It may be a cheap way to keep pigs, letting them pick a living around the neighborhood, but when a 150 lb. woman, arned with a broomstick, takes after a 40 lb. pig, it is apt to be rather hard on the shoat.

A sugar party was held in the woods adjacent to the mill lot, one night last week. Owing to the muddy state of the roads (it is supposed), not many (if any) ladies were present. In the absence of proper sugaring off utensils, a tin pail was used. A large bottle of oh-be-joyful was freely partaken of the camp would like to be invited to the next feast.

Attorney-General's zalary was rejected by 286 to 28.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt wanted to know whether the Attorney-General had the letter in which Pigott admitted his inability to stand cross-examination. If Mr. Soames had that letter and kept it from the knowledge of the Attorney-General the name of Mr. Soames ought to be struck off the rolls. The Attorney-General would doubties now tell the House when he first learned of Pigott's character and whether he was informed when Houston burned Pigott's correspondence.

In the course of the Attorney-General's reply the Chairman callel upon Xavier O'Brien to retire for interrupting. Mr. O'Brien denied that he op ned his mouth. The Chairman repeating the order to retire. Mr. Pinkerton corroborated Mr. O'Brien to retire for interrupting. Mr. O'Brien. T. P. O'Connor protested against the Chairman putting the lie to an honorable member without an inquiry. The Chairman accepted the disclaimer, adding that Mr. O'Brien could not deny having repeatedly interrupted loudly, and warning him not to repeat such conduct.

The Attorney-General continuing, declined absolutely to say whether he had advised the Government on any point. None hnew better than Sir William Vernon Harcourt that he could not answer such a question, but he had never vouched to the Gevernment for the authenticity of the letters. Harcourt cught to know that no counsel vouched for the truth of what he proposed to prove by evidence. Harcourt's argument that the counsel ought to satisfy himself of the accuracy of the statements that a witness would make was preposterous. He accused Harcourt of asking questions in this manner because he knew that a certain section of the press was only too glad to turn such questions into accusations. For instance, there was his question as to whether the Attorney-General suggested that Pigott should see Daly. He never heard of the visit till two nights ago. Regarding Pigott, the Attorney-General suggested that the letter should not be read till rigott went into the box? (Laught ing spoken,

Mr. Parnell said he should not have intervened, but that in the language of Attorney-Genera Webster, and in the shouts of his supporters, there had been some faint echo of Lord Salisbury's equivocal language in respect to the forged letters. If Lord Salisbury still choset to pin the relio of his faith to the letters the consequence would be upon his head. In the witness box he (Parnell) had testified under oath that he had neither signed, written, authorized nor known of any of the letters, and Attorney-General Webster had not ventured to put to him a single question. Was there any member who would venture to express any doubt now that the letters were for for Mr. Fowler, who, Mr. O'Connor said, expressed doubts; but Mr. Fowler did not respond, whereupon Mr. O'Connor exclaimed, "He is a coward!" but he subsequently withdrew this expression at the ing spoken, did not respond, whereupon Mr. O Connor exclaimed, "He is a oward!" but he subsequently withdrew this expression at the request of the chair.

Mr James expressed satisfaction at the manner in which Attorney-General Webster had answered the charges.

Mr. Morley asserted that Sir Charles Russell had authorized him—(Conservative cries of "Where is he?")—to state that he was entirely in accord with the Opposition in the action that they were taking. He maintained that Attorney-General Webster had failed to answer the charges.

Mr. Gladstone, Sir Charles Russell and Messrs. Lockwood and Asquith were absent. Messrs. Soames and Walter were in the gallery. Six of the Parnellite counsel on the commission and several Liberals abstained from any part in the division.

A scene of great disorder followed. The Irish members rose in their places and cheered, and there were cries of "Pigott!" "Pigott!" "Remember Mitchellstown." Secretary Balfour said he had suspended Captain Seagrave, but preferred not to dismiss him until documentary evidence of his guilt had been received.

Mr. Morley adduced a mass of details respecting witnesses for the Times with the view of disproving the Government's professions of neutrality. These details were mainly drawn from facts elicited by daily questioning in Parliament. Mr. Balfour professed that he had not followed the proceedings of the Parnell Commission with much interest. That was surprising. One would have expected that the Minister who fired the train would have expected that the Minister who fired the train would have expected that the Minister who fired the train would have expected that the Minister who fired the train would have expected that the Minister who fired the train would have expected that the Minister who fired the train would have expected that the Minister who fired the train would have course fresh disclosures were made daily. But it would come in good time.

Mr. Balfour, and continued Opposition would be irranional to propose to Mov. because fresh disclosures were made daily. But it would come in good time.

Mr. Balfour, amid continued Opposition laughter, described the charge that the Government were connected with the Times through Houston and Pigott as a scandalous and unfounded libel. The Opposition, he said, revelled in libel, while affecting to regard it as the most shocking of crimes. They had charged Houston with having acted in complicity with Pigott; but they had declined to examine Houston when invited to do so. He thought it would be more decorous for the gentlemen opposite to refrain from comments subjudice. (Renewed laughter.) For asking how it was that witnesses were intimidated, Bir William Vernon Harcourt said Mr. Balfour misapprehended Mr. Morley's case. The fact that I rish constables had been subpensed did not make it necessary for thearting remain for months in London, unless they were performing distinct services for the Times. The speaker raised a laugh by showing how the statements of Mr. Matthews and Mr. Balfour conflicted. Mr. Bradlaugh said that so fas' from being impartial, the Government withheld from the parsons accused matters material to their detence.

Mr. Healy stid he had tried to cross-examine Mr. Spames on his mode of getting, up evidence, but the Times' chief ally, Justice Smith—
The Chairman, interrupting, called upon Mr. Healy to withdraw his reference to Her Majesty's judge.

Mr. Healy contended that he did not retach the ladge, but to the commissioners.

Mr. Healy contended that he did not re-fer to the judge but to the commissioners, that the Commission Act simply called the commissioners by their names. The Chairman nevertheless maintained that Mr. Healy was out of order. Mr. Balfour, again rising to answer criticisms, taunted the Parnellites with allowing Figott to escape, after he had con-fessed forcery.

hilarious cries of, "At last in your proper place."

On the vote on Mr. Balfour's salary Mr. Morley severely criticized the Govern-ment's action in carrying on a "furtive clandestine battle behind its opponent's backs."

Mr. Bradlaugh moved that Mr. Balfour's salary be reduced by £500.

Mr. Bradlaugh's motion was rejected by 372 to 211.

A Disappointed Argenaut Who Says
Ensenada is a Delusion and a Snare.
A Chicago despatch says: Louis Levin, formerly of this city, but who has lived in San Diego, Cal., during the last year, resurned here to-day after a brief and decidedly unsatisfactory journey to the Lower California "mines."
Speaking of the supposed mines, he said;
"It is all a fake. But it has been so worked that one is duped before he knows it."

"What is the origin of the excitement?"
I asked.
"Many believe that the International Company is at the bottom of it all, but I don't think it is wholly responsible for it.

"I was in San Diego when the first news

"I was in San Diego when the first news of the 'discoveries' was brought to town. Three or four Mexican and Indian miners had been displaying some remarkable nuggets which they claimed to have found in Lower California. They at first positively refused to divulge the location, but by diplomatic handling and under promise of the strictest-scorecy they finally said it was in the Sants Clata ranges. I and three others left San Diego on March 3rd with a team and provisions. We travelled forfive days over the meanest, roughest country I ever saw. The distance from San Diego to Ensenada is about 146 miles. Whenever it was not mountainous the country was a desert, with nothing but cacti, Spanish bayonets and like vegetation. There was not even grass enough for a pony.

"When we reached the nines the camps were in a fearfully excited state. How bloode-ted was prevented is more than I can imagine. It was almost impossible to secure provisions. Everything was abnormally high, flour selling at $1 a pound and everything else in proportion. There was some gold, but not in paying quantities, and the quartz mines could not be developed for want of machinery. We stayed in camp ten days and then gave it up in disgust."

Mr. Levin added that Southern Califor.

Mr. Levin added that Southern Califormis, San Diego and the county adjoining the Northern Mexican boundary were now "as dead as a door nail." There is no commerce, he says, and no money, and people are coming away in swarms.

A WOMAN'S SUICIDE.

A Sight Which Chilled the Blood of Her Husband.

A Montreal despatch says: Sarah Hillis, wife of Robert Throsby, a respectable machinist residing on Deliale street, committed suicide early yesterday morning by cutting her throst with a large butcher knife. Throsby swoke about 5 o'clock and missed his wife from bed. As it was unusual for her to be up at such an early hour, he went in quest of her. On reaching the kitchen a horrible sight met his gaze. There lying upon the floor, near the stove, was his wife, cold in death, with a terrible gash across her throat. Beside her lay the weapon with which she committed the deed, a curious shaped butcher knife about two inobes wide, with a sharp blade, and a saw back. Throsby was greatly overcome by the sight, and it was some minutes before he recovered sufficiently to arcuse his sone. Dr. Armstrong was summoned, but his services were of no avail, as the woman had been dead probably two hours previous to her discovery. The coroner was notified and held an inquest in the morning, when it was ascertained from the evidence given that the deceased had of late had attacks of epilopsy, during which her mind became affected and she was not accountable for her actions. It was during one of these attacks that she ended her life. A verdict of suicide while in a state of mental aberration was rendered. The deceased was 40 years of age and the mother of several children. A Sight Which Chilled the Blood of Her

She sewed the money up in her petiticast, which she worre during the day time and at night placed under her pillow. During the absence of Norris from his home last night three masked men entered the wife's room, gagged her, stole the petiticast and the money, and made good their escape. A neighbor named Wm. Rich Placer Diggings Reported at the Headwaters of the Athabases.

An old-time trader from the Far North passed through Donald one day this week on his way to the coast. He told a friend here that the half-breeds of the Northwest had discovered rich placer diggings in creeks that form the headwaters of the Athabases River. The gold is reported as coarse and the bedrock shallow. The half-breeds are keeping the find very quiet, and the trader said it was difficult to obtain authentic information as to the precise location of the ground. The one thing that he had positive knowledge of was that the ground is rich and the gold coarse. The head-waters of the Athabases can easily be reached from Donald; in fact, Donald would be the British Columbia outfitting point for the new diggings. From Donald down the Columbia River to the Boat Encampment is sixty miles, good boating water; from the Boat Encampment ver the old Hudson's Bay Company portage to Committee Punch Bowl Lake is 40 miles, and that lake is the source of the Athabasea River. That would make the total distance from Donald but little over 100 miles. The trader did not expect to remain more than a week on the coast, then would return to his trading post in the Northwest, outfit a party and start for the diagnings. It has long been supposed that gold in paying quantities would be found in that country, and now the supposition is a certainty.—Donald Truth.

A Remarkable Funeral.

A correspondent writes: At Manitou, a small town in Southern Manitoba, about 100 miles from Winnipeg, there was a remarkable funeral last summer, 1888. Not far from here is an Indian settlement. One of the Indians died, and of course the body had to be buried. There seems to have been a mistake in the measurement of the body, for the coffin was made a little too short. Now how was the hard, stiff body to be put in? Well, the friends of the deceased took a short way of making the body at the coffin; they broke off the two legs between the knees and the ankles, and so the body was laid in its last bef. Now, there had been a mistake in the length of the coffin, but that did not prevent there being another in the length of the coffin, but that did not prevent there being another in the length of the grave, which was also made too short. Shovels, etc., were used to lengthen it, but though the ground was easily dug away, it seems they were impastient to hide the body, so, not waiting to enlarge the grave enough, the coffin was lowered and several of the tribe jumped on the rude box till it was far enough down to satisfy them. The grave was now filled and a flag tied to a pole, which was fastened to a fence post, placed to the place whence that descendant of the aborigines took his journey to the "happy hunting ground." The grave is just outside the cemeatory on the roadside. An Indian doctor performed the funeral ceremony. There was only one woman and that was the wife of the deceased. She seemed to be in great sorrow over the loss of her life companion. The Indians tried to comfort her by offerings of mence, and a large collection was made for her, after which they all returned home. At present —March, 1889—the flag still floats in the same place, keeping sentry over that lonely grave. Copperas, or green vitriol, is sulph A Remarkable Funeral. Epsom salts is sulphate of magnesia. ANTS FOR EATING, they Are Good as Pickles-Some as I or rotten log with thousands of hig black ants in it, says the Pittsburg Dispatch, he scoops the torpid insects from their winter domicile and fills his dinner pail with them. When he gets back to his camp at night he sets the pail in 8 cool place until his supper is ready, then brings it forth, and, while helping himself to pork and beams, helps himself also to ants. There is no accounting for tastes, and he esteems a handful of ants a very choice morsel. Ants are said by those who have tasted them to have a peculiarly agreeable, strongly acid flavor. The woodsmen, whose food consists largely of salted meat, baked beans and similar hearty vistuals, naturally have a oraving for something sour. "Ants are the very best of pickles," said an old "logger." who confessed to having devoured thousands of them. "They are cleanly insects, and there is no reason why they should not be esten, if one can get over a little squeamithness caused by the thought of taking such orawling things into his stomach. There is no thing repulsive shout them, and on what is man has once learned to est the creatures as pickles he prefers them to any other kind."

Ants have at various times and in different countries been quite artismaively used in medicing, and formic acid, which was first obtained by distilling the bedies of these insects, but is now artificially prepared, is well-known and useful chemical product. Herodotus tells us of ants that live in the deserts of India which are in the live in the deserts of India which are in the live in the deserts of India which are in the live in the deserts of India which are in the contract of India which are in the deserts of India which are in the deserts of India which are in the live in the deserts of India which are in the contract of the contract of India which are in the contract of Revolotts tens us of ans that live in the deserts of India which are in a lize "somewhat less than dogs, but larger than foxes." These creatures, in heaping up the earth after the manner of common ants, were a very efficient aid to the Indian gold hunters. The sand which they threw up being largely mixed with gold, the Indians were accustomed to go to the desert in the heat of the day, when the ants were under ground, load the sand into sacks, pile the sacks upon their oamels and hasten from the spot as rapidly as possible. The ants, according to the historian, were not only the swiftest of animals, but were gifted with such a sense of smell that they immediately became aware of the presence of men in their territory, and unless the Indians got away while the ants were assembly the same of the presence of men in their territory, and unless the Indians got away while the ants were assembly the same of the presence of men in their territory.

The Necessity of Keeping Up the Tempera A dooter says that March and April are A dooter says that March and April are distinctively pneumonia months, and pneumonia stalks in wherever the fire is permitted to get down to the minimum, whether in church or private house. The men, too, who throw off, their overcoats and run about the streets in the teeth of a north or northwest wind are playing a losing game with pneumonia. The man who just "runs across the street" out of his warm office without an overcoat is tempting pneumonis. Lord Bacon once said that an easterly wind is "neither good for man or beast." The same may be said of our March winds unless man and beast are properly protected. Of course the only of our March winds unless man and beast are properly protected. Of course the only way to meet the pneumonia months with any obance of vicery is to continue the operation of replenishing the coal bin. The choice is simply between health and a full coal bin, and the latter is not nearly so expensive as the daily visitations of a doc-tor loaded with costly prescriptions and professional advice.

Why the cat is Not figured by a Fall.

It is quite wonderful to see a cst jump from a height. It never seems to hurt itself, or to get giddy with the fall. It always lands on its feet, and these are so beautifully padded that they seldom or never get broken. Why does not the animal get a headsohe after its jump? Why does not the animals a man or a dog would if he performed a similar acrobatio feet? To answer this we must examine a cat's skull, when we shall see that it has a regular partition wall projecting from its sides, a good way inward, toward the centre, so as to prevent the brain from suffering from concession. This is indeed a beautiful contrivance, and shows an admirable internal structure, made in wonderful conformity with external form and noturnal habits.

All who are interested in the prosperity of their native town and its institutions must hail with pleasure the success of the publishing industry of Athens. Your lively paper is one of the best proofs that Athens can hold up, to demonstrate that she is wide-awake and bound to develop in every branch of art and literature. Long have her educational institutions which a lustre over Eastern Ontario. Within these two branches must be generated the steam that shall utilize her natural resources. Her unlimher natural resources. Her unlimited building capacity, her natural resources, her resorts, her energetic citizens, her well managed institutions, the present of the common-wealth. the purity of her surroundings, and the deep religious spirit which actuates so many of her children, are all living germs which must, in the very nature of things develop into a battle. of things, develop into a healthy and flourishing corporation. But, as the growing child requires great care, so each citizen should be ever on the alert to guard her growing interest.

I will be happy to have your favorcach citizen should be ever on the alert to guard her growing interests, that in every department a full, natural development may result. Deep and wide has the foundation been laid for the future Athens, and we, her off. spring either by birth or adoption, even at a distance look with pride upon her continued progress. You will pardon, I hope, Mr. Editor, this long preamble; the feelings which actuated it arose spontaneously, and patriotism is almost too strong an emotion to curb.
