A Picture But years fleeting past have not deened The gleam of the gold on the snow. No artist could pencil the glory That fell from the heavens that night, On a world clothed in purity ever, In purity solemn and white. Drifts, drifts on the hillside and farm-house, White drifts on the meadow and led, With the glory of God brooding o'er them And causing its spell over me. Ah! the city may lure and attract us, But the country is God's. It is rife With the space and the sanctified service Which marks what His angels call Life. Eva A. Clute in June Farm Journal.

PERSONAL TIT-BITS

A COSMOPOLITAN. R. A. "The son of American parents, born in Florence, trained in Paris, living in London, a citizen of the United States, speaking Italian, French, German and Spanish almost as fluently as he speaks English." This was Mr. Sargent R. A. whose pictures are again among the most notable at Burlington House been described. Mr. Sargent also pleads guilty for a taste for hunting. There is a story told of a visit he once made to Fairford, the residence of his compatriot and brother Academician, Edwin Abbey. They had had a long day's hunting, and his host was changing his clothes when he heard cries of "Horrible! Horrible!" proceeding from Sargent's bedroom. Alarmed, he rushed in, only to find his friend woefully surveying the ruins of a new top-hat. "My dear fellow," he cried, "what's the matter?" "You see that hat," said Sargent. "My horse put his foot through it today. I was thinking what a terrible thing it would have been if my head had been inside."

SIR WILFRID'S REPORT

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is the thinnest of Prime Ministers. And yet a big burly Conservative M. P. was once maladroited enough to charge him with "fattening at the expense of the poor deluded people of this country." Sir Wilfrid genially retorted: "I ask the House to look at hon. gentleman opposite and then look at me, and say which of us is most exposed to the charge of getting fat."

LORD MARCUS BERESFORD'S ADVICE

At the time when Lord Marcus Beresford took over the King's horses His Majesty had only a moderate lot of animals in training. "Well, what do you think of them, and what would you do with them if they were yours?" he asked Lord Marcus one morning as they were watching the Royal string at work on Newmarket Heath. Beresford looked the horses over reflectively for a moment and then said bluntly, "Shoot most of them, I think." "Shoot them by all means, then," retorted the King.

LORD KITCHENER AS ORCHID GROWER

The Commander-in-Chief of the Indian forces has been described as one whose work is his hobby--a man who has no recreation. This, however is a mistake. For many years past Lord Kitchener has devoted his spare time to gardening and takes a special interest in orchid culture. There is no more enthusiastic amateur than His Lordship, and it is said to be his intention, when he settles down in England after August when he resigns his command to purchase a small estate somewhere within easy reach of London, where there is a place to collect orchids on a very large scale. He will then devote his special attention to the cultivation of many rare Indian specimens.

HIS FIRST BUDGET

Such a fighter as this must perforce make his mark, and in 1905 Mr. Lloyd George became President of the Board of Trade. In this capacity he did splendid work. Two of his greatest achievements were the settlement of the threatened railway strike, which would have had disastrously far-reaching effects, and the readjustment of the Patents Act. Last year he took another step, this time being appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer, and at the end of last month he introduced his first Budget.

Maker of the British Budget

The Right Hon. David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the British Exchequer, who has been called the "second man in the Liberal Government," is descended from a long line of Welsh farmers. He himself was born in Manchester, where his father was following the vocation of schoolmaster. On the latter's death, when his son was still very young, the upbringing of the future Chancellor passed to a maternal uncle, a shoemaker by trade, in a small Carmarvonshire village, where the future Chancellor attended the village church school.

HIS FIRST CASE

David passed the solicitors preliminary examinations when only fourteen years of age. Then after a period of private study, he entered the office of a solicitor in Portmadoc as an articled pupil. In 1884, when 21 years of age, he became a fully fledged solicitor, and set up in practice for himself. In his first law case he raised the banner of revolt, and not for the first time. By a newly-passed Act of Parliament, Nonconformists could bury their dead in churchyards. An old quarryman of Llanfrothen, a neighboring village, asked on his deathbed that he might be laid beside his daughter in the village churchyard, but the vicar selected a desolate corner.

SUGGESTING STRONG MEASURES

The indignant relatives sought advice from the young solicitor. David Lloyd George, who at once cancelled his clients that they should go to the funeral in a body and if refused admission to the graveyard, should force their way in, even to the extent of breaking down the wall. This actually happened, and the funeral took place in the desired spot. Legal proceedings naturally followed, but the late Lord Chief Justice Coleridge decided that the villagers' apparent lawlessness was in reality merely the due exercise of their legal rights. Mr. Lloyd George had already taken part in the public life of Cricieth. He was selected as Liberal candidate for the Carmarvon Boroughs, and in 1890 won his first election.

A CURIOUS INCIDENT

A curious incident occurred in connection with this election. The fight between the candidates was very keen, Carmarvon Boroughs having long been regarded as a safe Conservative seat. At the count the votes ran almost level throughout the evening. At last the task was ended, and the Conservative candidate was elected with a majority of ten. The Liberal candidate was actually receiving the cheering concourse of his friends and supporters, when a small packet of uncounted votes was discovered with the result that Mr. Lloyd George was the winner by twenty votes. Mr. Lloyd George's political career has been a stormy one. Hardly had he taken his seat in the House, when he startled his fellow-members by opposing no less a man than his leader, and the "G. O. M." himself. At a later period, when the Agricultural Rating Bill was brought forward, he opposed it with such bitterness that he was named from the chair, and suspended for the remainder of the Session.

HIS FIRST BUDGET

Such a fighter as this must perforce make his mark, and in 1905 Mr. Lloyd George became President of the Board of Trade. In this capacity he did splendid work. Two of his greatest achievements were the settlement of the threatened railway strike, which would have had disastrously far-reaching effects, and the readjustment of the Patents Act. Last year he took another step, this time being appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer, and at the end of last month he introduced his first Budget. Pains of women, head pains, or any pain stopped in 20 minutes sure, with Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. See full formula on 25c. Box. Sold by All Dealers.

THE OLD BURIAL GROUND

The old burial ground on the St. John road has been cleaned up by a number of men and boys. Bushes, trees with straggling branches and decayed trunks and wild shrubs, that filled the cemetery so that tombstones and graves were hidden from view, have been cut down, pulled up and carried away making a decided improvement in the spot where "the dead reign alone." A visit to the town's first and for many years only graveyard, the reading of the familiar and the unknown names on the tombstones, cause thoughts both regretful and curious to one whose memory carries him back to the days of the death and burial of his forefathers, relatives or friends, to one, who heard his father speak many times in loving terms, of perhaps many a man whose name we may read on the monuments.

THE OLD BURIAL GROUND

"Beneath those ragged elms, That and Mrs. Campbell left Where leaves the turf in many A mouldering heap; Each in his narrow cell forever laid, The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep. That the oft repeated remark "the town is filled with strangers," is true those of us who learned our A. B. C's but a few short years ago know well but it was ever thus and the names one may read on the monuments in the old churchyard prove this. Where are the descendants of the Thomasons, Southerlands, Billings, Drapers, Taggarts, Kennedys, Vernons, Austins, Kirks, Elliots, Davidsons, Howes, Bolton, McConnells, Walkers, Knights, Munsons, Romneys, Trokes? and many others whose names may be seen. In this short list are names unknown to many here yet they lived and died in St. George.

WEDDING BELLS

A very pretty ceremony took place Tuesday, June 15th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Dick, L'Etang, when their daughter Miss Pearl was married to William N. Campbell. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. V. Buchanan at 8 o'clock on the lawn under a handsomely decorated canopy of white ribbon and bells of flowers. The bride wore a directoire gown of cream broadcloth sleeves and yoke of tucked net over meseline, directoire sash, white veil caught up with moss roses and apple blossoms and carried a large bouquet. The bridesmaid Miss Mildred Dick sister of the bride wore a white princess gown of silk poplin. The groom's man was Wellington H. Dick, Miss Violet Williamson played the march. After the ceremony luncheon was served, and the night was spent in games and dancing. Among the many presents were a beautiful dinner set from D. Campbell, a silver service and numerous other presents. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell left Wednesday morning on a tour to unknown parts. The bride's travelling suit was of brown, with a cream lace basket hat with pink rose buds and velvet ribbon. Joseph McCormick of this town and Mrs. Jennie B. Steele of Potadan, N. Y., were married, Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock at the home of the groom's sister Mrs. Benson in that town. Rev. Mr. Cowan officiating. Mr. and Mrs. McCormick came directly to his home on Elm Street. A number of young friends gathered at the home to welcome the worthy couple, tendering them a reception; refreshments were served, after which the guests departed leaving some valuable and useful gifts and hearty congratulations and best wishes. Mr. McCormick has lived in town for a number of years, coming here from St. George, N. B., and has gained a large circle of friends.--Northfield Vt. Paper.

CREEPS LIKE A SERPENT

Catarrh is an insidious disease scarcely noticeable at first but horribly relentless if not checked

No disease makes such inroads into weak constitutions as Catarrh. It spreads from the place of beginning to the lungs, bronchial tubes, stomach, intestines, and before long all the organs of the body are affected.

A splendid remedy, attended with remarkable success in curing Catarrh, has lately come prominently to the front. Its name is Catarrhoxone, and no case is recorded where it failed to quickly relieve and cure.

The strong points about Catarrhoxone are that it is both a local and constitutional treatment. It not only affords quick relief to the local symptoms, but of all Catarrhal poisons, builds up and strengthens the system.

Catarrhoxone Inhaler supplies an abundance of medicated air which is breathed in at the mouth, and after passing through every air cell and air passage of the breathing organs, is slowly enhaled through the nostrils.

This penetrating, volatile antiseptic at once kills the germs that cause Catarrh, and prevents the disease spreading when once established. It is so healing and soothing that the inflamed membranes, and sore spots are restored to normal and healthy condition in a few days.

Catarrhoxone cleanses the nose and throat and keeps them entirely free from mucous discharge. It prevents drooping in the throat, cures headache and makes breathing easy and the breath pure and sweet.

To build up and invigorate the system a blood purifier and tonic called Ferruzone should be taken after each meal. In conjunction with Catarrhoxone it is a valuable aid in establishing such a healthy condition of the body that Catarrh cannot exist.

Other remedies have been known to give relief, but to permanently eradicate every trace of Catarrh you must use Catarrhoxone. It is a common-sense, convenient, clean method of cure that is endorsed by the profession and all intelligent pharmacists.

You are sure to be benefited quickly and positively cured by Catarrhoxone.

The complete outfit only costs $1.00. Trial size 50c. Sold by all Druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

FOREST FIRES

Those fires originate very largely in carelessness at first, and soon become so fierce that it is impossible to cope with them. There has been of late years a considerable amount of effort put forth to guard against the forest fires, but it is quite plain that more must yet be done. Of course it is likely—as is usually the case—that when the smoke has blown away the damage will not be as great as is now stated. But it will be too heavy, and some families in New Brunswick and in the neighboring States will suffer great loss.—Globe, St. John.

ROAD WORK

Road work, in the past, has not been up to the standard, for the reason that it is only patch work. It seems to be the desire to finish a piece of road at one time, and afterwards no one feels it his duty to fill in a rut or make an effort to keep it in repair. If the citizens, throwing all political bias aside, would feel a personal pride in the care of the roads, and see to it that whatever work they do, or control, is rightly done, we will then get returns in a better highway. Take an interest and aim to have every expenditure make not better roads, but good permanent roads.

NUMEROUS ADVANTAGES OF FISHING.

Perhaps the world will never know what it owes to fishing. Of the proceeds of commercial fishing, or what may be called fishing for profit, a fairly estimate can be formed, for an account is kept of it, and its results being measured by dollars and cents can be grasped at a glance. For instance, a government blue book tells that the annual yield of the commercial fisheries of Canada has a value of about twenty million dollars. But there is another branch of fishing whose results do not admit of such computation. Figures cannot express them nor can the account be balanced by any amount of legal tender. And probably that is the case with respect to many of the best things of life. Can the value of scenery, or of fresh air and bright sunshine, or of genial companionship and firm friendship be estimated in money? These and many other things which go far towards making life worth living elude the grasp of the accountant and refuse to be placed in the book-keepers' ledger. Fishing for fun is one of these, if the fisherman's heart is right he is sure of his prize even though the fish do not bite.

In the first place there must be set down to the credit of the angler's art the calling of thousands to the woods and out upon the lakes and rivers—the leading of men even for a brief holiday away from the artificial and prosaic life of town and city back to Nature, where the odor of the fir-tree is in the air and the spirit of rest broods over the land.

Then think of the opportunities of companionship it offers, the throwing together under the blessed conditions of simple life of old friends whom the life of the work-a-day world tends to separate, and the forming of new friendships based on the common bond of the fisherman's art.

Nor is there anything cruel about fishing, at least in comparison with the hunter's sport. Of course the fisherman takes life—that is, when he has luck—but our sympathies have not yet been developed to that point where the squirming of a worm on a hook or the floundering of a trout seems anything like so tragic as the death struggle of a deer or the last flutter of a wounded partridge.

Fishing also gives time for meditation and scope for the exercise of that estimable virtue, patience. It also confers intellectual benefits. It arouses the imagination, and it tends to develop the power of narrative, although it is a mooted point whether or not it fosters the spirit of gamblers and veracity. However that may be, the answer that perfection even in a fisherman is not to be expected is quite sufficient. Taken all in all, the disciples of Isaac Walton are a worthy race, deserving of the good luck that is befalling them these sunny days of June in their various sylvan haunts.

BY THE WAY

Beware of the dog!

Assess property at its real value.

Pools rush in where angels fear to tread.

Good advertising is good talk; the frank honest kind that convinces.

The town is fortunate in having men ready and willing to decide any case by simply asking for counsel.

Weather speculation that extends beyond a very short period has never attained the accuracy of a science.

The main question is, whether an alderman is entitled to live or not—or if he should be paid for living.

Ordinarily it is just as well for a man to keep his bad habits to himself. The public will find them out soon enough.

"The best laid schemes
O' mice 'an men
Gang aft a--gley."

It is surprising how many great men there are who are fit to sit at the town council, at least they all say they are fit, and they don't look like men who would try to deceive any one.

That we are apt to be too severe in our criticism of public officials was clearly demonstrated by the unkind remarks levelled at the street committee for the darkness that reigned over the town for two weeks. It is explained thusly: it is not dark until ten o'clock and all good citizens should be home at that hour—so there now.

If the church and the law paid half the attention to marriage that they do to divorce the divorce problem would be reduced to a mighty small minimum.

The blind, halt, the foolish are permitted to wed without let or hindrance. The state and the church make no inquiry whatever. Anyone—even those manifestly unfit to marry—can be wedded on request, a condition which manifestly makes for marital unrest and dissatisfaction, and is largely productive of divorce.

Give marriage more safeguards, and the courts will find much less necessity to interfere with family relations. But those who expect to remove the effect without eliminating the cause are attempting a task very near the impossible.

The soul of an editor who died of starvation was being conducted to the Elysian Fields. As they passed the portals of the infernal region he asked his guide if he might not go in and look around. The guide consented, but warned him to stay but a few minutes as he could not wait long.

A long time passed, and the editor had not returned, so the guiding angel went in search of him. He found him before a cage in which a number of doomed wretches were being roasted on red-hot griddles. Over the cage was the sign "Delinquent Subscribers."

"Come," said the guide, "we must be going."

"Don't wait for me," replied the editor. "I'm not coming. This is heaven enough for me!"

The Thousand-Year Pine

There's a tragedy far in the mountain heights.

In the Temple of Ancient Things They have slain the tree that towered high—

The Pine of a Thousand Rings.

The wild things scurried away in fear When the monarch was overthrown, And through the temple profaned there ran From tree to tree a moan.

But in death the patriarch laughed at man

Who had sent the steel to his heart, For he shattered himself upon the earth— So much for the woodman's art!

And there tarried one day a forester, Who grieved at the shattered stem, And counted the rings in the ancient stump

And fashioned a tale from them— A tale that told of forgotten years, Of earthquake and riven rock Of a camp of the Spanish Cavaliers, And the Indians' battle shock.

And the tale was told in a nation's schools.

'Mid wonder and 'mid tears, So not in vain was the tragedy Of the Pine of a Thousand Years.

—By Arthur Chapman in the Denver Republican.

Fred Paul's hotel at Beaver Harbor is well filled with guests and is receiving a liberal patronage from the travelling public. Beaver Harbor is a charming resort in June. The scenery is pleasant, grand and rugged, the sea air pure and invigorating and the accommodations at the hotel first class.

The members of Second Falls Division were warmly congratulated on the arrangements made to entertain their visitors.

The draining of the surface water on a portion of the street in "South Boston," will afford the residents in that district considerable satisfaction, as after every rain the conditions were a source of annoyance and expense to every householder. The street committee are making efforts to remedy these conditions and will likely succeed.

Joshua Stupkins was in town Saturday and with a number of friends entertained a large audience in Courts Hall. The play was good, clean and wholesome the singing and specialties better than usual and the "laughing crowds" were sent home happy. The company is under the management of Chas. C. Reno and Mr. Chase is leading manager.

Millions of worms are attacking the trees in some sections of the town. In Dr. Dick's garden a beautiful oak was nearly stripped before the pest was noticed, the tree was liberally sprayed with a poisonous mixture which produced good results. Other trees in the vicinity have been attacked, and the owners of shade trees should be on the alert to fight this destructive worm, before the foliage is destroyed.

Preparations are being made for a big celebration at Blacks Harbor July 1st. An interesting feature will be a match game of base ball between Blacks Harbor and Campobello. A full program of sports is being arranged which will be announced later. Steamer Connors Bros. will bring an excursion from St. Andrews and Campobello. A band has been engaged, and every effort will be made to make the day one of pleasure and enjoyment. Given fine weather the attendance will undoubtedly be very large.

"Sludge," a hitherto waste product of the pulp mills, is said, by a recent invention to have become extremely valuable. The Standard Oil Co. discovered 20 years ago that the refuse from their oil refinery establishments was almost as valuable as the refined oil itself. From it vasoline is now manufactured. Yet for years the Standard opposed legislation designed to prevent it from dumping it into public waters. The paper makers find that the "sludge," as refuse from the mills is called, can be utilized as a substitute for corn meal and molasses, used for core casting of iron foundries, as a top dressing for maculian roads and for other purposes. The demand for the output of the by product already exceeds the supply and yields an even greater profit proportionately than the wood pulp itself. The extent of the new industry may be appreciated from the fact that the mills have annually dumped into the streams of New York State alone one thousand millions of gallons of sulphite waste.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. It is a remedy that will eradicate the distressed limbs of chronic sufferers, and turn every afflicted back to health again. That is impossible, but this new remedy fills the pores and passages of the diseased system.
In Germany—a Chamber in the City of Darmstadt—I found the best ingredients with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made. A selected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all available cases of this horrible, much dreaded disease. These sand-like granular matter, found in Rheumatoid blood, seem to disintegrate and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

Make Cooking Easy

A Refined Home

The illustration of the sea bird drawn to its doom by the glare of the beacon light finds no truer prototype than in the case of the country girl lured from her home by dreams of fortune to be realized in the great city. As ignorant of the wiles of evil as a mouse is of the mechanism of a trap, unsophisticated in the blandishments of sins; holding blankly to the belief that sheep and goats never mingle, she drops into the maelstrom of a city existence as a snowflake settles into the river. "One moment white then gone forever." There lie in wait for innocence, the wide world over, a legion of plotting devils arrayed in livery of light, honest appearing advertisements that are tent hooks with which the devil angles for souls; employers who scarcely take the pains to hide the fangs of wolves behind their smiling lips; boarding houses infested with other and more hideous vermin than the rat and the roach; companionship of more fatal effect to the soul than hydrant water to the health; counsellors who spin viewless webs and plot ruin as the spider works destruction to the stupid fly. All these and a great many more pitfalls lie in the way of the country girl as she turns her light step from the cow slip and the green turf to take her place in the ranks of those who walk the path of daily toil.

The reason why men do not get along better in this world is because they have not the proper stimulant in their homes. Their homes lack those little touches of refinement which brings the best out of them. Neatness and taste are possible in the poorest homes. Let the woman make the atmosphere as dainty as her means allow, and she will raise her husband to that standard. And as she elevates him the effect is felt upon herself, her children, her home, and her future. Some men respond more slowly to the touch of a woman's hand displayed in their homes and upon their surroundings. The task may seem hopeless to the wife at times. But sooner or later the effect will show itself. There is something in every man which responds to a higher and gentler influence. Let his home be rough and he will be rough. But infuse into that home a softening touch, be it ever so simple, and the man feels it even though he may not directly notice it. He imbibes it, unconsciously, and its effect is sure upon him.

He Died of Kidney Disease
How often we hear of these sad cases. The back—pains and headache were noticed—but not treated. Dizzy spells, frequent calls and languid condition appeared, but nothing was done till the disease was far advanced. Cure invariably results from Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They restore perfect health, destroy every symptom of diseased kidneys, build up constitutions, defy further outbreaks. Because purely vegetable and free from injurious materials, no remedy equals Dr. Hamilton's Pills for Kidney and Liver complaints. Sold in 25c. boxes by all dealers.

Listen to Mother
Girls, listen to your mothers; you will never regret it. No matter what your advantages are above what hers were, you are no better. You can rest assured that it is not book learning or knowledge of fashion that will keep your feet away from the many pitfalls that she can warn you from, in a tender, loving fashion, that you would do well to heed. No matter how mothers may speak, you may rest assured their hearts are in the right place, and that they want their daughters to be innocent and good, rather than fashionable.

Brave Captains Who Have Perished With Their Ships
"The captain of the vessel shall be the last to leave."
This heroic settlement has been exemplified, time and again by the brave men who go down to the sea in ships, and to their everlasting honor there is no attempt or desire to shirk the fearful duty and responsibility. So it was that Captain Scoble of the ill-fated Republic refused to leave his ship till every man, woman, child and member of his crew had been saved.
"The last to leave." It is the law, universally acknowledge at sea by officers and men alike at the basis of self respect and honor. From it no captain is exempt.
One of the bravest of these heroes was Chief officer Patterson of the British King. One day some winters ago he sailed from New York under Captain O'Hagan. Great storms impeded the passage of the ship, and so stupendous was the violence of the waves that they stove in the bow plates, and before the leakage was discovered tons of water rushed into the hold.
Captain O'Hagan told his men to shift the cargo, but barrels and cases were hurtling this way and that, and one of them, driving the captain back against the wall crushed his leg so severely that he had to be carried to the lifeboat.
For a brief space there was no captain. Then Patterson took command. At a critical moment his strong personality and calm assurance saved the crew from panic. Three boats filled with sailors from the British King were launched in safety, while the new commander stood in silence on the bridge. Lower and lower sank the ill-starred ship, and she heaved and took her final plunge, Patterson blew a farewell blast upon his whistle to the fast departing crew.
Quite different but no less heroic was the manner in which Captain Griffith of the Atlantic Transport line steamship Mohagan faced death. Though it was scarcely darker than twilight, he had run his vessel on the rocks near the Needles in Oct. 1908, and it was rapidly sinking. The last glimpse of Captain Griffith showed the boats to be lowered in order to save his crew.
Heroic in death, too, was the captain of the oil-ship Loodiana, which several years ago was burned at sea.
Before thinking of his own safety he saw every man of his crew clear off the doomed vessel, and then it was too late. Foot by foot he was driven forward by the flames till at last he hung over the bow. A tramp steamship came up, but the waters were too rough for the lowering of the boats. Finally the flames compelled him to loosen his hold, and while his ship burned fiercely on he was dashed into the angry sea beneath.
But still more dramatic was the death of Captain Deloncke of the French liner La Bourgogne sunk in the summer of 1898. As he stood one night upon the bridge a tall bark suddenly loomed out of the darkness and, dealing La Bourgogne a fatal blow steamed hurriedly away. The men on board went frantic. In a scramble for safety firemen and crew lost their wits, and people ran up and down the deck in wild despair.
Deloncke stood calm amid the tumult. Suddenly he abandoned himself to the dramatic horror of the scene and, seizing the whistle rope, sent into the skies one long, wild, wailing groan. It was Deloncke's last salute.
Perhaps the noblest death of all was that of Captain Craven of the monitor Tecumseh at the attack in Augusta, 1864, on Mobile. The ship was fast sinking. There was not a moment to be lost. At the foot of the ladder leading to the manhold above, the turret of safety, two men met. Captain Craven and his pilot. There would be time for but one to mount. The captain knew it; the pilot knew it. But there was no hesitation. With a smile Captain Craven stepped to one side.
"Avert you, pilot," he said.
The man sprang up the ladder, and his life was saved, but the brave captain was swept under and carried to destruction by the cruel sea.—London Answers.

The Bachelor's Soliloquy

To love, or not to love; that is the question: Whether 'tis better for man to suffer the stings and sorrows of a lonely bachelorhood Or by taking arms against a sea of troubles, And by marrying end them. To love, to marry: No more, and by a marriage to say we end The heartache, and the thousand longings That a bachelor's heir to, 'tis a consummation Devoutly to be wished. To love, to marry: To marry; perchance to be unhappy, aye, there's the rub; For on that sea of matrimony what storms may come When we have left this port of bachelorhood. Must give us pause; there's the reason That makes us loath to leave this haven; For who would bear the paying bills for two, a lumberer's delay, the proud cook's haughtiness, pangs of staying in at nights, the children's yells, When by himself he might be at ease In his club? Who would be lonesome And live and love a bachelor's life But for the dread of something after marriage? The well discovered country from whose bourne So many travelers return, divorced, puzzles the will And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others we know not of, Thus marriage doth make cowards of us all And the lovely hue of a proposal Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought, And lovmaking of great pitch and moment, With this regard their currents turn away And lose the name of courtship. —C. B. Heston, jun., in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Preparing for the Future

Mrs. Jenkins had missed Mrs. Brady from her accustomed haunts, and hearing several startling rumors concerning her, went in search of her old friend. "They tell me you're workin' 'ard night and day, Sarah Ann?" she queried. "Yes," replied Mrs. Brady. "I'm under bonds to keep the peace for pullin' the whiskers out of that old scoundrel of a husband' of mine, and the magistrate said that if I come before 'im ag'in, or laid me 'ands on the old man, he'd find me forty shillin's!" "And so you're workin' 'ard to keep out of mischief?" "I'm what? Not much, I'm workin' 'ard to 'ave up the line!"—Penny Pictorial.

Do Not Grumble

There is no earthly need of so much poverty and grumbling, as one hears on all sides today. There is plenty of food in this great and glorious world for all its people. It is the fault of the education of our children; they are brought up wrong. The children should be broken into some useful labor, and taught to respect and honor the useful more than the ornamental. Every boy and girl should be made to work at something that would be profit, till the second nature forms with them. A man or woman so educated becomes actually fond of labor or at least pleased with results, then it becomes a pleasure to perform it. All children at an early age should have a bank, and be taught to save their money, or, at the best the larger part of it. They should not be allowed to waste anything, food, clothing, or any other article of value. It is the early impression formed on the mind that is enduring. Very few children trained in the right direction will become paupers, unless caused by sickness or some unavoidable accident.

Don't Reprove at Bedtime

To send children happy to bed should be one of the mother's most ordinary tasks. No little one should dread the bedtime hour, nor fear the dark, nor be allowed to go to rest under a sense of disgrace or alienation from household love. Whatever the child's daytime naughtiness may have been, at nightfall he should be forgiven, and go to rest with the mother's kiss on her lips and her tender voice in his ears.

Hardly anything can be worse for a young child than to be scolded or punished at bedtime. The mother does well to be a little blind at times, remembering that a good deal of childish culpability is superficial only, and washes off almost as easily as does the dirt which the evening bath removes from the skin.

The main thing with children is to have them well started with good principles, which they will carry through life. Obedience, truth, unselfishness, purity are essentials, and these can all be lovingly cultivated, and will flourish in the right home atmosphere.

Professor and Mrs. Hadley were on a train bound for New York where Yale's president was to speak before a national convention. He made use of the hour and twenty minutes he spent in the train by rehearsing his speech in a low voice, using his hands to emphasize certain passages. A kindly matron, who was sitting directly behind Mr. and Mrs. Hadley, and who had been watching and listening, leaned forward and, tapping Mrs. Hadley on the shoulder said feelingly: "You have my sincere sympathy, my poor woman; I have one just like him at home."—Argonaut.

Empress Eugenie's Wedding Day

Even on her wedding day, the Empress Eugenie received a sign of ill omen, according to Clara Morris in the Woman's Home Companion for May. The market women of Paris presented her with a mountain of violets on the day of her marriage to Louis Napoleon. Miss Morris says: "And those market women—they boiled over! They yelled and pushed and crowded into the palace gardens. They screamed for the Empress, until at last a window opened, and Eugenie stepped out on the balcony, and ever eager to please, she held in her hands a great mass of the violets the market women had sought her.

"Then suddenly one old fish wife shrieked out at those of the committee, 'Figs! Idiots! It is the flower of sorrow you have sent to her!' While quick another raved out, 'It is the color of mourning that you send the bride of the Emperor! Violets, even purple violets to a bride! Figs! Idiots! Devils!' It is an omen—a sign of evil!

"And the then fight began! Oh mon Dieu! They are terrible! They tear one another like wild beasts! The gendarmes try hard to make order, when a voice up above us says clear and gentle, 'Oh, soldiers, don't hurt them!' And the idea that any soldier on earth could hurt a dame des Halles was so funny that everybody stopped fighting to laugh. And they laugh and laugh, and wipe of the blood, and slap the gendarmes and say, 'Don't hurt us, messieurs—don't!' And they dance and shout, and the beautiful Empress stand now by the Emperor and bow, and throw violets to the crowd, and all below cry 'Vive l'Imperatrice!' And she smile and smile, and so retire. But that old witch was right! Yes, madame, though the violet was the flower of the Bonapartes, it is the flower of sorrow, not fit to send a bride! It was an omen, and given at the Tuileries, it pointed to Chislehurst!"

Commenting on the immigration policy of Canada. The Cleveland plaindealer says: "In her admission of new settlers Canada is showing considerable discrimination. Pauper emigrants from continental Europe are not wanted and are forbidden to enter. Newcomers from British Isles with their vigor and their little competences, are gladly welcomed, and no bar is placed in the way of thrifty and healthy immigrants from Scandinavia and Germany! What Canada desires is immigrants who will take to agriculture. Such new comers are needed to build up the country and to grow with it. The Canadian policy is wise and businesslike, and is bound to have poor results."

Be Good Natured

What a different world this would be if only all of us would cultivate the grace of good nature! It is the best tonic for nervous disorders, the surest preservation of home happiness and the most effective remedy for the divorce disease now unhappily prevalent. He who has learned how to take even the most disagreeable things and grievous disappointments good naturedly may never be a millionaire, but he will be what is much better, both happy and a source of happiness, and the atmosphere he carries with him will be like a bit of sunshine in the mammoth cave.

Home

If you would gather up all tender memories, all the lights and shades of the heart; all banquetings and reunions, filial, fraternal, paternal and conjugal affections and you had only just four letters with which to spell out that height and depth and length and breadth and magnitude and eternity of meaning, you would with screaming eyes and trembling voice, and agitated hand, write it out in those four living capitals, H-O-M-E.
