THE VALENTINE TRAGEDY.

On Saturday morning the bodies of George Valentine and his wife, recently killed at the Kingston road, were taken to the morgue. The bodies were taken to the morgue at 11 o'clock.

The last letter touched briefly on two points which are important enough to demand further consideration. During years past we have been used to hearing of the immense advantages we would derive from having opened up to us the market of forty millions of people.

Mr. Valentine has two brothers living in Ireland, and both of them are very rich. The older, Wm. Valentine, is a millionaire, owning the largest linen factory in Ireland, employing 1,600 hands, the third largest number of hands in a line of linen manufactures playing between Liverpool and Dublin, and is one of the north of Ireland large shareholders in the north of Ireland.

It is understood that the relations of the deceased will see the company for very heavy damages, and that William Valentine has been called in Belfast to assist in the matter.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING. That's what I want—Getten. I'll skin them all—John Hallam. I'm going in sure—The Candidate.

How soon will I be forgotten—1881. I'm going to make a thing howl—1882. There's a crank in the jury—Corkhill.

I'll be a wet day when I get left—John Damp. By the gods I'll head the poll—Col. Arthur. If I don't get Buxter's scalp I'll get his clothes—James French.

The old fool thinks he is going to get in the Candidate's office. I make an excellent chairman, and I wear a lambskin coat—Brother McLaughlin.

Oh come, my fore and by with me. To the island over the Bay, rubies—Miss the butch and the thurshes. This tip is the only one.

The time admits not flowers nor leaves. To deck the north and east, and ice. The black of them at the sharpened curves.

The north wind doth blow. And we shall have snow, poor thing. He'll hop to the barn. He'll keep himself warm.

And make his head under his wing, poor thing. He'll keep himself warm. He'll keep himself warm.

When milk comes frozen home in pail. Old Post. The north wind doth blow. And we shall have snow, poor thing.

WHAT THE WILD PREACHER SAYS. Last evening Dr. Wild spoke to a large audience on what was alleged to be a lecture on July and August. The sermon was a philosophical exposition of time.

Time is motion, the measure of rugged succession. Baby is from the same root as Babel—both mean noise and confusion.

It will come about 1875—in other words Turkey will have to leave Jerusalem in a very few years. By that time the world will have settled down to universal peace.

ON COMMERCIAL UNION.

TWO IMPORTANT POINTS ON THE COMMERCIAL UNION QUESTION. High the Market of Fifty Millions Question.

The market of fifty millions is the great and impassable barrier of the manufacturing States. The last letter touched briefly on two points which are important enough to demand further consideration.

During years past we have been used to hearing of the immense advantages we would derive from having opened up to us the market of forty millions of people. That used to be the old figure; but, thanks to the rapid growth of the Great Republic, we are now tempted to the market of fifty millions.

A giant with the market of fifty millions before our eyes, but if we could only see the magic lantern slide as they are, the illusion would disappear. Fifty millions is an enormous exaggeration of the number of Americans who might be our customers under even very favorable circumstances.

Under something like the old Reciprocity Treaty Canadian farm produce, also the coal of Nova Scotia, would be a market in New York and the New England states, while iron and lumber would sell largely in America, and it may be added that American millers, from Minneapolis eastward along the line of the lakes, would bid good prices for the wheat of Manitoba and the Northwest.

In practice, however, the supposed market of fifty millions of people would dwindle down to one of about ten or twelve millions only, at the outside. Two-thirds or three-fourths of the American people are by reason of distance practically beyond our reach—to sell to them.

ONLY THE BORDER STATES have ever taken any interest in Reciprocity; away from the border no interest at all is felt in the question. At the annual meetings of the National board of trade, somebody from Chicago, Milwaukee, Buffalo, or Oswego is sure to bring the matter up, and representatives of Boston and New York lend a helping hand, because these cities, though at a considerable distance from the border, have a strong interest in becoming supporters of Canadian trade.

But, under the most favorable circumstances, that can be imagined, and with relations to our raw produce only, it is not a market of fifty millions, but one of less than a quarter of that number, that is really in question. The fact ought to be obvious enough without much aid of proof; still, through our failure to take a straight daylight look at it, the colorful illusion of a market of forty or fifty millions has largely imposed upon our understanding.

Though the number of possible American customers for our raw produce has been thus greatly exaggerated, the market in question is a real and substantial one, enough, even after we have reduced the figures to what it should be. The market actually a large, live, and profitable one, for the border; and as things are the profits are considerably reduced by the tolls we have to pay for admission. Supporting us to obtain free admission, the market is there, most unquestionably, no illusion at all, but a solid reality. Can the same be said of the boundless possible market for Canadian manufactured goods, which some people manufactured goods, which some people manufactured goods, which some people manufactured goods.

Let us begin with a few facts, indicated by questions which seem to me to be of the most vital importance. Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts? Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts?

To send our goods to the border, from Rochester to Chicago? A Western Ontario firm selling made to some of the typical Yankee imports, carriage wood and iron work, and whole array of the typical Yankee imports, carriage wood and iron work, and whole array of the typical Yankee imports.

Now, do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts? Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts?

Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts? Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts?

Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts? Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts?

Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts? Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts?

Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts? Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts?

Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts? Do we export to and sell boots and shoes and cotton goods in Massachusetts, or do we import them from Massachusetts?
