Beautiful Cynthia;

Victory After Many Defeats.

CHAPTER XIII.
"FOR LOVE'S SAKE."
"Dear Dad," he wrote impulsively, "you will know what I feel, for you have been in love yourself. She is not only beautiful, but the sweetest girl you can imagine. All London is raving about her. And she loves me. I am the luckiest fellow upon earth. Write me at once and wish me joy. I shall be quite happy until I hear from you."

Almost at the same time Cynthia was writing, in a somewhat similar strain, to her father. She, too, dilated upon her lover's worth and charm. He was everything that was handsome and good and noble; he was a prince among men, and he loved her! Wonderful, wasn't it! They had only one regret—that her dear, dear dad should be so far away and not able to share in their happiness.

Would he write or cable just a "Yes"? There was much more than this. It was a long letter in which she poured out something of the joy of her young heart, and her eyes filled with tears, happy tears, as she wrote her letter.

Strangely enough, she fell asleep directly her head touched the pillow, though she had meant to be awake for quite a long time and think of the "prince among men," who had condescended to love her.

She was rather pale when she came down the next morning, for, while Parsons had been dressing her, she had been picturing the interview between Darrel and Lady Westlake, and it had assumed a graver and more fearful import than it had borne on the preceding night with Darrel's arm round her to encourage her.

As Darrel had said, the Griffin had not regarded him with favor; and the Griffin could be very hard, and very stubborn, when she liked.

She moved about the house restlessly, like the dove of the ark, finding no place in which to rest her feet.

But, at any rate, she could think of Darrel, of his love-fraught words, of his dear eyes, warm with passion and adoration; and she thought of him all the time. Lady Westlake did not

Kidney Disease and Gravel Caused Keenest Suffering—Cured by
Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. W. Smith.
That disease of the kidneys cause the greatest suffering is well known, and when stone or gravel is formed in the bladder the torture is almost beyond human endurance. The disease should never be allowed to reach this dangerous stage. Pains in the small of the back, pain in smarting when passing water, frequent urination, loss of sleep, and weight tell of the need of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to regulate and invigorate the kidneys and restore these organs to health.
"Mr. W. Smith, Port Dalhousie, Ont., writes:—'For some years I was afflicted with kidney disease and gravel in its most severe form, having often a stoppage of water, accompanied by the most dreadful agony. As the disease wore on me I became reduced in flesh and passed sleepless nights. No doctor was able to do much for me, and I used many medicines without obtaining more than temporary relief. My attention was directed to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and by using this treatment the disease was eradicated from my system in less than six months. I have gained in weight, sleep well, and feel better than I have for twenty years.'

appear until lunch. She seemed in a particularly good humor, and nodded with a grim smile at Cynthia, and even chuckled her under the chin.

"You did very well last night, my dear," she said graciously. "You made quite a success of it—thanks to Madame Cerise. That dress of hers was really clever. Lord Northam admired it very much. By the way, he is coming to lunch. You had better"—she looked Cynthia up and down with a keen, critical scrutiny—"no, perhaps you had better keep on that morning dress. It's pretty and simple and suitable. I suppose your head is quite turned, eh?"

"Why should it be, Aunt Gwen?" said Cynthia. "Every one was kind to me; but it was because it was my first presentation, and everybody is kind on such an occasion, aren't they? And it was a very pretty frock you had made for me, and that lovely veil of yours—there was not another like it in the room!"

"Humph!" grunted the Griffin, but still graciously. "Frocks and veils are all very well, but—Good morning, Lord Northam," she broke off as Northam lounged in with his usual sang-froid. "We were just talking about last night. I was telling Cynthia this not to be vain."

"Good advice, but quite unnecessary," said Northam, in his slow, yet curt fashion. "Miss Drayle couldn't be vain if she tried."

"Oh, couldn't she?" retorted the Griffin, with a grin. "That's all you know! We women are vain in our cradles; but I'll admit that we're no less vain as men."

They went into lunch. The Griffin's good humor was still maintained. She did most of the talking. In a casual way she spoke of Torbridge the family place, and in a subtle fashion she managed to convey to Cynthia the splendor and importance of that magnificent seat of the ducal family. Northam said little, and enjoyed his lunch with his usual heartiness but every now and then he paused and looked at Cynthia, exactly as he had looked at her during the dinner at the Seyov.

When the far too elaborate lunch was over—Cynthia ate but little, and paid as little attention to her companions, for she was thinking of Darrel and wondering what time he would call—they went into the drawing-room.

"You can smoke if you like," said the Griffin amiably; "a cigarette, if her cigars—they make the curtains smell."

But Northam wouldn't smoke. He leaned back in his chair, crossed his legs, and gazed above Cynthia's head. The Griffin hobbled about the room for a while; then she went out, muttering something about orders for the dinner, an excuse which appeared to Cynthia absolutely futile, for ordering the meals—in fact, the whole direction of the household—fell to the housekeeper.

Cynthia went to the window and drummed softly on the sill. Darrel might appear at any moment. She was aroused from her reverie by Northam's slow, half-sleepy voice.

"Great success last night, Miss Drayle," he said. "Come round now to congratulate you. Lots of people will be here presently, no doubt. Should like to speak to you while I have the chance."

"To speak to me?" said Cynthia, leaving the window and abandoning her hope of seeing Darrel approach. She went back to her chair, seated herself, and leaned forward with her arms embracing her knees in a girlish fashion, and regarding him with an absent air.

"Yes," he said slowly, heavily, his eyes fixed on the coal scuttle beside her. "Fact is, I came on important business—well, important to me. I want to ask you a question."

"A question? What is it?" asked Cynthia, with a smile. She thought he was going to ask her to go for a drive with him and Lady Alicia in his four-in-hand, or to accompany them to the opera or a picnic.

"Yes," he said thoughtfully, abstractedly. "Fact is, I wanted to ask you, Miss Drayle, if you thought you'd care to be my wife."

Cynthia's arms unlocked; she sat bolt upright; her eyes opened wide, and she stared at him with amazement.

"Sorry I've been so abrupt," he said penitently. "Hope you'll excuse me. I'm not much of a hand at this kind of thing, and it comes rather difficult sort of refuse my fence, don't you know? Should like to have broken it to you, led up to it with a good take-off; but it's always the way with nervous man—and I'm as nervous as a cat, though perhaps I don't look it. What I mean is, do you think you'd care enough for me to marry me?"

"No, I don't," gasped poor Cynthia, so alarmed to be anything but candid. "I—I like you very much; you have been very kind to me, you and Lady Alicia; but—I don't—I don't care for you as much as that."

Northam's heavy countenance did not change in the least. He looked round the room slowly, and his prominent blue eyes as slowly returned to her startled countenance.

"Oh," he said. "Like that, is it? I'm sorry. Suppose I ought to say 'Thank you, very sorry, and take my leave'—been a bit sudden, haven't I? That's the worst of me, I look such a con-founded—beg pardon, I mean silly fool—that people don't give me credit for being serious; but, give you my word, I'm serious enough now. I want to marry you very badly. I'm not such a bounder as to remind you that I've got things which some women might attach a value to. Shouldn't like you to marry me because I'm the next duke. No, not at all. No; should like to be cared for just for myself, as the novelists chaps say. But there you are—I'm asking you to marry me, not only because I love you, but because I know you'd make a first-rate duchess. Got to think of that, you know, because it's what my people expect. You'd fill the bill first-rate. But don't run away with the idea that I'm thinking of that only. No, I want to marry you because you—are you. Hope you understand?"

This was a tremendously long speech for Northam, and he got it out with great difficulty, and yet with an earnestness and sincerity which touched Cynthia, all absorbed and engrossed though she was by her love for Darrel. She turned red and white by turns; there was a suspicious moisture in her eyes.

She knew that, with all his heaviness, his seeming stupidity, the man who was asking her to be his wife was a good man and true; and, made hypersensitive by her own happiness, her own heart passion, she was tenderly sorry for him.

"I'm sorry!" she murmured rather brokenly. "I didn't know—I never guessed; but, Lord Northam, I must say 'No.' I—I couldn't care for you—I couldn't marry you. Besides," try as she would, a smile, a gleam of happiness would break from her face, beam from her eyes. "I—I am already engaged."

He nodded two or three times, his heavy chin sank on his breast.

"That so?" he said. "Well, I had guessed it would be. He's a deuced lucky chap. I fancy I can guess his name. Begins with an F, doesn't it?"

Cynthia blushed a hot crimson, her eyes glowed, and she nodded ecstatically.

"Thought so," said Northam, with an attempt at cheerfulness. "Awfully decent fellow, Frayne; wish him joy—and you."

He rose slowly, as if his huge frame were an impediment, and held out his hand. With girlish impulsiveness Cynthia took the big hand in both her small ones.

"How good you are!" she said brokenly, and with tears in her eyes.

"Not a bit," he said, nodding at her. Frayne's a far better chap than I am in every way, and he deserves you. I thought there might be a chance for me, and I went for it. Look here, don't let this foolishness of mine make any difference between us. We can be friends, if we can't be husband and wife. Frayne's a pal of mine; and I don't want to lose both of you; understand?"

"Oh, I quite understand," responded Cynthia, a tear rolling down her cheek. "You must be a very kind and good man, Lord Northam—"

"No," he said slowly. "Ordinary kind of man; but I'm not such a fool as to want what I can't get, especially when another man's got it. I may be an ass. If I can't have you for a wife I would like to keep you for a friend. Frayne, too. Good-by. Here, say," he added, with his hand on the door, and a shrewd look came for a moment into his dull countenance, shouldn't let the old lady know what's passed between us. What, eh?"

He bestowed a knowing and significant nod on Cynthia and lurched heavily out of the room.

So, for love's sake, Cynthia had refused to become the future Duchess of Torbridge!

Employment Plentiful.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—A political space writer in last night's Herald gets off an unusually large order of political buncombe. We would pair himself and Fergus MacRoi whose effusions have appeared late at regular intervals in the Daily News—the senior Morris-Morison organ, and describe them as Morris' justly Stamese twins fed on copious doses of Government pap for the purpose of bolstering up the rotten case of the Picnic-Split Government, otherwise known as the Morris Government. However it is a patent fact to the most casual reader, that both worthies adduce no sound argument and that the purport of their literary effort is to delude and deceive the outport reader. The city reader is already "dead on them." To deal seriately with the point raised by "Employment Plentiful" would exceed the limit of space of a busy newspaper. In the first place he attributes the fact of there being plenty of work to the Industrial Policy of the Morris Government. Now, every reader of this article must admit that Morris' Industrial Policy thus far, begins and ends with Branch Railway Building for which the assets of the Colony have been mortgaged already to the extent of

SIX MILLION OF DOLLARS
with several more millions to follow; and so far this year no laboring man has earned a dollar on a Branch Railway. The Bell Island Mines were working before the Morris Government was born, and will go on and prosper after the obsequies next November. The usual number of men found ready employment there every spring in the past, as well as the present spring. The rise of a cent an hour decided upon by the Directorate of Nova Scotia S. & C. Company, at a meeting held in March month and with which the twister in last night's Herald tries to credit Sir Edward Morris; was the result of conditions that the present Government of the Colony had about as much to do with, as the man on Mars. Again, the raise of wages of one cent an hour for a month's work at Bell Island amounts to $2.00—that is for 26 10 hour working days—with this amount says the Herald scribe "the miners who shack themselves are able to pay for their keep out of." If P. T. McGrath or any of his "special" contributors think that at the present cost of living any laboring man in this country can shuck himself on $2.60 a month, they are perfectly welcome to enjoy their opinions. The fisherman and the Bell Island miner is, however, entitled to his, which when expressed through the ballot box next November will come.

AS A RUDE AWAKENING to both P. T. and Sir Edward when the Bell Island miner and fisherman of Conception Bay are given an opportunity next Fall to decide on P. T. McG.'s $2,500 picnic to Sydney on the steel companies, viz., to "Arrange the Ore Tax," there will be something doing. Again, Employment Plentiful says "500 men worked at Port au Port all winter and made good wages"; half that number would be nearer the mark and the truth; the pay for common labor was $1.30 for 10 hours and feed yourself. This is what the Herald's journalistic freak cells good wages. Operations at Grand Falls and Bishop's Falls have been successful. The 1,000 men employed there know the man to whom they owe the credit for the establishment of these enterprises and Sir Robert Bond is that man. Yes! they will be returning to their chosen avocation, the fishery, within the next few weeks—the back bone of the country, as Mr. Kent very ably put it in his

GREAT SPEECH
in the House of Assembly a few weeks since. In that speech Mr. Kent drew attention to the alarming fact that within five years nearly 7,000 men had deserted the Labrador Fishery and 500 schooners were swinging to their moorings for want of men to man them. Let Morris finish his work, and continue to draw the men, and particularly the young men, away from the fisheries and you kill the goose that lays the golden egg. But not Morris' goose—his is a different breed and has nothing to do with the fisheries. Was there ever a more inconsistent or nonsensical argument put up for the purpose of bluffing the electorate than to say the less fish caught the better the markets; when at the present moment the great Republic to the west of us, the U. S. A., is throwing down the barrier against which Bond fought so hard and valiantly for a quarter of a century. It must have been a great joy to Sir Robert Bond when he learned at Halifax, that free fish from Newfoundland to the U. S. A. market with its

was a fait accompli—made so by the Democratic President, Woodrow Wilson. There is still great cause for concern over the desertion of our fisheries as noted by Mr. Kent, the sapient writer of the Herald to the contrary, notwithstanding. One more "Gem" from the article before me: "Every man who gets a summer's work on the land and stays away from the fishery helps the man who continues that industry on the Labrador and Newfoundland shore." This is such arrant nonsense, that we refuse to comment on it. He finishes up by asking the question: How many good men followed up that business, viz., the fishery, all their life time and died without the price of a coffin to lie in? Well, if he is as foolish as he pretends to be, and so anxious about the fisherman getting a decent funeral, let him ask several of the hon. gentlemen in the Upper House, especially the new appointees; he might also enquire of the mercantile agents members in the Assembly the past four years, and if still in doubt an honorable Executive member or two may be able to enlighten him. Our opinion is that those fishermen who hadn't a coffin to lie in, nor a shroud to enfold their earthly remains were honest men, who paid their accounts twice over to the supplying merchants of the McBraire kidney. McBraire is the merchant who made his pile and returned to the Old Country rich and insolent; local history records that as he passed through the Narrows he waved his hand and said: "Good bye, ye poor Newfoundland fools!"

Chewing Gum.
BY H. L. RANN.

Chewing gum is a mild beverage which has the effect of imparting to the human countenance the benign and introspective look of the moody cow. There is something about ten or fifteen cents' worth of gum, tucked in a kiltish fashion just inside the left cheek, which gives the wearer a chaste look of perfect peace.

Chewing gum is made principally out of automobile tires which have seen their last puncture. When an aged tyre has had several blow-outs, caused by running over people who were not expecting anything of the kind it is sold to a gum factory, chopped up fine and sprayed with a very low order of perfume. It is then cut into strips and sold to people who are blessed by nature with a set of double-acting jaws.

The best brands of chewing gum are guaranteed to cure every human ailment except freckles on the nose. All gum makers advertise that their gum is a never-failing specific for indigestion, rebellious feelings in the stomach, nervous headache, leg cramps, muscular rheumatism, and the clinging aroma of the boiled onion. A great many men chew gum immediately after smoking in order to deceive a fond and trusting wife, who cured her husband of the tobacco habit by inserting Rough on Rats in his coffee.

Gum is sold in large quantities to theatre-goers, who vibrate noisily between the acts and keep time with the opening overture in a rapt and pre-occupied manner. Some people are so fond of gum that they take it to bed with them, and either swallow it in an unguarded moment or affix it to the head of the bed, where it can be found by a small brother and made to do double duty.

Once firmly installed, the gum chewing habit is harder to get rid of than a languid third cousin on your mother's side who drops in for a couple of days. It is a harmless pastime, however, and is far better than filling the lace curtains full of cigarette smoke.

MAN REPORTED MISSING.—Yesterday it was reported to the police that a man named John Strong, a native of Clareville, had left his boarding house 10 days ago and had not returned up to yesterday. He boarded with a family on Lime Street, and the police who made fruitless enquiries for him believe he has gone to Sydney.

Act of Vandalism
The margin of Mundy Pond, most of which at one time was a dump for refuse, has during the past few years been beautified by people who bought plots of the land and raised houses and flower gardens there. Thursday night last some vandals visited the place and tore down the fence surrounding Mr. Abraham Snow's property, smashed up the landing way, broke a boat in pieces and did other damage, the wreckage being found Friday morning up at the head of the lake. When citizens pay money to beautify property it is certainly hard that it should be thus destroyed. We hope this matter will be taken up by the police and the author of the outrage alluded to above run to earth.

Holy Name Society.
Yesterday the members of the Holy Name Society met in the Aula Maxima at St. Bonaventura's college at 7.30 a.m., and to the number of over 600 increased to the Cathedral, the banner of the Society being borne in front of the procession. His Grace Archbishop Howley celebrated the 8 o'clock Mass and delivered a beautiful discourse from the Gospel of the day. The concourse of men then received Holy Communion at the hands of their Spiritual Director, Rev. D. O'Callaghan and His Grace the Archbishop. The sight was a truly edifying one, and after the Mass the members marched back to the hall where they were congratulated by Father O'Callaghan.

At 2.30 p.m. a large number attended the Cathedral where Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was imposed and Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan delivered a fluent and most interesting discourse. Several new members were initiated and the Society now numbers nearly 1,000. Each month many join the ranks and when the proper time comes the society will build a hall of its own.

A Suggestion for Bal Masque.

To the Editor.
Dear Sir,—I noticed an item in Saturday's News stating that the ladies of the Bal Masque were going to have a Stop Waltz. Now, sir, I think this is an error, and a Paul Jones must have been meant. I wish to explain what a Paul Jones means. It is simply this: the dancers take a partner and form a circle around the hall, the band plays for the "Grand Chain" (same as Lancers) and then stops. The band again starts to play either a two-step or a waltz. The lady and gentleman who are opposite each other after the Grand Chain become partners in the waltz or two-step, whichever the band decides to play. Again, sir, I think if Mr. Hugh Anderson (or some other gentleman interested) would take it upon himself to explain from the platform, the night of the ball, as the announcer did at the Highlanders "At Home," I believe the dancers would certainly catch on to the idea.
Thanking you for space.
Yours
PAUL JONES.

Notes From
From Little Paradise.

Miss Maggie L. Brennan, who spent the past fortnight with Mrs. P. Brown, Marticot, returned to-day.
Mr. Thos. Heffernan is working assiduously at his motor boat, and expects to have her completed by the last of the month.
Miss Annie Walsh, 'Bona' is spending a very pleasant holiday with friends here. She intends starting for home to-day. Annie being such a jolly girl her many friends will find it dull when she is gone.

Mr. Patrick Healey, Great Paradise, who spent a few weeks at the hospital, came home yesterday, his health much improved. Pat has been suffering incessantly with bad legs the past two years, and was unable to work. That he may be as staunch as ever, he was and able to get along at his work, is the sincere wish of the writer.

Miss Annie Heffernan arrived home yesterday after spending the past winter at Piacenta.

SATURDAY, April 21, 1913. Morris's Extravagance!

On Saturday we gave the main features of the Auditor General's Report on expenditures made by the Morris Government for 1912, without the authority of the Legislature, but we omitted many details.

The report makes evident the fact that the Morris course of extravagance has in no way been curbed. The sum of $77,264.37 was spent on services for which no provision had been made by the Legislature.

This wilful waste of the public substance is going on in face of the fact that the Government will have to raise a third loan to meet the obligations cast upon the country by the Branch Railway Contract of 1910. The money market is stringent enough without adding to the difficulty by extravagance at home.

STELLA MARIS HERE.—The s.s. Stella Maris, Capt. Hann, which had been down to Westleyville with 30 sealers, arrived here at 9.30 last night. She had it very stormy yesterday. The Eagle and the Ranger was met yesterday.

THAT BURGLARY.—The two men caught stealing goods from Ellis's store and now on remand will come up for trial next Monday. In the meantime the police are investigating, as it is alleged the prisoners will be arraigned for other charges than the one referred to.

CASHMAN'S TRIAL.—The prisoner Cashman, charged with stealing money from His Majesty's mails during the burning of the railway mail car, will be brought before Judge Knight this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when the preliminary hearing of the case will commence.

Long Distance Talker. Sir John Simon Holds The Record in Britain. The Solicitor-General in The Asquith Ministry Spoke Nine and a Half Days on the Telephone Question—He is a Frail Man But Has a Marvellous Store of Vitality and Endurance.

Sir John Simon, the youthful Solicitor-General of Great Britain is blessed with the gift of the gab in an especial degree. He has established something of a record by speaking for nine and a half days on the telephone question. According to the shorthand writer's computation the speech contained 410,000 words, and filled 631 pages, yet Sir John only used the briefest of notes. To wind up an able lawyer and let him talk for this length of time is a frightfully expensive business. But Sir John Simon long ago proved that he is worthy of his hire. He is not yet forty years of age, and has attained his high position solely by his own abilities.

His father was a Congregational minister, who managed to send his son to Fettes college, Edinburgh, and later to Oxford University. Sir John rose at the Bar was remarkably rapid, and in 1906 he entered Parliament as Liberal member for the Walthamstow Division of Essex. He has combined politics with his legal engagements in a manner which proves that his somewhat frail form is no index to his vitality and of endurance. Throughout the great telephone case his evenings have been occupied in making speeches in the country and in the House of Commons, and yet he has never exhibited signs of exhaustion. When speaking at a political meeting recently held at Manchester, Sir John Simon dropped into a reminiscent vein, and recalled an amusing incident of his youthful days. "My first political recollection is of something that occurred, I think it was in 1873, when I was a very small boy going to a dame's school in Moss Side. I remember well going out of the gate of the little house where my father lived then, and as I went out carrying my satchel to school, one of his friends came running down the street waving a newspaper and shouting something to my father. I think it was about one of the first speeches Mr. Gladstone made in the early days of his Midolton campaign, and I heard my mother calling me back because I was wearing a blue tie. I can see her little figure running up the stairs and down again with a red ribbon, which she tied round my neck, and so I went to school."

LOBSTER FISHERY.—The lobster fishery along the S.W. Coast opened to-day, and a good season is expected.

R.M.S. Mongolian in Port.

The R. M. S. Mongolian, Capt. J. M. Roth, arrived from Liverpool yesterday morning at 7 o'clock. She left Liverpool on Wednesday, April 9th, and had rough weather to contend with at the start. On Sunday, the 13th, a strong W. N. W. gale raged, lasting for three days, and poor headway was made. On Thursday, the 17th, field ice was met and the ship had to be carefully navigated, keeping well south to avoid it. The next day, Friday, the ship was caught in the ice floe in lat. 48.19 N., and long. 46.50 W. She was practically stopped all that day, only steaming 16 knots in the 24 hours. Numerous icebergs were passed. On Friday night last a huge berg about a quarter of a mile long and a hundred feet in height above the surface of the water was sighted. It is very dangerous to shipping. The daily runs of the Mongolian were:

The Messiah.

It is fitting that the best and highest expression in literature of the events surrounding the Coming and the Life of the One Perfect Man should have adequate expression in Music.

Great Art is Revelation, and the Great Artist is he who conveys to the mind of the listener the greatest number of the greatest ideas at once pure and uplifting. Therefore, words and music must be in perfect harmony with each other to fulfill in the highest sense the aim of a Song or Chorus; and it is this characteristic that makes "The Messiah" great.

At the very least it is more than twenty years since The Messiah, as a whole, has been given here. Since the days of Rowe, Handcock and Walker there has been a dearth of any ambitious oratorio works and I hope that it will be shown at the rendering of The Messiah next Thursday; that it is certainly not the fault of the public that such performances have been rare, and that a full hall will encourage Mr. Allen and his singers, who have been working hard for the past six months, for the most part having two practices each week. Excerpts from the oratorio are better than nothing, but the logical sequence of Prophecy, Birth, Life, Passion and Resurrection (so beautifully expressed in Holy Scripture, and taken and arranged therefrom by Charles Jenkins), as developed in The Messiah, must necessarily carry one along in the spirit of reverent wonder and praise, and in the unfolding of the Story Wonderful, one will forget singers and players, and feel only, with renewed emphasis, some realization of the tremendous sacrifice that was made.

The Messiah is divided into three parts. The first part deals with the prophecy of His Coming and His Birth and opens with a recitation by the tenor soloist "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Prepare ye the way of the Lord; make straight in the desert a highway for our God;" the first chorus being "And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together;" for the mouth of the Lord has spoken it." "But who may abide the day of His coming? And who shall stand when He appeareth? For He is like a refiner's fire." A good chorus is "For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government shall be upon His shoulders; and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

The chorus "Glory to God" begins as Handel wrote of it "From afar and rather softly," with the idea of the gradual approach of the angels, and ends also softly, with the idea of the gradual vanishing of the angels.

The well-known "He shall feed His flock" is often sung with an utter disregard to the correct flowing time, closes this part. The second part treats of Christ's Passion. The perfect union of words and music in "He was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief," puts it among the great solos and gives the contralto soloist much opportunity for expression.

The chorus "All we like sheep have gone astray" seems at first to have a somewhat incongruous setting, but the explanation is given, that it typifies the frivolous and unthinking attitude of those who "have turned everyone to his own way;" and then with what suddenness does Handel make us realize, in deep, heart-finding chords, that "the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." This part contains the Bass solo "Why do the nations rage," which I anticipate will be rendered mightily by the soloist, and the part closes with the "Hallelujah" which coming in its proper place and setting ought to affect our ears and hearts with new force.

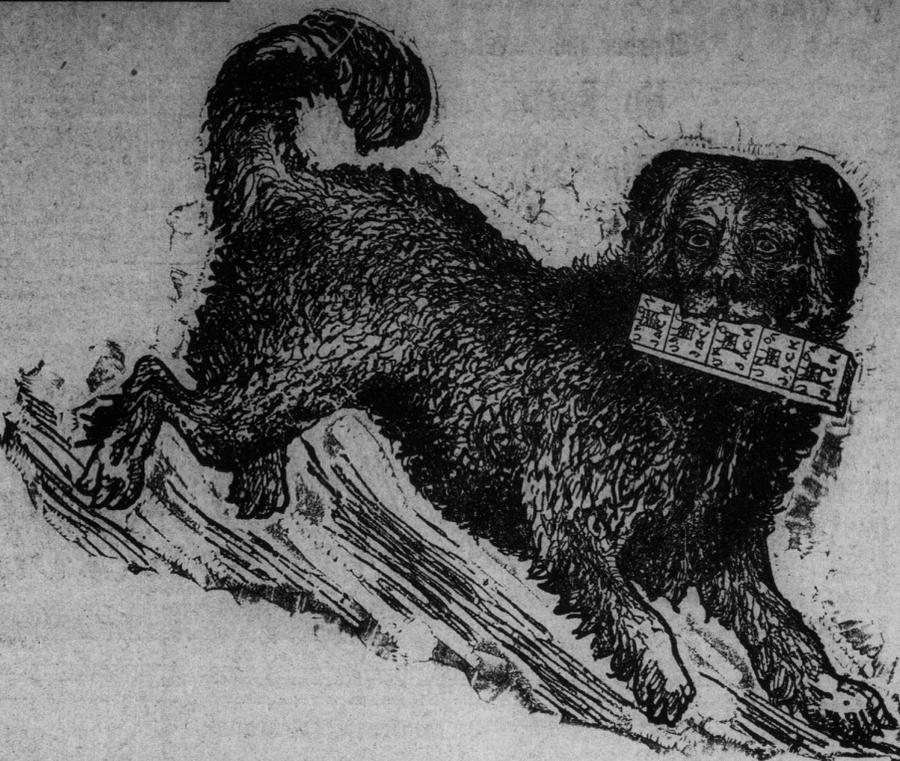

The third part deals with the Hope of Eternal Life and opens with the ever-beautiful "I know that my Redeemer liveth," and again notice the harmony of words and music when Handel by giving prominence to the word "know" marks the note of certainty in the Resurrection. We are especially fortunate in having as Soprano Soloist a lady who has taken this part in the Messiah in many performances in England, and whose place as the most accomplished Soprano in our midst is acknowledged.

The chorus "Worthy is the Lamb" is grand in every sense of the word. The opening "largo" bars are full, broad and deep-expressive of the honor that is the due of the "Lamb that was slain." In the concluding chorus Handel takes five pages to say "Amen," and has given a chorus that demands much from a choir. The leads must be firmly taken and each part well sustained to give an adequate result.

For the accompaniments the organ, two pianos, five violins, two violoncellos, and cornet will be used.

THE NINTH MUSE.

Romances of The Peerage.

Children who Have Secured Titles.

The fact that the Committee of Privileges in the House of Lords have recommended that the Barony of Furnival, which has been in abeyance since 1777, should be revived in favor of the Hon. Mary Frances Katherine Petre, a little girl, twelve years of age, the daughter of Lady Petre, who died four years ago, recalls several other instances of titles, which were generally thought to be extinct, being revived and conferred upon the young daughters of distinguished houses, who thus became peeresses in their own right.

Perhaps the most notable case is that of the Countess of Cromartie. The Cromartie title was first bestowed upon the second Baronet, Mackenzie of Tarbat, but was forfeited by the third Earl through his share in the rebellion of 1745. From that year the title lay in abeyance until 1861, when it was bestowed upon Lady Cromartie's grandmother, the wife of the third Duke of Sutherland. He left no son, and on his death, in 1893, the title again fell into abeyance, until two years later it was bestowed upon his eldest daughter, Sibel, the present Countess, when she was seventeen years of age, by Queen Victoria.

Peeress Two Years of Age.

The youngest peeress in her own right is Baroness Clifton. She is the daughter of the seventh Earl of Darnley, who died in the year in which she was born—viz., 1900—the heir-presumptive to the title being her uncle, the present Earl of Darnley.

An interesting instance of a peerage being secured by a little girl two years of age is afforded by the ear-er of the Baroness Beaumont, who was born on August 1st, 1894, and whose barony was called out of abeyance in her favor when she was not two years of age, on June 1st, 1896. The baronial peerage dates back to the fourteenth century, but on the death of the seventh Baron in 1507 the peerage fell into abeyance until 1840. A second, but much briefer abeyance followed in 1855, when the tenth Baron left at his death two daughters, to the elder of whom, the present Baroness, the succession was awarded by the Crown the following year.

Bron's Widow.

Should the King decide, in accordance with the decision of the House of Lords, to bestow the Barony of Furnival on Miss Petre, the number of ladies who are peeresses in their own right will then be eighteen. Perhaps the most talented of this select group of peeresses is Baroness Wentworth, who is a great-granddaughter of Lord Byron, and has inherited much of her famous ancestor's literary abilities. The Baroness was Lady Mary Milbank before she succeeded to her present title in 1906, on the death of her father, the late Lord Lovelace.

The Baroness is the fifth lady to bear the ancient title, which was called out of abeyance in favor of Byron's widow, in 1856. The latter's only child married the first Earl of Lovelace, and the late Earl, who was the second, thus had the high distinction of being the grandson of the famous poet. He assumed the name of Milbank, the heiress-presumptive to the title being Lady Anne Blunt, an aunt of the present Baroness.

Not many people are aware of the fact that, not only is the Countess of Powis a peeress in her own right, but her sister, too, the Countess of Yarborough, can claim a similar distinction. The former came to her title, Baroness Darcy de Knayth, in a somewhat strange manner. This title dates back to 1332. When the fourth

Earl died in 1778, however, it fell into abeyance, because it was thought that the patent limited the succession to heirs male. This was ultimately proved to be a mistake, although it was not until 1903 that the title was called out of abeyance in favor of the Countess. In the case also of her sister, the Countess of Yarborough, who is the Baroness Fauconberg and Countess in her own right, the title of Fauconberg fell into abeyance for some four and a half centuries after the death of the sixth Baron in 1463, although the barony was strictly his wife's, and was not called out of abeyance until 1903, the year in which the Countess of Powis established her claim to the title already mentioned.

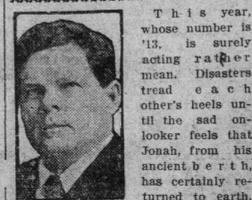

It was only after the Committee of Privileges in the House of Lords had carefully considered the matter that the Baroness Gray was allowed to assume that title in 1896, owing to disputes regarding the succession; while the title borne by Baroness Kinloss, is interesting in view of the fact that she is a daughter of the last Duke of Buckingham, who successfully claimed the title of Kinloss in 1868, the only title which could descend to a female.

For Distinguished Service.

Two other peeresses in their own right are Lady de Ros, who succeeded to the title in 1907, and the Duchess of Norfolk, who became Baroness Herries in her own right in 1908, four years after her marriage to the Duke of Norfolk. The story of the Herries title recalls the romantic history of the Cromartie peerage. The first Lord Herries was created in 1840 but the ninth Lord forfeited the title, as well as that of Earl of Nithsdale, by being taken prisoner at Preston in 1715, during the Jacobite rebellion. He would have been executed but for the aid of his wife, who effected his escape from the Tower. The earldom lapsed altogether, but the barony was revived by decision of the House of Lords in 1858, when the grandfather of the present Baroness was awarded the title.

The Hoodoo Number.

There must be something true, odds fish, in that old-fashioned superstition; "thirteen" is hoodooed, sure as fate—this year can't have its luck on straight. On Britain's shore the suffragette is keeping all men in a sweat, and on the king is sore and sick, expecting every hour a brick. The Balkan people and the Turks are shooting up the whole-blamed works. The kindly king of Greece was slain by some cheap skate who'd gone insane. In Mexico the bullets soar and people wade around in gore. And here at home the floods roll down, submerging many a pleasant town, and cyclones shriek across the plain and leave wrecked cities in their train; Death and his angles grimly roam and celebrate their harvest home. And so, however much we wish to scorn the ancient superstition, we'd like a year of better fame—ones with no hoodoo on its name.

 It appears that the season of cold winds, and bright hard days is by no means over yet, and that an emollient is still necessary for the skin. The emollient preparation which is now generally conceded to be the best for this climate is Cream of Lilies which has yearly a larger vogue and which continues to give the greatest satisfaction to users. In all cases of sprayed hands and face, chaps, roughness and abrasions it acts admirably, healing, softening and soothing the skin. If your skin is irritated use Cream of Lilies, and as a non-irritating and daintily perfumed soap use Cream of Lilies Soap. Price (Cream) 25c. a pot; (Soap) 20c. a cake, box of three cakes, 50c.

Waterwitch Here

The schr. Waterwitch, Capt. C. P. Moore, arrived here yesterday from Barbados in ballast, after a run of 18 days. The vessel had its stormy and carried away a couple of her sails. She came in ballast as she would have to delay a month to secure a molasses cargo. Molasses will be a scarce commodity in the market this year and the reason for it is that the planters at Barbados make more money by converting the sap into syrup than by selling it in the ordinary way. The supply will likely be therefore less than half of what it was last year.

Empire Day Celebration

To-day a joint letter signed by the Presidents and Secretaries of all the city societies will be forwarded to the Importers' Association asking that they be good enough to designate Saturday, May 24th, as Empire Day. It seems anomalous that this day, which is celebrated all over the British Dominions as a public holiday, should not have the status here. True, it is a holiday for our bank and governmental offices and the schools, but the general public are debarred from celebrating it by the stores being kept open. The letter from the societies asks that the day be made a general holiday, and although it falls on Saturday, we see no reason why it should not be granted. It should be a great day in the annals of the Empire, for it not only commemorates Empire Day but also the birth of Victoria the Good, our late beloved Queen. We hope therefore that the request of the societies will be granted.

Vessel Damaged.

The Nellie M., which arrived here Saturday from Brazil via Barbados, reports that the schr. Wilfred M., which left here at the same time as she did in December last got a fearful drubbing. She encountered storm after storm, lost all her sails and had everything movable taken off the deck by the sea, including a fine motor boat valued at $250. She received repairs at Macao. Eggs of Domestic Fowls

The following table shows how nearly alike the eggs of various domestic fowls are in respect to composition:
 Hens' eggs: 5 per cent. water, 15 per cent. protein, 33 per cent. fat.
 Ducks' eggs: 46 per cent. water, 17 per cent. protein, 36 per cent. fat.
 Goose eggs: 44 per cent. water, 18 per cent. protein, 36 per cent. fat.
 Turkeys' eggs: 48 per cent. water, 18 per cent. protein, 33 per cent. fat.
 Protein, as is generally known, is the substance that goes to make muscles and blood. Fat, of course, is fuel for running the body-machine. Thus, it will be seen, eggs though half or nearly half water, are extremely nutritious, containing all the elements required for the building up and support of the human body.

Lepers' Brass Band.

On the island of Cullion in the Philippine archipelago is to be heard the most select and remarkable brass band in the world. It is made up wholly of lepers, banished there to a living death, for the island is the haven and retreat for the lepers of the United States possessions in the Far East. The total population of the island is in the neighbourhood of 4,775, all of whom are under treatment.

Light, Heat and Hot Water.

The Electrical World, in a recent issue, described a progressive electric light plant which sold to its customers not only the current, but the exhaust steam which made the electricity; then, on the demand of one of its customers, it collected the steam condensed and served the customer with hot water. As the company had no hot water main, a trap was set in the basement of the building to receive the condensate. This trap was arranged to fill when it filled, and in so doing it closed the circuit of a two-horse-power motor which drove a pump that delivered the hot water for the customer's service.

Night.

(By H. W. Longfellow.)
 I heard the training garments of the Night
 Sweep through her marble halls,
 I saw her sable skirts all fringed with light
 From the celestial walls.
 I felt her presence, by each spell of night,
 Stoop o'er me from above,
 The calm, majestic presence of the Night,
 As of the one I love.
 I heard the sound of sorrow and delight,
 The manifold soft chimes
 That fill the haunted chambers of the Night
 Like some old poet's rhymes.
 From the cold cisterns of the midnight air,
 My spirit drank repose,
 The fountain of perpetual peace flows
 From these deep, deep flows.
 O holy Night, from thee I learn to bear
 What man has borne before,
 Thou layest thy fingers on the lips of Care
 And they complain no more.
 Peace! Peace! Orestes-like I breathe this prayer,
 Descend with broad winged flight,
 The welcome, the thrice prayed for, the most fair,
 The best beloved Night!

Canada's Religions.

Census reports make interesting reading in spite of the apparent dryness of the subject involved. For instance Bulletin No. 12, the religions of Canada, the same being a tabulation of the various faiths, has just been published. This informs us that we sport, or support, as the case may be, no less than eighty different sects, faiths or religions, some of which I will venture the average person never heard of. For instance, there is Daniel's Band and the Farrington Independents which sounds like an old time fire company or a new breed of chickens. Then there is the Exclusive Brethren and the Millennial Dawnites, the Apostles, the Believers and the Christadelphians, who believe in the spirit world, and the Holy Rollers. Just what the Rollers believe I could never make out, but in any event their antics are such as would ordinarily call for some criticism on the grounds of Sanity.---Toronto Saturday Night.

King's Private Secretary Retires

It is announced that Viscount Knollys, Senior Private Secretary to the King, is about to retire; in fact, will quit office as soon as he has cleared the way for his successor. It has been said of His Lordship that, of all the Court officials of his time, he knew most and said least; indeed, the late Archbishop of Canterbury put it even in stronger form, when he said that no man ever knew so much and said so little. From 1868 to 1901 he was Gentleman Usher Quarterly Writer to Queen Victoria; from 1870 to 1910 Private Secretary to King Edward, both as Prince of Wales and after his accession; from 1886 to 1901 he was Groom-in-Waiting to him; in 1910 he became Joint Private Secretary to King George, with Sir Arthur Bigge, now Lord Stanfortham.

Mr. B. Tulk Replies to "Chopper."

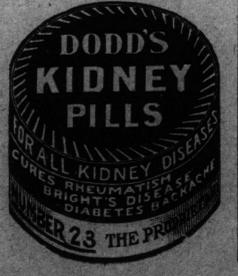

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir,—I notice a letter in yours of March 1st signed "Chopper," and replying as he says to one "Woodman." There seems to be a great many men that do not understand why "Chopper," if he wanted to reply to "Woodman," did not do so without scratching many others. "Chopper" first goes on to talk about his camp being so badly built. The A. N. D. Co., Ltd., have had, and have at present, the best lumber camps in Newfoundland, and the best equipped. This man's name is not "Chopper," but Mr.—a foreman of one of the A.N.D. Co's camps on Red Indian Lake, and if there was a leak in his camp or any little thing wrong with it he should have taken two or three of his men and spent perhaps half the time working on it instead of writing this long complaint to the public press. Now, as regards the doctor's box that Mr.— refers to, we have always had wooden boxes packed by the doctor and sent to every camp, and this year we had iron boxes already packed, but owing to putting in more camps than expected when the boxes were ordered we happened to be a few short. As Mr.— had a very small camp and a very small number of men—an average of four men from the time he started camp to the time of closing down there did not seem to be any real need for the great fuss over the doctor's box. A box of pills, a little bandages, and a bottle of cough drops should have been sufficient for these four men which he might have taken from the surgery at Millertown and put in his pocket at least until such time as he had his box sent him.

As regards demoralizing influences that are carried on in the camps, as Mr.— states, such as drinking, swearing, gambling and sabbath breaking. Now I am going to say right here that that statement is a great measure is a gross insult to all the other camp foremen as well as many others. This is an unfair statement and a downright falsehood which I can prove. Since the beginning of Millertown until now, which is twelve or thirteen years ago, we have handled some thousands of men in our lumber camps during that time, and most of that time I have had charge of these camps, and can clearly and honestly say that I have never known one of our foremen, choppers, teamsters, or any man in connection with or belonging to one of our lumber camps to be drunk or under the influence of liquor, or to be away from his work owing to liquor.

Now Mr. Editor, don't you think Mr.— might have been a little more considerate in his gross imagination, or in other words his gross exaggeration, instead of trying to make the general public believe there was a carload of liquor burned belonging to the Millertown camps. With regard to gambling in the camps, I have never known or heard that any of our foremen or men in the camps play cards for money. I know in some cases they play cards and draughts for amusement, but not for money. Swearing and sabbath breaking—this is in a great measure up to the foreman as to how much control they have over their men in the camps.

Mr.— also complains very sorely of the clergymen not visiting the camps. This, I think, is very unfair too. I think the clergymen of the different denominations that have come to Millertown have done extraordinary well and have worked very hard in visiting our lumber camps, and on many occasions have barely escaped with their lives owing to travelling alone from camp to camp by night and in bad and stormy weather, and often not knowing the road.

He also spoke of the Company's representative. I presume he meant myself. This was certainly uncalled for. Although I had not visited Mr.—'s camp at that time I had made more than one hundred visits to the other camps. We have sixty-seven camps in operation, some of these I visited as many as five times, viz., our Victoria camps which are in a new country that we opened up this year and needed more of my attention than a little camp by the side of the Lake where the steamer passes by every second day or night until she gets frozen up, then horses going and coming, also a doctor at Millertown.

and another on the Lake if he needed anything in that line.

If some of the contractors or foremen that had from thirty to forty men in their camps and have put out some of them, more than 8,000 cords of wood, made this complaint it would seem more reasonable, and these men we would not mind so much. But no, sir, these men do not complain, it is the man that has done almost nothing, 350 cords only—a very small winter's work for four men and one horse. I think before Mr.— takes charge of a lumber camp again he should be a little more broad-minded and attend to his camp and work in the woods, then he will likely make a better showing than he has made this winter.

He also complains about the lumbermen's mills. This the Company cannot help and are not responsible for. They have done their very best with the people's mill by steamer and horse team on the Lake, as well and have tried to get the Government to supply a man independent of the Co., to carry the people's mill.

Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor.

Complaint About Freight Handling.

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir,—It's quite apparent to the business people of the outports that Messrs. Crosbie & Co. are not in a very satisfactory manner, and once freight is taken aboard their steamers for the northern coastal service they can detain and forward same at their convenience; for instance, why is not the freight for Herring Neck and Twillingate now on board the Stella Maris (which returned this week being unable to reach these ports), not transhipped on board the Sagona? This ship leaves to-day and will in all probability reach above named ports in two or three days. If Messrs. Crosbie & Co. were alive to their duty and anxious to serve the public as they should, they could easily have transferred the freight to the Sagona. It will be several days yet before the Stella Maris reaches these ports and if ice conditions are even a little unfavorable her arrival at Twillingate will not be far from May. The greater part of these goods such as fruit, etc., are perishable, and I maintain that the action of Messrs. Crosbie & Co. in not transferring this freight to the Sagona is very unfair indeed, to use the mildest language.

I approached Mr. Crosbie yesterday on the advisability of transferring some freight which my firm were anxious to get by first steamer. He replied that "he could not think of doing this." I maintain that a great injustice has been done in not transferring this freight from the Stella Maris to the Sagona. I believe, Mr. Editor, that I have the sympathy of the whole mercantile body of St. John's, as no firm would consent to have goods lying aboard the Stella Maris, when the Sagona could relieve the situation and take the goods to their destination at a much earlier date. Messrs. Crosbie & Co. should serve the public in a more satisfactory manner than this and the sooner they realize their duty the better it will be for all concerned.

Thanking you for space.
 Yours truly,
 STEPHEN LOVERIDGE,
 St. John's, April 19th, 1913.

Is Fergus Going to St. Barbe?

Editor Evening Telegram.
 A contributor to the Daily News, who signs himself "Fergus Mac Roi," has at last appeared in his true colors and has thrown off the mask of the gentle lamb. The would-be adviser to the voters of this country to weigh well the responsibility that rests with them and when the time comes to cast their ballots in the best interest of home and country. This mild, plausible writer in his first letter drew an expression from Mr. J. C. Morris, who honestly pronounced himself; further than that no one has heeded his effusions. In yesterday's issue of the News "Fergus" comes out boldly, throws off the garb of the lamb, and wolf like goes about devouring all and sundry who opposed Sir E. P. Morris and his united rank and file, as he is pleased to term the hungry set who go to make up the party of Grab-alls, commonly known as the Picnic Party. My object in writing this note is to learn from the would-be "Fergus" if he is going to contest St. Barbe in the next election.

Yours,
 WATCHMAN.

"As the Twig is Bent—"

BY RUTH CAMERON.

The laundryman, for some unknown reason, was two days late with the laundry, and the head of the family discovered one morning that he hadn't a single clean collar. "Where are the clean collars?" he called to his wife. She left the toast to burn and hurried into the bedroom to answer him. "Why, the laundry hasn't come," she explained apologetically. "I don't know why; it never was so late before. I'm awfully sorry." Her tone was extremely apologetic, and her manner most deprecating. Now the head of the house was new to his job and didn't know exactly what heads of houses did under such circumstances. But when he heard his wife's apologetic tone he took his cue from that. Evidently he was expected to blame her, and so he did. "I'd like to know what I'm going to do," he growled in a most accusing manner. "Here it is half-past seven, and I haven't a clean collar to put on. I suppose I'll have to use one of those half dirty ones. Give me the laundry bag. I wish you'd see that I don't get caught like this again."

Of course she hastened to hand him the bag; and of course she promised not to offend him as humbly as if she had really been to blame; and of course she was very sweet and solicitous at breakfast to atone for the sin she hadn't committed; and of course he graciously relented, as heads of houses usually do when they have relieved their minds by blaming someone for their annoyances. And lastly, of course that man is going to develop into a household bully. Twenty years from now he will be a confirmed tyrant in his home. Why shouldn't he be when his wife is evidently so eager to be tyrannized over? When you see a spoiled child you can know there is a spoiling mother behind him. When you see a bullying, tyrannical husband, you can know that he has a wife who has helped to develop this attitude. It's a tremendous relief to the mind to have someone to blame for anything that annoys you. Therefore when a wife shows that she is willing to be reproached for every unpleasant thing that happens, whether it is really her fault or not, do you blame the husband for using this safety valve whenever he has a feeling of annoyance?

I don't. At least no more than I blame the wife for taking that attitude. Good husbands, like good children, must be trained from the very start. A wrong attitude at the beginning means an ever-widening breach between what is and what ought to be. The wife who wants to live with a reasonable, just husband, and not a tyrant, will not invite her husband to blame her for things that are not her fault.

She will sympathize with him for his annoyances, and try to help him out of them, but she will not apologize for them when she knows she is entirely guiltless.

Ruth Cameron

Are You Blue and Worried?

Nervous? Some of the time really ill? Catch cold easily and frequently suffer from biliousness or headache? The reason is that your system does not rid itself of the poisons in the blood; just as impossible as it is for the grate of a stove to rid itself of cinders. The waste does to us exactly what the cinders do to the stove; make the fire burn low until enough cinders have accumulated and then prevent its burning at all. Your liver is sluggish—you are dull and heavy—sleep does not rest, nor is food appetizing. In this condition illness develops. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery eradicates the poisons from the body—a glyceric alternative extract made from bloodroot, golden seal and mandarin root, sassafras and licorice root, without the use of alcohol. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood.

Mrs. Blake

Mrs. BENJ. BLAKE, of Fort Dover, Ont., Box 36, writes: "I have been a great sufferer for years from throat trouble, catarrh, indigestion, female troubles, biliousness, constipation and nervousness—at times I would be fit to bed, then able to be up again. Was under many different doctors' care and used many different medicines. I would now show you with chronic inflammation all through me. For nineteen years I had this condition in my throat and bowels. I read in The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I have taken the Golden Medical Discovery, Pleasant Pellets, and have used five bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I am now able to do my work and walk like a new woman. I enjoy everything around me and thank God for letting me live long enough to find something that made me well again."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver and bowels.

Household Notes.

When oranges are to be sliced, pour boiling water on them, let stand a few minutes, and the white lining will come away with the skin.

It is a good idea to make occasionally for the children little puddings in individual moulds, and cakes and cookies cut in fancy shapes. Shepherd's pie is minced lamb mixed with its own gravy, seasoned and placed in a baking dish with a layer of mashed potato over it.

To make strawberry snow, beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, then slowly beat in four tablespoonfuls of crushed strawberries.

Cut mats from discarded hot-water bottles and place under flower pots if you wish to protect the surface the pots stand on.

A big vase, with a wet sponge in it, kept near the piano, will give the air the moisture required to keep the piano in good condition.

If food should ever burn in an aluminum cooking vessel, it should be soaked in cold water and then scraped off with a wooden spoon, instead of a sharp knife.

When you wish to put radishes away in a bowl of water in the refrigerator, don't put anything else with them. Strong vegetables exchange flavors.

To wash velvet, make a lather of soap and warm water and soak the fabric in it—squeezing, but not rubbing. Rinse with clear water and dry without wringing.

To remove walnut stains from clothing, saturate the stained garments with kerosene and wash in warm water. Then boil, and the stains will be gone.

With a delicate child, it often tempts the appetite if the right food is served in different pretty dishes on different days—they get a touch of imagination which often helps along a meal.

If aluminum ware is handled with full of dents, it can be hammered into shape again, which is one reason why it is the most economical ware a housewife can use.

If new lace curtains are soaked a few hours in a strong solution of salt and water, they will be easier to wash. The solution takes out the lime they are often dressed with.

If you are in the habit of lending books, it pays to keep name of book, name of person who has it and date of loan. Then cross out the name when the book is returned.

Bechamel sauce is made by heating one tablespoonful each of flour and butter, seasoning with salt and pepper, and then adding a cupful of hot milk, seasoned with minced parsley. Cheesecloth bags in which to place green vegetables before putting into the refrigerator, help to keep their contents fresh and the refrigerator clean. They should be washed every week.

One way of broiling fish on a haddle is to cut in small squares, skin and parboil. Dry and broil over a clear fire until it is a golden brown. Serve on a hot platter, with butter and lemon juice on each piece.

Before putting furs away, they should be whipped with a cane. Then sew them up in thick brown paper bags. But the only perfectly safe method of caring for furs is to put them in cold storage, which you feel sure is perfectly secure from dampness.

A delicious dish for children is English frumenty, made of one quart of cracked wheat, cooked till clear and soft. Add a quart of milk and cook again until it is as thick as cream. Take it off the fire, add sugar, nutmeg and washed currants (which have been previously cooked) and the beaten yolks of two eggs.

Women Are in Their Glory Now

It is natural for a woman to blossom out in the Spring the same as any other flower. It is natural for her to array herself in colors suitable to her charm, and to surround herself with that aroma of mystery which is at once the essence of all creative life. As a man goes down the streets these days he sees a riot of color and a procession of charm that fairly dazzles him. And the woman that has not something new to wear, some color to flaunt, some attractiveness to display, is sadly out of it. And nobody knows this better than the woman herself.

This charm is not a matter of beauty alone. It depends a great deal upon the clothes. A man can talk all he pleases about the grace of simple beauty in a calico dress, but let a woman go by in a pretty afternoon suit with dainty low shoes and an aviation hat, and if that man doesn't break his neck in following her with his eyes it will be because his feet were quick enough to save him.

No, Madam. Listen to all this simple beauty talk as much as you please. Listen quietly while your husband, or your brother, or your lover tells you about beauty unadorned, (one of the best things a clever woman ever does is to listen quietly while a man is making a fool of himself.) And after they have finished all their tirade against the extravagance of dress and the folly of it, you go out and be as extravagant and as foolish as you can, and you'll twist some man's head on his shoulders never fear.

Let them talk, (a woman can always listen well while she's thinking of something else) and while they are talking, you turn quietly through this paper, to the advertising of new spring clothes and shoes and hats and stockings and waists and lingerie. Don't say anything, but read every advertisement carefully, and just plan out your shopping trip as fast as you can.

This advertising will tell you just where to go and what to buy. It will help you in your decisions and your judgments, and it will bring you back looking better than you've ever looked before; making you feel that you are part of this great colorful throng of women that comes each year with the Spring. Buy everything you can. Life is short, and the time to enjoy it is now.

And in parting remember this: a man will probably forgive you in a new hat, but he'll certainly forget you in an old one.

Stricken Suddenly and Fatally.

While Mr. Solomon Snow, an aged shipwright, was at work on the dock premises Saturday afternoon he became suddenly ill and was borne to his residence, Rossiter's Lane, where he had lived alone for the past couple of years. Drs. Paterson and Pritchard were present, and Rev. Fr. Kelly, of St. Patrick's, administered the last Sacraments. Though the man protested against it he had to be sent to Hospital in the ambulance as to leave him in the house which he tenanted alone would be heartless, the surroundings being anything but pleasant especially for a sick person. Mr. Snow died at the Hospital yesterday. The deceased though so far advanced in years (he was 87) was a remarkably hardy man and was energetic and industrious and worked until overtaken by his last illness. He was a man of more than ordinary hardihood, pluck and daring and those who knew him in the prime of manhood say that he was a splendid type of the Newfoundland fisherman and seaman.

LONDON, To-day.
Suffragettes had plenty of evidence yesterday that the public are tired of militancy and only the protection afforded by a large body of police saved the women from the hands of an angry mob. At Brighton, the suffragettes were chased off the esplanade and took refuge in a neighboring house. This was surrounded by howling thousands who bombarded the place with stones and smashed every window. In defiance of the ban on meetings in Hyde Park, the Women's Social and Political Union attempted to carry on a propaganda there. Londoners had anticipated that an attempt would be made and 20,000 assembled at the customary meeting place. No sooner had the suffragettes mounted the box and unfurled the militants flag, than the police interfered.

New York, To-day.
"I commit my soul into the hands of my Saviour in full confidence that having redeemed it and washed it in His most precious blood, He will present it faultless before the throne of my Heavenly Father, and I entreat my children to maintain and defend at all hazards, and at any cost of personal sacrifice the blessed doctrine of complete atonement for sin through the Blood of Jesus Christ, once offered, through that alone." This is the striking utterance which begins the last will and testament of J. P. Morgan, who died at Rome, March 31st last. The amount bequeathed in trusts named by specific sums is under twenty million dollars, but the entire residue of estate is left to J. P. Morgan, Jr., who is designated by his father, becomes chief heir not only to his fortune, but to his many charitable and artistic activities. Public charity bequests are comparatively small in the direction of those objects in which Mr. Morgan's benefactions are already known. The disposition of the estate follows: The first provisions are those of his own family. To his wife Frances Louis A. Tracey Morgan, an income for life from the trust fund of one million dollars with power to dispose of the capital by will. Mrs. Morgan is already entitled to an income from the trust fund created by Junius Spencer Morgan (Morgan's father) by deed dated July 1st, 1867. The will provides that she is now to receive for life an income from additional trust of such an amount that her total income from these two trusts shall (aside from income of one million dollars fund) amount to $100,000 a year. Mrs. Morgan also receives during her life Cragton, Morgan's country house at Highland Falls, N. Y., also the Morgan home at No. 219 Madison Avenue, New York city together with furniture, paintings, etc. (except family portraits) in both houses. His son John Pierpont Morgan, Jr. receives an outright legacy of $3,000,000; three daughters receive each an income for life from a trust fund of $3,000,000. Morgan's two sons-in-law receive each an outright legacy of a million. To each of the employees at time of death, in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Company, of the city of New York, except Charles W. King, above named, an amount equal to one year's salary, and to each person who survive him who was at the time of the dissolution of the firm of J. S. Morgan & Company, London, as employee thereof, an amount equal to one year's salary. Morgan's valet, Edward Phillips, receives a legacy of $15,000. Various annuities are provided to other servants in recognition of faithful service. A charitable bequest that $100,000 for a House of Rest for consumptives be designated as Amelia Sturge's Morgan Memorial Fund, in memory of Morgan's first wife. Mr. Morgan having thus provided for immediate relatives, various friend employees, servants, charity, etc., declares that the residue of his property shall be bequeathed to his son John Pierpont Morgan, Jr., his heirs, for his and their own use forever.

Obituary.
MRS. E. HART.
The death of Mrs. Elizabeth Hart, aged 88, an esteemed lady of Freshwater Road, and widow of the late William Hart, of Trinity, occurred last night. Deceased had been ailing for over three years. Three sons and a number of grandchildren survive. The Telegram extends sympathy.
LEO O'NEIL.
The death occurred early yesterday morning at his residence, Cabot St., of Master Leo O'Neil, only son of Mr. P. J. O'Neil, of the Customs Department. The deceased who had been ill for sometime past was an intelligent young chap and liked by all who knew him. He was especially gifted as a musician and could perform on several instruments with remarkable proficiency. To his parents and other relatives the Telegram extends its sympathy.
MRS. HARTIGAN.
There passed peacefully away in East Boston, on Thursday, 17th inst., Margaret, beloved wife of Leo Hartigan. The deceased lady had been in indifferent health for some time before the final call came. She received the most expert medical treatment during her illness, but this proved futile to arrest the onward march of the dread reaper—Death, that respecteth neither the high nor the lowly, the young nor the old. The loving ministrations of a devoted and fond husband and an affectionate sister were hers when her falling strength and weakening spirit needed the milk of human kindness. Before the inevitable dissolution she received all the religious consolation that the Holy Catholic Church bestows upon her dying children, thus making easy the transition of the soul from this vale of tears to a better world beyond the grave. Fortified with the Holy Sacraments of the Church and with an entire submission to the Eternal decree, her spirit departed from its tenement of clay. Her end was peace. Mrs. Leo Hartigan was the eldest daughter of the late Michael Colford who died some fourteen years ago. She was twenty-eight years of age at the time of her death; nine years ago she went to Boston where she readily found employment congenial to her taste. Her sociality won her many and true friends to the great American city. Three years ago she united her fortunes with Mr. Leo Hartigan who now mourns the early demise of an affectionate helpmate. A child, the issue of their marriage, predeceased her in September last, aged nine months. She leaves to mourn her beside her husband a mother—Mrs. William Hogan, a step-father—Mr. William Hogan, two sisters, Nellie and Mary Alice, to whom the heartfelt sympathy of the community goes forth in this sad hour of their affliction. Maggie, as she was familiarly known, was possessed of a most amiable disposition; to know her was to love her. Her obsequies took place in the land of her adoption on Saturday, 19th inst. May her soul rest in peace.—Com.

A Remarkable Novel —IS—CAVIARRE,
 By E. Grant Richards.
 The author who, by the way, is publisher as well, made a special visit to Monte Carlo to study the inside workings of the extraordinary system of gambling which has been carried on there for so many years, and from it he has written one of the most fascinating novels that has ever been depicted. The scenes and characters are all true to life.

SPRING
 Satisfied,
 But Not Content!
 We don't worry about getting ahead of any competitor. Our chief aim is to get ahead of ourselves—to do better this year in Style, Fit and Finish than we did last year;
 to tailor better clothes than we have ever done before.
 We know the fate of the self-satisfied man, and with this knowledge we are not content to run a dead heat with our previous best.
