Secured to Transport the Invading on, May 81.—The invasion of Cuba has begun, unless the orders of the War Department miscarry. At an early time yesterday the twoops that have gathered at the Gulf ports began to break camp and march aboard transports waiting to carry them to the enemy's territory. About twenty-five of these ships—the biggest and fastest that could be obtained, suitable for the purpose—had been gathered, ready to receive the troops. They will accommodate 30,000 men, for in a short voyage like that from one of the Gulf ports to Cuba it is possible with safety and comfort to carry a much larger number of men aboard ship than would be admissible in the case of a cruise to the Philippines

Is in at Santiago de Cuba.—How Schley Trapped Him.

Mole St. Nicholas, Hayti, May 31.—
The following despatch has been received here from the correspondent of the Associated Press with the American fleet off Santiago de Cuba.
Off Santiago de Cuba, May 30.—
Commodore Schley and the fiying squadron have the Spanish fleet bottled up in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba.
By the most clever manoeuvring the Commodore slowed the Spaniards teathink he had left in disgust. They took, the batt and ran into the harbor. Commodore Schley moved down yesterday and at 6 o'clock, going close teaths harbor, he saw the Cristobal Colon, the Maria Teresa and two torpedo boats. He believes the entire fleet is there.
Commodore Schley has acted upon his own information and judgment for the past six days. He sat on the after triangle of the Brooklyn in the morning until after the discovery of the fleet and hithen went to breakfast saying: "I have got them, and they will never get home."
The United States auxiliary cruiser St. Paul arrived here and was sent to the Mole St. Nicholas with despatches. She captured a coal ship, which was sent to the Mole St. Nicholas with despatches. She represent the same of the flying squadron are jubilant over the fact that the location of the Spanish fleet. It is believed there is not much coal at Santiago de Cuba.

The officers and men of the flying squadron are jubilant over the fact that the location of the Spanish fleet has finally been definitely established.

The temperature here is 110 degrees in the shade, and in the steel turrets the heat is actually beyond endurance.
The American ships here are the Brooklyn, Texas. Massachusetts, Iowa, Marblehead and the Vixen, an auxiliary torpedo gunboat.

DEWEY AT MANILA.

THE INVASIONOF CUBA

In all quiet at both places.

The Spanish garrison at Hotic numbers 100 men and the place has no defences. The foreigness there are safe.

Supplies are reaching Manila plentifully from the surrounding confustry. There is no panic at Manila.

The Spaniards are working upon the fortifications, but their guns are old and uscless and they are short of ammunition.

Rear-Admiral Dewey has informed the authorities at Manila that he will hold them responsible for the life of the captain of the Spanish gunbeat Callos, captured by the United States fleet. The Spaniards have been threatening to shoot him for surrendering, aithough confronted by the whole American fleet.

All the American ships are at Cavite, in Manila Bay. Salt provisions are plentiful, but fresh provisions are not obtainable. There is no stokness on the American fleet.

The Spanish gunboat El Cano, which captured the American barque Saranac, loaded with coal, and owned by William Simpson, ir., of New York, has left licile and gone to the Samoangan River.

It is asserted that the Spaniards released the Saranac owing to the fact that the steamer hoisted the British flag prior to her capture.

The Americans have captured the Spanish gunboat Leyte, which was attempting to run despatches into Ilcilo.

A steamer is reported to have landed 6,000 rifles at Cavite, for the use of the insurgents.

The squadron has disembarked 800 men. artillerymen and ongineers, and landed twenty thousand Mauser rifles, a large quantity of ammunition and four big guns, destined for the fortifications.

In spite of the strict silence maintained by the officers and crews, the general opinion was, when the Italians left, that the squadron would set out for San Juan de Porto Rico to land arms and ammunition there. For several days the rain had been falling in torrents and many cases of yellow fever had broken out among the Spanish troops.

Santiage de Oube.

Key West, May 81.—The British steamer Restormel was brought in here yesterday under her own steam, manned by a prize crew of American seamen. The Restormel was captured by the St. Paul, under the guns of Morro Castle, at Santiago de Cuba. She was loaded with 3,400 tons of the best Welsh coal, evidently intended for Admiral Cervera. Not a line was found in the ship's papers valeties to the ship's destination or relative to the ship's destination or owners of her cargo. When brought into port here the Restormel was leaking badly.

The British steamer Restormel was built at New Castle in 1882. She has a gross tonnage of 3,000, is 386 feet long, has 36 feet 3 inch beam and is 35 feet 7 inches deep. She is owned by the Restormel Steamship Company, Limited (J. Corry & Sons) of Cardiff.

Spanish Cruiser Escaped. Key West, May 81.—The unknown steamer, supposed to be a Spanish auxiliary cruiser, sighted by the Wilmington and Bancroft about 16 miles off Key West early on Thursday morning, was not captured. The Bancroft gave up the Rocseveit's Rough Biders.

San Antonio, Texas, May 81.—Rooseveit's regiment of rough riders left for Tampa last evening, and 100 cars were required to transport them. The officers expect to reach Tampa early Wednesday morning. All the soldiers are in good health and cager to get to the front. All surplus baggage has been discarded, and the soldiers left here in light marching order and will be ready to embark for Cuba immediately upon arrival at Tampa. The regiment numbers 1,065 men and 1,358 horses and mules.

There—A Most Impressive Scene.

Londen, May 80.—In Westminster Abbey, in the northern transept, where England's greatest dead rest, the body of the late William Rwars Gladstone was entombed on Saturday, with the oeremonies of the nation he had served and of the church he had loved. His grave is beside that of his life-long adversary. Disraeli (Lord Beacensfield), whose effigy looks down upon it decked with the regalia which Gladstone had refused. But two future kings of Great Britain walked beside the great commoner's coffin, and all the nobility and learning of the rease surrounded is, though the wish of the deceased had been

"At 1.55 a.m. on Saturday the troops formed for attack, the cavalry under Genural Oarlife being in front and the infantry, under Colonel Borra, constituting the second line. They were almost in the town before a sentry gave the warning. The cavalry charge practically decided the capture; and the infantry, following at double quick, looted the place of everything edible, which was sent to General Gomez, as well as 304 Mauser rifles and 30,000 rounds of ammunition, under an escort of 50 cavalry and 100 Infantry.
"The loss of the Cubans was four killed and three wounded. The Spaniards loss 38 killed and 68 wounded. The Cuban troops had eaten nothing but 'juita' for weeks and had no bread or coffee. Consequently they are reveiling in the canned beef, sardines, coffee and other edibles of the capture.

The Undesirable Fix the Spanish Admiral Is in at Santiage de Cuba-How Schley Trapped Him.

Mole St. Nicholas, Hayti, May 31.— The following despatch has been received here from the correspondent of the Associated Press with the American fleet off Santiage de Cuba.

Off Santiage de Cuba:

Off Santiage de Cuba, May 30.— Commodore Schley and the flying squadron have the Spanish fleet bottled, up in the harbor of Santiage de Cuba. By the most clever manoeuvring the Commodore allowed the Spaniards to think he had left in disgust. They took the bait and ran into the harbor. Commodore Schley moved down yesterday and at 6 o'clock, going close to the harbor, he saw the Cristobal Colon, The Maria Teresa and two torpedo boats. He believes the entire fleet is there.

Commodore Schley has acted upon his own information and judgment for the past six days. He sat on the after triangle of the Brocklyn in the morning until after the discovery of the fleet and his then went to breakfast saying: "I have got them, and they will never get home." The United States auxiliary cruiser St. Paul arrived here and was sent to the Mole St. Nicholas with despatches. She captured a coal ship, which was sent to the Mole St. Nicholas with despatches. She captured a coal ship, which was sent to the Juniah fleet. It is believed there is not much coal at Santiage of a prize crew. The coal was undoubtedly intended for the Spanish fleet. It is believed there is not much coal at Santiage of Cuba.

The temperature here is 110 degrees in the shade, and in the steel turrets the heat is actually beyond endurance.

The American ships here are the Brooklyn, Texas, Massachusetts, Iowa, Marblehead and the Vixen, an auxiliary torpedo gunboat. ALL READY FOR BUSINESS!

A Slender Difference,
New York, May 31.—A despatch to the World from Kingston, Jamaica, says:

coming of that fleet. The cable is

The Spanish garrison at Hollo numbers 100 men and the place has no defences. The foreigness there are safe.

Rear-Admiral Dewey has informed the authorities at Manila that he will hold them responsible for the life of the captain of the Spaniah gunbeat Calloa, captured by the United States fleet. The Spaniards have been threatening to shoot him for surrendering, atthough confronted by the whole American fleet.

All the American ships are at Cavite, in Manila Bay. Salt provisions are plentiful, but fresh provisions are not obtainable. There is no stokness on the American fleet.

that they are neutral and will awaits ovents.

The Spanish gunboat El Cano, which captured the American barque Sarauac, loaded with coal, and owned by William Simpson, ir., of New York, has left Hollo and gone to the Samoangan River.

It is asserted that the Spaniards released the Sarauac owing to the fact that the steamer hoisted the British flag prior to her capture.

The Americans have captured the Spanish gunboat Leyte, which was attempting to run despatches into Hollo. A steamer is reported to have landed 0,000 rifles at Cavite, for the use of the insurgents.

The Spaniards have offered $98,000 for the head of Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader.

In spite of the strict silence maintained by the officers and crews, the general opinion was, when the Italians left, that the squadron would set out for San Juan de Porto Rico to land arms and ammunition there. For several days the rain had been falling in torrents and many cases of yellow fever had broken out among the Spanish troops.

Key West, May 31.—The British steamer Restormel was brought in here yesterday under her own steam, manned by a prize crew of American seamen. The Restormel was captured by the St. Paul, under the guns of Morro Castle, at Santiago de Cuba. She was loaded with 9,400 tons of the best Welsh coal, evidently intended for Admiral Cervera. Not a line was found in the ship's papers relative to the ship's destination or relative to the ship's destination or owners of her cargo. When brought into port here the Restormel was leaking badly.

The British steamer Restormel was built at New Castle in 1883. She has a gross tonnage of 9,020, is 286 feet long, has 86 feet 8 inch beam and is 23 feet inches deep. She is owned by the Restormel Steamship Company, Limited (J. Corry & Sons) of Cardiff.

Cld Abbey—The Great of the Nation
There—A Most Impressive Scene.
Londen, May 30.—In Westminster Abbey, in the northern transpot, where England's greatest dead rest, the body of the late William Ewars Gladstone was entombed on Saturday, with the oeremonies of the nation he had served and of the church he had loved. His grave is beside that of his life-long adversary, Disrael (Lord Beaconsfield), whose effigy looks (down upon it decked with the regalia which Gladstone had refused. But two future kings of Great Britain walked beside the great commoner's coffin, and all the nobility and learning of the reads surrounded it, though the wish of the deceased had been for simplicity.

An Imposing Spectacle.

This efficial funeral, the first since that of Lord Palmerston, was rendered an imposing spectacle by the magnificence of the building in which it was solemnised. The coffin roated on an elevated beneath a pall of white and gold, embroidered with the text, "Requisecut is pace." Bix tall candles burned beside it, and on either side stood the supporters of the pall. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York were at the head of the coffin, and ranging behind them were the Marquis of Salisbury, the Earl of Gembroidered, the Liberal leader in the House of Lords; Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Govfinnent leader in the House of Commons; Sir William Vernen Harcuré, the Liberal leader in the House of Commons; the Duke of Rutland, Lord Rosebery and Mr. Gladstone's two oldtime friends, Baron Rendel and Mr.

"God Give Ye Rest, Qld Man!"

"Ged Give Ye Reet, Qld Man!"

The only sound that broke the silence white the cortege passed was a broken vites, which shouted: "God give ye rest, edd man!"

In the meanwhile the telling of the Abbey bell had notified the waiting assemblage within the edifice that the proposition was approaching.

The weird, dismal strains of a quartete of trombones playing Beethoven's funeral hymn in a recess high above the heads of the congregation swept through all the recesses of the Abbey. When these had finally died away, the great organ teek up Schubert's funeral march, booming sonorously, and then changed to Beetheven's funeral march, with a clash of cymbals in the erchestral accompaniment. A choir of 100 male singers, which had awaited the coffin at the entrance of the Abbey, preceded it along the nave, chanting, "I am' the Resurrection and the Life."

Mrs. Gladstone and Family.

Mrs. Gladstone, supported on the arms of her sons, Herbert and Stephen, and other members of the family were grouped about the grave. The dean read the appointed sentence committing the body to the earth, and the Archbishop of Canterbury pronounced the benediction.

Mrs. Gladstone stood bravely, with great composure, throughout the service. Her face was lifted upward and her lips were moving. She alse kept standing during the only efficial feature of the service, "The proclamation by Garter of the style of the deceased," as the efficial programme had it. The Garter enumerated the "various offices which Mr. Gladstone had held in his lifetime, beginning with "some time Privy Counciller" and ending "envey extra-erdinary to the Ionian Islands."

The organ then played the "Dead March" in Saul.

Finally, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Yerk and other pall-bearers shook hands with Mrs. Gladstone, the mourners defiled past the grave, taking a last view of the coffin, and, when they had been escerted down the nave to the entrance the people slewly departed.

A BIT OF SILVER.

"I want to ask you a question, Go mez."

"Well, my dear boy, what is it?" "Where did you get your money?" The question was an abrupt one—it was almost impertinent. But Gomez de Bonilla was an intimate friend of mine, a good fellow, and—we had dined. To say truth, we had not only dined, but wined, and it was over some excellent postprandials in the shape of further wine and fragrant oigars that I had asked the question. But I had long wished to do so, and I will tell you why.

Some two years before Gomes was poor as a church mouse. He was always a good fellow, but then, you know, a good fellow, but then, you arrow, there is a difference between good fellows rich and good fellows poor. And, to my shame be it spoken, I think I liked him better rich than poor. Well, as I said, he was almost destitute. He as I said, he was almost destruct. He had a profession, it is true—he was a journalist, but in Spain the gains of the fratornity of the pen are not large. What little he did earn went to the bad, for he was an inveterate gambler. But from a poverty stricken journalist he suddenly blossomed out into a man of wealth. He had the finest horses, he belonged to the mest fashman of wealth. He had the indees horses, he belonged to the most fash-ionable club, he had the most luxurious-ly fitted town house, he had purchased the country seat of a decayed grandes, he had the best cook in Madrid, and he ved in the best society, for, alas, even in Spain the golden key is beginning to open all portals. But do not think from what I say that Gomez was not a gentleman, for he came of an excellent family.

Well, as I said, we had just finished money?"

He looked at me thoughtfully, and "There are all sorts of stories," I re-plied; "some probable, some wildly impossible, some good humored, more ill natured. You will pardon my frank-ness if I tell you that I have heard some people call your wealth 'ill gotten gains,' whisper of retired highwayman, and the like. There are others who hink and the like. There are others who him darkly at counterfeiting. Among the lower classes there is a widespread belower classes there is a widespread be-lief that you have sold yourself to the devil. And I have even met intelligent people who hinted at supernatural means."

"Perhaps they were right," was his

"Listen, and you may perhaps tell me whether the means were supernatu-ral or no. I have never been able to decide. The reason that the source of my fortune has nover been discovered was because the only man who knew of it left the city the day after"— "The day after what?" I queried. "Well I will begin at the beginning. The story is a curious one and should be

He lit a fresh cigar and then began: "You knew me two years ago when I was poor. You also knew, as did all my friends, that I had a passion for my friends, that I had a passion for gaming. You would all of you chorus, when speaking of me: 'Poor Bonilla! He has the worst of vices—he is a desperate gambler.' You were all wrong. I did not play simply for love of it. I played and play simply for dove the first play simply for dove the first play sport. I was not a gambler. I was a speculator. I had fixed apon a certain sum which I considered a competence. I saw no way of acquiring it by my profession, so I devoted myself to the green cloth—how assiduters are the profession.

He had been suddenly called away from the city. I entered the gam-bing hell and seated myself at the rou-lette table. Fortune was against me. The few duros that belonged to me The few duros that belonged to he were soon gone. Something seemed to possess me that night. I was not myself. I did what I never should have draamed myself capable of doing—I staked my friend's money. I staked it, and I lost it all.

my brain seemed to spin round toe. My senses seemed to be leaving me. I felt as if life were no lenger dear to me. Penniless and dishonored, what was there left to live for?

"As these thoughts passed through my working brain the night were on. The bables were gradually deserted. Boon there was but one left lighted—the roulette table before which I sat, and at which one persevering gamester was trying his luck. Finally he, too, wearled, and I was left alone with the banker, who was the proprietor of the gambling hell."

"Oh, I remember," I interrupted; "Jose Herrara, who disappeared se suddenly a couple of years ago!"

"The same," replied Bonilla, fixing his eyes keenly upon me.

I do not know why, but I began to feel uncomfortable. However, he continued:

The doctor felt himself absurdly foolish and romantic, for in spite of the hustling porters and ahrieking trains he experienced in meeting her the persistent sensation of a twilight wood woven through with the blue of violets and stars. In appearance the doctor was anything but romantic; he was of the massive build, black haired and black bearded, robust mentally as well as physically; a splendid head, well as physically; a splendid head, that held the most intimate secrets of psychology; a dominant will that over-rode every obstacle. But in his student years at Guy's the disease stricker women and children of the borough had women and children of the borough had learned to love his almost reverential tenderness, while his colleagues of to-day respected, though they did not al-ways sympathize with, his overscrupu-

Fate, contrary to her reputation, had evidently planned this meeting with extreme kindness and forethought. She wished well to the young people and determined that the course of their true love should run smoothly. A journey love should run smoothly. A journey gave scope for many unobtrusive attentions and would doubtless afford happy epportunity for the all important question. If they reached Rotterdam without a pledging of vows, fate, at least, was not to blame.

"I thought," said Emily, as she settled herself among the cushions, "that I should have to travel alone. My maid was summoned into the country only this afternoon to see her mother, who is ill, and I do not join my brother till I reach The Hague."

"It is more than a happy chance," said the doctor gravely, "that I should happen to be crossing tonight. The conference at Amsterdam does not begin till the 16th, but I was anxious to visit some little Dutch hospitals and to do some little exploring among the dead cities of the Zuyder Zee."

"I am very glad you thus advanced your journey," said Emily. "It is so very lonely traveling by oneself. What is the subject of your conference this year?"

"It is to be a meeting of brain specialists," replied McLare. "We shall discuss chiefly the bearing of recent investigations on hypnotism, animal magnetism and kindred subjects. The world is quite unaware, I believe, how largely these actual if impalpable influence enter into its everyday life. But I must not bore you with my medical chatter. "I am dreadfully tired," said Emily.

"My poor maid went off in the greatest fluster, and I could not find where she had put any of my things. There are disadvantages in having a maid, you man."

Presently her eyes closed. Dr. Mc-Lare took out the programme of the medical centerence and, began glancing over it. He was himself a hypnotizer of no mean order. He possessed the power to a remarkable—may, he sometimes thought, to a dangeron—extent. It is dangerous to be able to influence men's thoughts and turn them in the direction you desire. The paper slipped from his hand. She lay, more like a flower than ever, in the yellow light. Her soft breath came regularly. She was saleep. Might he not send into her mind a dream of love, a dream all built up of violet color and violet odor, but with something of his own personality woven through its structure? Might he not reveal his nobler, better self to her by a whisper into her thoughts? The world only seas the trivial and poorer sides of men; the veil of the flesh not only hides, but distorts; she could never love him for his world self—the prosperous physician, the courted diner out. And yet she had seemed to care for him without the intervention of his suggestion. What if all this time he had been exercising unconscious hypnotic influence upon her? What if from the first exercising unconscious hypnotic influence upon her? What if from the first moment of his attraction toward her the power of his will had compelled her responsive glanges, would, on this supposition, have been purely automatic.

And then the cruel injury to her! It was horrible! There she lay asleep, like a flower. Had his overmastering will dared to chain any of her delicate, fiesting impulses—dared fo crush out the bloom and spontaneity of her personality? At least—at least, his interferance with her springs of feeling had been unwitting; he had not to face the agony of conscious guilt.

A sense of foreboding passed through Emily's sleep. She roused suddenly and surprised a face of blank misery staring at her from opposite. "What—what has happened?" she murmured, not fully awake. The startled pain of her expression confirmed his terrible theory. Even at this moment he had unconsciously conveyed to her mind a sense of hopeless loss. "I think I have been dreaming," she said as her surroundings regained familiarity, "uncomfortable dreams. It is better to be awake. You are looking very grave, Dr. McLare. Have you had bad dreams too?"

She grew quite white. What could have happened while she slept to make his manner so cold and distant? It was as if a wall of ice had suddenly risen between them. She knew instinctively that all was over.

No Dectors Needed In Turkey.

No Dectors Needed In Turkey.

It is not generally known that medical science has made no progress whatever in Turkey and that the poorer classes of that country have ne skill at all in the treatment of disease. The popular belief among these people is that disease is God's will and that to attempt to cure disease would be to interfere with the Divine judgment.

Missionaries have frequently found cases of people ill with smallpox entirely neglected in order that the Divine will should have its own way. The so called cures that are practiced show an equally unenlightened spirit.

When, for example, a baby is suffering from croup, the following prescription is considered infallible: A hea's egg is obtained, and seven round holes are made in the shell. The contents are poured into some water and lifted quickly over the basin, so that the water will stream into the basin. This operation is repeated $9 times. The contents of the basin may then be used for washing the little sufferer. The few doctors who have administered to the natives have been received as though they were gods. Whenever travelers go into the interior of Turkey they are appealed to as if every one of them were doctor. The average Turk or Armenian seems to believe that any man wearing a European hat is competent to treat all bedily allments.—Pearson's Weekly.

Aquatic Life.

There used always to be a big tub standing under the spout of the pump near the barn. It was rely half of a hogsheat that had been send in two so many years before that no one remembered to have seen the other half, and the part under the pump spout was green with mess and red with caking rust at the bands. The tub was kept nearly full of, water, which was constantly fresh, for the cattle came to the tub to drink and the water had necessarily to be replentished every day.

We boys used to look into the bluish depths of the imprisoned water and we often thought how much mere attractive it would look if there were only some fish in it. When the spring days came and the pretty little "punkin-seeds," er sun fish, began to dart among the water lily leaves, when the tadpoles wriggled their wee shadow-like bodies in the marsh pools, and desens of sorts of small fish fisshed like streaks of sunshine through the shallows of the river, then we steatishly put a family of very young perch in the tub under the spout.

"Well, well, well," exclaimed granditables when he noticed the fish the next day, "I never thought this spring was connected with the river, but it must be if we are pumping up fish," and the old gentleman chucked in a knowing way and looked at us ever his spectacles. "But you must keep the water fresh or the cattle won's drink it," he con-

On top of this we put a one-half-inch covering of very fine gravel and scattered some stones, as well as building a sort of mound of them in one corner.

The back part of the aquarium was te be reserved for the plants. We went to the river and selected some plants that were just beginning to send up shoot. Carefully digging them up and taking as much of their soil with them as we could we transplanted them to the muck bed back of the dividing board. We alse dug among the water-lily-roots in a neighboring pond until we found some new bulbs. These we transplanted in the aquarium. The plants all placed, we filled in the back of the aquarium with muck to a depth of seven inches at the back. Above the muck we put a layer of river sand one-half inch desp at the front and seven inches deep at the front and seven inches deep at the front and seven inches deep at the stand till the plants had become vigoreus. This required three weeks and the water was changed several times.

At last the aquarium with water to a depth of twelve inches and let it stand till the plants had become vigoreus. This required three weeks and the water was changed several times.

At last the aquarium was ready for the finny creatures that were destined to make is their home. We captured sunfish, catfish, perch, infants black bass, shiners and any other fish that we could find small enough to do well in the aquarium we got some water turties and even a little "leather back" not larger around than a half-dollar. We caught a band of water "skates," that whirled on the surface of the aquarium contentedly. We had some baby eels and one or twe small fregs. To keep the front from jumping out we had a screen of whe netting which fitted over the front portion of the aquartum, as you will notice it in the accompanying ploture. Last or all we got a number of sprigs of sea weed and anchored them in the sand, where their plume-like shapes added attractiveness to the aquartum.

Any boy or girl may make one of these aquartums and stock it with ever so many interesting things. It is very necessary to have plenty of plant life in order that the water may be kept fresh if you have your aquarium properly adjusted in this respect it will never be necessary for you to change the water. The fish should be small.

Bank by Their Own Guns - The Deady Broadside Fire.

That the big battleships and cruisers of the United States navy are likely to capits themselves by the discharge of their own guns is the claim put forward by F. T. Jane, a well-known British naval architect, in the Contemporary Review. His article is a vigorous defence of the British Admiratly against the attacks of "amateur naval critics" in England. The latter have been pointing out the superior armament and armor of foreign war ships, especially American, as compared with British ships of the same tonnage. The American havy he stigmatizes as "a collection of war ships designed solely to tickle the popular imagination." The American and other foreign ships, he declares, are overarmed and unseaworthy. Some of them would captize if they fixed a broadside.

The Rossia, the most heavily armed Russian cruiser, would split to pieces if she fired all her guns at once. Here are some of Mr. Jane's own ominous words:

"It might startle some of these gentlement to know that, huge as the Majestic is, neither she nor any of her sisters have yet fired all their guns in one simultaneous broadside. Te put the matter bluntly, it has not been considered quite wise te do so. The energy thus developed is sufficient to move the 15,000-ton irondad six feet sideways through the water.

"Now, if the 15,000-ton Majestic is thus almost evergunned, it needs no very vivid imagination to speculate as to what a broadside would mean to some of the where you killed the young Chevalier do C." This was the name of the count's last victim.

The following morning Larilliere found himself in the presence of a man no longer wearing a mask, who appeared to be some five and twenty years old and of a culm and dignified but singularly resolute bearing. His seconds were two private soldiers belonging to one of the regiments of the garrison. They brought weapons with them, but Larilliere's seconds took exception to them, at which, a searcely perceptible smile passed over the stranger's face.

The combat commenced, and at the first passes the count was convinced that he had to deal with as skillful antagonist. However, his courage did not fail, though at times he seemed to lose somewhat of his customary composure. Linges and parryings succeeded each other with rapidity on both sides. Larilliere had already tried his usually fatal finishing thrust more than once, but each time only to find his effort turned saide by his adversary's blade.

A momentary silence ensued. Then the stranger, who seemed to have profited by that slight interval to assure himself that the advantage lay decidedly with him, quietly remarked, "Immediately."

Rushing forward, he thrust the point of his sword through his adversary, who sprang backward, tottered and sank into the arms of his nearest second.

Putting his right hand on the wound, the count was just able to say:
"That, sir, is not a saher out. It is a thrust with the point. With the saher I feared no one." And in a few minutes he fall back dead.

Christian Motherhood.

It is an old proverb, but one full of truth, "They who rook the cradle rule the world." That is, the character of the training and instruction received in infancy is manifest in all after life and endeavor. The language of the nursery is echoed in all subsequent relationships. Its voice sounds from the pulpit, and from the public forum. Its principles guide conduct both in private and in public relations and obligations. The mother in the home sets the example which the child through all the after years of his life is striving to reproduce. The nature of man's after development depends mainly upon the direction given during the impressible day of childhood. Christian Motherhood.

The trouble began with my feet and the swelling extended to my arms, wrists and shoulders, and finally settled in my neck, I had such pain that I was ohliged to use a walking stick to ease me in moving about, and two and a half years ago the stick had to make way for a crutch. At this time I used to get up a little each day, but it was not long before I was denied this privilege, and the next six months I was perfectly helpless and bed-ridden. I could not even turn my head or put a cup of tea to 'my mouth. I got completely discouraged after being ineffectually treated by two physicians and trying the different medicinerecommended for my ailment. MAGISTRATES' COURT.

A full bench of magistrates, consisting of John Cawley, Edward Johnson, L. N. Phelps, and B. Loverin, were engaged all the afternoon of Saturday last in taking the evidence in an assault case which occurred at Soperton, a classic hamlet some eight miles from Athens, out on the Delta road. Robt. Chant complained that Wm. Neff, a neighbor, did on the 25th of May, in the township of Lansdowne, unlawfully assault, beat and bruise him by striking him several severe blows on the face, occasioning actual bodily harm.

The substance of complainant's evidence was to the effect that on the day in question, while out in his own field, he saw the def't coming up the lane, walking fast and looking mad. Some words passed between them about some colts that def't claimed had been trespassing on his place. The lie was some cults that def't claimed had been trespassing on his piace. The lie was exchanged freely between them and def't dared him to come over into the lane and he would trim him. Replied that it was his own land and he would go over, which he did and stopped near his own fence. Some very strong language was used on both sides, when the def't made for him and he grabbed up a stone and threatened to knock were appointed to let tender for the stone work and approaches for a bridge over Kinoaid creek, near Mr. John Alguire's.

The Clerk was instructed to make language was used on both sides, when the def't made for him and he grabbed up a stone and threatened to knock his brains out if he touched him. Def't then halted and he threw down the stone, thinking the trouble was over. Def't then grabbed him by the throat and struck him four times in the same place on the forehead, still keeping hold of his throat. He also struck complainant on the nose and on the hand which he put up to save his eyes Never struck or tried to strike the def't during the scuffle, but to strike the def't during the scuffle, but to what he had done. Def't held him by the throat until comp't's wife came, when he jumped back and said, "Come over to this side of the lane and I will give you some more of it." Def't then walked away. Have known Chant for a number of years and majority of people in the section say he is a fighter. Had reason to believe from Chant's previous reputation that he would carry out his threat. The only respect of fence. Would not have struck him if he had not picked up the stone and made the threat. Simply went to tells the had not picked up the stone. Positively swear did not dare to fighting until he picked up the stone. Positively swear did not dare to that time the stone was picked up and the last blow was struck. Have not been on good terms with or spoken to him going on two years.
