What a change the auto and truck have made to many lines of business. A harnessmaker, who has been in the same shop in the north end of Middlesex county for 25 years, recounts that when he first went there he had four or five men working all the time. Now there is just enough to keep one man going. He says there are only three harness shops between Parkhill and Stratford.

While feeding his fowl a few mornings ago Fred Moon, of London, had his attention attracted by the pecking of his rooster and found it pecking at something on the ground. He investigated and discovered a bright stone which proved to be a perfect diamond of 2 1/2 karats, worth about $1,200. It is supposed that the stone became dislodged from a ring worn by a grain dealer and dropped into the feed when he was filling a bag.

POLICE ARE CHECKMATED
Provincial police officers made a raid on an alleged still on a farm near here in Innesbroke township. Four Belgians were implicated, who, during the temporary absence of the officers for a few minutes, are reported to have destroyed any evidence against them, including two barrels of what was believed to have been brew, and a considerable quantity of mash. Although warrants have been issued for the arrest of the Belgians it was found that arrest would be futile in view of the destruction of the evidence. The raid was conducted by Officers Tait and Webb, of London, and Barr and DeWitt, of St. Thomas.

SIGHT-SEEING IN EUROPE

Glencoe Minister Writes Entertainingly of Trip Which Takes Him Through Great War Zone to Oberammergau and Venice

This personal letter from Rev. D. G. Paton to the editor of The Transcript contains so much of interest that we are constrained to forego some of the ethics of Journalism and pass it on to our readers:

Venice, Italy, August 5, 1922.

Dear Mr. Sutherland.—Before leaving Glencoe I undertook to drop you a line after we had attended the passion play. We have been on the move so continually that it is hard to find spare time for letter writing. The day we left Oberammergau, for instance, we had breakfast in Germany, lunch in Austria and the evening meal in Italy. We are to stay in Italy, however, for some days, so there is now more leisure.

The summer on this side of the Atlantic has, so far, been very fine. There has been no excessive heat. Indeed, during our stay of two weeks in Scotland, great fires were lit nearly every night. England gave us warmer weather, and over here on the continent we have found it very much like a summer at home.

Passing through these countries we have noticed a fine crop in nearly all of them, but European farmers do not seem to use much machinery. The scythe still seems to be the popular "machine" for harvesting, although we did notice four or five binders at work. Labor seems to be abundant. Men, women and children all seem to share in the outdoor work. In Austria, as we were passing through, we saw quite a number of women at work on the railway.

Belgium is a sad sight, especially where the heavy fighting took place in the war. Ypres, where hardly a house was left standing, is being rebuilt and trees are being planted, but standing on a height in Ypres, far as eye can reach there is scarcely a living tree to be seen or a building of any size. In France, where the war struck conditions are much the same. Reconstruction, as a matter of fact, is being rushed forward more quickly in Belgium than in France. Lens still lies in ruins. Vimy Ridge and the adjoining countryside have not been cultivated since the war. Barbed wire and the wreckage of the fighting have been cleared away to some extent but if it were not for the poppies which grow and are now blooming in great abundance the countryside would be a desert. As one passes through the war zone here and there old tanks, piles of tangled wire, shells, etc., are to be seen. The farmers of Belgium and Northern France are going to have no easy time for the next few years.

The centre of attraction for tourists in Europe this summer is Oberammergau. In this little village in the heart of the Alps the citizens give a dramatic portrayal of the closing scenes of the life of Christ every tenth year. This is the first presentation since 1910. The village is small, numbering only a few hundreds of people, and the passion play is the centre of their whole lives seemingly. They look on it as a very sacred matter. Some of us had felt it a little irreverent for any group of people to dare to dramatize the life of Christ, but after seeing the way it was done and the intense earnestness of the people there was no ground left for criticism. The play takes eight hours—from 8 to 12 in the forenoon and from 2 to 6 in the afternoon. It is put on two days each week. Upwards of 4,000 people are in attendance daily during the summer months. There are no hotels, and the people of the village entertain visitors in their homes, charging only a nominal rate for board. Owing to the crowds no visitor is supposed to stay longer than two nights in the village.

On our way to Oberammergau from Munich we experienced a wild thunder storm and cloudburst in the Alps. Newspaper reports say it was the worst deluge of rain in fifteen years. At any rate, our train was held up for over three hours owing to a wash-out on the line.

Passing through Austria on our way to Italy we were forced to spend an afternoon in Innsbroke through missing a train connection, and were able to study at first hand the condition of Austrian money. Five Swiss francs (about $1 of Canadian money) were worth that day 47.220 kronen. Some one of our party complained that he couldn't get rid of his money, for every time he would buy something he would get back a bigger roll of bills in change. Everything in the line of money in Austria is paper, and they deal in large figures. A two-pound roll of butter cost 28,000 kronen. To count it out in hundred or thousand kronen bills looks like a big business transaction—but isn't.

While the European countries are behind Canada in many ways, there are many ways in which they are far in advance of us. Their electrical development is wonderful. The trains through the Alps are, many of them, operated by electricity, and the speed of the European trains is terrific.

We are enjoying Venice very much. It is so entirely different from any other place that it could scarcely be otherwise than interesting. There are no horses and no automobiles in Venice. People either walk, or ride in gondolas. Our hotel windows look out on the Grand Canal, and in the evening we have continual music.

The Venetian gondoliers seem to be all trained singers.

There has been an attempt at a railway strike in Italy, but trains are still operating, so mail ought to reach its destination without undue delay.

BOWLING TOURNAMENT

The Glencoe Bowling Club held a very successful Scotch doubles bowling tournament last Wednesday, August 23rd. Twenty-four rinks competed, twenty of them being from outside towns. There were five rinks from Dutton, four from Ridgetown, two from Ailsa, Craig, two from Rodney, two from Petrolia, two from Thamesville, two from Wyoming, one from Appin and four from Glencoe. Each rink played four games of twelve ends each. The winners were:

First prize, wicker chairs—Basset, skip, Petrolia, 4 wins with plus of 35.

Second prize, electric irons—A-fleck, skip, Dutton, 4 wins with plus of 32.

Third prize, sweater coats—W. D. Moss, skip, and James Poole, Glencoe, 4 wins with plus of 24.

Fourth prize, tie pins—Tilly Campbell, skip, Rodney, 3 wins with plus of 23.

The weather looked threatening in the morning but cleared up, and playing continued without interruption from 10 a. m. till 9:30 p. m. The greens were in fine shape and presented a gala appearance during the day. Large numbers of citizens took in the games. Everybody reports a splendid day, and the visiting rinks went home well pleased and promised to come back again.

Moss and Poole had a big gallery of spectators in their final game and they were not disappointed, for they preserved some of the honors for the home town. It sounded like a hockey match when "Jimmy's" bowl froze to the jack in the last end. The enemy simply couldn't dislodge it. There was great cheering for the home town team.

Art Davenport supplied the refreshments in his usual capable style. If Art ever gets too old for hockey, he'll make a great bowler.

The visitors were a good bunch of sports and we hope they all come back next year. We know Basset will be back; he got second prize last year and first this year.

With the new water system and the enlarged grounds, the club look forward to still better times next year. They expect to see more of the citizens take hold of this good old game.

Harry Singleton, our genial extantman, brought over two rinks from Ailsa Craig. Come again, Harry.

LIGHTNING KILLS YOUNG MAN

Daniel Watterworth Meets Instant Death at Rondeau Park

Daniel Watterworth, aged 21 years, son of Mrs. David Watterworth, of Mosa township, was struck by lightning and instantly killed at Rondeau Park about 8 o'clock on Friday morning. Mr. Watterworth and his brothers had been engaged for some days building a cottage at the park for Mrs. Fennell, of Newbury. While at breakfast at their boarding house on Friday morning and during an unusually severe thunder storm lightning struck a tree near the house and followed a clothesline stretched from the tree to the house and fastened near the window which was open. Mr. Watterworth was sitting near the window with his back towards it and was instantly killed. The others sitting at the table were severely shocked but have recovered.

The funeral of Mr. Watterworth took place from his mother's residence on Sunday afternoon to Oakland cemetery.

CALLED TO LONDON

The Bishop of Huron has appointed Rev. T. J. Charlton, of St. John's church, Glencoe, to be rector of St. Matthew's church, London, in succession to Rev. Mr. Ashby, who goes to Windsor. The appointment of Mr. Charlton is in response to an unanimous call extended by the congregation of St. Matthew's. Mr. Charlton will take charge of his new appointment the first week in October.

BASEBALL TOURNAMENT

A baseball tournament will be held in Glencoe on Wednesday, September 6th. Fifty dollars will be given in prizes. The competing clubs will be Florence, Bothwell, Thamesville and Glencoe. First game starts at 1 o'clock. A dance will be given in the town hall in the evening, with music by "The Happy Four" orchestra.

DELAWARE, 9; WALKERS, 5

In the second game of the play-off series for the championship of Middlesex, which constitutes the best three games out of five, the Delaware team, at Delaware on Friday afternoon last, before a large and enthusiastic crowd again defeated Walkers by the score of 9 to 5, and registered the second victory. Adair for Delaware had 11 strike-outs, while Davis of Walkers, formerly of Strathroy, fanned 8 batters.

NOTABLE FAMILY REUNION

MacLachlan Picnic (or Cruinnseachadh Clann MacLachlan)

August 15, 1922, will be a red letter day to many of the descendants of the late Hugh MacLachlan, Strath Lachlan, Scotland, as it was on that date that their first family picnic was celebrated. The fact that the thermometer registered far above the ninety mark did not detract anything from the day's enjoyment, for all were bent upon a good time.

The picnic was held upon the home-stand of the late Hugh MacLachlan, lot 1, concession 8, Mosa, being the farm now occupied by his son, Hugh M., who celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday on the above date, and on which farm Hugh MacLachlan of Strath Lachlan settled ninety-two years ago. Even to an outsider who did not know all the large family circle it would have been interesting to watch the hearty greeting and hear the many "Cumeadh a' fhuas" as the different branches of connections came in from all directions. After the exchange of greetings the merry company wended their way to the tables, which groined beneath their loads of good things. The tables, tastefully decorated with bouquets of various flowers, were graced by the birthday cake, bearing the dates August 15, 1828-1922, opposite which were seated Hugh M. and Alexander, the two surviving members of the Strath Lachlan families.

After partaking freely of the good things, everyone present pronounced the birthday cake "most delicious" and were all agreed that Mr. Ford, Glencoe, who made and decorated it, was an ideal confectioner. The cake was served from a platter one hundred and twenty years old, which was owned by the late Mrs. Hugh MacLachlan, Strath Lachlan. The toast to the clan was proposed by Rev. D. Robertson, pastor of Burns' church, Mosa, and ably responded to by A. L. Leitch, Strathroy.

Following the dinner the company repaired to the programme stand, which was easily distinguished as such by its MacLachlan Tartan and Rowan (mountain ash) decorations, the Rowan being the badge of the MacLachlan clan.

The opening selection, "Moladh Mairi" (The Praise of Mary), slogan of the clan, was rendered by Piper Douglas Leitch, a great grand nephew, following which the address of welcome from Dr. D. F. MacLachlan, Windsor, was read by Rev. Mr. Robertson, chairman, owing to Dr. MacLachlan's inability to be present at the commencement of the program.

Very interesting, too, was the sketch of the family history read by Dr. MacLachlan, compiled by A. L. Leitch.

Then the Henderson Juvenile Band of London took charge. As the pipers, dressed in Highland costumes, stepped upon the platform and executed some of the old Scotch dances, the Highland blood in all was stirred. The pipe music was interspersed by Scotch songs by Dr. D. F. MacLachlan, Windsor; duets by Mrs. Stuart Nisbet and Miss Sarah C. MacLachlan, Glencoe, and accordion selections by Mr. Hamilton, Glencoe.

Letters were read from absent members expressing their regrets at not being able to be present but assuring each and all that although absent in body they were with us in spirit. A unique feature among these letters was one from Rev. H. D. Leitch, Regina, which was partly written in Gaelic, the original language of the family.

Although the whole program was interesting and entertaining, every number being voted best of the preceding one, the climax was reached when the two patriarchs of the MacLachlans were called to the platform and each presented with a silk MacLachlan Tartan and a headed cane. The presentation was made by Duncan McAlpine, of Alvinston, and Hugh D. MacLachlan, of Brooke, who themselves are well past the three score years and ten.

taken by surprise and somewhat overcome with their emotions, the two aged gentlemen very ably thanked those present for the gifts and their many kindnesses.

The afternoon's proceedings drew to a close with sports and athletic contests, in which the younger generation contended and showed clearly that the spirit of their ancestors still lives in their veins.

A picture of the family gathering was taken by L. C. O'Keefe, Guelph, also a picture of the groups of five generations, there being no less than seven such groups among the three hundred and twenty-five members registered present that day.

Special mention must also be made of expressions of good wishes from Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bomes, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. and Margaret Watson, Alvinston, and Mrs. R. Hewitt and Mrs. O. Watson, Mosa.

To all present the day will be an inspiration, as it will serve to link up the golden past with the glorious present. Who could look upon those two grand old gentlemen, Hugh M., passing his ninety-fourth milestone, and Alexander, nearing his ninety-second, with their mental faculties still unimpaired, bearing living testimony to the pure lives they have lived, without having a sense of true pride within him? Surely they leave us a noble heritage as "from falling hands they flung the torch, be ours to hold it high."

The poor are with us always but the rich go away for the summer.

HISTORY OF A TOWNSHIP

Ekfrid Centenary Celebration Brings Out Much Interesting Information

For a period lasting from 1897 to 1906, on account of a change in the constitution of the county councils by which townships were grouped into districts from each of which two representatives were elected to the county council, the township and county councils lost direct relationship. Under the division of the county of Middlesex, Ekfrid became a part of district No. 7, and for the ten years the interests of the township were represented in the county by the late Mr. George B. Campbell from 1897 to 1902, and from 1903 to 1906 inclusive by Mr. N. A. Galbraith. Both of these men during their term in the county council attained the honors of the wardenship. During this period the duties of the township reeve pertained wholly to township affairs.

It should also be noted in this connection that the Municipal Act provided for increased representation of the townships in the county council when population so allowed it. As early as 1863 this increased representation was accorded the township, and Mr. David Dobie was the first deputy-reeve. This representation continued until 1897 when the new act above referred to became effective. In 1907 the reeve again became representative of the township in the county council, but as the unit of representation permitting a deputy-reeve was increased from the former township unit did not have a deputy in its representation.

Two of the outstanding features of municipal government with which the township has been concerned have been those of drainage and road maintenance. Large sums of money have been spent and contributions of labor have been made to both. The statute labor system in the earlier days of the township was generally applied to the opening and construction of roads, but in the later years, when labor became comparatively scarce in rural districts, the system became generally inefficient, and in 1920 was abolished. He would indeed be a bold calculator who could estimate the value of the amount of labor applied to the roads during the existence of the system. However, outside of this, as settlement proceeded and wealth increased, the township became generous in its expenditures for road improvement. One of the most important of these expenditures was the application of the township's share of the surplus of the Sandfield-McDonald government distributed to the municipalities by the government of Hon. Edward Blake. The township received the sum of $7,754.30, which was spent in the years 1874-75 in aid of the improvement of sideroad No. 12, Mosa-Ekfrid townline and Caradoc townline, respectively, as follows: $3,848.96, $2,358.11 and $2,000.

The appropriation by the council of 1850 for the improvement of roads and bridges was £60, divided in sums of £12 to each of the five commissioners. In 1870, twenty years later, the appropriation was $600. In 1920 the amount spent for highway improvement was $8,830, and besides this a large expenditure on roads under the county management. On July 1st, 1920, the Longwoods Road was assumed by the government of the province to be maintained henceforth as a Provincial Highway.

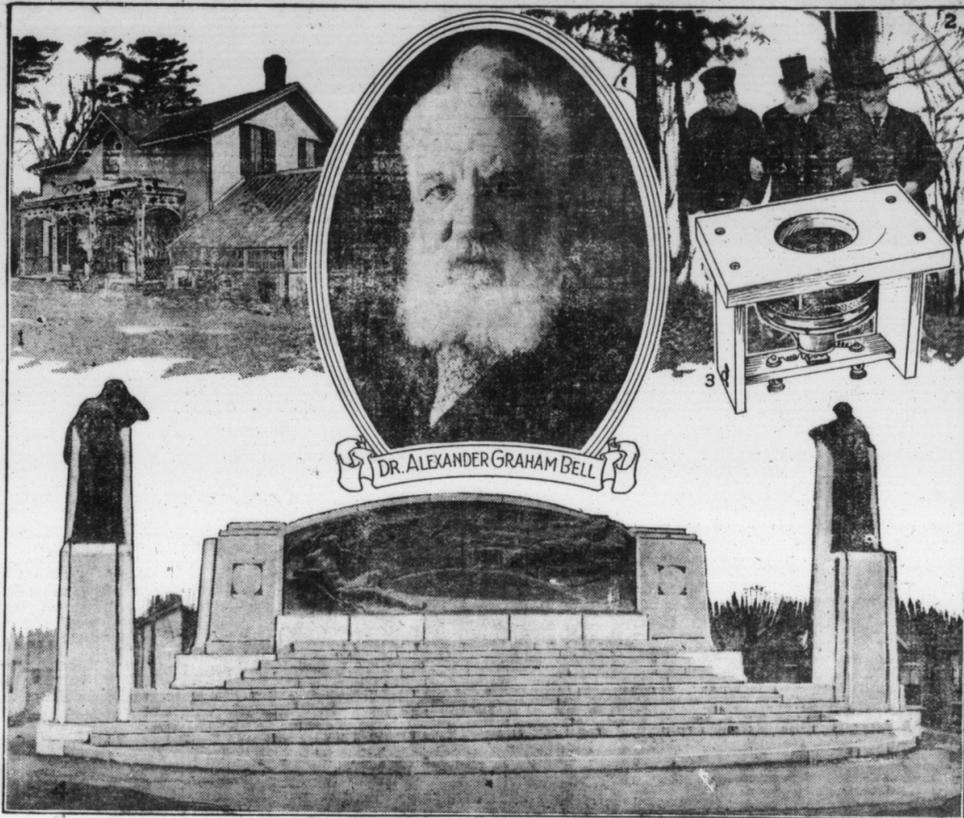

The following are the names of those who have served the township in the capacity of clerk since 1833: the date of first records in existence today:—Duncan McLean, 1832-5; Jas. Wilson, 1836-7; Gilbert McEachern, 1838-49; Hector McFarlane, 1850-62, 1864-67, 1877-1901; William Sutherland, 1868 and 1872; J. E. Champion, 1883 and part 1885; John McFarlane, 3 months of 1869; Donald McFarlane, 1869-70, 1873-76; John A. Scott, 1871; A. P. McDougald, 1902 to the present.

The reeves of the township since incorporation in 1850 have been:—Donald McFarlane, sr., 1850; Geo. J. Smith, 1851-54; John McIntyre, 1855-58, 1864-65, 1884; Malcolm Campbell, 1859-63, 1866-68; Hector McFarlane, 1869-73; Geo. J. Coulthard, 1874; Geo. C. Elliott, 1875-76; C. J. Campbell, 1877-78; Allan Stevenson, 1879; Jas. Pole, 1880-82, 1885-86; John A. Dobie, 1887; A. P. McDougald, 1888-92, 1896, 1898-1900; Geo. Scates, 1893-94-95; J. E. Hull, 1897; N. A. Galbraith, 1901; L. L. McTaggart, 1903-1905, 1912-16, 1919; Chas. M. Macfie, 1909-11; Dan A. McCallum, 1917-18; F. W. Nicholls, 1920-21. Of these officers Mr. Malcolm Campbell was warden of the county during part of 1866 and Mr. L. L. McTaggart in 1914.

It is fitting that special mention should be made of the extended period of service rendered the township by the late Hector McFarlane, who served as clerk for 42 years, reeve for 5 years and auditor for year—an almost unbroken period of half a century of service; by the late Wm. Sutherland, who served as clerk for 2 years and as treasurer for almost 40 years; and by the present clerk, who served as auditor for 6 years, as councillor for 2 years, as reeve for 9 years and as clerk for the past 20 years.

From the unbroken forest into which the pioneers came in the early years of the 19th century, there have appeared these fertile and well-tilled farms. Few portions of the township remain in a state of natural forest (perhaps too few). The rude cabin has given place to the comfortable and well-appointed home. The log shack schoolhouse of early days has given place to the modern building with its generous equipment. We worship in places which are temples beside the early places of worship. The growing wealth is seen by a comparison of assessment rolls. From a valuation of $5,392 or about $2,200 in 1835, the real property of the township has grown to $2,440,605. The tax roll has increased from £280 in 1850 to $45,848.86. The taxpayer of today complains of excessive taxation, but would he go back to the primitive days of township life and experience their compulsory self-denial and their unceasing labor to meet the exigencies of a situation of which only actual experience can tell.

HIS MEMORY SHALL NOT FADE

1—The Bell homestead at Brantford. 2—Dr. Bell and two old Brantford friends, who helped him run his first telephone line. 3—Bell's first telephone instrument. 4—The Bell Memorial, on Tutela Heights, Brantford, designed by Walter S. Alward, the Canadian sculptor.

Rather would he accept the conditions of today with its opportunities, and receive these as the generous legacy which has been handed down with its lessons of self-sacrifice, of faithful service and unflinching honor. In so far as the events of a township relate themselves to a people, one hundred years seems a long period. Many of the third generation of descendants of those who settled in this township are in active control of the heritage which has been transmitted to it, and a fourth generation is appearing on the scene of such brilliant achievement. These pioneers are no longer with us in the body. Their ashes mingle with Mother Earth in consecrated sleeping places in the midst of the lands which their indomitable courage and infinite patience gave to their sons and daughters. But their spirits are still manifest in their material and intellectual and social and religious contributions to the communities in which we of the present find our homes; and their resourcefulness, their thrift, their boundless energy, their public spirit, their faith in man and in God should inspire the succeeding generations to make the township of Ekfrid stand not only for the large measure of material prosperity which they saw in its latent possibilities, but for its home-loving sentiment and religious aspiration which glorified their lives.

After you have climbed to the top don't forget the fellow who held the ladder. If one be troubled with corns, he will find in Holloway's Corn Remover an application that will entirely relieve suffering.

Thousands of copies of the official programme for the Western Fair are being distributed and make interesting reading for intending visitors. Two performances daily for the full week of Sept. 11th will take place before the grand stand. There will be speed events each day and plenty of music all the time. Fireworks every night with change of program. Monday, Sept. 11th, will be children's day. The gates and grand stand will be free to all children 12 years of age and under. The Boy Scouts of Western Ontario will be a feature in Monday's program both afternoon and evening. The Y.W.C.A. girls will give an exhibition of drills, etc., on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Automobile races on Saturday, 16th, at 3 o'clock. All this will be in addition to the regular daily program. All information may be obtained from the Secretary at the general offices, London, Ont.

To Holders of Five Year 5½ per cent Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued in 1917 and Maturing 1st December, 1922.

CONVERSION PROPOSALS

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers to holders of these bonds who desire to continue their investment in Dominion of Canada securities the privilege of exchanging the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing 5½ per cent interest, payable half yearly, of either of the following classes:—

- (a) Five year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1927.
- (b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

Holders of the maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December 1 interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unexpired coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered, or coupon registered, or coupon bearer form carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.

W. S. FIELDING,
Minister of Finance.

Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.

CHEERIO CLUB PICNIC

On Thursday afternoon last the Cheerio Club held a very enjoyable picnic on the spacious lawn of Isaac Walker.

The members of the club and their parents, together with several visitors, gathered early in the afternoon, when a splendid program of home talent was given, consisting of speeches, readings, community singing and the reading of "The Live Wire," after which a good sports program was run off.

Clifford Reycraft occupied the chair in an able manner, while the president, Miss Agnes McEachern, worked energetically to make the gathering a success.

Promptly at 5 o'clock the members and friends, to the number of about sixty, sat down to tables heavily laden with a tempting repast of all the delicacies of the season, prepared by the ladies, and to which all did justice.

After supper a ball game was indulged in, which had they seen it, would have made Ty Cobb or Moonie Gibson green with envy.

The winners in the sports were as follows: Free-for-all race—M. Reycraft. Ladies' race—Mrs. Abbott.

TWO BAD INSECT PESTS

Play Havoc With Some Field and Garden Crops.

The White Grub, Larva of the June Beetle—The Wireworm, Larva of the Click Beetle—How to Deal With Them—Calf Feeding, a Real Problem.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto)

Much injury is done to certain field and garden crops by the two insects named above. Hints as to their control are given below:

The White Grub working and feeding beneath the soil on grass roots, field crops and garden crops, destroys many thousands of dollars' worth of effort each year, much of the destruction in the corn and strawberry fields can be charged to this insect. Pasture fields, hay meadows and grain fields are frequently much reduced in value through the roots of the plants being nibbled off by this pest. The parent of the white grub is the June Beetle, usually very common as a night flier in late June and July. The female beetle usually lays her eggs in grass land, meadows, lawns, roadsides, fence rows, bush pastures and such like places. The grubs hatch in twelve or fourteen days after the eggs are laid, they require two years to develop, living and feeding on grass and other plant roots until ready to pupate. The change from grub to mature insect takes place between the autumn of the second year and the following spring. Since these grubs live and feed beneath the soil for full two years it is impossible to reach them with poisons or sprays. Cultivation to break up the pupal cases or expose such to the weather or birds is the most efficient way to control. Old sod lands are usually heavily infested, and the crop following the first ploughing suffers heavily. A short rotation with deep autumn ploughing whenever possible, and not more than one year out of three in grass will keep the numbers down sufficiently to permit profitable crop production.

The Wireworm. What is the matter with the crops? Much of the seed has failed to produce a plant and what plants have developed are weak and stunted. Scratch away the soil and look for the seed that you planted some weeks ago. If you find that the seed grain has been penetrated or partly devoured you will know that wireworms have been at work. You may even find "hard smooth shining slender cylindrical six-legged larva at work boring and eating the seed. The wireworms vary in color from reddish to yellowish brown. The wireworm is the larva of a class of beetles commonly known as "Click Beetles" (Elateridae). These beetles frequent and breed in grass land. Fields that have been down in hay or pasture for a number of years are generally heavily infested and the first crop grown after breaking the sod usually suffers considerably. Tillage is the best agent to destroy the young beetles. A short crop rotation that does not include hay or pasture more frequently than one year in four is generally effective in controlling this pest. The ploughing should be done early in the autumn, and the land worked as much as possible before the hard freezing weather stops tillage operations. The stirring of the soil will break up many pupal cases and thereby expose the young or developing beetles to the cold and wet. All or many will perish, reducing the possibility of serious infestation on cultivated lands during the following season.—Stevenson, Sec. Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Calf Feeding a Real Problem. It is well known to dairymen that calves under six months old make little or no gain on pasture alone, however good the pasture may be. Their feeding is a real problem. For this reason dairymen try to have the calves come in the fall so they will be ready for pasture in the spring. Spring calves or calves born in late winter should be kept in the barn during the summer if they are to make proper growth. It is well to have a small pasture or yard in connection in which they can run a few hours a day. In hot weather, the night is the better time for them to be out of doors.

For feed, skim milk, mixed whole oats and corn half and half, and clover or alfalfa hay, are always satisfactory rations. When there is a shortage of skim milk or clover or alfalfa hay, some oilmeal will greatly add to the ration.

Calf scours are frequently caused in summer by unclean pasture. Tin pails should be used, and they should be washed every day and set out in the sun.

U. S. Senator Gore on the Farmer. The farmer cannot continue to sell his produce for less than the cost of production any more than he could live in a vacuum. Out of the reduced proceeds of what he sells, the farmer is obliged to pay extraordinary prices for everything that he buys. I believe that our national progress and prosperity are bound up with the progress and prosperity of our farmers. Any policy which crucifies the farmer will bear evil fruit, and will dry up the fountains of national prosperity.

Utilizing Unmarketable Potatoes. Unmarketable potatoes add succulence to the dairy ration. Where corn silage is not available and there are plenty of small potatoes, a peck a day will give an increase in milk flow. They should be introduced into the ration gradually and be run through a root cutter to avoid the possibility of choking the animal.

The Cow Puncher

BY ROBERT J. C. STEAD.

Dave was not long in discovering that his engagement as coachman was a device, born of Mr. Duncan's kindness, to enable him to accept instruction without feeling under obligation for it. When he made this discovery he smiled quietly to himself, and pretended not to have made it. Two things were apparent after their first drive—that nothing was further from the minds of Mr. Duncan's boys than anything which called for so much exertion as a runaway, and that, even had they been so disposed, Edith was entirely competent to manage them. The girl had not lived in the foothill town since childhood without becoming something of a horsewoman. But Dave pretended not to know that he was a supernumerary. To have acted otherwise would have seemed ungrateful to Mr. Duncan. And presently the drives began to take a strange attraction of themselves.

When they drove in the two-seated buggy on Sunday afternoons the party usually comprised Mrs. Duncan and Edith, young Forsyth, and Dave. Mr. Duncan was interested in certain Sunday afternoon meetings. It was Mrs. Duncan's custom to sit in the rear seat, for its better riding qualities, and it had a knack of falling about that Edith would ride in the front seat with the driver. She caused Forsyth to ride with her mother, ostensibly as a courtesy to that young gentleman—a courtesy which, it may be conjectured, was not fully appreciated. At first he accepted it with the good nature of one who feels his position secure, but gradually that good nature gave way to a certain testiness of spirit which he could not entirely conceal. It became evident that he would have preferred other ways of spending the Sunday afternoon. The parks, for instance, or quiet walks through the cotton-woods by the river.

The crisis was precipitated one fine Sunday in September. Dave called early, and found Edith in a riding habit.
"Mother is indisposed," as they say in the society page," she explained. "In other words, she doesn't wish to be bothered. So I thought we would ride to-day."
"But there are only two horses," said Dave.

"Well?" queried the girl, and there was a note in her voice that sounded strange to him. Then, after a pause in which the color slowly rose to her cheeks, "There are only two of us."
"But Mr. Forsyth?"
"He is not here. He may not come. Will you saddle the horses and let us get away?"

It was evident to Dave that, for some reason, Edith wished to evade Forsyth this afternoon. A lover's quarrel, no doubt. That she had a preference for him, and was revealing it with the utmost frankness, never occurred to his sturdy, honest mind. One of the delights of his companionship with Edith had been that it was a real companionship. None of the limitations occasioned by any sex consciousness had narrowed the sphere of the frank friendship he left for her. She was to him almost as another man, yet in no sense masculine. It seemed rather that her femininity was of such purity that, like the atmosphere he breathed, it surrounded him, flooded him without exciting consciousness of its existence. Save for a certain tender delicacy which her womanhood inspired, he came and went with her as he might have done with a man chum of his own age. And when she preferred to ride without Forsyth it did not occur to Edith that she preferred to ride with him.

They were soon in the country, and Edith, leading, swung from the road to a bridge trail that followed the winding of the river. As her graceful figure drifted ahead it seemed more than ever reminiscent of Renee Hardy. What delights they had had on those foothill trails! What droppings into the great canyons! What adventures into the spruce forests! And how long ago it all seemed! That was before he started on the paper; before he had been in the grocery business, or in the coal business; back in the long, long past on the ranch in the days before his father died. Life—how it goes! And as it brought to her as many changes as to him? And had it, perhaps, brought to her one change it had not brought to him—a change in the anchor about which her heart's affection clung? This girl, riding ahead, suggestive in every curve and pose of Renee Hardy. . . . His eyes were burning with loneliness. He knew he was dull that day, and Edith was particularly charming and vivacious. She coaxed him into conversation a dozen times, but he answered absent-mindedly. At length she leapt from her horse and seated herself, facing the river, on a fallen log. Without looking back she indicated with her hand the space beside her, and Dave followed and sat down. For a time they watched the swift water in silence; blue-green where the current ran deeply; tinged with thing like that, and, behold, next season they bear. Sounds silly, but they say it's a fact. I guess it's natural law. Well—" She paused again, and when she spoke it was in a lower, more confidential note.

"I shouldn't tell you this, Dave. I shouldn't know it myself. But before that things hadn't been, well, just as good as they might in our home. . . . They've been different since."

The shock of her words brought him upright. To him it seemed that Mr. and Mrs. Duncan were the ideal father and mother. It was impossible to associate them with a home where things "hadn't been just as good as they might." But her half confession left no room for remark.

"Mother told me," she went on, after a long silence, and without looking at him. "A few years ago, if some one had only told me when I was your age," she said.

"Why do you tell me this?" he suddenly demanded.
"Did you ever feel that you just had to tell someone?"

It was his turn to pause. "Yes," he confessed at length.
"Then tell me."

So he lay down through the tragedy of his youth, and the lonely, rudderless course of his boyhood. She followed sympathetically to the day when Dr. Hardy and his daughter Irene became guests at the Elden ranch. And then her interest manifested something deeper than sympathy. But he had become engrossed in his narrative. . . . The September day had drawn to a close, and the dusk was thick about them, ere he reached the end. But before the end he stopped. Should he tell her all? Why not? She had opened her life to him. So he told her of that last evening with Irene, and the compact under the trees and the moon. Her hand had fallen into his as they talked, but here he felt it slowly withdrawn. But he was fired with the flame of love which had sprung up in the breath of his reminiscence. . . . And Edith was his friend and his chum.

"And you have been true?" she said, but her voice was distant and strained.
"Yes."
"And you are waiting for her?"
"Yes, I am waiting. . . . It must be so."
"It is cold," she said. "Let us to home."
(To be continued.)

Somewhere Sometime.

It is raining on the river and
The sky is low and gray;
It is raining in the timber,
It's a dismal sort of day.
But a fellow shouldn't holler,
Though the day is dark and drear;
For it's always raining somewhere,
And I happen to be here.

Somewhere else the sun is shining,
Somewhere else the world is glad,
Somewhere else they're having weather,
Of the sort we wish we had.
Sometime, maybe to-morrow,
For it's always shining somewhere—
Sun will shine and skies will clear;
It may happen to be here!

The Bird That Ceased Singing

What proud bird sings in this tall tree,
But halts to hear my foot approach.
His very silence a decree
Bidding me bence who dare encroach
On his demesne of melody?

How shall so gross a serf entreat
My lord in high green state aloof?
Could he but know his silence afoot
About me like a king's reproof
He would sing swift and twice as sweet!

—Louis Golding.

Anything Welcome.

The very small boy with the very large sun was standing in a country road.
"What are you bunting bub?" asked a passerby.
"I dunno," he replied frankly. "I ain't seen it yet."

The Phantom Fleet of the Arctic

Every winter deserted ice-locked ships are seen in the mists of the polar seas, drifting at the mercy of wind and current, their broken masts and crumpling rigging hung with ghost-like icicles, and their decks and cabins buried in drifts of snow. At least, so run the stories of Eskimo narrators. A Russian side-wheeler, the "Polotofski," built 70 years ago, is the latest addition to this "phantom fleet." She was discovered, toward evening, by a party of Eskimos hunting walrus. Plans were made to board her next morning, but during the night the changing wind swept the ship far north into the unexplored wastes.

The "Polotofski," according to the only accounts available, was caught in the ice at St. Michael, in December, 1915, and disappeared the following spring in the great storm off Cape Nome. It was thought that she had been ground to kindling and sunk. Vessels have been disappearing in this great unknown ever since the beginning of arctic navigation. In 1845, the "Erebus" and the "Terror," of the British navy, sailed with 129 souls on board to attempt the northwest passage. They were last seen by civilized men in Baffin Bay. More than a score of ships, with crews of nearly 2,000 men, at an expense of millions of dollars, vainly sought between 1847 and 1853, news of the missing squadrons. The fate of the vessels is shrouded in mystery.

Another mystery is that of the "President." She was due in Liverpool from New York in November, 1841. Severe weather had prevailed in the Atlantic and unusual quantities of ice were reported in low latitudes. For months the owners queried adjacent ports in a vain effort to get some news of her. Years later there was found in the logbook of a Portuguese sailing vessel an entry which stated that a large steamer, resembling the "President," with her machinery apparently disabled, had been sighted. This entry was dated a month after the disappearance of the "President."

Could these ships have drifted northward? Are they, too, part of that fleet of silent ships held hard and fast in the great ice pack, white with frost, and manned by frozen crews?

The little schooner, "Tedy Bear," missing eight months and believed lost, was found this June, frozen in, near the mouth of the Potem River, 12 miles south of Emma, a village on East Cape, Siberia.

Only miraculous luck saved the "Tedy Bear" from joining the phantom fleet, of which the "Polotofski" remains the sole materialization.

Woman's Interests

Our Vacation Cost Five Dollars.

"The farmers have been hit hard," Jim said, and added that funds were running low. "We'll have to give up the vacation, Mary—can't make it this year."

I looked up from my sewing, really concerned, for my plans were laid to visit a brother in the city. Of course, that meant new clothes, a suit for Jim and a dress or two for myself; besides, the baby needed a new outfit.

"But," I said, "we've worked so hard, Jim, and the anticipation of our little trip has been the one incentive to push me along these days."
I was in earnest, and decided we would take our vacation just the same. I said nothing, but gradually thought it all out. We had a flivver which was as faithful as ever. Why not drive away to some woodland haunt and camp for a week? We'd have no need for fine clothes there.

A few days later I referred to our coming vacation.
"Oh, Jim, how would you like to go on a fishing trip with me in the flivver? We could leave the chickens and cows with Grandpa a little while, couldn't we?"

We went on the fishing trip. I packed an old suit case with everything I needed, bought some overalls for Betty (she was two, and did look so cunning in them), and filled the back seat of the car with bedding and a few crude effects which made up a camper's outfit. There was a large box filled with provisions—we would have to eat, even though we remained at home, so I didn't count that expense. It was necessary that we take a tent, as there were no cottages to be had, so we succeeded in renting one from a neighbor. I had decided on Bridgeport, a secluded spot on a tiny river where fishing was good and the water not treacherous for a bad swimmer. (I wanted to improve.)

"We're off!" Jim called as we sped away. Such a glorious time we had! Fishing, swimming, or reading at our leisure, and how we did sleep, that deep, invigorating sleep. The week was short, but proved very successful. Fully refreshed and ready to get into the harness again, we returned. With new strength Jim went at his work. My mountains of work had diminished to mere ant-hills. The outing had given us a new lease on life.

And what did it cost? Just $5, which went for gasoline and renting the tent. I'm sure anyone can squeeze out a five-dollar bill during the year for a week's pleasure.—Mrs. R.G.W.

Help Your Skin.

My article to-day is written for the hard-to-keep. That will be you, Mrs. "Careless in the Sun," and you, Miss "Go Without Your Hat."
You will have to call the egg to the rescue of your burned and brown-spotted skin. Spread the yolk slightly beaten all over your face, and let it dry there. After twenty minutes wash it off with milk. The fats in the milk will help to restore some of the natural oils the sun has dried out of your skin. But water will do to wash away the egg yolk. Most city women have to use water for this purpose anyway.

Give yourself this egg treatment twice a week for a few times, and see if your complexion isn't beginning to have more of a fresh clear look and if those spots aren't disappearing into the smoothness of the new skin. But remember not to expect too much at first.

The peach will help too. A simple way to get a peach-complexion is to go to the peach orchard for assistance. Peach juice is the foundation for a wonderfully effective bleaching and beautifying cream. But who needs manufactured creams when peaches are in season? Time enough to turn to them when winter comes, or if you

Have the bride-to-be cut the cake, and serve vanilla ice cream with it. Plain glass dishes of white peppermints make attractive side dishes.

Before the party breaks up, play some suitable variations of amusing old-time games. What will you give an old bachelor? Can, for example, be played as, "What will you give a young couple?" Steamer basket; too—introduced as a good going-away game—is amusing, and so are woodland lovers and find the ring.

Baby Bargains.

Little Jane had long desired a baby sister, and one day she came home very excited.
"Oh, mother," she said, "come to the picture-palace with me at once! You can get babies there cheap! But you must hurry!"

"What are you talking about?" asked her mother.
"Why?—Jane was jumping up and down in her excitement—'there's a placard up there, which says, 'This week only. Children half-price!'" are in such a hurry that you just can't stop to take the time to compound your own natural but delightful complexion aids.

Do Unto Others.

Before applying peach juice choose a time when you are least likely to be disturbed. Make sure that you cleanse your face thoroughly before starting the treatment. You don't want any film of oil and dust to keep the peach from refining and whitening your skin.

Select a ripe peach—the riper the better. Cut it in slices, and rub these lightly over the face in a circular motion, always moving them upward and outward. Or else you may squeeze the juice out and pat it lightly on the skin.

And please, I beg of you, don't forget to give your neck a touch of the peach juice. How can a smooth white face be attractive when the chin marks the boundary and the throat below is brown-wrinkled like last year's leaves.

Here's a jotting for you to remember; the mature skin prefers nourishment to stimulation. Make a paste of ripe peaches and real cream. Apply this just as you would one of those expensive wrinkle creams, patting it on in an upward motion and being sure that plenty of it is patted under the eyes and around the corners of the mouth—those treacherous places where the first wrinkles always appear. Let this paste stay on just as long as possible, and then wash off with cool water. When your fingers touch your face, you will get a new sensation of satiny softness—a real peachbloom feeling. There are real powders warranted to give your complexion the desired peachbloom while you wait for the peach treatment to take effect.

Children.

Children are what the mothers are. No fondest father's fondest care Can fashion so the infant heart. As those creative beams that dart, With all their hopes and fears, upon The cradle of a sleeping son.

His startled eyes with wonder see A father near him on his knee, Who wishes so the while to trace The mother in his future face; But 'tis to her alone uprising His waking arms; to her those eyes Open with joy and not surprise.

A Fairy Shower for an Autumn Bride.

The underlying idea of a shower should be in harmony with the old belief in fairy—the "little people" who were credited with bringing all kinds of unexpected gifts and blessings. So if one of your friends is to be married soon, give her a fairy shower out of dainty little things.

A garden is the ideal place to hold the affair, but if the house is the only available place clear the room of ornaments and pictures, and decorate it with foliage, with flowers and with potted plants. No other decorations are necessary. There should be only an easy-chair, decked with greens and blossoms, for the guest of honor.

Wrap the presents in white and light green crepe paper, with a cluster of silver paper hearts attached by silver twine or green crepe-paper ribbons to every package.

To carry out the fairy idea, get two or three younger girls to help. Make each of them a fairy costume. Hide the fairies behind clusters of foliage and escort the guest of honor to her throne. Then let the fairies appear and present the gifts; if they can do it to the tune of soft, delicate music, playing behind the scenes, so much the better. After that, lead the company into the dining room and let the fairies serve them.

Have a spray of fresh flowers and greens at every place. A big white frosted angel cake with ribbon tinsel and alternate green and white crepe-paper ribbons radiating from it to the guests' places will make an attractive centerpiece.

Have the bride-to-be cut the cake, and serve vanilla ice cream with it. Plain glass dishes of white peppermints make attractive side dishes.

Before the party breaks up, play some suitable variations of amusing old-time games. What will you give an old bachelor? Can, for example, be played as, "What will you give a young couple?" God's Guest.

I think the gentle soul of him
Goes softly in some garden place,
With the old smile time may not dim
Upon his face.

He who was lover of the spring,
With love that never quite forgets,
Surely sees roses blossoming,
And violets.

Now that his day of toil is through,
I love to think he sits at ease,
With some old volume that he knew
Upon his knees.

Watching, perhaps, with quiet eyes,
The white clouds drifting argosy,
Or twilight opening flower-wise,
On land and sea.

He who so loved companionship,
I may not think walks quite alone,
Falling some friendly hand to slip
Within his own.

Those whom he loved aforeside, still
I doubt not, bear him company;
Yea, even laughter yet may thrill
Where he may be.

A thought, a fancy—who may tell?
Yet I who ever pray it so,
Feel through my tears that all is well;

And this I know—
That God is gentle to His guest,
And, therefore, may I gladly say,
"Surely the things he loved best
Are his to-day."

Prodigies of Memory.

The Gnomes conference was marked by an incident which may have no diplomatic or political significance, but which has greatly piqued the interest of some scientific observers as an extraordinary display of memory.

An English woman interpreter immediately rendered faultlessly, perfectly, literally all the Italian speeches and a French interpreter repeated long addresses exactly in cadence, tenor, sound and other qualities of the speaker. This was, of course, more than a curiosity, but rather a phenomenon, making possible deeper insights in the nature of memory.

The latest researches of such achievements have been communicated by Dr. Hege, of Christiania, to the "Klinische Wochenschrift." The record tells of a German mathematician who one minute after hearing 204 figures repeats them faultlessly.

Next comes a Norwegian woman philologist who memorized 204 figures in fifty-four minutes and 408 figures in 104 minutes. She also could repeat 350 words put together at random immediately after hearing them. In the whole series she omitted only 11.7 per cent, and reciting the same series after a year only 67.4 per cent.

Wireless Vision Possible, Says British Scientist.

That the development of the wireless will include ability to see objects miles away, is the prophecy of Prof. A. M. Low, the English scientist, who has done much research work in electricity.

"We shall be able in the future to see by wireless," he says; "to speak from London to a man on an ocean liner and see him at the same time. Such a vision, I am convinced by my experiments, is a practical proposition. It is entirely a matter of time and money for the necessary research."

Your Greatest Discovery.

Sir Humphrey Davies said that his greatest discovery was Michael Faraday. A poor boy, son of a blacksmith, applied to him for a chance to wash bottles in his laboratory.

Now, your greatest discovery, my friend, should be yourself. No one can make a greater discovery than that, to find one's self, this is the greatest human discovery.

The longer you gaze at an obstacle the bigger it becomes.

KEEPING BRITAIN'S CLOCKS CORRECT

WONDERS TO BE SEEN AT GREENWICH.

Every Civilized Country in the World Reckons Time from Famed Observatory.

Greenwich observatory was founded by Charles II. in 1675.

That monarch was agast when the fact was brought to his notice that there was no provision in England for the study of the heavenly bodies and no way of helping navigators to find their longitude at sea.

It was a comparatively simple matter to find latitude, but the early navigators had to rely on "dead reckoning" (calculated from the speed of the ship shown by the log) for their longitude. When we consider that a modern battleship can be as much as twenty miles out of its course by "dead reckoning," we get a better idea of the wonderful courage and adventurous spirit of the old sea-dogs.

Studying the Stars.

Without delay, Charles II. appointed Flamsteed, "the King's Astronomer," at a salary of £100 a year. He received a grant of £520 for a suitable building, but had to provide his own instruments. Flamsteed's original building is still standing, but it is now only one of the many buildings that comprise the Observatory.

The work to be done was defined in the warrant, and the programme has been adhered to strictly by Flamsteed and his successors. At first their chief work was to make such study of the heavenly bodies as would enable them to forecast accurately the positions of the stars and planets in the sky, and issue almanacs giving these positions for the use of mariners.

Greenwich observatory now makes time for the whole world, for every civilized country reckons its time from its distance east or west of Greenwich. If we know the longitude of a place we can by simple calculation find out what time it is there at any given hour of "Greenwich Mean Time." There is a difference of one hour for every fifteen degrees on the earth's surface.

The daily distribution of the correct time to the rest of Great Britain, now one of the Observatory's chief activities, was not, of course, possible before the invention of the electric telegraph in 1839.

In the "time room," is a sort of cupboard something like the inside of a large telephone switchboard, are wires connecting with the various stations to which the time signal is sent. There are also instruments which record the reception of the signals.

The celebrated time-ball on top of Flamsteed's Tower is wound up by a hand-winch a few minutes before 10 a.m. each day, and dropped electrically at 10 o'clock. On the same tower is the recording anemometer, which automatically registers each shift of the weather vane. The meteorologist examines the sheet for the day, and finds an exact record of the direction of the wind and the time of every change of direction.

The clock—the one that makes "Greenwich Mean Time"—is kept locked up, and is guarded as far as possible from risk of vibration, changes of temperature, and so on.

Magic Machines.

Most people have heard of the two most famous instruments at Greenwich Observatory—namely, the equatorial and the transit circle. Each of these has its own building. The equatorial is electrically clock-driven in the horizontal plane at the precise rate of the earth's rotation on its axis, so that a star is automatically kept in the field of view for as long as the astronomer wants to observe it.

The transit circle moves only in the vertical plane, so that a star passes quickly across the field of view and out of sight as the earth rotates. Across the object glass of the transit instrument are stretched very fine wires—really spider's web silk—and the exact moment at which the star under observation crosses a particular wire is recorded.

A Literary Accident.

Some members of a club were talking of a fellow member noted for his precision of speech and writing.

"But," said one, "he met with an accident the other day."

"An accident! Why, what do you mean?"

"The poor chap dropped into the vernacular, bumped against a hard one and split an infinitive."

Glue Container Is Shaped Like Fountain Pen.

Carrying glue in the vest pocket or handbag, and in a container no larger than a fountain pen, is possible with a novelty lately introduced. The barrel of the innovation is filled from the top, and in using, the contents are ejected, one drop at a time, by a slight pressure of the point on the article to be glued.

What a Pity!

"Aye, I've been in the hospital an' the doctors have taken awa ma appendix."

"These doctors 'll tak' onything, it's a peety ye didna have it in your wife's name."

TRIVIRATE SELECTED TO GUIDE DESTINIES OF IRISH FREE STATE

A despatch from Dublin, says: For the time being, at least, the Irish Free State Government is to be directed by a triumvirate. The three men upon whom falls the task of checking the homicidal madness of the Republic are William T. Cosgrave, Minister of Home Affairs; Richard Mulcahy, Minister of Defence, and George Gavan Duffy, member of Dail Eireann, and one of the signers of the treaty of London by which the Free State was established.

Of the three, observers of recent events in Ireland point to Cosgrave as the most able administrator and astute statesman; to Mulcahy as the military strategist; and to Duffy as the political wisecracker and man of experience.

All three, of course, were Republicans and ardent ones until the treaty of London split the Sinn Fein and signaled the present era of civil war. Cosgrave once was sentenced to death for the part he took in the rising of Easter Week, 1916. His sentence commuted, he spent three months in prison then, and in 1920 was again arrested in Dublin and imprisoned for a time. He is a lawyer, and for many years was a member of the corporation of the City of Dublin. In the first Republican Cabinet he was Minister of Local Government, and on the formation of the Free State Cabinet by Griffith was chosen Minister of Home Affairs.

George Gavan Duffy, also, is a lawyer. He has practiced in the English and Irish courts for 20 years and was chief of counsel to Sir Roger Casement, when the latter was tried and convicted of treason in England, during the war, later suffering the death penalty in the tower of London. He is a son of the late Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, a distinguished Dublin barrister. In the de Valera republican government he was regarded as a keen diplomat and successively represented the republic at Paris and Rome.

"Dashing Dick" Mulcahy is one of the idols of the Irish people. He is not yet 30 years old, but is regarded as the ablest military strategist in all of Ireland. It was in accordance with his plans that the guerrilla warfare against the Black and Tans was carried out and the Black and Tans know him for a soldier whose purposes they rarely were able to foil. He was studying medicine in the National University less than six years ago, when his country's plight appealed so strongly to his imagination that he gave up medicine and threw all his energies into the acquisition of military knowledge and experience.

IRREGULARS ADOPT ASSASSINATION PLAN

Valera Recovering From His Wounds in House Near Bandon.

Dublin, Aug. 27.—Irish irregulars seem to be adopting the assassination and private execution tactics used so widely against the British by the Sinn Fein. Last night three young men were killed in this way, and there were numerous ambushes such as that in which Michael Collins was killed. This morning one of the men was found dead in a ditch near Swords, six miles from Dublin. There were six bullet wounds in his body.

At about six o'clock in the evening John Cole and Alfred Colly, convalescing from wounds at a hospital in Drumcondra, were seized by a party of men in an automobile. They were taken out to the country, where numbers of children and women in the vicinity were ordered out of sight by the armed men in the car.

Cole and Colly struggled desperately as they were taken from the car, but were quickly overpowered and stood up against a gate leading to a field.

"What's it for?" one of them was heard to shout; a moment later the people who had been driven away heard several revolver shots and returned to find the two bodies lying by the gate. The automobile with the assassins was already driving rapidly away.

Bantry, only a few miles away was meanwhile kept under heavy fire from irregulars from early morning until afternoon. They used a number of machine guns in the attack, but were beaten off by the National guard.

One civilian was wounded and many houses damaged.

As a result of these numerous attacks, it is believed the Government will soon announce drastic punishments for those found in unauthorized possession of arms, or explosives. The measures will probably be similar to those adopted by the British.

Michael Collins' body was removed from the City Hall to-day and taken to the Cathedral. Thousands stood with bared heads in the streets as the cortege passed.

Cork, Aug. 27.—Eamonn de Valera is convalescing from wounds in a house near Bandon, according to what is considered authentic information. The measures will probably be similar to those adopted by the British.

Poverty and hardships have forced into prominence many a man who otherwise would have remained unknown.

"The Prince of Wales Durbar," the grand stand spectacle at the Canadian National Exhibition will have approximately 1,200 performers. The scenery will be 800 feet long.

RUSSO-JAPANESE CONFERENCE TO BE FOLLOWED BY ALL-ASIAN PARLEY

Moscow, Aug. 27.—The proposed Russo-Japanese conference in Peking is to be only preliminary to the calling of an All-Asian gathering in the near future, if the present Russian plans go through successfully.

There is a steadily growing feeling that nothing can be expected of Europe after the Geneva and The Hague failures, so Russia is turning to the East. Besides it is felt the country's internal situation is improving sufficiently to enable Russia to get along without the rest of Europe if she can get support in Asia.

So the Izvestia, official Soviet organ, reproduces prominently the appeal of an Angora paper. This Turkish appeal, headed "Depending On Russia" and ending with the question, "Who is going to call the desired Eastern conference?" says:

"A united economic front to put Europe on the right path would not only be in the interest of Asia, but of Europe herself. If this cannot be done peacefully, then we must use other methods, more effective and, to our mind, imperative."

Adolph Joffe, one of the Soviet leaders at Geneva, is now on his way to Peking for the meeting with the Japanese, and later with the Chinese. If he is successful, the East, under Russian guidance, will try what Europe failed to do.

MOTORLESS FLYING MACHINES
The picture shows one of the gliders or motorless flying machines about to land. Experiments have been carried on in the south of France in the hope that the danger of flying may be reduced.

Canada From Coast to Coast

Sydney, N.S.—Ninety-eight thousand tons of coal were shipped from Sydney piers last week (a new record), surpassing the boom days of the war. In addition, considerable bunker coal was loaded at Louisburg piers. It is expected that these figures will be surpassed by the present week.

Fredericton, N.B.—Exports from New Brunswick to the United States are practically double now what they were this time last year, largely as a result of the revival of the lumber trade with the New York and Boston markets. Of the total declared exports to the United States from here during the past quarter ending June of $751,245, about $650,000 was under the heading of "wood and manufactures of."

Montreal, Que.—In order to handle with despatch the increased flow of grain that is expected through Montreal in the near future, the Harbor Commissioners have arranged to work the port grain elevators night and day hereafter, and also to place in commission lake carriers to the waiting ocean vessels. Figures supplied by the Grain Clearance Board show that from the opening of navigation to the evening of August 9th, a total of 62,378,638 bushels were shipped, compared with 58,946,969 bushels for the same period last year.

Hamilton, Ont.—Fifteen hundred cars of grapes will be handled by the Niagara Grapes Growers' Association this year, almost double that of last year. The season has been one of the most successful for many years, with weather conditions ideal throughout.

Calgary, Alta.—A total of 2,600 returned soldiers have been settled on lands in Southern Alberta by the Calgary branch of the Soldier Settlement Board and an average of 25 soldier-farmers placed on lands still being maintained by the branch. Outstanding loans for the Calgary district alone amount to nearly $15,000,000.

Vancouver, B.C.—The Consolidated Whaling Corporation is again operating this year. It is stated that the mammals appear to be plentiful this season, and it is expected that an average catch will be made, probably about 1,000 whales.

Dawson Yukon Territory.—An address inscribed on a full-sized snow-white caribou skin, was presented to Baron Byng, Governor-General, by the citizens of the Yukon Territory. Gold nuggets were given His Excellency and members of the party as souvenirs of their visit farthest north.

The 1,600 cars the company will handle represent about 94 per cent. of the production of all the peninsula vineyards.

The Pas, Man.—The outlook is as bright as ever before at Elbow Lake, according to mining men who have recently returned from that locality. Recent discoveries included an important ore find on the Hanna-Olafsen holdings about two miles from the scene of operations of the Exploration Company, Limited. Gold showings have been revealed across a considerable width and indications point to the new find rivaling in importance others which have previously been made in the district.

Calgary, Alta.—A total of 2,600 returned soldiers have been settled on lands in Southern Alberta by the Calgary branch of the Soldier Settlement Board and an average of 25 soldier-farmers placed on lands still being maintained by the branch. Outstanding loans for the Calgary district alone amount to nearly $15,000,000.

Vancouver, B.C.—The Consolidated Whaling Corporation is again operating this year. It is stated that the mammals appear to be plentiful this season, and it is expected that an average catch will be made, probably about 1,000 whales.

Dawson Yukon Territory.—An address inscribed on a full-sized snow-white caribou skin, was presented to Baron Byng, Governor-General, by the citizens of the Yukon Territory. Gold nuggets were given His Excellency and members of the party as souvenirs of their visit farthest north.

Scheme for Exploration of British New Guinea

A despatch from London says:—A comprehensive scheme for the exploration of British New Guinea will be undertaken soon by the British Pacific Science Expedition. The plan is to go into the interior of the island, and to investigate the head hunting pygmies and strange animals such as the tree climbing kangaroo and the wild pigs that resemble miniature elephants.

The more serious side of the expedition will endeavor to determine the economic value of Guinea to the empire, to promote scientific knowledge, to find gold and diamonds reported there and to study the possibilities for agriculture.

Western Coal Miners Return to Work

A despatch from Calgary says:—Approximately 12,000 coal miners, members of District 18, United Mine Workers of America, will resume work in the coal mines of Alberta and British Columbia, following an agreement reached with the Western Canada Coal Operators' Association. The miners have been on strike since March 31, when the continent-wide suspension of mine workers started.

Birth Rates in Britain Lowest in Years

A despatch from London says:—The lowest marriage rate since 1912 and the lowest birth rate in many years, war time excepted, are two records revealed in the publication of vital statistics for England and Wales for the second quarter of the current year.

The natural increase in population, while below that in the corresponding periods the last two years, was nearly doubled the year just before the war. Males still hold the lead in both births and deaths by almost identical proportions. Of 200,550 births 102,569 were boys, and of 120,315 deaths 61,479 were males. Infant mortality was 88 to 1,000.

Plans were laid for a choir of 1,000 to choralize the Prince of Wales Durbar at the Canadian National Exhibition, but so great has been the application for membership it has been decided to increase the number to 1,500. Conductor H. A. Fricke, of the Mendelssohn Choir, will be the leader.

A week of grand opera is one of the new departures at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. A New York company with over 100 people will present a programme each evening of the closing week.

AMERICAN CONGRESS URGES PRESIDENT TO TAKE OVER MINES AND RAILWAYS

A despatch from Washington, says:—The industrial crisis, through failure of the negotiations to settle the railroad and anthracite strikes, found its way back to the Administration doorstep on Thursday and aroused an upheaval in the Senate. Collapse of the mediation efforts in both of the strikes precipitated turbulent debate, in which strong sentiment developed for Government seizure of the railroads and anthracite mines.

The discussion was the first real manifestation by Congress of an appreciation of the gravity of the situation, and may be a forerunner of action authorizing the President to assume control of railroads and hard coal mines, pending a settlement of the labor controversy. The President, as far as known, has not changed his policy outlined in his message to Congress, which demanded that the law be enforced in the strikes, but recommended no legislation relating to them. Thursday's Senate debate, it is believed in some quarters, might result in a change of Administration policy, should the strikes continue.

At the conclusion of the debate the Government ownership issue was put squarely up to Congress when Senator Walsh (Mass.), Democrat, formally introduced a resolution directing the President to take over the coal mines. With the exception of the anthracite situation, the worst phase of the coal strike is over, in the opinion of Government officials in intimate touch with fuel conditions throughout the country. The opinion is shared by Secretary Hoover, who said that "the situation has changed from concern over short coal production to that of a coal car supply." Three-quarters of the normal weekly bituminous coal demands, or 6,000,000 tons, will be mined this week, the Secretary of Commerce said, and he predicted that next week the production will amount to 7,000,000 tons.

In the anthracite field settlement of the strike is more remote than two months ago, but the attitude of Congress as disclosed in Thursday's debate may bring the disputing parties to a more reasonable frame of mind.

Danish Heir's Marriage Temporarily Postponed

A despatch from London, says:—Unable to find a castle whose rental would fit his pocketbook, the Crown Prince of Denmark has been forced to postpone his marriage to Princess Olga of Greece. There are many vacant castles in Denmark, but the rents are too high for the Crown Prince, who has only a small income.

The Dowager Empress Marie of Russia, who was instrumental in arranging the engagement, is said to be on the verge of the rescue by offering her castle, Amalienberg, in Copenhagen. When an apartment of this castle has been redecored, it is expected, the wedding will take place.

$28.44 for Hard Coal at Auction Sale

A despatch from Niagara Falls, Ont., says:—An interesting sidelight on the local coal situation was seen on Thursday afternoon at an auction sale, when two and a quarter tons of hard coal were sold for $64, the buyer to take it away. The bidding was started at $50.

No action will be taken by the municipality with regard to the fuel shortage. Local coal dealers report sufficient shipments of coal and coke at reasonable prices. Wood also is plentiful, and at last year's prices.

There Are Many Ways of Enjoying Music.

The enjoyment which music gives to people may be of different sorts. It may be purely physical, an effect produced by the rhythm and reflected in a desire to accompany that rhythm by bodily movements. The dance, both ancient and modern, is the most common form of this physical response to music. On the other hand, the enjoyment of music may be largely a result of the satisfying effect from the melody and the quality of the tones that make up that melody. It may be the result of certain associations either memories of imaginary pictures aroused by the music and its connection with some personal experience. Another and more consciously developed form of enjoyment from music is that which we receive from a study of the composition itself, the particular interpretation which the performer gives to the music, or his technic of execution.

The generic origin of those fundamental sources of musical enjoyment is in the order which we have named. Reaction to rhythm is an instinct which ripens early in the life of a child, and at the same time or soon afterwards there appears the recognition of the composition itself, the particular interpretation which the performer gives to the music, or his technic of execution.

There Are Many Ways of Enjoying Music.

During 1921 there was an enrolment of 29,309 students at private business colleges in Canada, according to a statement issued by the Bureau of Statistics. Of these 1,226 attended colleges located in Nova Scotia, 811 in New Brunswick, 5,147 in Quebec, 13,992 in Ontario, 3,472 in Manitoba, 521 in Saskatchewan, 2,216 in Alberta, and 1,923 in British Columbia. Of the total number of students 17,245 attended day classes and 10,290 night classes, while 1,774 were unspecified by class. The most popular subject was shorthand, which was taken by 15,059 students. Ten different systems of shorthand were reported as being taught during the year.

A number from the village attended the funeral of Duncan Rae, of Longwood on the 26th inst. Mr. Rae was well known here and his sudden death was a shock to his many friends. He had not been feeling well for some time. On Thursday morning he was preparing to go into London to see a doctor. After attending to some of the morning chores about the farm he was resting on a couch. Finally he got up and while walking across the floor he dropped. A doctor was called at once but he passed away in a few minutes. He was 46 years of age and one of Caradoc's most esteemed farmers.
A severe electrical storm passed over this section early Friday morning. Mrs. Simon's house, on the 4th concession, Caradoc, was struck by lightning but no serious damage was done.
A most enjoyable day was spent on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Lamb on the 25th inst., when the four daughters, three sons, nineteen grandchildren and one great grandchild gathered in honor of Mrs. Lambert's birthday. All the family were present except one grandson, Cyril Wright of London, who was unable to attend. Guests were present from Strathroy, Kerwood, Poplar Hill and Melbourne. At noon all sat down to a well prepared dinner, including a birthday cake, under the beautiful maple trees on the lawn. Rev. Dr. Brown, pastor of the Methodist church here, and Mrs. Brown were present, and after dinner Dr. Brown addressed the gathering. Mrs. Lambert and Mrs. Lambert celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on the 25th inst.
The officials of the Methodist church are preparing for their anniversary services, which will be held on Oct. 5th. Arrangements have been made for Rev. Mr. Hopper, of Delaware, to preach.

Melbourne, Aug. 29.—A social evening was held in the Methodist Sunday school room on Monday in honor of Mrs. Hattie Robinson and family, who left here this morning for their new home in London. Rev. Dr. Brown, pastor of the church, occupied the chair. A splendid program was given, consisting of solos by Miss Margaret Stevenson, of Melbourn, Mrs. Hinkle of Detroit and Miss Patterson of Kerwood, and piano duets by Mrs. A. Stevenson and daughter Margaret. Miss Mildred Richards gave a suitable address on behalf of the Sunday School and Epworth League and presented Miss Mildred Robinson with $5 as a remembrance from these organizations in which she was always an earnest and willing worker. Miss Hattie Hawthorne read an address on behalf of her friends, making mention of his splendid work during the four years he has been a student at the Western University and of the scholarship he has won each year. Mrs. Arthur Staples was called on for an address. After asking Mrs. Robinson to come to the platform she gave a splendid address on behalf of her many friends in this community, while Miss Sadie McRoberts presented her with a vase of $60. Each member of the family made suitable reply, and a social time was spent.
