LONDON ENGINEER INJURED LOCOMOTIVE BOILER BLEW UP

William Brown Has a Narrow Escape From Death at Pontiac, Mich. --- Fireman Was Killed --- The Engineer Is Popular Here.

Engineer William Brown, a former well-known engineer on the Grand Trunk in this city, and brother of Mr. R. Albert Brown, the well-known traveler, of London, was badly injured, and his fireman, Thomas Montgomery, was killed by the explosion of the boiler of his locomotive, near Pontiac,

Mr. Brown was thought to have been fatally injured, but he recovered consciousness this morning and will probably recover.

The details of the wreck are somewhat vague. Engineer Brown was in charge of a yard engine at Pontiac, and was assisting in helping a freight train over a stiff grade just west of Pontiac. Everything seemed to be working all right, when, without a moment's warning the boiler exploded. Engineer Brown was leaning out of the cab window at the time, and was thrown on the forward trucks of the engine.

Montgomery was working at the fire box when the accident happened, and was blown a considerable distance. His death was instantaneous.

ENGINEER MAKES A STATEMENT. Engineer Brown's home is in Detroit, but he is at present in the Pontiac hospital. When he regained consciousness this morning he made the following statement to a reporter, describing the accident:

"We were about half a mile beyond the 21-mile post and everything was in good working order. I was leaning out of the window, when there was a roar in my ears, and I caught a glance of Montgomery as he was hurled by me. My seat is just above the rear end of the boiler, and when it went Into the air I was thrown on the forward trucks. That's all I remember." Dr. Harvey S. Chapman, division surgeon of the Grand Trunk, under whose care Brown is, said that the only injuries sustained by Brown were a badly scalded right hand, and a severe blow on the chest. He will be taken to Detroit tonight. Mr. R. Albert Brown, of this city, was notified or the accident to his brother, and left this morning for Detroit. He is expected home this evening. It is understood here that Engineer Brown's injuries are not so serlous as at first repoted.

IS WELL KNOWN HERE.

Engineer Brown was well known among Grand Trunk employes of the city. He formerly worked here, but left about seven years ago for Detroit, where he worked first for the Wabash, and then for the Grand Trunk. He has the reputation of being a good engineer. He married Miss Jones, a daughter of Mr. Henry Jones, 497 Grey street, this city.

MRS. BROWN SPEAKS. Mrs. Brown was informed of the accident by telephone, and collapsed at the news so that she was unable to go to the side of her husband. She this morning to kiss her husband good-bye before he started out on his run at 5:30. By the time she had gotten the children ready for school the message came that threw the entire family into confusion. There are five pretty children-four boys and one girl-ranging from 1 to 11 years of age, and all are bewildered by the tragedy.

"William never left the house to go out on a trip that I didn't feel a sort of terror that something would happen," said Mrs. Brown. "Railroading is so dangerous I always looked forward to the time that he would leave it. But there is a fascination about it that seems to take hold of young men. He was a lawyer before he became an engineer, seven years ago. He worked first for the Wabash Railroad and then for the Grand Trunk. Montgomery, the man who was killed with him, fired for him a long time ago, but recently Mr. McNally has gone out with him."

Mrs. Brown's sister hastened to the hotel in Pontiac, where the injured man was carried, and is 'phoning bulletins to his waiting household.

THE THIRD EXPLOSION.

This is the third of a series of boiler explosions during the past year. Early last summer, a Wabash engine blew up at Simcoe, killing one

A couple of months ago, a Grand Trunk engine exploded killing Engineer Rutherford and Fireman Robertson, near Newbury, and this is the third. The accidents are causing a great deal of discussion among railroad

CANADA AND THE WEST INDIES. The question of the development of trade between Canada and the West which Sir Daniel Morris, imperial commissioner of agriculture, has been devoting considerable attention of late. During the past summer he paid Canada a visit, and his inquiries convinced him that there is a splendid opportunity for the Dominion and the colonies named to make trade arrangements that cannot but result in been conducting an educational cam-Georgetown, Demarara, he laid bare some interesting facts, naturally confining himself to pointing out the advantages to the island from better trade relations with Canada. First in Importance is the sugar trade. Of the into the Dominion in one year, the West Indies and British Guiana supplied 166,000 tons, which came in under the preferential tariff. This, with what came from the United 90 per cent of Canada's total supply, all from British sources. Sir Daniel is of the belief that in a few years Canada will be able to take all the tario is reassuring. It shows that as sugar the West Indies produce, so that notwithstanding that the United States markets are closed to them, the situation of the islanders is most

As it appears to Sir Daniel, the point is whether the people of the islands will be satisfied to let matters relations with the islands. When in this country Sir Daniel learned that Canada would not make the first ad- Potatoes, bu.20,907,893 15 020,299 "Yes, Miss, replied the point of a Little brothers" vance in this matter, having in mind Turnips, bu.48,205,605 57,060,151 made to Trinidad some years ago. The point which he desires to impress Corn, for forage on the people of the islands is that if the West Indies are satisfied that it is to their interest to seek reciprocal 000,000 bushels each in wheat and barrelations with the Dominion, all of ley, 25,000,000 bushels in oats, nearly them should join in such a move- 2,000,000 bushels in corn, and 593,000 ment. If Sir Daniel Morris' advice is taken posed towards the colonies than at ago present, and there is every reason to believe such advances would be favorably received. That Sir Daniel's proposal is popular is shown by the hearty expressions of approval heard on all sides, the prevailing opinion, however, being that what action is taken should come from all the governments interested, that a conference should be held to discuss the subject, and the government of Canada approached in a businesslike way.

That overtures from the British would be welcomed by the Dominion Government goes without saying. It is the policy of the party in power at Ottawa to cultivate reciprocal trade an object in view are certain to be received in a most cordial spirit. It would be an easy matter for the West Indies to cultivate in Canada a market not only for their sugar, but for their rice, limes, cocoanuts and bananas, while in return there are many manufactures which the islanders would, no doubt, be glad to take from

HANS WAGNER MAY NOT PLAY NEXT YEAR

Pittsburg, Dec. 11. - "Hans" Wagner, the baseball player, is said to be considering taking a long rest, Some of his friends declare he has made up his mind not to play next season. The reason is that the rheumatism in his right shoulder, which bothered him last season, continues to give him trouble. Wagner's decision has been made known to President Barney Dreyfuss and Capt. Fred Clarke, of the Pittsburg team. It is said both believe the crack shortstop will be in shape to start the season when
