THE POPE AND THE FRENCH DIRECTORY.

The October Catholic World opens with a valuable historical paper by the learned bishop of Vincennes, Dr. Chastard, on "Pius VI. and the French Directory." After detailing the devious and dishonest devices with the aid of which the Directory sought to provoke a quarrel with the Holy See, towards which it inherited, he says, all the hatred of the signs enlites—from the attempt made to convert the Pope to recognize the republic down to the enforced treaty of Tolentino and exposing the crafty duplicity of Napoleon—the erudite prelate finds the real cause of all the quarrel between Paris and Rome in the wording of a letter which Robespierre, the President of the Directory, sent to Bonaparte on February 3, 1797. Making no secret of his desire to destroy the Catholic religion and the influence of the church in France, that worthy enjoined upon the tool of the Directory, Napoleon, the task of discovering the best means of accomplishing those desires, and then added: "There is one point, which is perhaps, not less essential to reach the desired attainment of that end, to destroy, that is, if it can be done, the centre of Roman unity; and to you, who hitherto have known how to unite the most distinguished qualities of a captain with those of an able statesman, it belongs to fulfil this desire, if you judge it practicable. Wherefore the Directory invite you to do what may seem to you possible. . . in order to destroy the papal Government, placing Rome under another power, or establishing (what would be better) a form of national government that would render odious and contemptible the government of the priests, and the Pope and the Sacred College could have no hope of residing in Rome and would be obliged to go seek a residence elsewhere, or at least would have no more temporal power." Doctor Chastard declares that the power usurped by the French Directory came from the condition of things at the time, when "reason had been deified, religion had been cast out; Freemasonry had done its work;" and he asserts that this spirit which Freemasonry showed in 1796 has remained with that body ever since and caused the spoliation of the Holy See in 1870, by virtue of which the Pope is still a prisoner in the Vatican.

THE DUTY OF CATHOLICS.

In consequence of these undeniable facts and the revelations contained in the letter of the President of the French Directory, above cited, that the chief aim of the enemies of the church has ever been to destroy the centre of Roman unity by depriving the Holy See of all temporal power, the Vincennes prelate declares that Catholics should appreciate the importance of preserving that unity by bringing about the restoration of the temporal power. He argues that there can be no incongruity in Catholics, even if they be in favor of other forms of government, advocating the restoration of the Pope's temporal power. For Italy, he says, is a kingdom, and it was not a republic, but an empire, backed by a monarchy, which robbed the Pope of his temporal possession. The bishop is not of those who believe that free institutions are going to possess all kingdoms of the earth; he asserts that there is nothing intrinsically evil in a monarchical form of government, and points to the fact that Leo XIII. has explicitly stated that no form of government has a monopoly of right and that, in individual cases, the best form is that which, the law of justice being observed, best suits the people who are to live under it. With regard to the restoration of the temporal power, he says how that is to some about, "it is not in the power of any one to say, nor can the form of that temporal sovereignty be outlined. Moreover, it pertains to the Sovereign Pontiff himself, when the time comes, to say what it is to be, what he will accept, and what he will refuse." The part and the duty of a good Catholic; he contends, is to show himself in complete harmony of view with the Vicar of Christ in all matters that, like this question of temporal sovereignty, vitally affect the interests of the Church. It may be stated, in conclusion, that Doctor Chastard shares the belief of those who contend that Napoleon, notwithstanding his warfare upon the Church, never lost his faith. "As we see him in the bitterness of his trials condemning himself for what he did wrong," writes the Bishop, "we may look only to the many good deeds performed for the preservation of the greatest gift God has given to man, the faith, and hope that for these he has received an eternal reward."

CONSTANTINOPLE AGAINST ROME.

Under this title appears in the same magazine a short article from the pen of Very Rev. A. F. Hewit, D. D., which may be said to be a brief, but very effective, reply to the pamphlet that the schismatical patriarch of Constantinople issued in answer to Leo XIII.'s encyclical on "The Re-union of Christendom." Doctor Hewit begins by asserting that the Constantinopolitan patriarch, in calling himself an ecumenical dignitary, arrogates to himself a jurisdiction which he does not possess, as only one of the eastern bodies that call themselves Orthodox communions—to which title they have no right—is subject to his authority. The patriarch, consequently, the Paulist superior adds, can only speak for himself and the thirteen bishops who have signed his letter, and he has no more right to issue an encyclical in behalf of the eastern schismatical Church than Cardinal Gibbons, as Archbishop of Baltimore, would have to publish a pastoral in the name of the French and German prelates. While denying the patriarch's claim to speak for the eastern sees, though, Doctor Hewit says that his fundamental plea, that the Oriental church is the Church of the first seven ecumenical councils, is probably one which all the separated eastern communions will ratify. They must stand or fall, he adds, with Constantinople, and Constantinople's only claim to a canonical and Catholic position rests on the assertion that it stands on the basis of those councils. Father Hewit then proceeds to show from history that the Oriental prelates and emperors, for fifty years, resisted and opposed the first Council of Nicaea; that the second Council of Constantinople was made ecumenical only by the approbation of the Pope and the general acceptance of the West; that the Council of Ephesus was convoked to condemn Nestorius, patriarch of Constantinople, and his heresy, that the Council of Chalcedon condemned Eutyches, and that the supremacy of the Roman Pontiff as the successor of St. Peter was emphatically proclaimed, with the universal consent of all the attendant prelates. The learned writer shows, furthermore, that the remaining ones of the first seven ecumenical councils had chiefly to deal with heresies that arose in the Oriental churches. "The East punished the heresies," says he, "and the heresiarchs condemned and anathematized, and in Constantinople nineteen heretics sat in the patriarchal chair during the course of five centuries." In view of these facts, the Doctor pertinently inquires what special right the Oriental schismatics have to call the first seven councils the councils of their Church, in distinction to the Western Church. It may be true, he adds, that these gatherings were held in the East; but it was the Roman Church and the Roman Pontiff that brought them to a successful issue; and the Oriental schismatics, even if they hold to the dogmatic decrees of these councils, have gone contrary to them by abjuring their former submission to the Holy See, so emphatically proclaimed at Ephesus and Chalcedon.

With regard to portion of the Constantinopolitan patriarch's letter in which he invites the faithful of the West to embrace his heresies and thus effect Christian unity, Father Hewit, after stating that this absurd invitation calls for no reply, says: "The patriarch has the spirit of his schismatical and heretical predecessors. Every heresy has pretended to have the pure Catholic truth, accused Catholics of being innovators, rejected the councils which condemned them, and demanded that the Church should become Arian, Nestorian or Monophysite, as Antihmas now demands that it should become Photian." The learned Paulist might also have added that some of the Protestant denominations of our own land formulate a similar demand. He has no hope of the return to Roman unity of this Constantinopolitan patriarch, and his adherents; but he claims that Antihmas speaks for nobody save the heretical clergy and laity of Turkey, and that his letter does not represent the judgment of the bishops of Greece, Russia and the Slavonian nations. He does not believe that the bitter, Byzantine hatred of the Holy See shown in this letter of the Turkish patriarch is universal among the separated eastern Christians, and he cites, in corroboration of his unbelief in that matter, some words of an Italian ecclesiastic, Father Vincenzo Vannutelli, who lived many years in the East, and who says, among other things, of the separated Christians there, that "not only do they daily pray for the union of Christendom,

In the Scottish Highlands.

The current Cosmopolitan opens with an entertaining sketch by Thomas L. James, ex-postmaster general of "A Summer Tour in the Scottish Highlands." One of the many places visited by Mr. James was Ioolmkill, which he says is the name given to the island that bears it in the fifteenth century, the meaning of the word being St. Columba's cell. There the guide showed him the place where the saint, who went thither from Ireland in the sixth century, landed; pointed out the ruins of an old nunnery, and indicated to him the only two of the three hundred and sixty crosses that once were to be seen on the island which are now standing. Of the island as it existed in St. Columba's time, Mr. James says: "The exceptional fertility of the island at that time was regarded as remarkable. . . and doubtless had something to do with its early occupancy. Columba obtained a grant of the island and built a monastery, which as that carried out in the present colleges and convents—the declares in one place that she is ashamed to acknowledge that in republican France many wealthy people send their daughters to such institutions as the Visitation Convent, the Sacred Heart, etc., which she calls "nurseries for great ladies," just as they intrust the education of their sons to the Jesuits—the admissions she makes of the excellence of the convents and the merits of the colleges are all the more notable. Of the latter institutions she writes: "The colleges under the control of priests, leaving aside all questions of knowledge, have always been celebrated for the care given to hygiene, bodily exercise and semi-paternal education. They have gone ahead of the revolution now being brought about in other colleges. The greater part of them are systematically located a little way out of town, so as to secure the best sanitary conditions. The Jesuits were the first to inaugurate vacation trips for the pupils." From these statements it is very plain that the Church is doing better educational work in France to-day than the State, all contrary assertions, which we hear so often in this country, notwithstanding.

Those who find the Rosary monotonous are like those who find the ringing of beautiful chiming of bells monotonous. The Rosary is a chime of bells; fifteen bells of joyous, mournful and glorious melodies sounding harmoniously upon the deep diapason of our apostolic faith and Our Lord's prayer—to the glory of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost.—Carmelite Review.

ST. MARTIN OF TOURS.

With regard to the two crosses that are still standing on the island, Mr. James tells us that one is now known as Maclean's Cross, and the other, which stands opposite the west door of the cathedral is called the Iona Cross. This latter cross, he adds, was erected to the memory of St. Martin of Tours, who lived in the fourth century; and on the island are said to be buried forty-eight Scottish and Irish kings, eight Norwegian princes, many lords of the isles, and bishops, abbots and priors without number, the last Scottish sovereign to be buried there having been Duncan I, who began to reign in 1034, but who was murdered in the sixth year of his reign by Macbeth. In speaking of the monument which, at the head of Loch Sheil, marks the spot where bonny Prince Charlie summoned the Scottish clans together, Mr. James says that "this district was visited by St. Columba and his followers, who are said to have fished on the Shiel, Columba himself having been a keen fisherman;" and he found in the middle of the loch a burial island whereon were many crosses of great antiquarian interest the roads leading to the cemetery being thickly studded with cairns, which mark the spots where the coffins rested when their inmates were being borne to their last resting place on the shoulders of the islanders. In the ruins of an old chapel that still stands on the island, Mr. James found an altar intact, and resting upon it was a curious metal bell, which was undoubtedly used in former times to summon the people to divine worship.

A TRIBUTE TO THE NUNS. In speaking of the orphanages and founding asylums, Madame Bentzon in the Century Magazine for October, after saying that in France those institutions are directed for the greater part by religious brotherhoods and nuns, adds: "In spite of the growing emulation of the lay element in the last twenty years, the good Sisters still hold the first rank. There can be no better directresses of industrial schools and women's work bureaus, of asylums of all kinds. Their influence in reformatories and houses of correction for the young is incomparable. And this influence does not depend alone upon their wide experience, or the absolutely disinterested motives which make them serve without any or human ambition, but on the authority their dress lends them, a dress that represents centuries of devotion to the same task. Among them all the Sisterhood of St. Vincent de Paul stand out in most brilliant relief—those white-hooded angels who move about the streets of Paris in such numbers in the service of the sick and the poor. Their popularity has remained as great as ever through the crash of revolutions and the progress of freethinking," and when one takes into consideration the fact that the writer of this article is not at all a Jesuit, as that carried out in the present colleges and convents—the declares in one place that she is ashamed to acknowledge that in republican France many wealthy people send their daughters to such institutions as the Visitation Convent, the Sacred Heart, etc., which she calls "nurseries for great ladies," just as they intrust the education of their sons to the Jesuits—the admissions she makes of the excellence of the convents and the merits of the colleges are all the more notable. At Picquet on the 21st inst., of consumption, Donald McDonald (Borah) aged 62 years. Deceased was the eldest brother of Rev. Donald M. McDonald, P.P. Piquit, who was at his bedside when he expired. The funeral took place Friday morning, St. Andrew's and was presided over by His Lordship Bishop McDonald who was assisted by Revs. Mgr. McDonald, D.F., McDonald, M.J., McMillan, R.J., Gillis and A.J. McDonald. May his soul rest in peace.

There will be a deputy ministryship to be filled in the very near future. The experiment of uniting the offices of deputy minister and chief engineer of railways and canals has been found not to work satisfactorily, and it is understood to be Hon. Mr. Blair's intention to separate the two. Mr. Schrieber will continue to act as chief engineer.

The rain fall in this Province from September 1st to October 22nd of this year, was 12.28 inches. This is unprecedented in our Province, although not equal to Australia, where 20 inches fell in 24 hours. Since the 1st of October the rain fall here nearly doubled that of any previous year in the province, and about four times that of ordinary years.

SCHE. Maggie Allen arrived in Souris Saturday morning from St. Pierre, and reports that the schooner Satellite, Capt. Bushy, for whose safety there had been considerable anxiety for the last few days arrived in St. Pierre on Saturday last after a long and stormy passage. The schooner Maggie Allen on her way from St. Pierre, fell in with a small schooner, dismasted, and full of water. They found on board a drowned man and a quantity of liquor and tobacco. They buried the man at sea.

CENTRAL CREAMERY.—We call attention to the advertisement of battlement, in connection with the Central Creamery in this city, which appears about 1st November. We understand that Mr. Dillon anticipates a larger pricewise this winter than last, as the cheese season has been unusually successful, fodder is abundant, and creamery butter promises to raise high throughout the season. New separating stations will be started at Hampton and Mt. Stewart, and besides these the following stations will send cream to town, viz., Kensington, Dank River, Hillboro, and, in all probability, Hazelbrook. New Park will also run as a Central station, and manufacture a large amount of butter. Milk will also come into both central stations from nearby settlements and about 200,000 lbs. of butter ought to be the figure this season.

Last week we referred briefly to the death of Dr. McAllen, which took place at Gloucester, Mass. Since then his remains have been brought home and interred in the cemetery of his native parish. Dr. Archibald McAllen was the eldest son of the late Donald S. McAllen, of Indian River, and his mother is a sister of the Rev. R. B. McDonald, of Bastlow. He was 35 years of age at the time of his death. He studied at St. Dunstan's College, and pursued his medical studies at McGill College, Montreal, graduating with great distinction from that renowned University. He practised his profession in the Magdalen Islands, for a year or two with success, and, four years ago located in Gloucester, Mass., where he built up a large practice. He was a most successful physician and had a wonderful gift of diagnosing diseases. About two months ago he was stricken with inflammation of the nerves, from which he did not recover. Some time ago, one of his brothers went to Gloucester to accompany him home; but he was too ill to undertake the journey. The brother remained with him till death and accompanied the remains to the Island. The doctor was genial and good humored and an exceedingly pleasant companion, and his early demise is deeply regretted. He was chief of the Highland Society of Gloucester. The members of the society marched in procession with the body to the Railway station. The body was embalmed and brought to the Island, reaching Summersville on the Northumberland on Wednesday evening last. The funeral took place, from his mother's to St. Mary's, Indian River, on Thursday morning, and was very largely attended. So many Requiem Masses were celebrated by Rev. R. B. McDonald, assisted by Very Rev. Mgr. Gillis and Rev. J. J. McDonald. Rev. Gregory McDonald pronounced a discourse suitable to the occasion. We extend our sympathy to his wife and mother and his brothers and sisters. R. I. P.

A. W. Embury, a prominent farmer of Grenit Il, Man., was cleaning a gun on Friday, when it accidentally discharged. Mand Kowdie, the adopted daughter of Embury, was instantly killed, the bullet entering her forehead.

The engine tender and first-class passenger car of the Canada Eastern railway are lying upside down in the Naaswaik river, opposite the Methodist church at Marysville, N. B. A special train from Blackville was coming to Marysville at a rapid rate on Saturday and reached this point, where the road is cut into the side of the steep hill forming the river bank. From the high bridge above the engineer noticed a bunch of cedar trees and a quantity of earth start to slide. He applied the brakes, but only succeeded in meeting the avalanche squarely. It struck the engine, forcing it from the rails and the whole train went down the precipice and turned clear over into the river below, where the water is about four feet deep. The train had on board two engineers, fireman and brakeman, and the passengers were Alexander Gibson, president of the road; Hohen, the superintendent; Mrs. A. McN. Shaw, and four others. The fireman jumped at the train went off, but engineer Cowperwait held on and had to break the car window and climb out among the logs in the stream. H. Johnston, who is traveler for Great Falls, Montreal, was on the rear platform and was caught some way by the hips, sustaining painful bruises. Mrs. Shaw was shaken and bruised and Hohen had his finger crushed. By a miracle a shrike's no permanent injury was sustained by anyone. The old "lumber king" escaped unscathed.

The diseases of thinness are scrofula in children, consumption in grown people, poverty of blood in either. They thrive on leanness. Fat is the best means of overcoming them. Everybody knows cod-liver oil makes the healthiest fat.

In Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil the taste is hidden, the oil is digested, it is ready to make fat.

The annual reports of the Association for the Propagation of the Faith are always full of interest to Catholics, inasmuch as they furnish us with detailed information of the manner wherein the different portions of the Catholic world are aiding the missionaries of the Church in their divine mission.

Catholic France leads all other lands—as she invariably has done in past years—in her contributions during 1895 to the work of the propagation of the faith.

became, as one authority attests, "the greatest place of trade of all the cities of Asia west of the Taurus."

The destruction of Diana's Temple by the Goths in the middle of the third century gave it a blow from which it never recovered, and its downward course continued until it is now but a group of miserable villages, chief among which is Ayasuluk.

It is not at all probable that Monsignor Martinielli will ever visit the ruined Asian city from which he gets his archiepiscopal title. He is known now as a titular bishop, that is to say, a bishop consecrated for a see that formerly existed, but which has been lost to the Church by the devastations of infidelity.

and all other prelates who had sided with them in condemning Nestorius. In the meantime the Holy See, after confirming the sentence of the council, ordered that it be carried out. To do this it was necessary to enlist the assistance of the Emperor Theodosius, but so skillfully had the Nestorians guarded all the approaches to that potentate the Ephesian fathers found it impossible to reach him until a messenger, disguised as a beggar, made his way into his presence and acquainted him with the decrees of the council.
