.

At The Star Movie.

Large audiences attended the performances at the popular Star both afternoon and night, and all were highly pleased with the programme, as you are always assured of a most pleasing entertainment at this theatre. The management wishes to announce that for the Lenten season they have booked some very heavy and appropriate pictures, amongst which are "Father Tom" and "The Ninety and Nine". The former is one of the most well known stories that has yet been produced and no doubt a motion picture form will prove as popular. "The Ninety and Nine" is based on the "Parable of the Lost Sheep"—"What man of you, having a hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it. And when he has found it, he layeth it on his shoulders rejoicing."—Luke C. XV.—v. 3-7.

The Tay Bridge Disaster.

Some Vivid Reminiscences.

(Glasgow Weekly Herald.)
The terrific gales which raged over these islands, during Christmas week recall a storm of tragic memory that swept over Scotland on Sunday, 23rd December, 1879, and caused the appalling Tay Bridge disaster. The breaking of the huge viaduct led to the Edinburgh train with its precious freight of 83 passengers being precipitated into the boiling waters of the Tay, with enormous loss of life. A gentleman well known in Glasgow, but who at the time of the disaster was residing in East Newport, supplies us with some vivid details of the calamity. He says:

I shall never forget that terrible day as long as I live. The gale increased in velocity from 24 miles an hour at three o'clock to 50 miles an hour at six o'clock, and at 7.10, when the train came to the bridge at Wormit, it had increased to 72 miles an hour. When the tickets were taken at St. Fort station the storm was at its height; and the roaring wind and pelting rain must have sent a shudder to the hearts of the passengers—some of whom had their doubts as to the wisdom of crossing the bridge on such a night and expressed their feelings with each other and to some of the officials. But they were told to proceed.

When the gale-buffed train approached the signal-box at the bridge end at Wormit, 7.10, Thomas Barclay, the signalman (who had been joined a few minutes before by one Watt, foreman surfaceman), got down with difficulty the signal staff to hand the baton to Marshall, the stoker on the train. Then it left promptly to time at 7.13. Struggling in the face of the gale it passed the signal-box, from which its progress was watched by the two men. All of a sudden, when it had reached the central girders, the lights disappeared. Finding their way down to the beach, the two men there, in a sudden gleam of moonlight, saw the broken arches, and the appalling calamity that had occurred became at once apparent to them. As no communication could be got from Wormit, Mr. Smith, the station-master at the Tay Bridge Station, and Mr. Roberts, the locomotive superintendent, virtually crawled along the bridge from the Dundee end until they came to the gap. When the storm abated after 10 o'clock they got the ferry steamer (The Dundee) and with a number of gentlemen went up to the bridge—at great risk—but nothing could be seen. And none had been left to tell the tale. Mr. Gibb, the postmaster at Dundee, had got messages sent to him from Broughty Ferry that mail bags, and luggage of all kinds, with cushions and portions of carriages, etc., had been picked up on the beach there.

It will never be definitely known how many lost their lives. Fifty-six was the first list, and then 85. But I think there were only three persons in the train who came out of it after hearing the conversation on the St. Fort platform. The officials on the train were David M. Beath, guard; David Mitchell, driver; John Marshall, stoker; Donald Murray, mail guard. The train ran on the bottom of the 13 girder spans of 245 ft. each, and the whole of this portion fell—250 tons in itself. The bridge was 10, 612 ft. in length, or two miles and 52 ft., and was 130 feet from level of rails to high water mark.

A Personal Experience.
While the gale was at its worst—the wind veering round from one quarter to another—we had to change from one room to another, and so were looking to the bridge (which we could see from our windows) just when the train was about due. The thirteen central spans were always lit up. We had only got our water supply conveyed by pipes laid across the bridge from Dundee a week before this, and one of my girls had gone to the kitchen to get a drink of water. When I heard a loud whistle I said to my wife there is surely something wrong with the water-pipe on the bridge, and taking out my watch I found it was 15 minutes past seven o'clock. We had seen the train on the bridge, and all the lights going out, but just thought the wind was responsible. But, looking out next morning we saw only the stumps of the piers.

I was often on the bridge at the south end, but on Sunday, October 21, 1877, I, in company with two lady friends, walked over to Dundee, crossing two of the 245 ft. spans on a plank a foot wide, 130 ft. above the water. I shudder yet when I think of our daring in taking such a risk. In the Gillian Memorial Church, Dundee, on Sunday evening, December 28th, 1879, at the moment when the Tay Bridge fell, the Rev. David Macrae, by a curious coincidence, was preaching on the uncertainty of life and the frequency of sudden death and fatal accident as a reason for being ready on quick notice to leave this world, as well as to enter the next, and not leaving for tomorrow what should be done to-day.

Rumours of a fearful accident on the Tay met the people as they were dispersing. The Bridge had a remarkable career while it was being built, for on February 2, 1877, two of the largest and one smaller girder were blown down by a violent hurricane, and 50 men had a narrow escape. One man was drowned, and another got one of his legs broken. On June 22nd another girder fell, the chains giving way, but every one of the men escaped. It was visited on July 3rd by the Emperor of Brazil, on September 1st by General Grant, ex-President of U.S.A., and on September 28th by Prince Leopold.

Key to European Peace is Spiritual.

DETROIT, Jan. 27.—Only the moral intervention of the United States can save "the decadent civilization of the old countries from utter ruin," Frank A. Vanderlip of New York declared in an address here.

The key to European peace, he said, was spiritual, rather than political or economic. He criticized the "inactivity of America" in the present crisis.

"My observations have given me a pessimistic view as to the future of Europe," said the speaker, who recently returned from abroad. "Those troubles are a state of the mind."

"Political and economic factors are involved, but political conditions that have developed. Only a spiritual fellowship, an application of the Golden Rule, can prevent the absolute wreck-down threatening the civilization of Europe."

"Europe needs only a simple moral guidance for its salvation, and we, as a nation, should be giving it. The United States to-day is facing as momentous a decision as when we were debating our entry into the world war. But the debating now is on our part in peace, and we are lacking decision while the world waits for us. I believe we are weak morally, as a nation, and in the eyes of the world we are losing respect."

Notes And News.

FROM BONAVISTA DISTRICT—A SERIES OF OPEN LETTERS TO FRED.

Dear Fred.—Although this is not meant to be an extensive political review, my promise of last week holds good. I wish you to note, however, that the impelling motive comes from your reference to Catholics and Protestants in this district. In this connection I might say that as far as the necessity of mixing one with the other in general business goes, I am heartily glad to be able to assure you, that the candle of ignorance has practically gone out. On common grounds, neither Catholics nor Protestants have any need, to-day, to school themselves into pretence and deceit to confirm the general idea of unobtrusive genuine friendliness. Men meet as men, not as representatives of sects each with the idea burned into his brain that difference of religion is a poor subject for the general run of men who follow their own lights in a haphazard fashion. Still I am sorry to say—with decreasing consciousness, however—sectarianism still plays a part in politics. To a lesser degree there is still the unwarranted fear of results in the event of one sect having a political ascendancy over the other, therefore it would be useless for me to say that it does not influence the votes at the booth. In time, of course, this will die out, but the prolonging of this (above all others) disgusting evil will depend to a high degree upon the change of attitude on the part of unprincipled politicians. What you and I should do—what we must do, is to keep before us the fact that we are indeed pitiable specimens of humanity if we refuse to others the privileges we so loudly demand for ourselves. I can assure you the present political atmosphere is refreshing—of itself an infallible disinfectant for the present rotten state of affairs.

At last there is hope in the air! The United Fishermen's Movement is spreading. Our people have been many times accused of apathy. We ought to realize that our people are widely scattered and they therefore very often feel intuitively that our isolation is a natural check to movements that might be quickly organized in a large city. This, however, will not stop us this time. We assure you the present political atmosphere is refreshing—of itself an infallible disinfectant for the present rotten state of affairs.

This, however, will not stop us this time. We assure you the present political atmosphere is refreshing—of itself an infallible disinfectant for the present rotten state of affairs.

Now Fred, one of us is mistaken! Is your Dick Jewett my Dick Hewlett? With the Editors permission I will tell you a story—then decide. Have you a picture of old Dick? I have—a mental one. Dick Hewlett was his ditto. I knew him for six months—forty, tall, and muscular. He made two trips to G— in a vessel of 50 tons. He wore a devilish look, had an evil smile which he displayed continually. Any injury he did your person, any dirty despicable trick he performed, any string of blood curdling oaths with constant threats to kill you was fun—unmitigated fun for Dick Hewlett. Thus by fear, the haunting fear that he would kill me if I opposed, he got me body and soul in his possession.

"Any salmon yet?" he said to me one blooming June morning. "A few sir." I answered. "Well you young get one and bring it on board the M—to-night or," said he, "this is your last day on earth." Prompted by boyish terror I assured him I would, though where or how I could get that salmon I certainly did not know. I racked my brain all day for a plan and in a way that I am ashamed to tell you of now I succeeded, and just about dusk when the captain had gone ashore for the night I went on board with my bundle. Hewlett went right extatic. He hugged the salmon then he hugged me, bounded on deck and ashore.

There were some amusing incidents during the examination of suspected persons.

"The Germans had been using as spies people belonging to travelling circuses and shows, as being less likely to invite suspicion than the pseudo-commercial travellers, of whom we had taken a heavy toll. Consequently, a sharp look-out had been kept for pulled in the skids and came back in a boat. That salmon soon met a change of temperature and came on the table done up nicely and five of us—which included a Mr. Williar, Hewlett's bunkmate, and two other boys from amongst Williar's relations on shore hauled in for a feed. During supper Hewlett was kindness itself. He assumed, I thought a very gentle attitude and I grew bold enough to have a joke with him which he took good naturedly. He finished eating at last and jumping up suddenly, he grabbed a short-handled axe. "Now," said he, "you young—all of you vanish or the Devil will be pecking your noses before daylight." By common instinct we rushed for the ladder. I happened to be the last to mount it and Hewlett made a hack at my legs. The blow missed me and as he swung back for another, under the pressure of terror I kicked him square in the face and scrambled on deck and jumped into the boat just as the other boys were about to jump off. Hewlett popped up instantly and hauled several somethings at me, amongst which was, I remember a ship's drawbucket and an old shoe—presumably one of his own—but failed to strike either of us. A few days later the M— weighed anchor and I haven't seen Hewlett since. No, for goodness sake don't! Just think it over and remember, that the time when your influence for good or bad shall cease will be marked brightly from the Heavens shall refuse to cast your shadow on the pure snow—but till then, watch for quotation marks—originality or otherwise. Agriculture and education of the district in its turn.

Yours truly,
JET BENSON.

"Queer People."

Sir Basil Thomson, late Assistant-Commissioner of Police and Director of the Special Branch at Scotland Yard, probably knew as many war and peace secrets as any man in a responsible official position in this country. His book "Queer People," by Basil Thomson, Hodder and Stoughton, 21s.) contains the portraits of some of the German spies who were shot in the Tower; it was in Sir Basil's room at Scotland Yard that they learned the game was up. But it is the lighter side of the author's experiences in tracking spies and criminals that we prefer to dwell upon in this page.

THE SPY MANIA.

Sir Basil had to investigate some extraordinary reports arising out of the spy mania that possessed the country and other countries during the war. Here is one amusing story: "On one occasion a very staid couple came down to denounce a waiter in one of the large hotels, and brought documentary evidence with them. It was a menu with a rough sketch plan in pencil made upon the back. They believed it to be a plan of Kensington Gardens with the Palace buildings, roughly delineated by an oblong figure. They had seen the waiter in the act of drawing the plan at an unoccupied table. I sent for him and found before me a spruce little Swiss, with his hair cut en brosse and a general air of extreme surprise. He gave me a frank account of all his movements, and then I produced the plan. He gazed at it a moment, and then burst out laughing. 'So that is where my plan went! Yes, monsieur, I made it, and then I lost it. You see, I am new to the hotel, and in order to satisfy the head waiter I made for myself privately a plan of the tables, and marked a cross against those I had to look after.'"

THE BLUE MAN.

There were some amusing incidents during the examination of suspected persons.

"The Germans had been using as spies people belonging to travelling circuses and shows, as being less likely to invite suspicion than the pseudo-commercial travellers, of whom we had taken a heavy toll. Consequently, a sharp look-out had been kept for

TOO MUDDY.
Sir Basil is reminded of a story of what happened at Shoeburyness, when a live shell fell in the mud in the middle of a class of young gunners.

"Lie down, gentlemen," shouted the instructor, and no one moved. When the shell had been rendered harmless he asked why they had not obeyed orders; they might all have been blown to pieces. One of them faltered: "Well, sir, it was so muddy!"

THE BOMB ADVERTISEMENT.
Writing about the outbreak of foreign anarchists in this country and of the anarchist who blew himself to pieces when attacking Greenwich Observatory, Sir Basil says:—

"Shortly afterwards one of the popular weekly newspapers offered a reward to the man who would suggest the most effective form of advertisement, and some bright spirit conceived the plan of sending the Home Secretary a bomb containing a copy of the newspaper in question. From the point of view of advertisement it achieved more than he had counted upon. The parcel containing the bomb was opened by the private secretary, who immediately summoned the Inspector of Explosives. When he entered the room he found the bomb lying on the hearth-rug before a bright fire, with an office chair standing over it, and a group of Home Office officials in a respectful semicircle round it. He asked what the chair was for. They explained that if the bomb went off they thought it would be some protection.

"When the bomb was opened and the newspaper was disclosed it was found that it was not an offence to scare the wits out of a Cabinet Minister. But the young gentleman had neglected one precaution; he had not removed from the bomb a percussion cap, and this was his undoing, for under the Postal Act it was unlawful to send explosives by post. When he appeared at the police court upon this heinous charge he had all the advertisement that he wanted."

THE BOGUS DOCTOR.

One of the author's best stories is about a bogus doctor, whose only claim to medical knowledge was the possession of a stethoscope:—

"His method was to select a little artisan's house in a quiet street in South London on a Sunday morning, ring the bell, and when the tenant opened the door ask for Mr. Smith.

"I'm not Mr. Smith. My name's Brown."
"Then I must have got the number wrong. So sorry. You don't happen to know which is Mr. Smith's house? Never heard of him? Well, well! And then, with great concern in his manner, 'Stop; don't shut the door. Do you know you are very ill?' 'Never felt better in my life,' growled Mr. Brown. 'Excuse me, I'm a doctor, and I know better. Phantasmagoria is a dreadful disease, and you've got it badly. I can tell it from your eyes. Now, look here (pulling out a stethoscope and looking at his watch). I can just spare ten minutes. I'll examine you, and it won't cost you a penny, and if I'm wrong no one will be more pleased than I shall.'"

"Still talking, he would edge the now frightened Brown into the parlour, saying, 'Don't make any sudden movement, my dear fellow. Just slip off your coat and trousers as gently as you can. Let me help you. That's right! Now lie down on that sofa. Gently now. That's right. Th-a-t's right. Now say "A-a"; now say "O-o-o." It's just what I thought. It's the worst case of phantasmagoria that I ever came across. Not a word now. Move once and you may never move again. Now lie quite still while I run round to the chemist. I'll bring you round something that will put you right in two ticks. Not a word now; there's nothing to thank me for.'"

"In this he was quite right. He clapped on his hat and ran out into the street, and it was not by inadvertence that he carried over his arm all Mr. Brown's Sunday clothes and whatever the pockets contained. And when it dawned upon Brown that he had been victimized, how was he to take up the pursuit on a Sunday morning in nothing but his shirt?"

MUGS.

"I have sometimes doubted whether the police should be called upon to protect people so simple that they ought not to be allowed abroad without a nurse," says the author. "I remember a prisoner making the same complaint to me. 'It's cruel hard on us chaps,' he said, 'when mugs like them are at large. It's a temptation; that's what it is.'"

Artificial Gullet.
The Danish surgeon Professor Thorikild Rovsing has just disclosed details of an interesting operation he performed early in 1921. The patient was a woman of 34. Owing to trouble in the gullet it was impossible for food to pass to the stomach—in the natural way.

Professor Rovsing therefore made a double incision down the skin of the chest, and raising the two edges of the skin lying between the two incisions, wrapped them around a temporary rubber tube in such a way that when the edges of the skin joined together they themselves formed a natural tube. The skin of the chest beyond the two incisions was then stretched over the exposed parts.

Later the upper end of the natural skin tube was by a further operation attached to the gullet, and later the lower end was attached to the stomach, making a continuous channel for food chewed in the ordinary way in the mouth to pass inside through the gullet and thence outside the body, through the skin tube, and into the stomach. The complete operation took about six months.

The patient left the hospital in August 1921, and is now able to look after herself, her home duties, and her five children.—Exchange.

Household Notes.

To candy sweet potatoes, cook medium-sized sweet potatoes and then split. When tender, place in baking pan and sprinkle with brown sugar and lumps of butter. Brown in oven until a rich brown color is reached.

Tartar sauce is very easily made if one has a cup of mayonnaise already made. Add to the dressing three tablespoons finely chopped pickles and a tablespoon of mixed chopped parsley.

Few people know that there is such a thing as a banana sandwich; butter a slice of bread, cover with pulp of banana, sprinkle with brown sugar and dab with butter. Toast in the oven and serve with cream as a dessert.

The white pleated skirt of crepe will appear often during the summer, and suede jackets will be worn with the skirt.

CRYING FOR HIS MOTHER.

Talking of Bywaters reminds me of a conversation I had with the late James Berry, who was perhaps one of the most famous hangmen this country ever had. He had in his time executed more people than even he, modest fellow that was, cared to recall.

HANGING WOMEN.

I asked Berry on the same occasion about his experiences in hanging women. "I never like it," he said emphatically, "but wait a minute."

"MOST HORRIBLE EXPERIENCE."

I knew that Berry had been engaged in the case of Lee, the Babblecombe butler, who had murdered the lady with whom he was employed, and who had been reprieved after a third attempt had been made to execute him.

"Yes," he said, "that was in '85. It was my most horrible experience. I don't know what went wrong."

Prophy-lactic Tooth Brush... I pulled the lever and expected the platform to fall. It held fast. It was the first time I had had a hitch. I tried the lever again. No use. I thought the wood had become affected by damp or something of that sort, and I signed to two of the wardens to stamp on the platform. They did so. It was no use. That platform would not fall.

A Super Universe.

On any clear, moonless night early in the New Year there is visible, high up in the south-west, one of the greatest marvels of the firmament.

Andromeda is its name. What is particularly interesting about this grand object just now is that it has at last come to be regarded by astronomers as a giant universe of stars placed many thousands of "light years" beyond the confines of our universe.

This Andromedan super-universe is no more motionless in space than is our universe. It is forging along at the respectable rate of about two hundred miles a second.

Even at that speed it would take hundreds of thousands of years to reach our universe—that is, if it were making a bee-line for us. After all, the meeting of two universes is not an impossibility. Indeed, one is supposed to have encountered our own in the very, very remote past.

Andromeda is the island-universe in the ocean of space. Look out for its illuminated oval high in the south-west to-night—if clear and moonless—and know that you are looking at one of the most wonderful of creation's wonders.

The Decorative Hem.

A feature of many new gowns and suits shows a much decorated hem. On simple, rather plain toilettes special attention is drawn to the hem line on account of its color and novel treatment.

Most striking of all is the banded hem on suits. A suit of dark blue woolen velvet exhibited by a famous London house had a checkerboard pattern in blue bugles on the hem; another noticeable toilette composed of softest white cloth showed a border at the skirt edge of thin strips of blue ribbon held at intervals by small jet plaques.

Hems of fur reach half-way up the back of evening frocks. A well known English designer in using these very wide fur hems makes the top edge of the hem follow striking scroll designs to break up the rather frigid line that would otherwise occur where the fur joins the material.

A distinctive touch is given to a fur wrap or long coat of jacquard cloth by a brilliant border placed inside a garment that is lined with a quiet toned, unpatterned material. The new skirts which have no seams and are open down one side have a decorative plaque or clasp on the hem.

New Millinery.

A feature of the newest millinery is the decorative brim. The brim of a very attractive velour hat resembles a pie-dish frill, the velour being cut in very narrow strips and doubled under. Another model made of moleskin has a brim composed of loops of fur; the top of each loop being drawn tightly to one side to reveal a lining of emerald brocade. Brims are slashed at the back and sides; into the aperture are sewn short, stiff feathers or enormous bows. Distinctive models show brims made entirely of stiffened ostrich feathers, which stand out in a rigid halo from a crown of rolled velvet.

Small toques are made entirely of ribbon intricately plaited and twisted. In such trims as fuchsia, plum, and rust-red these toques are ideal for wearing with big fur collars, which are now so fashionable. Very smart women are wearing the new Venetian veils, which snugly wrap the shoulders like a cape and fall to the knees in front.

Very decorative hats are composed of a material resembling plaster encrusted with stones. A single strap of this type would be sufficient trimming for a small black velour or velvet hat.

The First Ford.

The five millionth Ford car has been completed! It has been placed in Mr. Ford's museum, next to the machine upon which he carried out his early experiments, and which can claim the title of being the first Ford. Just thirty years separate the manufacture of the two cars, and the first is a very crude affair compared with the latest product of the great Ford factories. It was not until 1893 that Mr. Ford was able to get his car to run properly. He had to spend much time and money before he achieved success. His first car attracted so much attention whenever it went out that he had to carry a chain and padlock so that he could fasten the car to a lamp-post when he wished to leave it.

To Make Newsprint.

FOR UNITED STATES PUBLISHERS

Washington, Jan. 27.—Negotiations are under way which are expected to initiate the establishment of an important industry in southern Alaska capable of furnishing perpetually a large proportion of print paper demands of the United States.

Secretary Wallace of the department of agriculture expects soon to sign contracts with a number of responsible concerns for the purchase of pulpwood from Alaska's national forests and for the allocation of water power sites through the federal power commission for the purpose of manufacturing both pulpwood and paper.

Will Be Permanent.

On the Tongass national forest it is estimated there is a source of supply of timber which can furnish perpetually an annual yield of print paper equal to one-third of the total national consumption of the United States. The industry when established will be upon a permanent basis, with raw material at a reasonable price.

For some time the forest service has been collecting the information essential to the practical development of the Tongass national forest, and the work is well toward completion. The merchantable timber on that forest includes at least 100,000,000 cords of western hemlock and Sitka spruce.

As a step toward the establishment of the paper industry in Alaska the Tongass forest has been tentatively divided into 14 zones, each embracing sufficient timber to furnish a large paper mill with a permanent supply of raw material. Each zone has been delineated so as to include water power sites sufficient to meet the requirements of manufacture.

The federal power commission has been co-operating with the forest service in securing the water power data. In addition to providing reliable information regarding water power, available for the Alaskan paper industry, the work has resulted in the discovery of a number of valuable water power sites not heretofore known to exist, notably one permitting the development of from 22,000 to 24,000 horse-power at very low cost.

Oil Fuel Nuisance.

The lives of two sea-birds have just been saved by a resourceful naturalist who took them to a garage for a bath of petrol.

Mr. F. Martin Duncan, librarian to the Zoological Society, while staying at Hastings saw a group of boys stoning some creatures on the beach. He found that a number of sea-birds, razor-bills and gullmots, had become coated with oil fuel pumped out by passing ships. With their feathers so clogged that they could not dive through the breakers, they were buffeted until exhausted and thrown on the shingle.

Picking up two of the gullmots, Mr. Martin Duncan took them to a garage and called for a pan of petrol. With a wad of waste he cleaned the birds' plumage. Later he took them back to the beach. Once on the water, they dived beautifully through the waves.

Mr. Thomas Parkin, president of the Hastings and St. Leonard's Natural History Society, told Mr. Duncan that sea-birds—pulls, gannets, gullmots, razor-bills, and even the strong cormorants—were dying in thousands through the oil-fuel nuisance. In the

GREEN-BENNETT.

In St. Finbar's Station auxiliary post at Harbour Island to the large parish of Bar Haven, Miss Mary Josephine Green of Harbour Island was married to Mr. Thomas Bennett of Isle Valen, parish of St. Kieran's, on Saturday, November 27th. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Francis Cacciola, rector of the parish of Bar Haven, was witnessed by a large gathering of relatives and friends. The bride was escorted by her father, Miss Susie Green was maid of honor. The bride's other attendant was Miss Mary Williams. Walter Green performed the duties of best man. The ushers were James Caul, William Davis, and Berkley Williams. After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett will reside at Isle Valen.

WORMAN-FURER.

Miss May Worman of Red Island parish of Argentinia, and Mr. Peter Furer, Jr., of the Church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Bruly Parish of Bar Haven were joined in Holy wedlock in the church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Bruly, by the Rev. Francis Cacciola on Tuesday morning, Jan. 30th, thereby forming another alliance between well known families previously connected through marriage. The bride's chief attendant was Miss Susie Bennett. The best man was Mr. Patrick Travers. The ushers were William Embury, James Seward, and Ambrose Ryan. A reception was held at the home of Mr. Furer's parents after the return of the bridal party from the church.

GRIFFITHS-BRUCE.

In the new church of St. Jerome, Long Harbour, centre Placentia Bay, on Thursday morning, February 1st, at 10 o'clock Mass, Miss Agnes Griffiths of Long Harbour centre, was married to Mr. Edward Bruce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dinis Bruce of the same place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Francis Cacciola, rector of St. Francis's Xavier's Church, Bar Haven, Long Harbour is one of the most important settlements in the vast parish of Bar Haven and contains three schools. The parents of the bride and groom have been the outstanding figures in the history of Long Harbour's improvement, and today are the possessors of a considerable portion of the commercial wealth which gives fame to that hamlet. Miss Griffiths was an attendant at Little-dale and took an active interest in the outdoor sports. She is an accomplished student and interested herself in many welfare activities in Long Harbour, where she taught school for a number of years. Miss Griffiths's wedding dress was pale blue roshanara. Her bridesmaid, Miss Rita Bruce, was kownd in American beauty taffeta. Mr. Edward Griffiths, a brother of the bride, supported the groom. The ring bearer was little Bessie King. The flower girls were Misses May Power, Stella Worman, Isabel Hanlon, and May Keating. The pages were Masters Alysious Whalen and Willie Barron. Messrs. Thomas Murray, James Bruce, William Northover, and Edward Hanlon were the ushers. The decorations at the home of the newly wedded couple were nicely arranged and enhanced the scene at the wedding breakfast, when all sat down in the midst of a profusion of flowers and a bevy of lights to enjoy the repast. The pronouncement of the words of grace was made by the Pastor. The invocation was also given by him. The wedding gifts were numerous and useful. All listened at the conclusion of the festival to those profound words taken by the rector from the fourth chapter of the Book of Deuteronomy, verse 46: "Keep His precepts and commandments which I command thee; that it may be well with thee and thy children after thee, and thou mayst remain a long time upon the land which the Lord Thy God will give thee." The Rev. Pastor spoke briefly on the judicious care that should be exercised in the Christian home towards the observance of the precepts and teachings of Holy church. He said no one could possibly command unless he or she knew first how to obey. He pleaded feelingly before all present that our dear Lord's divine laws should be observed because through the medium of these laws all manner of blessings would accrue to render life's pathway safe from the intrusion of error, evil and corruption of morals so dangerous in this our day and hurling those who transgress on these sacred institutions to perdition. Mr. and Mrs. Bruce will reside at Long Harbour, Placentia Bay.

Eight of Dungeness their bodies came ashore in great numbers.

On January 1, a special Act came into force inflicting a fine of up to £100 on ships which pumped out their oily bilges in estuaries, inshore waters, and rivers. The practice, it will be remembered, also made bathing impossible at the times, especially round the Isle of Wight.

ARNARD'S LIMEWIT FOR BURNS & SCALDS.

Our Ills.

The cry of the times seems to be a cry to have some unbearable lifted and not only lifted but obliterated. Some ask how it can be done, and what the burden really is. Others show how it can be done, to some extent at least, and they advocate retrenchment; however, they seem full of little ill and misfortune. To encourage the carrying on of the fisheries seems futile, unless drastic steps are taken to relieve some of the tariff charges on imports, and after that move is fixed, we look to the supplier to give us the benefit of the reduction when granted. It seems that the fishermen intend holding down the prosecution of the fishery until something is done to cure the aches and pains, brought on by an unnecessary high rate expense. Thus through the bungling and incompetency by those who are responsible for extra duty, has come the climax. Shall we carry the present rate and kill the fishery, or remove the stumbling block and encourage the industry.

The Government organs are bellowing about cutting off public facilities, should they have to reduce taxation. Why tell the oppressed of the country, that to relieve the pack from his back, that he must give up his raiment? Is it not quite clear that many roads can be newly paved, or the dingy corners, that are sapping the life of the highway, other than through the cost of public facilities, such as Light-House, Fog Alarms, Mail Service and other branches of necessity in the public arena. What about the Departments of Shipping, Militia and Education—unless we were having a Free and Compulsory form of Educating our children—and the millions squandered on the Railway, the thousands on high Salaries, Sessional pay, Relief, Roads, and Friendly Tips. We were warned again and again of useless spending, but the call fell on deaf ears, and it seems to-day that to avert a collapse, the better way would be to knock Responsible Government on the head and to revert back to a Crown Colony for at least four years, if not more, until the financial state of the country becomes healthy. Why bother with Elections? That cannot but swell the expense. Are there not ways and means; cannot a solution be found to stay the death of the Colony? For while we continue to squabble and fight as party fire-bugs and keep up war politically, we cannot but hastening the end of the Island home comforts and advantages.

The United Fishermen have made a move in the right direction; but how far will the move go toward making sure, the ground for a decent living? Can they find the formula on which to build up a home of success? Should their demands be granted with regard to retrenchment and all the clauses in the Resolutions they will have done well, but a step further would not hurt, and we voice a portion of public sentiment when we ask them to advocate a curtailment in the different districts. Fifteen members could do all necessary for the maintenance of the constituencies and alone would save a portion. However, the country's business is in mixmangle and only when we have the knowledge that experts have stood between the Government and the Reids and made a thorough investigation will we be able to determine whether there ever were deficits or whether the Railway business is a paying proposition.

Much has to be done and seeing that the party in power is little concerned regarding the balm for our ills, it's up to the Movement engineers to move in the whole matter and take up all the problems that are facing an afflicted people.

It is a wonder the learned and scholarly men of the country do not take up the cry of the times and devise a pan for the needed reforms to be worked out on, especially when they labor so hard, with pen and ink, filling columns of space in the dailies on matters of little importance, now that the times are so stringent. How can the country be helped and by what methods can the fisheries be carried on? should interest all who look to the staple industry for the wherewithal to keep a move on.—Twillingate Sun.

Dedication of Methodist Church

AT HILLVIEW, T.B.
On Sunday, Feb. 4th, there took place at Hillview, a ceremony towards which the people of that place had long looked forward. I refer to the Dedication of their new church. It was hoped that the building would be opened for worship several years ago, but the work was given such a set-back by war conditions, that its finish was somewhat delayed. The determination, however, to finish well rather than quickly is fully justified by the appearance of the building as it stands to-day. The metal ceiling and beaver board walls received their finishing touches from the hand of a decorative painter in colors which harmonize with the furniture, giving a restful feeling to the worshipper; pulpit, communion railings, and pews, are the work of the Horwood Lumber Co., and do credit to the faithful workmanship of that firm. The building cost about $5,400, of which less than $700 is a debt. The dedicatory service was held on Sunday afternoon and, despite the storm, a large congregation gathered to take part in the ceremony and listen with much appreciation to the sermon delivered by Dr. Fenwick from the words: "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." After the sermon the Trustees and Building Committee gathered around the Communion and their representative, W. J. Frost, presented the building "to be dedicated as a church for the worship of Almighty God." In the night the annual Missionary Meeting was held, the delegation being Dr. Fenwick and the writer. Judging from the interest shown and the open collection received it was a successful day from beginning to end. We take the occasion to wish the Hillview Church every ISAAC DAVIS.

A Land Where Music Excites to Riot.

BANGALORE, India. (Associated Press).—Friction between Hindu and Moslem communities has resulted in serious disturbances in Tiptur, in Mysore Province, during recent weeks. Numerous assaults have been reported, and on several occasions the shops have had to close their doors. Special police forces have been called out, and now have the situation well under control. The cause of these disturbances lies in part to the differing attitudes of Hindus and Mohammedans regarding music. Hindu religious ceremonies are usually accompanied by music. Mohammedans have no music at their services, and are seriously disturbed when interrupted by musical sounds.

THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

In 1882, the government permitted the reconstruction of a mosque within the Hindu quarters, with the distinct understanding that the Mohammedans should on no account object to processions with music passing in front thereof. The Mohammedans now contend that since music was never played before this mosque from 1882 to almost the present time, permission should always be disallowed for processions with music in that place. The Hindus, on the other hand, have been asking since 1920 for permission to take an image in procession in the streets, absolutely without restrictions. The government, after a prolonged inquiry, decided to admit the Hindu claim.

LED TO HIGH FEELINGS.

The present trouble began at the time of the Dusehra procession last September. On this occasion, the government refused to grant a license, on account of the excited feelings of both communities and the influx of irresponsible crowds in the city. In the following month, however, a procession was allowed. Before the procession occurred, the Mohammedans left the mosque in a body as a protest, and the procession passed quietly. This incident led to high feelings between the two communities. Many individual assaults occurred, and general apprehensions of a breach of the peace were prevalent. On account of threatened violence, the Hindu shops were closed for two days. The district magistrate was called and, with a large police force reached the place in time to prevent further disorder. Reinforcements are now present, and are keeping careful watch over the district.
