THE LITTLE OLD SECRETARY

Kathleen's eyes were fixed upon Rose. The latter's face was pale, her hands were trembling, and she was looking at Kathleen with a look of intense interest and sympathy.

"No, mother," she exclaimed to herself, "I will do what is right, come what will of it."

Rose came toward Kathleen. She had calculated all she wanted to make the silver bracelet excel over other trinkets that would appear in Mr. Fitzgerald's drawing-room and it would only come to thirty-five shillings.

"Dear Kathleen, it was rather hard for me," she said, "to see you wear your own strong wares, and then to demand more of the future because you will not let me have some more for my own."

"My husband, Rose, I am sure," she said, "is a man who will not let me have some more for my own."

the unexpected revelation caused her. She had often experienced that nervous tremor with a more or less of a feeling of indignation, but this was the first time she understood that it was not a feeling of indignation, but a feeling of sympathy.

"Well, dear Rose, I am going to start now and I will put the two pieces of my own gold in your hands for the time, you bear our family you will be your best to help me, as you can help better than any one."

Kathleen ran in quickly to her own apartment, and taking out the dress and the hat, carried them at once into Rose's chamber. The man's broadest silk looked more soft and quaint than ever after the hours and hours of wear when it had been soiled and worn.

How can I be so foolish, I am worse than Rose. She is disappointed out of her affection for me, my position is a simple matter."

But Rose's extreme disappointment made her unresponsive. She had attempted a refusal for the honor of the house of MacDermot and in her excitement she poured out a great deal more of sentimental gossip about her family and her own relations, and nearly, she thought, that in her earlier moments she would have allowed her young mistress even to suspect.

She had not yet got over her conviction that Kathleen was to be her rival. "Dear dear, I must try to make her see how wrong it is to work herself up into such fits of excitement."

The first thing which met her eyes as she entered the room was the most agreeable dress she thought she had ever seen. It was of the softest, whitest India muslin, with tiny borders of the embroidery in silver and green, made a handsome skirt over the bodice.

"You must not ask me any questions please, because I promised not to do so. It was made a present to me by a kind friend, to be used with me, in the one condition of never telling who gave it. Let us bring Miss Kathleen."

Rose was in ecstasies. "You must not ask me any questions please, because I promised not to do so. It was made a present to me by a kind friend, to be used with me, in the one condition of never telling who gave it. Let us bring Miss Kathleen."

"You shall be dressed for the honor to see, the first evening after we get home," said Rose, her fingers busy occupied in wrestling the thick coil of Kathleen's suture hair like a woman round the small, dusky head. Then came the last touch, the putting on a silver brooch, which had made part of the bracelet, and Rose's triumph was complete. And with an ornament, but her heart smothered, Kathleen went down to the breakfast-room dressed in gray and white in the drawing-room.

She looked into the mirror and thought that it might have been the young woman of a bygone house. She was her uncle's aunt and with her spectacles and a few thin hairs about her temples, she looked like an old woman.

CHAPTER V. The reason for the temperate will, however, foreign strength and skill, a perfect woman, nobly planned, to turn, to comfort and command, to get a spirit still and bright, with something of an angel light.

When the gentlemen came up from dinner, Dora's introduction took place. She had a small state for conversation with those who could not talk with their fingers. Upon this she had written in her own handwriting, which was exceedingly free and well-learned for one so young.

Dear Rose, she little dreamed how deeply she would pay for the triumph of that evening.

"Ebb and Flow" in the English language.

—Two promising young ladies, the Misses Alodia Muench and Frances Weber, of St. Peter's parish, went to Dead Moose Lake, Jan. 6th, with the intention of joining the Ursuline Nuns. They will be received, first, as postulants to the order, and if, after several months of probation, they have given signs of a genuine vocation, will be admitted to the novitiate and later on to the religious profession. The religious state is, undoubtedly, the most beautiful state of life in store for a pious Catholic young lady, if God calls her. The calling to the religious state is an extraordinary gift and grace of God which He distributes gratuitously to certain pious souls. The religious state is a state of perfection, because in it one consecrates himself, body and soul, to the service of God, and God in turn rewards such service a hundredfold already in this life, and with eternal bliss and happiness in the life to come. The above named two ladies, therefore, are deserving of our hearty congratulations for having cast their lot with God and obeyed His call.

—On New Years Day the Rev. Pastor, Father Chrysostom, in his announcements praised the choir for its efficient rendering of the Church's music during the past year. He felt confident that they would also do good work in that respect during the year just begun. Singing in church for God's honor and glory, with no earthly reward, except an occasional word of commendation, would certainly add a bright jewel to their heavenly crown.

—The following moneys have been received by St. Peters Bote during the course of last week: From a kind reader at Saskatoon $1.00 for the orphans, $1.00 for Rev. Father Egenolf and $1.00 for Rev. Father Brabender; from a generous subscriber at Fulda $3.00 for the orphans; from a charitable gentleman at Dead Moose Lake $1.00 for the orphans, $1.00 for Father Egenolf and $1.00 for Father Brabender; from a goodhearted man of the same place $5.00 for the orphans and $2.00 for Father Egenolf; from a reader at Bruno $5.00 for the orphans and from another reader of the same place $5.00 for the Missions. God bless you all, kind benefactors!

—On Jan. 1st three young lads, L. Ludwig of Bruno, H. Altrogge and B. Frie of St. Benedict, after paying their respects to the Rt. Rev. Abbot Bruno, went to St. John's College, Collegeville, Minn., to devote themselves to classical studies. The first two of the band were already, last year, studying at the Monastery here at Muenster.

—The weather of the past week was very changeable and, at times, extremely cold. On Jan. 2nd the thermometer dropped down to 39 degrees below Zero.

For the Winter Evenings

you need something to read for yourself and your family. Keep the young folks out of questionable company, by accustoming them to stay at home in the family circle. To do so, you must provide them with innocent enjoyments at home, and one of the best and most useful of such enjoyments is the reading of Good Stories.

If you have a parish library, do not fail to take out books regularly during the winter months. If there is no parish library in your vicinity, do not dread the expense of buying some good Catholic books. It is a good investment, better in fact than almost any other investment you can make for the comfort and pleasure of your family. Other articles, even the most expensive ones bought for the pleasure of the members of your family will soon grow old and will no longer cause the former enjoyment, but a good and interesting book is

A Joy forever.

It will be read and reread by all the members of the family and will cause new pleasure each time.

One of the best series of good Catholic stories is collected in the four volumes of

The Ebb and Flow of Life

They contain about forty good stories written by the famous Catholic author Monstanore Konrad Kimmel. They were first published in the German language in 1912 and soon the call for them was so great that four editions were sold within a couple of years. These stories are now available also in the English language, having been translated by a father of St. Bede Abbey, Peru, Ill.

During the months of October and November 1918 we have given our Readers an opportunity to see what these stories are like, by publishing one of them entitled "Man and his Illusions" as a serial in our paper. We now offer the entire set of four large volumes containing each about 440 pages, well bound in full cloth, free by mail for the low price of Only $5.00 for the entire set.

We can highly recommend this excellent work to persons looking about for suitable Presents.

Either the entire work or individual volumes are suitable for such a purpose. By purchasing a set of these books, you can make four of your friends happy at Christmas.

THE PRIEST.

In the lowest dens of a crowded town, Over which the Angels weep and demons frown...

He gently speaks of hope beyond the tomb, Or warns the sinner of his pending doom.

To those who are weary of their earthly strife, He speaks of heaven, and eternal life.

Friend of the poor, he shares their little woes, Giving sweet sympathy where'er he goes.

In the wild regions of the far-off West, He tugs and toils with a big zest.

When nations meet in deadly hate and strife, He leads the van, the noble patient care.

So to the great and mighty oft unknown, For struggles fresh again returning home.

Some Roads to Rome in America.

The Rev. Daniel E. Hudson, LL.D. Notre Dame, Indiana.

My Dear Miss Curtis:

My "Road to Rome" was a very short one, not worth describing. I was baptized surreptitiously...

A girl who worked for me recently declared that she had had unconsciously frightened the priest...

That's all, as we used to say at the end of our confessions—how short they were—to dear Father Straut—another "Father Falstaff."

The First Horse in Canada

It is interesting to learn from "Le Journal des Jesuits," a diary kept by the superiors of the Jesuits of Quebec, and begun in 1545, that on June 20, 1647, a vessel arrived at Tadoussac, bringing the first horse that ever came to Canada.

The colony of New France had already existed for 39 years when the first horse arrived on the scene. People in those days were not in great need of horses, because they travelled by boat, and the back country had no roads.

The solitary first horse in Canada must have felt rather lonely, and some people think that it died of homesickness, because, in 1650 it was dead. Perhaps it would be more correct to say that it probably died for want of proper care.

At the present time, about 270 years after the arrival of the first horse in the country, Canada has over three millions of these animal.

Origin of the Word "Dago"

Dago is a contraction for Diego, which is the Spanish way of writing Didacus, which again is a Latin form of James. (At least, so I have found it explained in books of reference.)

Didacus joined the Franciscans while quite young, and later went to the Canary Islands, instructing and converting many idolaters, all the time mortifying and punishing himself for the sins of others.

Number of Jews in U.S.A.

According to the "Jewish-American Year-Book for 1918" edited by Dr. Samson D. Oppenheim there are in the United States over 3,300,000 Jews.

Some smaller cities have even a larger percentage of Jewish inhabitants than New York. Chelsea, Mass., has 13,000, or 28% of its inhabitants; Rosenhayn, N. J., has 300 or 50%.

Stories from the French

By Father Chrysostom, O.S.B.

A certain man imagined himself to be sick and continuously demanded medicines that he did not require.

Aqua fontis (spring water), 100 gr. Illarepita (thesame repeated), 20gr. Hydrogeni Oxide (chemical name), 0gr. 32.

"Be sure," facetiously recommended the doctor, "to shake the bottle every time before using."

Next day he said that he felt very much better.

A countryman, having observed many people wearing glasses whilst reading, went into the shop of an optician in order to buy a pair also.

The optician gave him a book and several kind of spectacles which the countryman then tried one after another and finally declared to be no good.

"You fool," replied the countryman, "if I could read I wouldn't need to buy spectacles."

This anecdote recalls that of another countryman who lived in a village where water was very scarce.

"But I don't see any well in which to put it," said the mechanic.

"You blockhead!" exclaimed the furious buyer, "if I had water, I wouldn't need your pump."

A druggist, having refused to give up his place in a theatre to the wife of an officer, and the officer feeling himself insulted, received a challenge to fight a duel.

At the rendez-vous, but remarked that since he was unaccustomed to firearms, he would like to propose another way of ending the dispute.

He then drew from his pocket a box of pills from which he took two and thus addressed his adversary: "As a man of honor, you certainly desire to fight me on equal terms.

Unnecessary to add that the affair ended with a cordial laugh.

SPARKS FROM THE ANVIL

(Special for St. Peters Bote)

—Ye editor of a country weekly, —a sheet just large enough for a good-sized school-boy's spit ball.

—It makes quite a difference whose ox is gored. Eh?

—A man of one idea is not so bad, provided only the idea is good.

—The darkness we ascribe to remote ages is often the darkness of our own minds, and the ignorance we complain of in others may only be the refraction of our own.

—Many a man, after he has attained a high position, forgets all about the laws of gravitation. He'll have to come down again— one way or another.

—How about your last year's good resolutions? Are they still intact, or have they exploded like some munition plants?

—When word comes that the old friend we knew so well is a victim of a deadly disease and almost on the point of going into eternity, it is a time for sober reflection.

—The uncertainty of life is eloquently preached to us by every passing funeral or every hastening doctor's machine. War is not the only grim reaper.

—Mishaps are like knives that either serve or cut us, as we grasp them by the blade or the handle.

—A word to the foolish is always resented.

The Editor's Song.

How dear to my heart is the steady subscriber, Who pays in advance at the birth of each year; Who lays down his money and offers it gladly, And casts 'round the office a halo of cheer!

Who never says "Stop it; I cannot afford it!" Or, "I'm getting more papers than I can read!" But always says, "Send it; the family all like it - In fact, we think it a household need!"

How welcome he is when he steps in the sanctum! How he makes our hearts throbb! How he makes our hearts dance! We outwardly thank him - we inwardly bless him - The steady subscriber who pays in advance.

CORRESPONDENCES.

WATSON, Sask., Jan. 6th, 1918. Dear St. Peters Bote:—

A good neighbour is a man who will make a little sacrifice himself in order to help a brother farmer. A man who always tries to see how much there is in it for him before he helps a neighbour, is a poor specimen of a friend, and is too selfish to ever see the bright side of life. Give us the good, old-fashioned neighbour, that will take an active part in all progressive work and not wait to see someone else start.

A good neighbour also is a man who will keep his land free from noxious weeds, and not let them become a menace and detrimental to his neighbour. He will also keep his livestock such as swine, cattle and horses from trespassing on his neighbour's land and destroying his crop, such as hay, during the winter months, and he will then not boast how good his stock is doing.

A good neighbour is worth a whole 40 acres patch of would-be neighbours, who only call to get home a stray pig or to drive home some cattle or horses that have been a menace to the community in the past. —Cort.
