Mr. McNaughton. He also was opposed to perpetuating religious distinctions. In the present case, however, there was no application for legislative aid. One gentleman had given the funds—an oligarch— and all they asked was the power of representation.

The bill, however, did not stand still; it provided for maintaining a number of orphan children, and he thought it very hard for the legislature to refuse them that power.

Mr. Portlock wished, for time to examine the details of the Bill, and as some of his colleagues were absent, he called a Committee which made good progress. This proposition was not objected to, and accordingly progress was reported.

THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON'S ADDRESS TO HIS TROOPS.

At the review of the Imperial Guard in Paris on Tuesday, the 9th January, the Emperor made the following speech:

"Soldiers! The French nation, by its sovereign will, has resuscitated many things which were thought for ever dead, and to you, the soldiers, who have been the instruments of that resuscitation, I say, 'Well done.' The day of France waves over us like a flood, but our eagles had not before ventured. The Imperial Guard, the heroic companion of the host of nations, has now become the banner of your Emperor, and the French, wearing the same uniform, carrying the same flag, and having especially in their hearts the same sentiments of devotion to their country. Believe me, these days, when you march through France, as these are the golden days, as they have not left you unconsol'd, and take your share of what still remains of danger to be overcome and glory to be earned, and I wish you would have received the noble baptism on which your ambition, and you will have lent your assistance to plant our eagles on the walls of Sebastianopol."

ENGLISH AND FRENCH COURTESIES.

Paris, Dec. 29.—The Moniteur of this day contains the following:

"The Ambassador of France at London having communicated to Lord Castlereagh the speech of the President of the Legislative Corps, and the Emperor on the 20th of December last, transmitting to me, by order of His Majesty, the reply to the following letter from the principal Secretary of State of His Britannic Majesty—

"Monsieur l'Amiral de Roville, I have received the letter which your Excellency sent me, and the honor to address to you on the 20th of December last, transmitting to me, by order of His Majesty, the Emperor of the French, a copy of the Moniteur containing the speech pronounced by the President of the Legislative Corps on the occasion of the unanimous vote of that assembly on the Lyon Bill, as well as the reply of His Majesty.

"I have paid your Excellency's communication before the Queen, and her Majesty orders me to thank you for your kind and considerate answer, for the sake of cordiality, to which the speech of the President of the Legislative Corps and the reply of His Imperial Majesty express themselves on the consequences of the English and her forces, who share the hardships and dangers of the war."

"May I also be allowed to address to your Excellency the thanks of the members of the Government of your Majesty for the communication of which you have been so kind. Your Excellency's reply, in which you have reciprocated the British parliament and nation's sentiment towards the French army and navy, the sentiments of sympathy and gratitude which the speech of the President of the Legislative Corps and the reply of the Emperor have so happily expressed towards the land and sea forces of the Queen, and the Emperor will make good to the army that this new proof of devotion and self-sacrifice."

CLARKESTON.

The Moniteur has also the following:—
"The Government has denied that the soldiers who would be free from service on the 1st of January next, shall, instead of being under a flag, those that shall have been replaced by the soldiers of the class of 1824, that is to say until next spring. Without doubt this delay, although legal and necessary, is a new charge imposed upon a great number of soldiers of the Empire, with the result that the honor and glory of France are at stake, counts upon the patriotism of all; and he who will make this new sacrifice to his country, and the country and the Emperor will make good to the army this new proof of devotion and self-sacrifice."

HUSSIA.

European Russia is supposed to contain 63 millions of people, and to exceed 50 or 55 millions. Owing to the want of accurate statistics, it is impossible to learn the numbers of the race exactly. The Russian proper, who can understand one another's talk, belong to three main races, according to Grotius, the German, the Baltic, and the Ruthenian, Kuthens or Kaschau also called white Russian. These have three different dialects strongly marked. The Muscovite race is from 18 to 20 millions, the Ruthenian 20 millions, and the German 25 millions or so.

The Muscovites alone can be called the ruling race, though the actual officials are still Germans from the Baltic provinces. Haythausen, in speaking of the ten races inhabiting Novgorod, of which the two largest are the German and the Ruthenian, are these, says, they are out of France, and do not mingle with one another. Each has its own language, its own customs, its own manner of life. And, as far as we know, the German, and the Ruthenian, are the only two that have any religious connection with the Czar, so far as he does, enforces religious uniformity by violence, may some of these days, lead to a fierce disruption. The Kosacks have never submitted to the Imperial ecclesiastical power, but the separate organizations of their priests and Bishops. The Ruthenians, however, of Russian population is 27 millions it is equal to France and Germany, but, if we are to regard the Muscovite race alone as the nucleus, it does not exceed 15 millions.

There are only two roads in the Russian Empire, in our sense of the word; from Petersburg to Moscow, and from Petersburg to Warsaw. To these there are no branches, such as we would call paths or roads. Many roads, however, snow-covered, torn from their mother, etc., are to be seen parts of these two roads, and the results do not keep pace with the damage. In such a climate the tracks (not road) are only good in the height of summer or fall, winter, for the year there is either soft snow, melting slush, pools and swamps, a terrible bog.

FOOD PROSPECTS.—IRELAND.

The Dublin Evening Post of Saturday, Jan. 13, has:

"Throughout Ireland the war question has had its influence on prices, and most of the country markets are cheaper for every description of grain, and the decline has been equal to that which we notice in the Dublin Corn Market."

"We had the 'Peace Intelligence' in Dublin in the morning, and the market was off 10 per cent. way back, 10 per cent. by noon, and at 1 p.m. 15 per cent. by 5 p.m. 20 per cent. and at 7 p.m. 25 per FOLLY.
SCOTLAND.

On a mountain crossed Scotland;
I never did them see;
Dress as a gracious mother,
Unto her children's heart;
I marvel not they love thee,
Thou land of rock and glen,
O'er stream, and lake and mountain,
And meadows girt about.

On a wild ocean crossed Scotland;
They many lands have seen,
Are full of pleasant memory,
And tales of other days!

The story-haunted waters
In music dash along,

The sun-gleam glistens here,
The hillsides hilly sing;

The downy domes of Yarrow,
The green Ayrshire fields,

The deep mill-dells of Monnow,
Where called "the milk-white swan."

The loves' Bloody meeting,
On Fair Kirkcudlenn her'

We sing them to the lumbering child
We cradle on our knee!

Land of the Bruce and Wallace,
Where their hosts have stood,

And their countrymen their faith,
Like a sturdy tree their bough;

Where wife and little children
Were steadfast to death,

And graves of martyr-warriors,
Are in the desert waste—

Land of the social virtues—
Where the tiler of the end

Sat in his lonely household,

Convinced he had no God;

Where the lonely shepherd roams,

His book within the girdle,

And the poorest dweller of the hills
Respects themselves as men.

Our minstrel Scotland!

I marvel not thou art

Dear, as a gracious mother,

Unto her children's heart;

I marvel not they love thee,
