Let them think so, it does nobody any harm, and it pleases them. A New Sketch of Father Damien.

(The Casket.)

Soon after Father Damien's death Brother Dutton discovered some sores on his legs. He finally believed that he was suffering from leprosy, and was happy in the thought that in a short time he would have the great privilege of die of the same disease as his master and join him in heaven. The doctor's examination took away this hope, and he remains at his post, free from the leprosy.

When Father Damien left his native country he bade his relatives and friends good-bye with the firm conviction that he would never meet them again on earth. When he consecrated himself to the cause of the lepers he did so with the expectation that he would sooner or later share the fate of his flock. It was his desire and hope that he might be spared for a long time for the benefit of the cause he had made his life work. He took every precaution to escape contagion by excluding the lepers from his house and by observing the utmost cleanliness of his person, and by inoculating the same as far as he could on the inhabitants of his leper villages.

With all care, however, he could not escape the unusually prolific source of contagion in performing his priestly functions, more especially in administering the sacrament of extreme unction. The manual labor of the roughest kind which he did for the lepers to make them more comfortable, could not fail to produce frequently cuts, punctures and abrasions, by which the danger of inoculation was greatly increased.

What he had feared occurred before he had expected it. After twelve years of ceaseless self-sacrificing toil among the lepers he discovered accidentally that he had himself become a victim of the terrible disease. In his sermons he always addressed his congregation. "We lepers." Now he could say so in truth. In taking a foot bath one evening in hot water he noticed that he had blistered one of his feet without having felt any pain. He knew only too well what this meant—the first symptom of the anesthetic form of leprosy. The physician who examined him later confirmed what had become to him already a conviction. In writing at this time to the bishop, he said: "From henceforth I am forbidden to come to Honolulu again, because I am attacked by leprosy. Its marks are seen on my left cheek and ear, and my eyebrows begin to fall. I shall soon be completely disfigured. I have no doubt whatever of the nature of my illness, but I am calm and resigned and very happy in the midst of my people. The good God knows what is best for my sanctification. I daily repeat from my heart, 'Thou wilt be done.'"

It was very fortunate, indeed, that Father Damien contracted the malarial instead of the tubercular form of the disease, and that the palmar side of fingers and hands remained clean, permitting him to perform his spiritual functions until a few days before his death, which occurred April 15, 1889.

Send the precious life of one of the greatest benefactors of the human race—the hero of charity!

Religious Maxims

SUNDAY.

"If we have faith, let us believe that there is a death, a judgment, an eternity; and let us endeavor, during the days that yet remain to us, to live only for God. All things upon earth have to leave us, or we have to leave them."
"Depart, O Christian soul! in peace, Unto thy Saviour's breast!
We would not keep thee from His arms,
We who have loved thee best."
"Depart, O Christian soul! in peace, Where welcoming angels stand!
Sing the watchword, waiting near For Death's supreme command."

MONDAY.

Death is certain. It is appointed unto man once to die. Of the contrary, the time and manner of our death are uncertain. Therefore Jesus Christ exhorts us: "Before thou thinkest of the Son of Man will come." (St. Luke xii. 40.)
How shall the struggling soul be loosened
From all earth's tender ties?
Yet the smile fade from the lips,
The love light from the eyes;
And the song changed: "Out of the depths
We lift our cry to Thee!
Giant her, O Lord, eternal rest,

In the course of a few days' temperance crusade in Scotland, Rev. Father Hays, who has done remarkable work for this cause in England and Ireland, administered the total abstinence pledge to close on three thousand persons.

In a letter to the French Catholic lawyers who have been holding a congress in Rome, the Holy Father warmly congratulates them upon their zeal in maintaining as generous champions of truth the rights of God and of the Church in private and public and especially in the courts of law.

Although no special "care" was mentioned in the case of any member of the recent English Parliament, Lourdes, several manifestations of Our Lady's favor were vouchsafed during the course of their stay. The most remarkable was that of a young woman, who for eight years had been deprived of speech, whose functions were completely restored and who conversed with two of the pilgrims.

The Municipal Council of Loriet, France, acting on an injunction of the Society of Free Thinkers, has decided to prohibit the taking of the Viaticum to the dying. The agencies, says "Le Bien Public," communicate this telegram with their customary impossibility, and the journals print it with indifference. It appears to be quite natural that a society without any authority should dictate its orders to the municipal councillors of a great town, and that it should impose its preference to its repugnance on men who are appointed to provide for the interests of all.

Writing of the recent murder of Catholic missionaries in New Pomerania, the New Zealand Tablet says: "The spirit of St. Francis Xavier, Columbanus, Boniface, and Aidan lives in the Church to this day. Our missionaries in China, in the Islands, in the Far North, display a zeal and self-sacrifice that recall the Ages of Faith. They leave behind them everything that the world values, and devote their lives to their work down to the latest day. When the young Catholic missionary crosses the parental threshold for the Far East or for the islands of the sea, he cuts himself off from home and friends almost as effectually as if by death itself. His life is one great act of self-immolation. He is, perhaps, the chief instrument chosen to spread the Kingdom of God upon the earth and hasten the day when all nations shall stand together at the foot of the Cross."

The Jew in New York is forging ahead at a rapid rate. We repeat what we have so often said before, namely, that we do not envy or begrudge success to the Jews. They are a hard-working, wide-awake, sober people, and deserve the success they gain. An interesting phase of their upward struggle is the way they are taking advantage of educational opportunities. The College of the City of New York has been nicknamed the Jewish College because of the great number of Jewish students enrolled there; and at Columbia University, we are reminded by a contemporary, "the drift of student indicates that ultimately the authorities may be Episcopalian and the students Jews." The public school system in New York and other cities is peculiarly favorable to the Jews, inasmuch as it is utterly non-Christian, although the overwhelming majority of the taxpayers who support it are Christians. No wonder the Jews are the most strenuous supporters of the non-Christian public school system. (Sacred Heart Review.)

The Rosary Magazine asks why so many Catholics continue to lend their support and patronage to secular magazines, and fail or utterly refuse to contribute one cent toward Catholic literature. "Is it," queries our esteemed contemporary, "because of ignorance of their duty? We think not—at least in most cases; for time and again our people have been instructed and advised by priests and prelates of their obligations to the Catholic press. In many instances, doubtless, this strange condition of affairs is due to thoughtlessness; and then there are Catholics not a few, we are sorry to say, who purchase and read, through preference, literature, so called, of the light and breezy kind. They little suspect that many of the books and magazines and papers so widely circulated and read today are literally steeped in moral poison, and replete with principles and theories, often brazenly expressed, but most commonly insinuated, that are destructive of purity and holiness and faith."

Perpetual light, with Thee!

TUESDAY.

Let us take care to live as pilgrims on this earth, remembering that we must speedily leave it.
Peace on the pallid, patient brow,
Where Death's sure seal is set;
But the soul sees, and the soul hears,
And never will forget.
It is not that she loved us less,
When life for her grew dim;
But they who see the Face of God
Must needs leave all for Him.

WEDNESDAY.

Certain men of modern times can not bear the dogma of eternal punishment; they consider it inhuman. Do they fancy they love humanity more, and that they have a dear perception of the just and the unjust, than St. Augustine, St. Thomas Aquinas, St. Francis of Assisi, St. Francis of Sales? It is not because they love humanity more; it is because they have a less lively sense of the horror of sin and of the justice of God!

—Frederic Ozanam.

But Thou art far beyond my knowledge, Lord,
Filling all space, all time;
The First, the Last, Ungoverned, and adored,
Thou mak'st Thy way sublime.

THURSDAY.

After all, if it be true that God has His own secret, as I believe, we may rest assured it is a secret of mercy.
—Ozanam.

The farther my admiring thoughts advance,
The farther dost Thou fly;
And naught I feel but mine own ignorance
And Thine immensity.
—From the Spanish.

FRIDAY.

No prayer is lost. There are so many earnest souls outside the Church! Surely every day brings them nearer to it.
Bring nearer, nearer, that glad day for me,
When all men shall be one, the whole world wide.
Then Thou of the long travail of Thy soul shalt see,
And shalt be satisfied!

SATURDAY.

About the Angels, I grow fonder of it every day. How wise of Holy Church to bring it before her children's minds, not once, but three times a day! They will be done! Behold the handmaid of the Lord! The Word is made flesh again. For, if we do His will constantly, we are truly His handmaid, and He may indeed be born again in each one of us. That is what I see most in Millet's picture of the Angelus, not the beauty, or the peace, but the perfect devotion, the submission to God's holy will.
—(Sacred Heart Review.)

Items of Interest.

"Everybody is afraid of lightning," says Church Progress. "From authenticated statistics, between seven and eight hundred deaths are attributed to this cause annually in the United States. It is thus made evident that the danger is not so great after all. The other kind, made in Kentucky and elsewhere, is a hundredfold more dangerous."

"His Grace, Archbishop Messmer, if the press despatches may be credited, is endeavoring to weed the disreputable Saturday night and Sunday morning dances out of existence," says the New World. "In the near future, Catholics in the Milwaukee archdiocese probably will be prohibited from attending such affairs. The order will astonish some societies which are in the habit of giving dances on Saturday nights and continuing them up to three, Sunday morning. In some sections of the South this custom is only too prevalent."

Writing of the recent massacre of Catholic missionaries in Australasia, the Ave Maria says: "Our distance from the scene of the massacre doubtless robs the tragedy of much of its vividness, and we are accordingly apt to think of it in the abstract, as something that is rather normal than otherwise—a mission life among savages. In very truth, these priests, Brothers and Sisters, when they proffered their services as missionaries among the New Britain natives, fully recognized the truth that martyrdom was a contingency for which they might well be prepared; and so their glorious fate, however unexpected at the time, can not have been considered by them an unmet dream of possibility. The Order of the Sacred Heart may be condoned with for the moment, but eventually is to be congratulated upon the glory which accrues to it through the supreme honor won by its martyred sons and daughters."

An Irish judge once had a case in which the accused man understood only Irish. An interpreter was accordingly sworn. The prisoner said something to the interpreter. "What does he say?" demanded his lordship. "Nothing, my lord," was the reply. "How dare you say that when we all heard him? Come, sir, what was it?" "My lord," said the interpreter, beginning to tremble, "it had nothing to do with the case." "If you don't answer I'll commit you, sir!" roared the judge. "Now, what did he say?" "Well, my lord, you'll excuse me, but he said, 'Who that old woman with the red bed curtain round her sitting up there?'" "And what did you say?" asked the judge looking a little uncomfortable. "I said, 'Whi-ht, you spalpeen! That's the old boy that's goin' to hang you.'"

Record of the Liberal Provincial Government.

As we intimated in our last issue the Provincial Legislature has been dissolved and a general election is called for the 7th, of December, just three weeks from to-day. It, therefore, behooves every elector interested in the welfare of our Province to seriously and carefully examine the record of the Liberal Government that administered our affairs for the past thirteen years.

The Conservatives were in power for twelve years, from 1879 to 1891, and during all that time, they collected only $82,192.82 in taxes. The savings to the people of this Province during these twelve years, in the remission of taxation, amounted to upwards of $360,000, at the rate taxes were collected by the Davies Government.

vatives is $76,688.84. The Public Accounts published in 1892, show at page 5, the total debt of the Province on Dec. 31, 1891, to have been $158,450.19; but the deficit for 1891, as shown in the same place, amounted to $30,439.20. This proves the statement made above to the effect that the debt of the Province when the Liberals came in in 1891, was only $128,429.31, for if you subtract the deficit of $30,439.20, for 1891, from the total indebtedness for that year, you will have $128,000, in round members.

We now come to the advent to power of the Liberals in 1891. They assumed office with a Provincial debt of $128,000, $76,000, of which was contracted by the Conservatives. In view of the saving of $360,000 to the people in exemption from taxation, all must admit that the Conservative administration of twelve years was most creditable to them and advantageous to the people.

Our Liberal friends started in to make revenue and expenditure meet, by creating a deficit of $37,000, the very first year they were in office, and have continued rolling up annual deficits from that year to the present time, the annual shortages running all the way from $12,000 to $119,000. The total deficits of our Liberal friends in the 12 years, 1892 to 1903 inclusive amounts $521,938.69, and the average for these years is $43,494.89.

But how did our Liberals friends fulfil their other promise of keeping the day of taxation at a distance? They kept it in this way: They commenced collecting taxes in 1894, and from that date until the present have gone on collecting, multiplying and increasing their taxation from year to year until they had collected, up to Dec. 31, 1903, the last year for which we have an account, the sum of $578,283.02, or an average of over $52,500 a year.

Let us now resume consideration of the Provincial debt and see how our friends have acquitted themselves in this matter. We have shown above that the Provincial debt, when the Liberals came into power in 1891, amounted to $128,000, of which only $76,688, was properly chargeable to the Conservatives. We have also shown that about $522,000 of deficits have been rolled up by the present Government. In addition to these there are other amounts outstanding all bringing the debt of the Province in 1903, up to more than $700,000. The debt statement up to Dec. 31, as pre-

Table with financial data: Loans outstanding 187,857.60, Balance due Banks 242,715.19, Total 430,572.79.

To this must be added interest on Loans Account Dec. 31, 1903, owing and unpaid as per statement tabled in the House during last session $4,581.92

We now come to the advent to power of the Liberals in 1891. They assumed office with a Provincial debt of $128,000, $76,000, of which was contracted by the Conservatives.

The measure of a debt is the amount of interest paid on it. Judging the Government's debt in this way, we shall find that the Provincial indebtedness with which we have charged them is well within the mark.

Interest on Prince of Wales College debentures, not included in above 1,225.00

Just think of nearly $35,000 paid in interest on our Provincial debt; more than the increase to our subsidy, of which we hear so much. As our debt increased the burden of interest necessarily increased in due proportion.

At the opening of the last session of the Legislature, the speech of the Lieutenant Governor was made to say that the revenues of the Province would be augmented by a portion of the Halifax Fishery Award and from increased subsidies to the Provinces.

Another question of which Mr. Peters made much during the last session of the Legislature was the matter of our representation in the House of Commons. He spoke about this at great length, and told of the dreams he had had concerning it. He and Mr. Williams then went to England to argue the case before the Imperial Privy Council in conjunction with Mr. Aylesworth; but Mr. Peters never opened his mouth before that high court. The case was given against him and all that remains to the people of this Province is to pay the bills of Mr. Peters, Mr. Williams and Mr. Aylesworth, which we may be sure will be no small amount.

The Government have not only proved false to the people in their financial management of the Province; they have not only sunk the Province almost irretrievably in debt and raised the burden of interest to $35,000; but they have proved recreant to all the duties and obligations devolving upon them. They have polluted the been remitted and offenders against the laws of the land have been allowed to go free in consideration of political support. They have dipped their hands deep into the Provincial treasury in violation of the statutes and have spent, and are spending, thousands of dollars on useless public works by days work, instead of by public tender and competition as the law requires.

How Our Liberal Friends Win Elections.

The Ontario Liberal machine, which accomplished its tour de force by engineering the trip of the Minnie M. at Saint Ste Marie, can henceforth take a back seat in favor of the Manitoba Liberal machine which has just carried out a scheme for stealing elections that for brazen and high-handed contempt, of the rights of the electors is unparalleled in the annals of contemporary history dealing with machine methods in this province.

The entirely unexpected result of the election in the West last week, resulting in the return of a large majority of Liberal candidates was inexplicable to the Conservative party, which had been led to expect judging from the pre-election sentiment of the people there, an entirely different verdict, and one in favor of Mr. Borden's policy of Government ownership.

"On whose authority were the names struck out?" asked the interviewer. LAW TO BE INVOKED. "We are taking steps to find out," replied Mr. Rogers. "When the facts were brought to our notice on election day, several of the returning officers were arrested in Winnipeg and taken to the common jail, where they were afterwards bailed out. In one instance where a deputy returning officer was arrested before his ballot box was locked, the voters' list used during the day was examined and it was found forty-two names had been marked off in red ink. Every name thus crossed was a known Conservative and ballots had been refused them when applied for.

"You can easily imagine the indignation of the electors thus antonomastically and illegally disfranchised. In some localities the indignant Conservative electors actually drove the few Liberals in the prairies for the night. The defeat of Mr. W. W. Coleman, in Selkirk, and of Mr. L. Reviere, in Provencher, is easily traceable to these tactics."

While in a fit of temporary insanity Mrs Thomas Corbal, Orford Avenue, Halifax, took the life of her six months' old child. Early Friday evening the body of the infant was found in a well one hundred yards from the house in which the Corbal family resides.

London, Nov. 14.—The governorship of Chelsea Hospital, rendered vacant by the death of Field Marshal Sir Henry Narman, is to be offered to Earl Roberts. Lord Roberts is now in South Africa, so it will be some little time before his decision is known. It is hoped it may be accepted by him, as no one is better fitted for this high post.

Apart from the honor, it carries with comfortable allowance and a splendid house, with some of the finest rooms in London. It will be remembered that the position was offered to Viscount Wolsley when he left the war office, but he declined it.

About twelve o'clock, noon on Saturday Mrs Campbell Atkinson, of Glace Bay, C. B., met her death from a rifle in the hands of her husband, who is a member of a recently formed Rifle Club, and who was making preparation to attend a preliminary practice. He had filled the chamber of his rifle and it was supposed that it was locked. His wife was in the room with him when the rifle discharged.

A bullet struck the unfortunate woman just above the thigh passing through her body and out the other side and into the wall of the room.

Word was received here on Monday of the death of A. H. Notman, assistant general passenger agent of the C. P. R. Mr. Notman was a sufferer from consumption, and two months ago left for Los Angeles, where he has a brother. His condition did not improve, and he died on the train returning to Toronto. A widow and five sons survive in Toronto. He was thirty-four years of age. The news of Mr. Notman's death will be read with great regret and some surprise by friends who number many in this city. They knew he was very sick, but it was not thought death was so near. For a number of years Mr. Notman was in charge of the passenger business of the C. P. R. on this division and proved a most capable and popular official, his record coming in promotion to a higher place in the company's service. Lately he had filled the responsible position of assistant general passenger agent, but a few days ago was compelled by ill-health to leave work for what was intended to be several months rest and recuperation. C. B. Foster, as noted elsewhere, left here only yesterday to take Mr. Notman's place during the latter's absence; now he will in all probability be Mr. Notman's successor in office—St. John Telegraph.

St. Barbe is the last district in Newfoundland to be heard from in the elections, and has reported that the Government nominee wins, defeating Keesworthy, Independent, and Bradshaw, Opposition, by plurality of 281. The Bond Government holds thirty seats in the new legislature and the Opposition have only six. All departmental officers were re-elected, making bye elections unnecessary.

Shortly before 11 o'clock on Friday night fire started from the electric wires in the ceiling of W. P. Dillon's barber shop, on Queen Street. The firemen were summoned and when the brigade arrived, they had to take up a part of the floor of the composing room of the Watchman, over head in the last building in order to locate and extinguish the fire. This was promptly done; but not without the material of the Watchman, on which there was no insurance, getting a bad wetting. Mr. Dillon's furniture was removed without much damage. We are pleased to learn that the mishap to the Watchman will not delay or prevent its publication regularly.

A Halifax despatch of Monday said: The storm which swept over the American coast yesterday and caused much damage, struck this city last night.

In the early evening rain fell, and about midnight the storm increased to a gale from the southeast. Telegraph wires along the line suffered greatly, many lines being down and no connection could be had with Boston, New York, or other American cities. The tree to St. John street was blown down in front of the latter and in very poor shape. The storm is reported to be very heavy in some of the Upper Canadian cities and in Montreal it was a wild night. No damage is reported hereabouts and it is thought that shipping on the coast suffered very much as waves of an approaching storm were sent out early in the day.

On Wednesday evening last the Coroner's jury in the Warren murder case reported to the Coroner that they could not agree upon a verdict. In this emergency the Coroner, in accordance with the law, turned the jury over to the Supreme Court. On Thursday afternoon the jury came before the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Hodgson. The Judge explained to the jurymen that they need not necessarily name the criminal in their verdict; but merely bring in a verdict as to how Harriet D. Warren had come to her death. The jury retired and after an hour's deliberation brought in the following verdict: "Harriet D. Warren, on the thirteenth day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four, was feloniously, wilfully and of malice and aforethought, killed and murdered against the peace of our Lord, the King, his Crown and dignity." Michael Power, Jr. was brought into court and his preliminary trial commenced before Stipendiary Magistrate McDonald. Witnesses were examined on Friday and Saturday. On Monday the examination of witnesses was continued until the afternoon, when an adjournment was taken for a week.

After All.

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

Grief is strong, but joy is stronger; Night is long, but day is longer; When life's riddle solves and clears, And the angels in our ears

Whisper the sweet answer low— Answer full of love and blessing— How the wonderment will grow

At the blindness of our guessing, All the hard things we recall Made so easy—after all!

Earth is sweet, but heaven is sweeter; Love complete, but faith completer; Close beside our wandering ways, Through dark nights and weary days,

Stand the angels with bright eyes; And the shadow of the cross Falls upon and sanctifies All our pain and all our loss; Though we stumble, though we fall, God is helping—after all.

Sigh, then, soul, but sing in sighing, To the happier things replying; Dry the tears that dim thy seeing; Give glad thoughts for life and being.

Time is but the little entry To eternity's large dwelling; And the heavenly guards keep sentry.

Urging, guiding, half compelling, Till, the puzzling way quite past, Thou shalt enter in at last.

A Manila Convent's Dowry Fund.

(From the Manila Callian News, September 8.)

A wedding was celebrated in Manila last week, which did not create a vibration in the social atmosphere, but which revealed a picturesque custom interwoven with beautiful traditions. The contracting parties were Don Sandalio Robles and Manuela Castro. The bride until her wedding day was a student in the Convent of Santa Isabel in the walled city.

The day after the wedding Archbishop Harty was astonished upon being asked to sign a large, impressive looking document conferring a dowry upon the happy pair. The astonishment of the Archbishop was soon changed as the history of the dowry was disclosed to him. His profound admiration and expressed his profound admiration and approbation of a custom which had been observed with fidelity by more than three centuries.

FOUNDED IN 1594. When the convent was founded in 1594 a pious fund was donated, the interest of which was devoted to educating and maintaining a number of girls at the convent gratis and giving each of them on her wedding day a dowry of five hundred dollars. The custom has come down to us venerable with age, but as sturdy and laudable today as the day upon which the first blushing graduate of Santa Isabel conferred upon her sighing swain, together with her hand and heart—a dowry. In those far-off days five hundred dollars was "a good round sum." Many of these dowries have formed the nucleus of fortunes in the Philippines. Among the traditions that cluster around the dowry fund, and which the girls attending Santa Isabel never tire of relating is that the girls of Santa Isabel were sought after like treasure trove and that frequently the demand is greater than the supply.

Since the foundation of the institution more than five hundred thousand dollars have been bestowed in dowries. It all the successful suitors who have become beneficiaries of this dowry fund could be gathered together they would find there Filipinos, Spaniards, Englishmen, Germans, Russians, Italians, Frenchmen, etc., and in a newly made row of front seats some cheerful Americans.

THE WEDDING ORDEAL. To become a member of this assembly the bachelor candidate must undergo a very searching ordeal. Before the portals of the convent are opened for his visit he must have the indispensable "openesame"—a good name. The mother superior must be convinced that his character is true by proper inductions, references and the testimony of reliable people. After the suitor has undergone this preliminary examination with satisfaction the courtship proceeds under the vigilant eye of the Sisters. Visits are usually permitted on Thursdays and Sundays. When a sufficient number of Thursdays and Sundays have passed away and the wooer has finished his pleading the girl takes the case under advisement, and before rendering a decision communicates in a formal letter to the Archbishop of Manila, if her decision is favorable, the name of the gentleman she wishes to wed. Another into the character of the suitor takes place before his Grace's permission. The girls are thus protected with parental solicitude against men that would make worthless husbands.

LIFE IN THE CONVENT. Many people have accepted Victor Hugo's Petit Pique in "Les Miserables" as typical of convent life. The life in Santa Isabel could no

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes blemishes in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"Two of my children had scrofula sores which kept growing deeper and kept them from going to school for three months. Ointments and medicines did no good until I began giving them Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine caused the sores to heal, and the children have shown no signs of scrofula since." J. W. McGinnis, Woodstock, Ont.

will rid you of it, radically and permanently, as it has rid thousands.

form a stronger contrast. The tact, solicitude and practical ability of the Sisters of Charity in character-building need no encomiums. The Sisters of Charity have charge of Santa Isabel. The view of life they give the girls is through the clearest lens. They are not fed on illusions and utopian expectations, but are given a serene, practical and sensible standard. The atmosphere is not so ethereal that when they emerge from the convent the nether ozone of this work-a-day world overpowers them. Many have entered Santa Isabel as small children and remain ed there until their wedding day. They knew no other home. They are reared in innocence without the blighting influences that "stamp wrinkles on the brow of youth." The convent is not to them a gloomy place, where "the dim religious light" casts a shadow upon all. On the contrary, they imbibe cheerfulness there, which they carry into their future worldly habitations, making them bright and sunny. The four walls of the convent are not to them dismal and frowning barriers shutting out the world, but the sheltering walls of home.

"WHO WILL BE NEXT?"

When love that laughs at the most impregnable fortresses penetrates the barriers of the convent and makes a selection as was done last week the wedding day is hailed with rejoicing. "The world of happiness" which the wedding bells proclaim for the fortunate pair finds an echo in the hearts of all the students. There is a transformation in classroom and study hall. The air is redolent of joy. It means a holiday for all. Last week a banquet was given the fifteen hundred students of Santa Isabel by the Sisters in honor of the marriage of their companion, Manuela Castro. Similar feasts have been given for three centuries, at which in speech and song the bride has been wished years of happiness. As the wedding of each of these dowried maidens signifies a holiday the paramount question with the younger pupils is: "Who will be next?" The art of love is not included in the curriculum, but many have graduated in that subject and received as a diploma—a dowry. The curriculum is eminently practical. Besides the three Rs and the fine arts, housekeeping, tailoring, embroidery in silk and gold and dressmaking are taught. The girls are made as familiar with the use of the broom and skillet as they are with the piano and palette. Many of these dowried maidens who have gone forth and who now adorn homes in the Philippines recount among the most vivid and delightful memories of their lives the time spent at Santa Isabel. The dowry fund has been increased from time to time through the generous piety of the Catholics of the Philippines and gives no indication of being exhausted. We are told there are beautiful maidens ready to confer the dowry upon good bachelors that can show cause. The question is: "Who will be next?"

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Forming Character.

As a sequel to "Talks with Parents" we give below an instruction once addressed to her pupils by the wise Mother Superior of a Convent School. Few mothers may talk as she did; but all mothers, when guiding their children, may well keep in mind the truths which she so well expresses:

What we should care to form and preserve in ourselves is the Catholic character—a character as distinct as it is beautiful, and which is entirely built upon the foundation of the Catholic faith. By this Catholic character, remember, I do not in the least mean the character of a recluse or a devotee. You see some of its very finest examples in the world and in those filling worldy positions. Take, for instance, Blessed Thomas More while he remained the Chancellor of the realm. Witness his loyalty to his sovereign, yet openly putting God first on all occasions; his sterling integrity; his conscientious fulfillment of all the duties of his state of life. No wonder when God called him higher to be a confessor and martyr, he was so ready, so happy, to obey the call.

"This Christian character consists in: (1) fidelity to duty—giving to all their due; (2) God, to others, and to ourselves; (3) freedom from human respect—readiness to confess the truth, to practice religion openly; (4) love of the poor, self-denying almsdeeds; and (4) good habits. It is wonderful how large a share in the Christian character is owing to good habits. It is quite a distinctive feature, contrasting with the fits and starts and whims and moods—good moods and bad moods, pious moods and worldly moods—all things by turns and nothing for long, which we see in the unformed character. I mean good habits: regularity of prayer; the regular frequentation of the Sacraments; the daily Mass. We heard only yesterday of a gentleman who regularly walked eight miles on a weekday to hear Mass. It was his habit, and he never broke it.

"And what I want to impress on you is the importance of this power of habit. Habit is the repeated act, the adherence to the act, and that by way of submission to some law. A person without habit is like a ship without sails and without a rudder; it gets along somehow, but it is quite a question which way it goes. There is something in a habit which is sanctifying, because strengthening. A very small thing persevered in has more valuable results than a much greater thing done intermittently. For example, suppose the first day of Lent we propose to read every day a chapter of 'The Following of Christ,' or to practise some trifling definite mortification at meals, or to perform some little devotion in honor of the Sacred Passion; it will do us more good to persevere in these small resolutions than if we were once or twice, when the notion took us, to fast on bread and water.

"It would do us good this way. We could not keep up any little practice perseveringly without its often having to encounter a resistance of nature. We like to do it to-day and perhaps to-morrow; but next day it may be, we forget; or just at the time when we should be doing it we want, or some one else wants us, to do something else; and the effort we make over ourselves not to be put out or to turn out of the way is an effort that strengthens, and is, in fact, virtue. And its indirect effect will be to put muscle and vigor into our whole system; so that we shall be more disposed, more vigilant, to command ourselves in other ways and attend to other matters of virtue, whereas the fits and starts piety gains no sort of control. For the same reason, I have no hesitation in saying that, with regard to the Sacraments, the regular frequentation of them at fixed times is infinitely more precious than going more frequently but irregularly.

"Good habits require an effort to form; bad habits are very easily formed, because they go with the stream. What we call bad habits is generally indulgence of a me part of our unrestrained nature; idle habits for instance, spring from the sloth of our nature, which hates trouble and cannot bring itself to face a difficulty with a strong will. For the most part, good habits call for resistance. On this capacity for resistance (varying depending).

"This is just one reason why you are checked and restrained in a thousand little things that are not sins; and that you think it so tiresome to be told constantly not to do certain things which spring from our unrestrained nature. St. Ignatius calls them inordinations, and he says this want of restraint is one of the roots of sin.

Abbotsford and its Owners.

The Hon. Joseph and Mrs. Maxwell-Scott, of Abbotsford, have again left their historic home on the Tweed, to Mr. W. Harrison Cripps, the famous surgeon of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. Mr. Cripps is a keen sportsman, and he rents a good deal of shooting and fishing in the neighborhood of Abbotsford, where he spends most of the autumn. The actual owner of Abbotsford is, of course, the Hon. Mrs. Maxwell-Scott, great-granddaughter and only surviving lineal descendant of the great Sir Walter, whom friend and foe alike (if we may thus designate Cardinal Newman and George Burrow, author of the "Bible in Spain") credit with having been the first writer in modern times to bring back Catholicism to the minds of his countrymen as a living reality.

It is just half a century since the mansion and estate of Abbotsford, which had been acquired by Sir Walter some thirty years previously, came into Catholic hands, passing (through the failure of male heirs) to Mr. James Hope-Scott, who had married the grand-daughter and heiress of the novelist, and had added her name to his own. Mr. Hope-Scott, the intimate friend of Newman and Manning, and one of the most distinguished converts, as well as one of the most charming personalities, of his time, added a Catholic private chapel to Abbotsford. He also left only a daughter by his first marriage (Mrs. James Hope, M. P., is his son by his second wife, Lady Victoria Howard); and she ultimately succeeded him as owner of Abbotsford, and married the Hon. Joseph Maxwell, one of Lord Herries younger brothers, who added, as Mr. Hope had done, the patronymic of the heiress to his own.

Mrs. Maxwell-Scott, although her descent from the famous romance writer is entirely in the female line, is well known to have inherited much of his literary ability; and she combines an enthusiastic interest in the history—especially its romantic side—of her country with a zeal in the cause of Catholicism, which gives to all that she writes no little charm and value. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell-Scott have happily, a large family of sons and daughters, so that it may be hoped that the Catholic succession to Abbotsford is reasonably secure. Their eldest son and heir, Mr. Walter Scott, has followed the military profession, and they have two younger boys in the Royal Navy.—Glasgow Observer.

MGR. H. TEFU, CYR DELAGE M. P. P., Quebec, 4th November, 1904.

In Rome the other day was celebrated the golden jubilee of a distinguished Redeemer, Father Berthe, consultant general to the rector major of his order. Tall, he is still unstooped, though worn with infirmity, with hair as white as snow. For more than forty years he has labored as missionary with great success. Amid his labors in preaching missions, giving retreats to every class, especially to the clergy and ecclesiastical students, he found time to write books, which did fair to preach long after he shall have gone to his reward. His "Recueil Bibliques," or stories from the Bible, have found their way into almost every home in the Christian parts of France. More than two million copies have been sold. His "Life of Garcia Moreno, the Martyr President of Ecuador," has had an enormous sale, and has been translated into several languages. His last work, "Vie de N. S. Jesus Christ," is charming. There is, of course, nothing new as to the absolute facts, but it is in the art in which these facts are put before us. But undoubtedly the work which will be an enduring monument to his memory is his "Life of St. Athanasius Maria di Liguori," of which he is the Cardinal Parochi, so competent a judge, said that Father Berthe had done what no one had done before him—namely, he has given us the whole life of the saint.

Many Women Suffer Untold Agony From Kidney Trouble.

Very often they think it is from so-called "female disease." There is less female trouble than they think. Women suffer from headache, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, and a dragging-down feeling in the loins. So do men, and they do not have "female trouble." Why, then, blame all your trouble to female disease? With healthy kidneys, few women will ever have "female disorders." The kidneys are so closely connected with all the internal organs, that when the kidneys go wrong, everything goes wrong. Much distress would be saved if women would only take

I took Doan's Kidney Pills. The pain in my back gradually left me, my appetite returned, I slept well, and an effectually cured. I can highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from kidney trouble."
