WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The Women's Institute meeting held in High School Hall on Jan. 25th was well attended, which shows the ever increasing interest the ladies are taking in this organization. The hall was decorated with flags and plants and presented an inviting appearance. Across the front of the room hung the motto, "If you know a good thing, pass it on," expressing one of the aims of the Institute.

The meeting opened by singing the Maple Leaf. After the business of the meeting was discussed, the program presented was as follows:—

Gramophone selections.
Demonstration on pierced brass work by Mrs G. Wing.
Gramophone selections.
Solo—Mr Haynes of the A. H. S. seaff. Encore.

Paper on the Ancient History of Athens by Mrs Charles F. Yates, after the reading of which the audience sang a patriotic song.

Demonstration of punch embroidery work by Mrs E. Eaton.

In both demonstrations beautiful specimens of the work were shown.

Gramophone Selections.
Remarks by the President, Mrs W. Johnson; and the Vice-President, Mrs S. S. Cornell.
Refreshments served.

THE PATRIOTIC CONCERT

The concert held in the town hall on Thursday evening last under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of Christ's Church more than fulfilled the high expectations that had been raised concerning it.

The musical numbers were strictly high-class, while the military and spectacular features were a delight and inspiration to all.

The vocal soloists were Miss Christie of Oxford Mills, Mr A. Haynes, Mr Longman and Mr Berney, and all were rewarded with encores. Miss Christie possesses a fine sweet voice of wide compass, highly trained, which she uses with good judgement, and her several numbers were heard with unmistakable pleasure by the large audience assembled.

Miss Horton of Delta was the reciter of the evening and she received the welcome due a favorite with Athenians.

The choruses, all of a patriotic nature, were full-voiced, melodious, and inspired all with the patriotic sentiments of their themes.

A quartette of "little curly-headed coons," consisting of Lawrence Taylor, Manford Gifford, Bobby Layng and Hope Swayne, was a particularly pleasing feature of the evening.

The farce, "Married to a Suffragette," was well put on, and in a very amusing way depicted what might happen to a man thus united for worse.

The military parade and tableau evoked applause as representatives of the different countries composing the British empire, all appropriately uniformed, appeared before the footlights, the whole fittingly grouped in a tableau at the close.

The Gypsy Festival was characterized by gorgeous costumes, popular vocal numbers, and good minstrel music.

Mrs Parish, Mrs Swayne, and Miss Berney were the accompanists of the evening.

Rev. W. G. Swayne presided and so managed the stage that the whole programme was presented smoothly and no long waits.

Good orchestral music filled in all intervals.

WHITE FOX FURS
Favorites for Misses and Little Girls.

White fox furs (and other furs that look like fox) remain the favorite for misses and little girls' wear.

There is a fad just now for velvet hats with Tam crowns having a fox tail at the side for trimming.

For a little girl, hats are entirely or partially covered with fur.

A white fox set is sometimes worn with a plush turban finished with bows of plush.

Another for which is favored for young people and children, is that of the squirrel.

For older people it is usually dyed, but luxurious long coats are made of natural skins.

These plushes are altogether desirable for neckpieces and muffs for children, and misses, as for grown-ups.

Besides these furs and fabrics, neckpieces and muffs with caps to match are crocheted or knitted of yarns made for the purpose.

Forty years in use, 20 years the standard, prescribed and recommended by physicians.

DO YOU KNOW HIM? (By Miriam Techner in the Detroit News) I'm sorry for all sick folks, yes, indeed!

I'm sorry for the people ill in bed, with aching limbs or sorely throbbing head.

I'm sorry for the patients who must lie for hours and hours, and see bright days break by.

But I'm sorriest for him who's not laid up. It seems to me he has the bitterest cup to drink.

For which he takes no medicine or pill. But simply lies there, when at night he draws his face toward home, no face bright.

I'm sorry for the people bearing pain; I know 'tis hard to stand and not complain.

For those who know the fading of all hope. As kindly they for health and vigor grope.

Does it seem to you that they who love you, go out to him who plays that wretched part.

The nervous father. When, instead of joy Lighting the faces of his girl and boy.

At night when he comes home, and arms that cling to his neck and his face to his.

And shouts of laughter that his father brings. The youngsters creep about and hush their play.

And out the noisy playthings all away. And furtive glances at him when he comes to lay.

And laugh to loud, and never come to bed. The mother, too, as she to her bed goes, to the weary head, for fear someone will say:

"Hush, children; father's nerves are bad to-day."

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS. Your druggist will refund money if PAMO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of itching, smarting, bleeding or protruding piles in 6 to 14 days.

To clean wool shawls or sweaters make a good lather of soap and warm water—just hot enough to be comfortable to the hands.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. CURE ALL KIDNEY DISEASES. BRILLIANT SUCCESS IN ALL CASES OF NEURALGIA, MIGRAINE, DIABETES, BACKACHE, GRAVEL, RHEUMATISM, GOUT, AND ALL URINARY AFFECTIONS.

GIVE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

The little ills of babyhood and childhood should be treated promptly, or they may prove serious.

promptly restore health. Or they will come unexpectedly. Mrs. Lenora M. Thompson, Oil Springs, Ont., says:

"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my little girls as occasion required, and have found them always of the greatest help."

PUZZLE THE MAN. And Wife Will Hold, Him, Says Author.

Zoe Anderson Norris, editor and magazine writer, who elects to live on the East Side among pushcart people, holds a brief for woman's mystery.

"Woman is almost as great a mystery to herself and to other women as she is to man," she said.

"His egoism. He wants her to be a child, below him in intellect, without the same pride, without the same high instincts."

"He will break her heart, then return, perhaps years after, and expect her to forgive all and take him back."

"Very few men comprehend music and poetry. How, then, could they understand women?"

"Women should not reveal. We should shroud and cover body, soul and mind. For man loves only to be fooled."

"The really wise woman is she who remains a puzzle. She must learn to defend herself against man's blunders, but she must cling to her mystery."

"Let woman cultivate the mystery. Mystery breeds interest; interest breeds love—and you know what makes the world go round."

It takes a clever woman to live a score of years with a husband and keep him mystified.

The Latest Fire Engine. An interesting new type of automobile fire engine for Paris has just been decided upon by the municipal council.

The machine will be of specially light construction, and will carry four men only, but will be fitted with a large tank, containing 400 liters of water.

Thus, as the engine arrives on the scene of fire, it can begin pumping water while the firemen are making the necessary connection at the nearest main with a minimum waste of time.

Nazim Pasha, Former War Minister of the Porte, Slain by Young Turks.

New Cabinet Formed Following Uprising Over Cession of Adrianople.

Constantinople, Jan. 27.—Nazim Pasha, former Minister of War and commander-in-chief of the Turkish forces in the recent war with the Balkan allies, was shot dead in the streets here to-night during disorders which followed the resignation of the Cabinet to-day.

Nazim Pasha stated before the Grand Council yesterday that he would like to continue the war, provided he had the funds to do so. As the powers refused to provide any money in case of the war being continued, he yielded to the suggestion of the other members of the council and advised the surrender of Adrianople.

Nazim Pasha has been criticised somewhat severely for his conduct of the operations at Jule Burgas, especially by the Young Turk army officers. The crisis came with dramatic suddenness, and the Ottoman Cabinet resigned, and Mahmoud Shekfat Pasha, formerly Minister of War and commander of the constitutional army which enthroned Mehmed V. as Sultan, was appointed Grand Vizier.

Yesterday the Grand Council, representing the intellect and wealth of the nation, pronounced in favor of peace almost at any price. To-day a vast crowd, drawn from all classes of the proletariat, declared for war rather than peace without Adrianople. And because the crowd was backed by general public opinion the Government surrendered and relinquished office, making way for the same men whom the popular movement brought to the top after the revolutions of 1908 and 1909.

The resignation of the Cabinet was announced in the following official statement:

"The decision of Kiamil Pasha's Cabinet, taken in response to the note handed to the Turkish Government by the European powers, to abandon the fortress of Adrianople and part of the islands in the Aegean Sea, and the convocation of an extraordinary assembly of the Grand Council of the Ottoman Empire, to which the Cabinet's decision was submitted, a course contrary to the prescriptions of the constitutional charter and violating the sacred rights of the people—roused the indignation of the Turkish nation, with the result that the people made a demonstration before the Sublime Porte and brought about the resignation of the Government."

BLOODLESS REVOLUTION.

The Council of Ministers met shortly before noon to give final shape to the note accepting the proposals of the powers. About three o'clock people from all quarters began to gather in front of the gate to the Grand Vizierate. Enver Bey, one of the leaders of the Young Turks, who was identified with the campaign in Tripoli and Nadje Bey, a prominent Unionist, arrived about this time, and were deputed to inform the Cabinet that it must retire.

Enver Bey soon issued from the Vizierate and announced that he held the resignation of Kiamil Pasha, which he was taking to the palace. This was greeted with tremendous cheering, which was frantically renewed an hour and a half later when he returned with an irate appointing Mahmoud Shekfat Pasha Grand Vizier.

While awaiting the return of Enver Bey, the enthusiasm of the crowd was kept at fever heat by addresses and the waving of banners. After a flying visit to the Porte, on his return from the palace, the Young Turk leader proceeded to the residence of Mahmoud Shekfat to communicate the imperial message.

In the meantime Talat Bey assumed provisionally the portfolio of the Ministry of the Interior, and Izzet Pasha that of War. In an interview Talat Bey said that the movement had not been planned, but was the outcome of popular feeling owing to the attitude of the Government with regard to the cession of Adrianople. If Adrianople were abandoned, he said, disturbances would break out over the length and breadth of the empire. With regard to money, the whole nation would make a sacrifice.

"No compromise was possible," he continued. "The change in the Cabinet means that we are going to save the national honor or perish in the attempt."

"We do not want a continuation of the war, but we are determined to keep the fortress of Adrianople at all costs. That is an indispensable condition of peace."

Kiamil Pasha and the other members of the Cabinet remain in their residences under guard. A proclamation nominating Mahmoud Shekfat Pasha as Grand Vizier was read at the Porte at seven o'clock this evening. On his arrival he was greeted enthusiastically by the great assemblage outside. The portfolio of Foreign Affairs has been offered to Hussein Hilmi Pasha, the present Ambassador at Vienna and a former Grand Vizier.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED.

Talat Bey summoned Noradudhan Effendi this evening for a consultation on the foreign situation. All the Constantinople newspapers not belonging to the Young Turk party have been suspended.

Earlier in the morning all the troops loyal to Kiamil Pasha were sent to practise manoeuvres in the vicinity of the Hill of Liberty, outside Constantinople, while a detachment which

ON ICE FLOE IN LAKE

Michigan Villagers Have Thrilling Escape.

Little Sturgeon, Wis., Jan. 27.—Fifty fishermen, more than half of the male population of this village, were swept out in Lake Michigan late last night when a large ice floe on which they were fishing cracked and floated away from shore. All were rescued after terrible suffering.

The cries of the men brought the children and women to the shore, where they stood in terror and watched their loved ones being slowly swept into Lake Michigan.

Small boats were manned by boys, and after a perilous ride through ice cakes some of the men were taken ashore. The boats were too small to carry all, and some of the others discarded their heavier clothing and swam through the icy waters to safety. The wind swept the ice cake further from shore with the men on it. Four swam ashore early to-day. Their clothing was frozen stiff when they arrived at their homes.

A TEXAS HORROR

McKinney Department Store Collapse Kills 30.

Others Missing in Fire Which Follows.

McKinney, Tex., Jan. 27.—Thirty persons were killed and twenty more are missing as the result of the collapse this evening of the three-story building of the McKinney Dry Goods Company, and the two-story building of the Tingle Implement Company. Fire which broke out immediately after the collapse is believed to have burned to death a number of persons who would have been rescued. Up to 8 o'clock to-night seven bodies had been taken from the debris and more have been located.

At least fifty persons were shopping in the department store when the walls caved in without a moment's warning. The crowd of shoppers in the store and the weakened structure of the building was taking place at the time, and the victims are chiefly women and children. The structure in falling smashed the adjacent implement store. Many of the dead were so burned and mutilated that prompt identification has been made impossible.

A mother and year-old infant were found dead with their arms around each other. Other women were found covering the bodies of their children. They had expended their dying strength in an effort to save the lives of their children.

The clerks who escaped from the department store say that the sale was at its height and that women were crowding around the counters. Suddenly the east wall cracked, and clerks and patrons gave it but momentary attention. Fifteen seconds later, however, both walls caved in upon them with a terrific crash. Screams that arose from throats of women were stifled by the blinding, crushing avalanche. A half-smothered groan, a rising pall of smoke and dust, and it was all over.

The actual number of dead will not be known until morning. The rescued do not wholly agree on the number in the store. Some declare that there were at least sixty persons in the building. There is small chance for any of those still buried in the debris to be taken out alive, but rescue work will continue until everything is cleared away.

BISHOP O'CONNOR

Head of Peterboro Diocese Passes Away.

Was in Priesthood Over Half a Century.

Peterboro, Ont., Jan. 27.—His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, who had been seriously ill for the past two weeks, died in St. Joseph's Hospital at 8:15 o'clock to-night. He was known several days ago that his Lordship could not recover and he had since gradually weakened. He suffered from neuralgia of the stomach and complications. The funeral will be held on Tuesday at 9:30 a.m., with services at St. Peter's Cathedral and interment at St. Peter's cemetery.

Right Reverend Alphonsus O'Connor, D. D., who was the spiritual head of the Diocese of Peterboro, was born in Kerry County, Ireland, in the year 1818, and was 75 years of age. His Lordship came to this country when only two years old, and spent nearly all his life in Canada.

Although born in Ireland, Bishop O'Connor was devotedly Canadian in patriotism and feeling. His Lordship was ordained in the priesthood in 1841.

His education was received in St. Michael's College, Toronto, and later in the Grand Seminary, Montreal. In the Diocese of Toronto he spent the years from 1861 until May, 1889, and served in various places until consecrated in Peterboro cathedral by Archbishop Clary, of Kingston, on May 1, 1889. In Barry, where was dean before coming to Peterboro, but is especially remembered, a portion of his life having been spent in the northern part of his first diocese before it was broken up with Sault Ste. Marie as the new jurisdiction. During the twenty-two years of his office in Peterboro he faithfully fulfilled the duties of the position, and won the devotion and esteem of his associates and brother clergy. In August of 1910 His Lordship celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

U. S. REPLY TO BRITISH NOTE

Refer Panama Dispute to Joint Commission.

USE TAFT'S PLAN

Is Secretary Knox's Idea to Settle Trouble.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The reply of the United States to the British note of protest against the Panama Canal Act, was made public by Secretary of State Knox to-night, simultaneously with the transmission of the note to the British Parliament for Foreign Affairs. The note states that the United States Government disagrees with the British interpretation of the Clayton-Bulwer and Hay-Pauncefote treaties, but discussion of this important phase of the controversy is reserved by Secretary Knox for another occasion.

With respect to Sir Edward Grey's suggestion that the Panama dispute be submitted to arbitration if the Canal Act be not repealed, Secretary Knox holds that such a proposal is premature. Mr. Knox bases this view on the ground that Great Britain complains only of something that possibly may happen, and also that arbitration should not be resorted to until the two Governments have failed to settle by diplomatic negotiations any matter of dispute between them.

The most interesting feature of Mr. Knox's note, however, is his proposal that all facts in the case which may continue to be the cause of a difference of opinion between the two Governments be referred for investigation and report to a joint high commission of enquiry, such as was provided for in the recent general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, which was ratified by the United States Senate in a hopelessly mutilated condition.

PRESENT TREATY TO EXPIRE.

It is understood Secretary Knox was impelled to make his proposal of investigation because the arbitration treaty now in force expires by limitation on June 4 next. Mr. Knox offers to carry out his proposal of investigation by a joint high commission either through a special agreement or under the general arbitration treaty recently ratified by the Senate. In other words, Mr. Knox proposes, in order to meet the present emergency, to exchange ratifications, if Great Britain is willing of the remains of the general arbitration treaty which President Taft sent to the Senate a year ago, and which emerged from that body with most of its vital parts missing. The idea of a joint high commission to investigate international controversies is preliminary to submitting them to arbitration with the distinctive new feature of the Taft arbitration programme. The Senate left this feature untouched in so far as it provided for an enquiry by the commission and a report on the facts in controversies, and this is as far as Secretary Knox proposes to go at this time.

Mr. Knox believes that an investigation of this character will result in containing Great Britain that she has no ground for seeking arbitration. Secretary Knox's present proposition is designed, therefore, to clear the air, or at least to narrow down the points at issue. It is the first practical application by him of one of the big principles contained in the general Taft arbitration programme. The joint high commission, if one should be organized under the recent treaty with Great Britain, might be made up of three nationals from each country, or otherwise constituted as agreed upon by the parties to the dispute. State Department officials believe that Secretary Knox's offer will demonstrate the sincerity and good faith of the United States, even though the Government holds that suggestions of arbitration are at this time premature.

FRENCH CABINET'S POLICY.

Paris, Jan. 27.—The new French Cabinet, under the Premiership of Aristide Briand, to-day submitted the customary declaration of policy to the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The document reaffirms France's fidelity to her alliances and friendships in regard to foreign affairs. The intention also is announced of bringing forward numerous domestic measures, the most important among which is the completion of the legislation giving proportional representation to minorities in Parliament.

CONVICT GOT HIS LIBERTY.

A London, Ont., despatch: Peter Fairburn, after having served nine months of a three years' term in Kingston Penitentiary for the crime of burglarizing and blowing the safe of the Hawken Roller Mills, was to-day released by County Judge MacBeth. Fairburn, who was arrested with John Murray who some years ago blew a bank at Hamilton, stoutly maintained that he was innocent and was granted a new trial by the Court of Appeal. The prisoner was accordingly brought back from Kingston, and on his appearance to-day Crown Attorney McKillop announced that he had no evidence to offer, further than that submitted at the original trial. Judge MacBeth therefore allowed him his liberty.

A ST. THOMAS HERO.

St. Thomas despatch says: George Cowan, an employee of a local shoe factory, has been presented with the Hamilton life-saving medal for saving the life of the daughter of Mr. Crisp, of this city, last August, when she was blown off the pier at Port Stanley. Cowan, the fourth person to receive the medal, was blown down

CHARGED TOO MUCH

Bermuda Protests U.S. Duty On Her Goods.

Washington, Jan. 27.—Protests from members of the Colonial Parliament at Bermuda that Customs officials at New York levy excess duty on importations of Bermudian vegetables have been received by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis, who to-day ordered an investigation. Although the American tariff law provides that ad valorem duty shall be based upon the value of such products in the country of growth, it is declared that the duty is based upon their value in the United States.

TORONTO CIRCUS

Dominion Grange Has Roast for Exhibition.

Makes Recommendations and Elects Officers.

Toronto despatch: Banking methods, the Canadian National Exhibition, the giving of bounties to industries, and the practice of bestowing titles in Canada all came in for criticism by the Dominion Grange at its meetings yesterday in Victoria Hall.

A resolution was moved by Mr. E. C. Drury and adopted by the meeting calling for the appointment of a Commission to take evidence from the agricultural, manufacturing and industrial interests of the country, and that information be gathered regarding banking methods in other countries, before the bank act is revised at Ottawa this session.

The Canadian National Exhibition was branded as a circus by the members. Mr. John Heatt, of Prince Edward county, opened the firing, "Do what Roosevelt did at Chicago," he said. "If they will not give what you want march out with flag unfurled. The National Exhibition is the big circus of Canada, with very little agriculture in it."

"The Canadian National Exhibition is only one point from a circus," said Mr. N. E. Burton, of Port Stanley. Mr. E. C. Drury protested against the job-ordination of agriculture to making the Exhibition a circus and a military show combined.

Mr. W. C. Good, of Brantford, was elected Master of the Grange for the ensuing year, and the following other officers were elected: Overseer, Col. John Z. Fraser; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. J. J. Morrison; Arthur, Lecturer, Mr. E. J. Woods; Corbett, Chaplain, Rev. Benjamin Merry; Prince Edward county; Steward, Mr. Crawford Allan; Alliance; Assistant Steward, Mr. F. D. Bainard; Executive Committee—Messrs. Henry Glendenning, J. J. Morrison, Col. John Z. Fraser, E. C. Drury and W. C. Wood.

That cement and other commodities be placed upon the free list permanently was urged in the report of the Legislation Committee, discussed and adopted yesterday morning. Prompt and thorough investigation of all alleged combinations in restraint of trade was also recommended. The Grange demands that the practice commonly known as "stock watering" be made a criminal offence. We believe that the practice is tantamount to a robbery of the public, and that legal means should be taken to prevent it. The Grange reiterated its demand for reform in the assessment law as will permit local option in taxation.

An interesting clause of the report is as follows: "We desire to commend the principle involved in the bill introduced recently in the Dominion Parliament by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., advocating the abolition in Canada of the practice of the bestowing of titles, believing that it tends to create man-made distinctions between man and man."

FIRE ON U. S. SOLDIERS.

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 27.—A telephone report late this afternoon stated that Mexican rebels to-day fired on United States troops of the Thirtieth Cavalry, patrolling the border near Fabens, Texas. Riding of ranches by rebels in the same vicinity to-day resulted in a fight with American ranchmen, who drove the raiders over the line, wounding one of them.

RAILWAYMEN INJURED.

Belleville despatch: Gordon Jamieson, fireman, and James Randall, brakeman, of the Grand Trunk Railway, were this afternoon injured in an accident which occurred on the Midland division of the road near Madoc Junction. The former was badly scalded about a face, neck and arms, and the latter was severely bruised about the body. Two parts of a train coming together caused the accident. Both men were brought to the hospital here.

LINSEED OIL MILLS FOR WEST.

Montreal, Jan. 27.—It is reported here that interests associated with the Great West Iron, Wood and Chemical Company have determined to erect in the Western flax districts the largest linseed oil mills on the continent. The question of location has not yet been determined, but Moose Jaw, Prince Albert and Saskatoon are mentioned as possible sites for the new plants. It is said the mills will have a capacity of 100,000 bushels.

FROGS' LEGS FRAPPE

Queer Results of New England Weather Vagaries.

Voluntown, Conn., Jan. 27.—Henry Smith, who lives just north of Tadpole Pond, came to town yesterday with a story that proves once again how truth can be stranger than fiction—and vice versa.

Mr. Smith reports that the warm weather of recent days lured hundreds of bullfrogs from the bottom of the ponds to disport at the surface and on the banks in the land, yet bracing sunshine. Their inspiring songs filled the gloaming with music, all the more appreciated because all the feathered singers of the region are sojourning at their southern playgrounds.

But this merriment was only a mask designed by fate to cover the horrid features of an oncoming tragedy. The flecks of warmth departed and the waters grew suddenly chill. The frogs, guided by an unerring instinct, leaped into the air for a last farewell look upon the scenery and then, simultaneously, started to dive back to the muddy fastnesses of Tadpole Pond. Alas, they were too late. Even as the batrachians dived the pond froze—froze quickly and hard, even as a banker here sought for charity by an old college chum, thus catching the frogs at waist line.

When gray skaters invaded the pond to-day they saw hundreds of what at first appeared to be twigs frozen in the ice of the pond. Closer inspection revealed that the supposed twigs were really frogs' legs frappe. Then the harvest began.

With many a graceful glide and curve the skaters swept here and there over the pond, severing with their skate blades the dainty crop planted by Farmer Jack Frost. And there is feasting to-night in many homes.

Another of the weather vagaries was recounted by Robert Sheehan, who lives near Jewett City. Mr. Sheehan had been bewailing the fact that his hens had ceased to lay. Search as he might, no eggs were to be found in the accustomed boxes in which he had made comfortable nests of excelsior. He solved the mystery yesterday when he found a nest one of the hens had "stolen." The eggs were hatching in the sun on the outside of the hen house.

BANK OF ENGLAND

Tragic and Romantic Episodes in its Historic Career.

DEADLY BATTLE WITH A MOB.

The Bloody Climax to the Attempted Raid by the Lord Gordon Rioters—A Financial Coup That Was Spoiled by the Duchess of Marlborough.

No other banking institution has so romantic a history as that pertaining to the Bank of England, the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street."

Not so very many years ago there stood over the massive fireplace in the directors' room of the bank three rusty specimens of the old "Brown Bess," together with a number of roughly shaped bullets.

The principal figure in the drama that ensued was no other than the famous Sarah Jennings, in whom Childs' bank found its staunchest supporter.

Whereupon the redoubtable duchess sat down and wrote out a check, which she handed to the agent. It was an order on the Bank of England for the payment of £700,000.

At 12 o'clock that day there appeared at the Childs' counter an agent of the Bank of England bearing a big bag full of receipts and blandly suggesting immediate payment.

The cashiers at Childs' naturally took their own time in scrutinizing the receipts, spending fully half an hour over the first batch alone.

It Seems to Be a Cross Between the Horse, Cow and Deer.

Did you ever hear of a horned horse? It is called the gnu and is a native of South Africa. The gnu is a puzzle.

The gnu inhabits the hilly districts of South Africa, roaming all over the country in vast herds.

STEALING A RAILROAD.

Not in a Financial Way, but by Carrying it Off Bodily.

No stranger theft was ever committed than the "lifting" of an entire railroad, twelve and one-half miles in length, which once connected Birr and Portumna in Ireland.

The line had cost $460,000, and for years it did service for the Great Southern and Western Railway company until the year 1878, when the company, which had been running it at a loss, washed its hands of it.

Dickens' Den. Dickens' care for his material surroundings did not end with his bedroom. His favorite writing place at Gadshill was a Swiss chalet in the shabby, and this he fitted up in a most ingenious fashion.

Judging the Colt.

The Arabs have two methods of estimating the height to which a colt will grow, the first being to stretch a cord from the nostril over the ears and down along the neck and compare this measurement with that from the withers to the feet and the distance between the knee and the coronet.

Pedestrians. A teacher in a primary school was endeavoring to make clear to her class the meaning of the words "equestrianism" and "pedestrianism" when she put this query to one small boy.

No Further Delay. Abner Slopuck (desperately)—M-may I name the day? Jemima Jones (decisively)—No! Abner Slopuck (in alarm)—Why? Jemima Jones (frankly)—Because if you put it off as long you did your proposal we never will be married. I'll name the day myself.—Cleveland Leader.

Harmonious. "They say Mrs. Jelliffe has given up that pet white poodle of hers," said Mrs. Johnson.

"Yes," said Mrs. Whittiger. "She's in deep mourning for Mr. Jelliffe. You know, so she has exchanged Toby for a black and tan."—Harper's Weekly.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON V.—FEB. 2, 1913.

The Flood.—Gen. 6: 9-22; 7: 11-24.

Commentary.—I. The wickedness of the people (6: 9-13). 9. The generations of Noah. This expression introduces the history of Noah which extends to the end of the ninth chapter.

24. A means of safety (vs. 14-22). God appointed Noah to the task of building an ark, and the work was twofold. He invited years of warning to the wicked and years of preparation for his own safety and that of his family.

11. The same day. It is a noticeable fact that dates and years in this narrative are given with great exactness. Foundations of the great deep broken up.

17. Waters. bare up the ark. During a period of forty days the water came rushing from the great deep and from the sky until their depth upon the land was great enough to float the ark.

Questions.—Who was Noah? How many centuries after Abel's death was the flood? What was the condition of mankind before the flood? Why did God command Noah rather than any one else to build the ark? Give the dimensions of the ark. Of what material was it made? Of what material was the ark's covering made? How were the people warned of the coming destruction? Who were saved in the ark? How great was the destruction caused by the flood? How many months was the ark afloat? In what way is the ark a type of the salvation provided for us?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—God's reckoning time. I. Concerning faith and morals. II. Concerning repentance and reward. III. Concerning faith and morals. In this lesson we have the testimony of God respecting man, "Every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually."

Lady Show You weighs six ponies and has laid several times her own weight in eggs during the period of one year.

During the first ten months of the trial she consumed 48 pounds of dry mash, 32 pounds of grain, and two pounds of grit, bone and shell. During these ten months she was not brooding nor did she moult.

The record of 282 eggs in one year was made by a barred rock hen at Onop, Canada. However, the Canadian hen laid small eggs with a very poor shell, while Lady Show You's eggs weighed on an average a little more than two ounces, with a good strong shell on each egg.

Her record won a cash prize of $25 from the Missouri State Poultry Board.

Now is the time to think about mating up the breeding pen for early chicks. The beginner will fare better with a few early hatched pullets than dozens of late ones or July hatched.

Order the incubator, brooder, day-old chicks or hatching eggs now for future delivery. With all poultry breeders the system is first come, first served. Be one of the early ones, and start the season right.

Among the majority of breeders there is less stock for sale than ever before. Last year was a hard one for the majority of poultry raisers, many not raising enough pullets to fill the laying houses.

Fanciers should keep utility in the foreground in breeding those varieties of fowls which are supposed to be useful. A large body of the patrons of breeders are men who buy fowls because they are useful.

It is equally legitimate for one to say that he will breed first and foremost for utility and let beauty come if it will and where it will. If one is breeding a variety with a reputation for laying his object will be to get the quality.

FARM SHEEP AND THEIR CARE.

While intelligent care is required in keeping sheep, otherwise the management is not much different than that needed for the other farm animals. An important point is to keep their feet and body dry.

The female sheep is known as ewe, pronounced "yew" or "you," and not "yoe," as so many old-time breeders call them. The Englishman says "yeowee."

The sheep has four compartments to its stomach, and usually its power to assimilate food is very good. The sheep is a very timid animal and is very often scared to death by dogs, or it may be so frightened by them as to not take on flesh.

There are three general classes of sheep: Fine wools, middle wools and long wools. The fine wool breeds are the several varieties of Merinos.

In the middle wools we find Oxford, Hampshires, Suffolks, Shropshires and Southdowns. These all have dark faces and legs, some being very black and their fleeces are dense and the staple medium length.

Some sheep men make a greater profit than others, and there are some who, by reason of mismanagement or neglect, turn a possible profit into an actual loss.

pick up a few ewes, breed for early lambs, push the lambs and sell them off early at good prices, then feed out the ewes and ship them to market. This can be made a good business if purchases can be made readily and without trouble.

The man who keeps a few good ewes, breeds and disposes of his wether lambs at good figures, and occasionally sells a carload of lambs and cast-off ewes, is doing the safest business, and this is the plan to be recommended to farmers who have good pastures and plenty of roughness.

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

A reader writes: "It is an assured fact that good apples cannot be grown without spraying, no matter how large or how small the orchard, there is a necessity to spray. The first thing to be considered is the outfit. It is impossible to do thorough work without a good machine, one that can stand a high pressure and do the work.

Good butter nearly always commands a fair price. The market is always crowded with poor butter, but butter with flavor, color and texture generally finds a buyer at a fair price. This shows the importance of making butter that there is a demand for.

The old proverb in agriculture was that time makes the father rich, but the sons poor. That might be paraphrased to say the least, time makes the father poor and his sons poorer.

Frogs' legs, at which people turned up their noses in disgust only a few years ago, have now become so popular an article of diet that no fewer than 6,000,000 frogs a year are killed in Minnesota alone to supply the demand.

Buttermilk is a very palatable and wholesome drink for children. Those who make butter on the farm have the advantage of pure, wholesome buttermilk, which is no small item in the cost of living.

More farm implements are worn out by sun and rain than by use. Get them under cover and use plenty of grease and paint. Doing this means the difference between buying new implements every ten years rather than every three years.

Generally speaking, it may be said that an acre of red clover should support eight to ten hogs for three to four months. Alfalfa should pasture 15 to 20 head for the same length of time.

It is a good plan to write to your commission merchant in advance of shipment, and ask his advice as to the best method of packing, as he knows the market much better than you do.

WHITE SLAVERY

Law Against Traffic Will Be Improved.

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—Legislation aimed at the suppression of the white slave traffic will be introduced by the Government this session by way of amendment to the Criminal Code.

The clause has not yet been finally drafted, but it will be designed to make easier the conviction of those engaged in the business, and will in some degree remove from the prosecution certain difficulties heretofore encountered in establishing proof.

The amendment will be along lines suggested by the Moral Reform League. It will probably prevent the miscarriage of justice by appeals from conviction, pending which bail is accepted and forfeited, the party thus escaping actual imprisonment.

People who even indirectly obtain goods by false pretences are to be brought under the operation of the Criminal Code by an amendment to be introduced by the Minister of Justice.

For instance, a merchant who makes a false report of his affairs to a commercial agency, and who by reason of the report of that concern gets a line of credit from a third party, will be liable.

Winsome Winnie

"Isn't Miss Trevhella—I'd like to see the saucy old thing put her foot in my house?" Mrs. Caerlyon thought, in dire surprise and alarm almost, as, after a moment's hesitation, the lady in black rushed forward, meeting her before she reached the kitchen door, and, flinging back her veil, stretched forth both her arms.

"Mamma, I've come back," she cried— "I've come back, dear mamma, to you and poor dear father, and the children, and—"

"Winnie! Winnie!" Mrs. Caerlyon screamed, after a scare of blank surprise. "Winnie, darling, I'm glad to see you!"

"Glad—glad, Winnie!" and forthwith Mrs. Caerlyon clutched her step-daughter in her arms, kissing her loudly, and crying vociferously, as is the manner of high-tempered, sharp-featured women when excited.

"Sister Winnie"—the myth—was lived in the little pink colored country in North America—"sister Winnie," this lady in black! Was the world coming to an end?

The children almost thought so, and, after huddling together for a moment, the younger ones joined in their mother's hysterical crying, until Winnie—fear, graceful sister Winnie, with the lovely golden hair all in a mass of little glittering curls over her forehead, beneath her black crape bonnet—turned to them also with open arms, kissing them and crying over them in turn.

One of the coastguard happened to pass at the moment, and with grave alarm he told his officer, five minutes afterwards, that there was a strange lady all in black gone into—the officer's—house, and "he hoped as she had brought no bad news to the missus, for he thought as he had heard the children all a-crying."

Poor Lieutenant Caerlyon ran in panting, uncovering his gray head respectfully as he entered the strange lady's presence, and remembered nothing more, when she turned round, then a confused scene and much talking and laughing and crying, and questioning and answering, for the next hour, until poor Sarah Matilda, eager to redeem her character, before the eyes of the perfect sister, got tea ready, and some small loaves nicely baked, and eggs boiled, and a bit of ham fried, and the lump sugar and sweet-cake put on the table—all which constituted the fatted calf that the poor Caerlyons had to offer to the returned wanderer—and they were all seated at the tea-table, Winnie next her father, and the tears and excitement blinding and confusing her so that she did not know where she was eating or not.

Poor Lieutenant Caerlyon had been crying plentifully himself, but now he rubbed his eyes determinedly dry, and gazed at his long-absent daughter proudly.

"Elizabeth, hasn't she grown a—nice little woman?" he asked, longing to say more but withheld as he had ever been from giving his child her meed of praise.

"She has grown downright elegant and pretty," said Mrs. Caerlyon, with one of her short laughs; "I'd never have known her, I think, only she came into the kitchen. She's nice-looking to my mind than Lady Mountrevor—grand as she is."

Winnie blushed deeply—one of her old vivid, rose-red blushes.

"Oh, mamma!"

"Elizabeth, my dear," said Lieutenant Caerlyon, laughing, "that's too far. Lady Mountrevor, Elizabeth!" But in his secret heart he had never felt so great a glow of gratitude to his wife as he felt at that instant.

"Is Lady Mountrevor here now?" Winnie asked, looking up with a quick, keen interest darkening her brilliant grey eyes.

"Yes, she is," answered Mrs. Caerlyon, sighingly, and she further proceeded to state, in the decisive, off-hand way that people assume when they wish to convince others of their democratic indifference to wealth and rank, and beauty and fashion, that for her part she saw nothing particular in this grand Lady Mountrevor that people made such a "to-do" about, as if she were a queen a tall, stout, showy woman, dressed like a doll in a window, with her white muslin dresses and lilac ribbons, walking along the dusty roads in summer, with a French nurse for her child—her "bone" she called her—and why she went at home with her husband, instead of wandering about the country, Caerlyon, with a patient nod. "Not much love lost, between them, sure enough."

"Ah, I hope such is not the case," said Winnie earnestly; and, in order to change the subject, she knew to what lengths "making out" cases was carried by the maids and maistons of Tidgooth and its vicinity in the old days—she asked, "Do you ever see Madam Vivian, mamma?"

"Yes, in church, sometimes," replied Mrs. Caerlyon, with a fresh accession of the sighing tone; "and she's getting a real old woman, too, for all her grand bonnets and ribbons, and furs and things. I saw her last Sunday, and she looks as proud and stiff as ever, poor old lady, shut up there in Roseworthy for half the year, without a soul to talk to, but that that fawny-faced old maid, Trevhella."

"Oh, Trevhella's wife married yet, mamma?" remarked Winnie, laughing.

"Indeed, she's not, nor never will be," returned the step-mother, "for all her pressed-up impudence. Coming here in all the silks and gold chains, and sitting there, about the mines, after my good many times why she seemed to have a spite against 'e, Winnie, long ago, and that was one reason I'll lay any way."

"She wedded not," said Winnie, in a low tone, a slight trembled flash rising over her face. Thronging memories quickened the beating of her heart, and her lips trembled a little as she said, with an assured air of gaiety, "It was Susanna Edwards who should have been the object of her jealousy, if any one was. She was Mr. Pascoe's sweetheart ten years ago, and is his wife now. I think the real cause of her dislike was jealousy of her mistress's favor. She needed not to have troubled herself about that either—poor Trevhella."

"No, indeed," put in Mrs. Caerlyon, with a sniff; "we don't want Madam Vivian's or Mame Anybody's favor, thank goodness! We can pay our way honest, and look to nobody for help or credit!"

"No one—no, indeed," assented Lieut. Caerlyon, doubtfully, looking from his wife to his daughter's face, and shifting restlessly in his seat; "we—we've helped, each other along, thank heaven!"

"Yes," said Mrs. Caerlyon, intercepting the glance, and no squeamish delicacy restraining her from intercepting fully—Mrs. Caerlyon "always spoke her mind out" on all subjects—"if 'e all, as 'e grow up, and be able to fill useful situations"—with an obliquity of tone directing the general address into a particular one for Sarah Matilda's ear—"are as good at remembering your father and mother as your sister Winnie here, 'e'll all do well, and prosper, and live long in the land." Mrs. Caerlyon concluded, with a sudden grasp at a quotation of the fifth commandment.

The quick, shy color burned in Winnie's pure delicate face at this praise of her step-mother's—it was so grateful, so strange to her ears, poor girl! And the flush grew deeper under the embarrassing weight of the communication she had to make.

"I have done only what it is my duty to do," she said, looking down nervously and fingering her teaspoon; "I don't deserve any thanks for that, mamma. Whatever I sent you I could well spare—poor dear Aunt Sarah was so good to me."

The grim, eccentric old woman's generous kindness and indulgence had indeed won for her, for the first time in her life, the grateful love and trust of a fresh, fond young heart; and surely, in all her years of shrewd astuteness, she had never bargained so wisely and well as when she thus purchased that fond filial care for the evening of her life, and the loving remembrance of her death, which stirred the true heart beneath the fresh mourning dress of Winnie Caerlyon.

"I did all I could, of course, as was my duty," resumed Winnie, speaking rather tremulously, for fear she might seem proud or arrogant—poor frail pale-faced little woman!—"but I shall be able to do much more for the future, dear father—a great deal more, mamma."

Winnie was shedding tears of genuine pleasure and satisfaction. "Aunt Sarah left me all—all her money!" sobbed Winnie, quite breaking down. "Hannah, her servant, had the house and furniture, and a hundred dollars a year for her life; and I've—I've a thousand dollars a year! That's about two hundred pounds, you know, dear," she said, appealing to Sarah Matilda, who had grown pale with surprise and delight.

"Kits of hats with white feathers, and kid gloves, and long gossamer veils, like Lady Mountrevor," began to be conjured up in Sarah Matilda's girlish, vain young head, whilst her sister spoke.

"My goodness gracious!" ejaculated Mrs. Caerlyon, her face quite in a blaze of flushed color, and excitement and gratification, her housewife's soul moved at the possibilities of a new carpet, and parlor chairs in blue damask, like her cousin Bella's, to be obtained from her step-daughter's lavish generosity.

"Oh, my goodness, Winnie, child, that will be splendid! Two hundred a year! Not but what we wanted it badly," she added, beginning to cry over past privations and coming luxuries, and laying claim to Winnie's legacy with an egotism of which she was hardly conscious.

But poor Lieutenant Caerlyon for once put aside his helpmate and her seven children, and all the carking cares that had dragged him down to the level of sordid poverty, and, recalling himself as he was when he married Winnie's mother, proud, high-spirited, eyeslant, and generous, spoke as a father and a gentleman to his neglected daughter.

"I am glad to hear it, my dear," he said, putting a trembling hand on her shoulder—"very glad that your Aunt Sarah made you such a suitable return for your years of care and attendance on her. You deserve it well, Winnie, and—and" she faltered, becoming conscious of the keen, hard brown eyes watching him—"I've no doubt but that you so kindly remembered your poor little brothers and sisters when you had not much to spare from your own wants, you will remember them still—I am sure of that, Winnie—you never were unkind or neglectful to them. But your money's your own, my dear, and you must not spend it all on others; you must take care of it, and you'll have a home, some day, please heaven, and you'll want all you have then."

"No, father, I shan't," opposed Winnie, crying and laughing together, and inquired of Johnnie "sister Winnie" had a lot of little children away over in North America. "When you don't want me any longer, I can take my mummy and myself away, but, until then—why, father, dear, I'll spend half of it!" Winnie said, quite were to dress myself like Lady Mountrevor, and like long fair hair Louis hair. My darling child! She always had beautiful silky hair! And for the rest of the tea-time Winnie chattered incessantly, in dread of her father's talking so about "her money" again—as if it were likely that she would put all that money away in the bank for her own benefit, and see those dear darlings want for anything!

But after tea, when the railway carrier brought over Winnie's heavy luggage in a van, and one of her trunks was opened in the parlor, the previous brightness of this wonderful evening redoubled to amazing intensity for the young Caerlyons. Wonderful! Winnie—she, who could tell strange things had happened—she, thought, showing by words almost whither the secret current of her meditations had gone.

PALE ANAEMIC GIRLS

Find New Health Through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

There must be no guesswork in the treatment of pale, anaemic girls. If your daughter is languid, has a pale, sallow complexion, is short of breath, especially on going upstairs; if she has palpitation of the heart, a poor appetite, or a tendency to faint, she has anaemia, which means poverty of the blood. Any delay in treatment may leave her weak and sickly for the rest of her life—delay may even result in consumption, that most hopeless of diseases. When the blood is poor and watery, there is only one certain cure—that is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, coupled with nourishing food and gentle out-of-door exercise. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood, which flowing through the veins stimulates the nerves, increases the appetite, gives brightness to the eye, a glow of health to the cheek, and makes weak, despondent girls full of healthy activity. The case of Miss J. H. Lassalle, Sorel, Que., is typical of the cures made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "I was weak and all run down. My face was pale and covered with pimples. My lips were pale. I suffered from pains in all my limbs, which would at times be swollen. I was hardly ever free from headaches, and I found work about the house a burden, as the least effort left me fatigued and breathless. I had no appetite, and notwithstanding that I was constantly doctoring I seemed to be growing worse all the time. One day mother said that she thought I ought to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so. I soon discovered that I had found the right medicine, and after using nine boxes I was once more enjoying the best of health, and I have not been unwell a day since."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

half the annals of a lifetime with the children, in its succession of wonders and delights; they all stared themselves blind and talked themselves hoarse, and having—after protracted delays to an abnormally late hour—gone to bed at length, everybody stayed awake until early morning, and so spent next day both actually and figuratively in dreamland.

The house was full of delightful things—there had not been such a dinner since Christmas day as was cooking in the kitchen—roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, and a splendid rice and custard pudding full of raisins! Well might Johnnie warn Tommy on no account to be seduced into antepandral repasts on hunks of cold pastry or bread and cheese, but "leave plenty of room" for the beef and pudding! And there were curious delicate odors floating about—odors of cedar trunks, of perfume sachets, of dried and ripe American apples, and millinery goods!

As for the new carpet and chairs, Winnie had arranged for them, as well as a new drawing-room, or rather new house, to go with them—a nice rented house of their own, where the Caerlyons would not be "cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd," a family of eleven persons in a six-room house on a perch above Tolgooth Bay, provided by Government for their accommodation.

Every room was strewn with new, curious, pretty and eatable things—pictures, books, old china, dresses, jars of jelly, bottles of syrup, toys, packing cases; and everybody was examining everything, praising, wondering, discussing, questioning to their heart's content; while Winnie—her neat black dress covered up with a large white apron and bib, such as she used to wear long ago—was running about, arranging, unpacking, tidying, cooking, talking and laughing, all the seven children following her from room to room, up and down stairs, to look at her and listen to her with breathless interest.

"I never saw any one wear their age better than 'e do, Winnie," her step-mother remarked, with her usual blunt straightforwardness; "really, to look at 'e, one might never take 'e for more than one-and-twenty."

Winnie was sitting on the edge of a trunk which Sarah Matilda was unpacking, and Mrs. Caerlyon, seated at a little distance, was attentively studying Winnie's small delicate face, flushed so brightly, her smiling eyes and lips, and her beautiful carefully-arranged hair.

"Instead of going on for eight-and-twenty, mamma," supplemented Winnie; "and for a moment the brightness faded from her face."

"Well, what if you are?" Mrs. Caerlyon began, when Sarah Matilda, delightedly investigating every corner and parcel in the large travelling trunk, held up a large square cedar box.

"What's in it, sister?"

"That? Oh, nothing. At least—Winnie's box, but Sarah Matilda noticed how very red 'sister Winnie' had grown—she stooped down as if to examine the "it's nothing but a—jacket."

"A jacket! Oh, do let's see!" Sarah Matilda said, pulling eagerly at the twine. "Yours, sister? Where did you buy it? What kind is it?"

"It's only a very old one, dear," answered Winnie; and Sarah Matilda noticed how the red flush had totally disappeared. "Some other time we'll look at it—it's not worth opening now; I've had it for years."

"What did 'e do with the splendid sealskin jacket, Winnie," asked her step-mother—"the one Captain Tredennick gave 'e before 'e went away?"

Winnie hesitated a moment, and the color dyed all her face in a burning blush that she strove to hide.

"Why—that is it," she said, with a short, nervous laugh, pointing to the cedar box. "It is as good as ever, and it has kept me warm for seven long winters. It was a beautiful one, certainly."

"I took good care of it, at all events," observed Mrs. Caerlyon, with a dry insinuating smile, looking at the soft, uncrushed fur and satin linings. And then she sat a long time in silence, covertly studying her step-daughter's winsome gentle face and light figure, and troubling her poor, manoeuvring brains with numberless hastily sketched-out plans.

"It won't do to say a word—she was always such a queer maid," she said to herself. But "one word" Mrs. Caerlyon felt that she must say, prompted as she was by the sight of Stephen Tredennick's long-ago gift, and those hastily-sketched mental plans. "It might be—she could tell—stranger things had happened," she thought, showing by words almost whither the secret current of her meditations had gone.

HE FOUND THEM NO FAITH CURE

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CLEAR ED OUT W. F. BLACK'S SCIATICA

He Was in Agony When a Friend Gave Him a Box. Now He Recommends Them to Everybody.

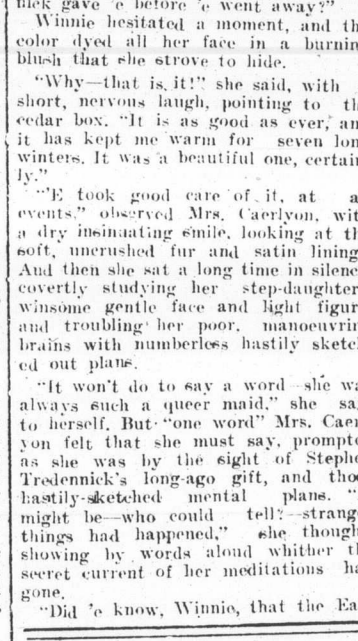

Newcastle, N. B., Jan. 27—(Special).—In these cold winter days when the chill winds crystallize the uric acid in the blood and cause the pangs of Rheumatism and Sciatica to bring sleepless nights to many a home, a man's best friend is the one who can tell his neighbor of a sure cure for his tortures. Such a friend is Wm. F. Black, of this place. He suffered from Sciatica and lame back. He was so bad that he could not lace his boots or turn in bed. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him, and he wants all his neighbors to know of the cure.

"Yes," Mr. Black says, in an interview. "I was so bad with Sciatica and Lame Back that I couldn't lace my shoes or turn in bed, when a friend gave me about a third of a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I started taking them without much faith in their curative powers, and found them all they were recommended."

"Now I am recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from Kidney Disease."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are no faith cure. They're a simple but sure cure for diseased kidneys.

A Bad Heart, Its Cause and Cure

Many, Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine, your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These sensations are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

Just read what happened to Isaac Malloux, of Belle River, Ont.:

"Three months ago I was a weak, sickly man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had sour risings and indigestion. At night I would often awaken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation.

"I consulted my doctor and he recommended that my friends advised. Nothing helped.

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite, strong heart action, and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

Your druggist or storekeeper sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box of five boxes for $1.00. By mail from The Catarthozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Indianan Chittoor is expected home the third week in March

CHAPTER XXI.

"I think I never remember so bleak and wild a spring," Madam Vivian observed, with a shiver; "each day seems drearier and colder and stormier than the one preceding. I have never been able to walk in the grounds these three weeks; and how you can go in and out in all weathers as you do passes my comprehension."

"It has been remarked before now, I think," said the lady addressed, "that where there's will there's generally a way; it is tolerably true, I fancy—that is, as true as most of those absurd things which people repeat with such an air of wisdom." She was embroidering a dainty piece of work of rich-laced velvet with some glittering gold fringe, and paused to admire the effect.

"It is not all true and applicable to me," returned Madam peevishly; "I have the will, but I certainly have not the way—unless I wish to catch my death of cold with salt spray and north-west wind." She sank back in her chair, drawing a crimson Indian shawl round her with another shiver. "You wrap up in those extraordinary mackintosh things, and felt hats and boot-tops—such an eccentric costume for a young lady!—and so, I dare say, hail, rain, and snow are alike to you; but my different species of outdoor attire prevents me from attempting such feats of exercise."

Hurrah, No More Lame Backs!

This Case Proves That the Best and Strongest Liniment Ever Made is Nerviline.

When it comes to determining the real merit of a medicine, no weight of evidence is more convincing than the straightforward statement of some reliable and well-known person who has been cured. For this reason we print the verbatim statement of Justin E. Powell, written from his home in Carleton. "I am a strong, powerful man, six feet tall, and weigh nearly two hundred. I have been accustomed all my life to lift great weights, but one day I overdid it, and wrenched my back badly. Every tendon and muscle was sore. To stoop or bend was agony. I had a whole bottle of Nerviline rubbed on in one day, and by night I was well again. I know of no liniment possessing one-half the penetration and pain-subduing properties of Nerviline. I urge its use strongly as an invaluable liniment and household cure for all minor ailments, such as strains, sprains, swellings, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, rheumatism, and muscular pain."

No better medicine for curing pain was ever put in a bottle than Nerviline—rub it on and rub it in—that rubs out all aches, pains and soreness. Large family size, 50c; trial size, 25c, all dealers, or The Catarthozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

FICTION AND FACT

CUSTOMS IN NEW GUINEA.

Fresh details of interest concerning the little known land of New Guinea, have recently been brought home by the Finnish student and traveller, Dr. Gunnar Landtman.

Few parts of the world still contain so many remnants of the life of the pure, savage as does this vast island, and for many years past it has naturally attracted a large share of attention from all who make a study of anthropology. Until recently cannibalism was prevalent, but it is now confined to a few tribes, and when Archbishop Donaldson was among them some years ago he found that the natives, many of whom had been converted into Christianity, were extremely unwilling to talk about their old ways.

R. W. Williamson, who returned from a year stay among the Malulu savages, had, however, another story to tell, for this section of the people can still enjoy a banquet of human flesh. They do not slaughter their victims merely for greed, but wait until a battle or private fight can give them both a meal and the excuse for taking it.

In other respects he described them as being a simple and quiet race, with an extremely complicated religion, the origin of which they did not in the least know. They believed that the fig tree and certain other plants were haunted, while their lives were to a great extent spent in fear of sorcery.

Dr. Landtman entirely confirms these stories of their wonderful imaginative nature, and he relates how they tell remarkably long and complicated tales of romance, in which the fortunes of hero and heroine are marred by the machinations of witches. In most of their stories can be seen a dim resemblance to the fairy legends of Europe, a point which should attract the attention of the student of comparative religion. Of their morals he speaks in the highest terms, yet he relates that their code allows a ceremonial exchange of wives.

The Papuans, who comprise the majority of the inhabitants, are a people of fine physique, and according to the latest reports, are fond of sports, in which the women join with the men, the game being not unlike our English hockey. Many of the tribes in the mountains still live by raids on lowland districts, but in other parts the people are quietly earning a living from cultivating the soil.—London Standard.
