Money to Loan!

The subscriber has money in hand
for investment on first-class real estate security. Good farm properties in Horton and Cornwallis preferred.

Being naturally a genial, friendly
fellow, the thought of the four long,
lonely years to some sickened him.

He threw up his hands presently,
and put his head out to catch a glimpse
of the street into which the alley opened.

A young man on horseback passed at the moment. It was Jourdan Mitchener, one of his class. He rode a blooded mare, and was fully equipped in corugated coat and knickerbockers, orange-colored leggings, and gaiters.

"A regular swell!" thought Kershaw, laughing good-humoredly. He had noticed this Orestes of the college
before. "He has a good, strong face,
Well, luck's evenly divided in this world!" taking up his book with a sigh.

Half an hour later there was a knock at the door. David opened it, expecting to see his landlady, but there stood Mitchener, smiling, whip in hand.

"Mr. Kershaw?" lifting his hat.
"Ashamed not to have known you before, but there are such a lot of us fellows, you know. Thanks, yes," taking a chair. "My mother saw your name in a catalogue, and sent me to tell you that your mother and she were schoolmates and friends, 'Daisy' and
'Lily'—that sort of thing, I believe.
My mother married a city man, and for that reason, during the years that have passed, has lost sight of her old schoolmates who lived away from the city."

"And my mother married a farmer,
and has been poor all her life," interrupted David, morosely.

"Yes, yes. American life! Up today and down to-morrow."

Something in Mitchener's manner
made his wealth and David's poverty appear paltry accidents, to which they,
as men, were loftily superior. Before they had been together ten minutes,
David felt his morbid gloom disappear.

He began to talk naturally and laugh
heartily. "This Mitchener was a thorough good fellow," he wrote home that night. "Was not conscious, apparently, that he was worth a dollar."

The truth was that Jourdan fully appreciated the value of his father's great wealth, but he was a well-bred and courteous young fellow, and knew how to put a poor and awkward lad at ease.

Kershaw was invited to dinner at Mrs. Mitchener's on Sunday. He went quiet the next day after this dinner in a daze of delight, as if he had been passing through a golden mist, and had brought some of it still clinging to him. He hummed a tune, as he pored over his problems. He did not see the bare floor and hideous wallpaper, but the beautiful home in which he had been treated as an honored guest. The Persian carpets, the statuary, the table brilliant with flowers and silver, even the delicious flavors of the dishes lingered gratefully on his long-starved palate. He had met, too, women more charming and men more gentle-bred than he had ever known before.

What a world they lived in! He was even yet bewildered by his glimpse of it. Every luxury and delight waiting on the lifting of their hands. Libraries, galleries of art, operas, balls, voyages to Europe, to the Nile! This was life! He wanted more of it—more of it!

Mrs. Mitchener had asked him to come often; had offered to introduce him to her friends, "a gay young set," she said. He walked up and down the room, flushed and panting.
He had never dreamed of such a world! He must see more of it!
How stale and dull the Latin and mathematics seemed now!

But how to compass it! He could not go again without a dress-suit. He had seen one that day in a second-hand shop, very cheap. His blood grew hot at the idea of wearing some other man's cast-off clothes, but he was not educated to understand this music.

A very pretty, slight young lady, Mrs. Bellow, who was the chaperone of the party, tried politely to make him talk to her, but in vain. She turned to Jourdan at last with a shrug of her bare shoulders.

"Your friend," she whispered, "seems to be absorbed by his own thoughts.
He does not look as if he were enjoying himself. Who is he?"

"One of my mother's latest hobbies;
a student in the college from the country," he replied, in the same tone.

They turned to the stage. Kershaw saw their smiles and knew they were talking of him. His brain was on fire. Why had he come here? Was he not the equal of those dainty folk,
as well-bred, as virtuous, as clever as they? They dared to despise him because he was awkward and ill-dressed!

In his embarrassment and misery he thrust his hand into the breast pocket
of his coat, and drew out a little painted paper tablet, which he figured mechanically, scarcely noticing what it was until he saw Mrs. Bellow's eyes fixed on it with amazement and suspicion.

"No, can't sit down! I'm in a hurry. Brought a message from my mother. She would like to have you

Select Poetry.

A GIRL'S STORY.

Jenny and I were girls together,
Eyes in a little country town,
Headless of dark or sunny weather,
Headless of fortune's smile or frown.

Blithe as birds when the flowers are many,
We lived our life of frolicsome glee;
Never a secret had I from Jenny—
Never a secret had she from me.

Once we stood where the corn was glowing,
Flushed by the kiss of the setting sun;
We heard the cows in the barn-yard low-
ing.

And felt that the gladness day was done.

And through the fields came the figure stately—
The neighbors called him handsome Bob.

Jen's fair head just then bowed sedately,
And somehow my heart gave a repercu-
sion thro'.

Looks for me he had scarcely any—
Was ever passion like mine so sad?
For Robert had eyes for only Jenny,
And Jenny would hardly notice the lad.

But a stranger touched me on the shoulder,
And Jenny loved him I well could see;
And his whispered words but made me
sadder.

Alas, he had words for only me!

At our path would be fair with flowers
luscious—
The birds would sing and the skies
would shine—
If Will was only your lover, Jenny,
And handsome Bob was mine, not thine!

But since that night—the years are many
And almost a pair of old maids are we;
Still I've a secret I keep from Jenny,
And she has a secret she keeps from me!

Interesting Story.

THE PAWNED WATCH.

"Taking the line 3, 4 as the base,

"If I take 3, 4 as the base"—and again the book dropped on his knee.

"Four years of it! Four years of out-sold! You've taken too big a contract, Dave! You can't go through with it!" and he fell to star-gling gloomily at the bricks outside of the window.

David Kershaw was a country boy, used to a free, outdoor life, to a big house, with roaring fire, and to a large, gay family of young people. He had been working for years for the money to carry him through college, and had come up to begin his course three months ago.

He had not an acquaintance in the great city. He rented this attic room, bought his dinner for ten or fifteen cents at a cheap eating-house, and ate crackers and cheese for breakfast and supper. His clothes, made by a country tailor, were coarse and ill-fitting,
and he was painfully conscious of it,
and held himself haughtily aloof from his fellow-students. College lads are not apt to break through any shell of pride and silliness to find the good fellow beneath. They simply let David alone, with a careless indifference
more galling than dislike.

He dodged silently from the college to his bare room, and thence to the miserable eating-house day after day.

Being naturally a genial, friendly
fellow, the thought of the four long,
lonely years to some sickened him.

He threw up his hands presently,
and put his head out to catch a glimpse

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 8, 1886

CANADA AND AUSTRALIA.

Australia is to hold an International exhibition at Adelaide in June 1887. It will also partake of the nature of a royal jubilee, South Australia being fifty years old on that occasion.

PROHIBITION AND POLITICS.

The sentiments of the Dominion, and in fact the same can be said of the United States, is that the time is now rapidly approaching when the liquor question will take a far more active part in the politics of the country than it has done in the past.

HARD TIMES.

We hear the cry raised, and see by some portions of the press, that Nova Scotia is having a series of hard times factories shutting down, and business stagnation generally.

OUR FISHERIES.

Many of our readers are doubtless unaware of the efforts put forth by the Dominion government to stock our rivers and inland waters with fish, and the opposition met with by the officers in charge in many places while endeavoring to catch the parent fish for the purpose of procuring its spawn.

Table listing hatcheries and salmon counts for various locations like Sackville, Little Salmon, etc.

and black bass. From the Bedford Basin hatchery there were hatched last spring 660,000 which were distributed as follows:

OFFICER WILMOT IN CHARGE OF THE BEDFORD BASIN HATCHERY SAYS:

"It appears that the operations on this river (Musquodoboit) interfered somewhat with what the inhabitants are pleased to term their rights in catching the breeding salmon while on their spawning beds; and having failed to drive me off the river a vindictive opposition arose to thwart me in these operations in every way, and from some mysterious and unaccountable cause the whole number of parent salmon secured by me at that place were found dead and lying in the tanks provided for keeping them until they became ripe for spawning."

GOOD TEMPLARS TO REUNITE.

An International conference on the reunion of Good Templary the world round assembled in this city last Monday, and completed its work by signing a basis for reunion. The Independent Order of Good Templars, which originated in New York state in 1851, was extended to England in 1868 by Joseph Maline, who has since then been the head of the English membership.

WERE MADE AND DEBATED

by the conference which then unanimously agreed that no applicant for membership could be rejected by a lodge on account of color or race, nor could lodges deny initiation for such reason. It was also decided that no grand lodge could refuse to charter colored applicants. The supreme court should provide for all in each county or state to work under one grand lodge, excepting where owing to differences of language or race, the necessity for a junior grand lodge was clearly demonstrated.

denial transfer to the surviving grand lodge, and any persistent exclusion or refusal of a given race shall warrant a charge of conspiracy, which, if proved, shall necessitate the disciplining of the offending body.

ON ALL THE ABOVE BEING UNANIMOUSLY ASSENTED TO, AND EVIDENCE BEING GIVEN OF RECENT RULINGS AND PRACTICES IN HARMONY THEREWITH, THE CONFERENCE UNANIMOUSLY RESOLVED THAT "UNION IS POSSIBLE."

The methods whereby reunion could be effected were next dealt with, and the two sections produced their constitutions and ceremonial and private work, and these were considered, and it was unanimously agreed to arrange for their harmonization and combination. It was then unanimously resolved that the two supreme courts—the R. W. G. lodges—should each hold their next session at Saratoga, N. Y., on the fourth Tuesday of May, 1887, the two bodies to meet separately to complete unfinished business, and then to meet unitedly and become one body.

The rival grand lodges in America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australia are to be united within one year after the union of the supreme courts, and in the meantime

are to obtain between the two bodies by the mutual acceptance of clearance or transfer cards and mutual visitation between lodges, to facilitate which both supreme courts will at once issue identical passwords.

The conference unanimously resolved that the English grand lodge charter law suit, "Lowe vs. Maline," which began nine years ago, be immediately stayed and the expenses audited and reported.

In the concluding motto, which was moved by Dr Oronhyatoka of Canada and seconded by Mr Maline of England, the conference said: "We desire thankfully to acknowledge the goodness of God, who has guided us in all our deliberations, and made it possible to reach a complete and satisfactory understanding whereby all differences have been removed."

STRAWBERRY CULTURE.

WHEN AND HOW TO SET THE PLANTS. Set them out any time and any where most convenient rather than without them. A year without strawberries is a year lost in a certain sense. Those who shall have the pleasure of picking the berries in their own garden in their perfection of ripeness, and with all their freshness and fragrance upon them, will wonder how they ever lived without the luxury.

It is true plants will grow well in September, October, or as late as the first of November. I have succeeded in making plants grow set the first week in November, but my experience teaches that, with our soil here in Horton, the quickest and best returns will be obtained from plants set in August. Late planting might do in very light soil, but in clay the plants are apt to freeze out, and time is lost in either case; for autumn plants should be kept free from runners and not allowed to bear fruit until a year from the next June.

We see now that April will not give us fruit any sooner than August, and the autumn months are a year behind; August, therefore, is the month for the setting of our plants. Suppose in August there is a patch in the garden from which peas or early potatoes have been taken, the soil in good condition, rich and deep, can be dug thoroughly, and the plants set out at once in the cool of the evening, or just before a rain. Care should be taken that the plants are set out immediately after the ground has been dug, while it is still moist, and in dry weather watering must be done until the plants are well rooted. These plants, if properly protected in winter, will head in spring, and mulched after the blossoms appear, will yield a crop of large berries in June.

It is a characteristic of summer plants to produce very large fruit the first crop, and this is another mark in favor of August planting. Our inducements for setting out plants in August are, therefore—a good crop of very large fruit in nine or ten months, while early spring, or late autumn planting, will not give a good crop under about fourteen months. When a man is waiting for strawberries and cream, this matter of four or five months is a great consideration. Having decided "When" to set out our plants, let us now consider "How" to do it. There are two methods, the choice of which will depend upon the nature of the soil with which we have to deal. If we are the fortunate possessors of a deep, rich loam, set the plants out in rows, the first row one foot from the border of the patch, the others three feet apart, and the plants one foot apart in the row. Plants thus set in a rich soil and kept free from weeds and runners, will make such a vigorous growth as to almost touch each other, and the size and quantity of berries produced will surprise the grower. The advantage of the single row is that each plant can be hoed and worked just like a hill of potatoes. If the soil is light and sandy, the method of setting out the plants in beds is preferable. The beds should be eighteen inches wide with a space of eighteen inches between them for a walk. Two rows of plants may be set out in the bed a foot apart each way.

SIR JOHN AND THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

To the Editors of the Acadian

An editorial in the last number of the ACADIAN refers to the attitude of the Grit press in regard to the attendance of Sir John Macdonald at one of the meetings of the Methodist Conference, lately held in Toronto, and quotes from a Grit paper a parallel constructed with enormous wit between the presence of Sir John on the occasion alluded to, and that of "Satan among the sons of God," as depicted by the writer of the Book of Job. Grit newspapers and their scribes should be careful about their parallels; and if they had a better memory, they perhaps would be. It is not so very many years since the Hon. Joseph Howe, then an idol of the party though afterwards a shattered idol of the same faction and denounced by them as more diabolical than even the tormentor himself of the afflicted patriarch, was present at some Revival Meeting of the same Methodist body, held in Lunenburg county, and he was not only present, as was Sir John at Toronto, but he was deeply affected by the exercises, so much so that it was hoped by the good people that he was about to lead a new life and become a religious man. These hopes, however, were not realized, and the illustrious Liberal statesman, half converted, as it seemed, to Methodism, did not afterwards manifest any particular regard for religion, or even for the people who were instrumental of so much good to him. But this is not exactly the point. If Mr Howe did not commit any crime in attending the Methodist Revival Meetings and was not present at them from interested and unworthy motives, how is it that Sir John has gone so far astray in being present at a great public gathering of the leaders of the Methodist body, whose measures must necessarily be for good or evil to the Dominion in all its vast extent from Cape Breton in the East to Vancouver's Island in the West? Most people will believe that the aim of the Conference was patriotic and philanthropic in the highest degree. Sir John was therefore present at the gathering not merely with propriety, but as a matter of duty, and he should have felt and manifested a lively and deep interest in the deliberations of the powerful church represented on the occasion advertised to, as his attendance indicated; nor was his presence regarded as an intrusion, but was cordially welcomed by the ministers and people alike who composed the assembly. Even the Ontario Grits saw no impropriety or evil in Sir John's action, but merely wondered at it very generally with satisfaction and commendation; it was the penetration and patriotism of the Grit press of Nova Scotia that discovered the hypocrisy and duplicity of the great Liberal-Conservative chieftain, and reported and denounced it to the world.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT 8, 1886

Local and Provincial.

Fine warm days and beautiful moonlight nights have been the order this week.

A. F. & A. M.—The regular communication of St. George's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., will be held tonight.

PERSEVERANCE.—Rev. Dr. Archibald, of Kentville, is expected to preach in the Presbyterian church on Sunday next.

PAINT.—The building which we occupy has been newly painted during the week and is much improved in appearance.

PERSONAL.—Rev. W. G. Laine, of Canada, returned on Tuesday evening from Boston, where he has been attending the Good Templar Convention.

The students are coming back to College in large numbers and the "Hill" presents a lively appearance. The rooms in Chapman Hall are already taken up.

Prof. McGill of Acadia Villa Seminary lectures tonight (Thursday) at Exchange Hall, Grand Pre, on "Agricultural Education." We will publish a report next week.

THE JURY.—Comes to us from St. John, N. B., for exchange. It is a monthly journal, independent in politics and well filled with bright columns and caricatures of local nature. The price is only 35 cents per year. The Jury fills an important place in provincial journalism.

TEA-MEETINGS.—The ladies of the Lower Horton Presbyterian congregation desire to hold a Tea Meeting and Fancy Sale, at Borden's Hall, Grand Pre, on Wednesday next. We think we can safely assure a good time to all who partake thereof and would recommend all to attend who wish a good time.

The Ladies of "Maple Leaf" Division 8, of T. Greenway, intend holding a Tea Meeting in the Temperance Hall at that place next Monday evening. We hope for them a liberal patronage.

N. S. B. M. W. M. Society.—The Nova Scotia branch of the Methodist Women's Missionary Society opened at Halifax yesterday afternoon, in the school room in connection with Grafton St. church. Reports of auxiliaries, and a number of interesting papers were read. A large delegation from all parts of the province was present. Mrs. Frederic Pepper, of Horton Landing, and Mrs. George Johnson and Mrs. J. B. Bower of Grand Pre, were in attendance as delegates from the Lower Horton branch of the society. A public meeting was held in the evening and was addressed by Mrs. Lyall and others.

SUNDAY'S SERVICES.—Rev. Dr. McNair occupied the Baptist pulpit again last Sunday, morning and evening. In the evening he preached an excellent sermon on "Missions," taking for his text Rom. x. 15.

The Presbyterian pulpit was filled by Rev. Mr. Ross, of Prince William, N. B., brother of the pastor. His sermon, preached from Isaiah lxxv. 12, was filled with much thought and delivered in a pleasing manner.

On Sunday morning last the Rev. David Johnson, pastor of the Lower Horton Methodist church, preached a very eloquent discourse. He took for his subject the beautiful harvest just gathered. The promises of God never fail as regards seed-time and harvest.

FEDERAL.—At the Baptist church, Port Williams, Sep. 29th, a large number of guests and friends assembled to witness the marriage of Mr. Charles Campbell, of the firm Chase Campbell & Co., to Miss Emma Walton, Town Plot. The church was very neatly decorated for the occasion, which was not only highly creditable to the executors but is also a good evidence of the high degree of esteem in which they were held by the people of the place. Henry A. Walton, brother of the bride acted as right-hand man, and Miss Laura Borden, of Wolfville, filled the capacity of bride's maid. After the marriage ceremony was over, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell and a number of invited guests proceeded to the bride's father's where a rich repast was enjoyed. During the evening the young men of the place gave them a lively send-off for which they were well treated. The young men deserve praise for the gentlemanly manner in which they conducted themselves during the evening's amusements. After a very pleasant evening had been spent by all the happy couple proceeded to their own residence at Port Williams. We wish them every success. ONE PRESENT.

Local and Provincial.

The roof of the Grand Pre Station house has been newly shingled.

CUSTOMS SEIZURE.—The schr. Byron M., Dexter, which arrived on Tuesday morning, has been put under seizure for infringement of the Customs law.

"CHRISTY'S OLD ORGAN."—Those who desire to spend a pleasant evening and at the same time aid a good cause should attend "Christy's Old Organ" in the Baptist church this evening. The entertainment throughout promises to be first-class. Read the adv. in another column.

NO RACES.—The race between the yachts Mayflower and Galatesa off Marblehead, Mass., which has been postponed from day to day on account of inefficiency of wind is now declared off for this season.

IMPORTANT TO APPLE EXPORTERS.—To remove misapprehension with regard to the duty on apples imported into the United States (which was 10 per cent, ad valorem) Consul Young desires us to state for the information of fruit growers that under the tariff Act of March 3d, 1883, green and ripe fruits, such as are produced in these Provinces, are exempt from duty.—Windsor Tribune.

A GENEROUS OFFER.—The publishers of the American Agriculturist will forward a copy free to every person who has been a subscriber to the American Agriculturist but it not now one (provided they send their name on a postal card), to the end that they may see the great improvements that have been made in this periodical. The October number is a fine one and one which every farmer should see.

S. S. CONCERT.—A very interesting and satisfactory service took place in the Lower Horton Methodist church on Sunday evening last, the annual examination of the Sabbath school. The service commenced by prayer offered by the pastor, Rev. D. W. Johnson, after which the exercises consisted of recitations, singing, etc., by the children, which was admirably rendered, evincing great care on the part of the superintendent and his able staff of teachers, and studious attendance to the teaching received on the part of the children. This concert is yearly becoming more popular, which was shown by the large number who came to witness it and by those who live quite a distance away. A collection in aid of the funds of the school was taken at the close of the concert and quite a sum was received.
