Owen Capelle was a literary man who wrote for a living. The expression is not redundant; it is merely accurate. Do all literary men write for a living? Happily not. And, on the other hand, who would be so rash as to venture the assertion that all who write for a living are makers of literature?

With Owen Capelle, literature was at once an art and a business. It was an art because he worked at it reverently, conscientiously, with a considerably degree of talent, and assisted not infrequently by something very like inspiration. It was again, a business, for the reason that by it he earned the support of himself, wife and family, bartering his manuscripts and other forms of literary labor with a moderate amount of shrewdness and after much the same method as that by which the farmer sells garden-truck or the baker a batch

It may not be uninteresting to the reader to learn, and it is certainly necessary to this narrative to explain just what Owen Capelle wrote. Several novels of his fabrication has been given to the public by that well-known publishing house of Vallum & Marble, and from these he had altogether an annual royalty of about $1,000. Of short stories he wrote ten or twelve in the course of a year, which brought returns according to their quality and length and averaged under $100 apiece. He also "turned out" literary articles for a daily journal, and he received a small salary for assist-ing in the editorial work of a children's magazine. Industarious by nature, and, after his marriage goaded on by necessity, he worked hard nine hours a day, with few holidays; and his income was nearly as large as the salary of a professional baseball player.

It must not be supposed, however, that Owen Capelle was famous. He was moderately well-known to a limited circle of readers. In his early years, before writing had become with him a commonplace of daily labor, he had espied Fame atrolling in the path a little way ahead of him. It would be easy enough, he thought, to overtake her, whenever he had earned some of his own time to devote to the effort. The years were passing now rather rapidly, for he was of the middle period of life, yet he was no nearer to her, and had almost ceased to lift his eyes in her direction.

One day in the springtime, it happened that a conversation took place between Mr Marble, of the publishing firm, and a certain Great Author, of which Mr Ca-pelle and his affairs formed the subject. The Great Author, who knew Capelle The Great Author, who knew Capelle afforded an opportunity either to connintimately, spoke with no little feeling of his laborious, ill-rewarded career. A few days later the plan of a vacation was submitted to Owen Capelle. He was very much astonished. At first he was inclined to refuse the gift. He knew very well that any respectable character in one of his stories would, after a conflict of diversified emotions, have declined, on the ground that it remotely resembled charity. But for him-Capelle and the little Capelles. He was accustomed to tell her everything-for she had a disagreeable way of finding it oat just the same, if he did not. month's good salary, paid in advance, in his pocket.
"Let us consider that we are making signment of small Capelles on board the train, the story-writer said to himself:

"What shall I do with it?"

His wife had warned him to keep away from his study, that he might not be tempted to do any writing, Instinctive steps, however, led him into the workshop. To a methodically industrious man it was a little confusing to be thus suddenly beset by leisure.

Stretched out in an easy-chair, his large pipe filled with fragrant tobacco, he reconnoitered the situation, dicussing with himself, one ofter another, the various uses to which the vacation might be put.

The problem was to find something to do, which he should enjoy deire and the fore-the down the house-servant rapped at the door. He took the card which she brought him, and, as he read the name, a deprecating frown settled upon his fore-the down the first page, when the house-servant rapped at the down the house-servant rapped at the down the head.

"Or suppose," he continued, in a vain endeavor to luff to a different tack, "I make use of this blessed gift of days to read, solely with a view to my own plea-aure and amusement. Books are written for the public, and am I not a man and a brother? Or have I, by long study of this public, of its tastes and interests, at last fairly cut myself out of it, so that I last fairly cut myself out of it, so that I may not share its pleasures? Alas, when I read, just as when I write, this spectre of many heads looks over my shoulder, offering its comment, deliberate and without appeal, on the style of each sentiation to be bored. He waited in silence, with "The Earth Bubble" still open upreading often becomes a source of dis-tress as writing is often one of absolute torture. But if I might read for myself alone, forgetting this direful publicif I might write for myself—sha!"

He had struck it. One swift flash of thought, and the problem was solved.

He would write—a stray—a monologue -a rhapsody-a something without a class-for the public for once, should be forgotten—or rather should pe embodied in himself. No mortal eye save his own should ever behold what he wrote; no editor nor publisher should ponder over its availability, no critic discourse upon himself but for the operation of the law and later, that of the appreciative read-

He sprang up out of the easy-chair, thrilled with the thought of the pleasure to look upon Capelle as exceptionally prosperous. He was, however, one of those men who make a principle of maintaining a certain degree of sentiment in the warm spring air—the earth's elixer their souls—something like pensioned of youth—entered deep into his lungs, off poor relation, who, at rare intervals, (as he breathed hard with the physical may come in for something handsome. Joy of an enthusiasm. For a moment Capelle stood looking out; he listened to the song of the birds, mingled with the soft rustling of tree-branches; he scented the odors of the flowers; every faculty and every sense seemed sudden

In that brief space of time the thing ing for him. What would you and which he was to write rose out of dim nothingness and gathered into definite form before his mental vision. There was first an idea, then a plot, then peo ple and a place. The people rapidly donned characteristics and and grouped themselves into situations. A nebulous train of incidents stretched along to a climax that towered into cloudy heights. It was like nothing that he had ever written or thought before-it seemed

Yet, though the vision had come suddenly, it showed no disposition to depart, but lingered and solidfied to an almost tangible reality before his eyes, That it might not escape, he reviewed and analyzed each feature separately until they were all his owu mental property to be used as he wished. As he turned away from the window toward the desk, two thoughts struck him almost simultaneously. One was: "This will never do for the Capelle wrote several hours a day, rapidly, with perfect case and with the est of pleasure. It was a rest and a vacation intensified by a complete diver-

Thus, by an accident, Capelle had stumbled upon the mislaid happiness of a lifetime.

As for the book which he created, it would not be easy to name any class in literature to which it could be said to belong. It was very like what naturalists are accustomed to call a "sport"-an orself he was compelled to think of Mrs ganism that comes not from regular de velopment, but that arises unexpectedly out of a mixture of chance conditions. It was not a novel, nor a fairy story, nor a poem, yet it partook of the nature of each and all. Its style was peculiar as its plan, teeming with quaint figures and mystic allusions, the force and meaning of which could be felt perhaps by none save the writer himself. Yet the work was natural, for, like nature, it was sugthrew him into something very like a gestive-and incomprehensible.

It bore the name of "The Earth Bubble," from the utterance of Banquo on the vanishing witches:

"The earth bath bubbles as the water has, And these are of them."

This title had come to him with the irst thought of the plan, and it seemed to have wreathed its weird influence through every part of the work. At the end of the month the book was

As he rode back from the depot, after putting Mrs Capelle and a liberal consignment of small Capelles on board the signment of small Capelles on board the train, the story-writer said to himself:

"What shall I do with it?"

His wife had warned him to keep

"'Quite a number of times' is good," thought the writer. He said aloud: "I remember you very well."

"Now, to come to business," said the visitor. "In the first place, I must ask you to regard this conversation as strict-ly confidential, for if it should get out, t would make a laughing-stock of me.' "It shall be as you wish," returned Capelle. He was beginning to feel much wonder as to what this dandified young tence, on the thought of every page, and on the smoral of the whole work. Thus his gloves and nervously thrust his enor-

Here he stopped and looked at Capelle's face, which wore an astonished

"It surprises you, I see. Have you never undertaken a job of that kind."
"Naver," answered the writer; "I am "Oh, I know it must often be done," cried the other. "Why not, pray? You can sell a manuscript to me just as well as to a publisher. I would have some good publishing house bring it out over my name. I know that you are a man of honor, and if you gave me a solemn promise that you would never let any one know about the transaction, I should be perfectly safe. I have been talking with your brother in-law about your books. He says they will bring you in about a thousand or fifteen hundred spiece. Suppose, as an outside figure, Marble will not take it on their own about a thousand or fifteen hundred as though it were my own work. Then I two thousand dollars. Put the fame risk, I will stand the expenses of publiand reputation at a similar sum-that makes four thousand dollars. Very well, I will give you that for a story under the

He paused for a reply, which did not "Well, I hope it is a success," said the conditions that I name. Is it a go?" novelty of the idea of market quotations on fame, and was busy wondering whether the reputation from a moderately successful story could be rated at $2,-

"Come," said the visitor, "I will make it a round sum-$5,000; what do you Capelle burst out into a laugh. "Not so fast," he said ; "I am rather curious to know for what reason you make this extraordinary proposition. "It is simple enough, I should think," answered Mr Hicks; "I want the honor and credit of having written the book.

I have the money to pay for it, and I propose to get it."

"But why do you not write the book yourself? I should think a man of your er-originality would find it easy; and since you have money to pay for its publication that difficulty would be surmounted." public

Hicks shook his head. "I cannot do it,"he said ; let me tell you how I am fixed. My father is a rich man-of the firm of Hicks & Calkins, wholesale grocers. He got it into his head that I would be a literary man, and sent me to college, and gave me money to travel and take life easy. Now I am past thirty, and I have accomplished nothing: what is more, I never shall. I have a good enough stock of brains, but they are of the kind that don't declare dividends. My family and friends have always expected a great deal of me, and I begin to think that if I do not make a strike of some kind pretty soon, they will come to regard me as humbug.' There was something in the tone of these remarks that gave Capelle a slight feeling of disgust. The incident had their action, they stimulate and strengthceased to amuse him. So he interrupted the easy minstrel. it on the

"But my money is just as good as the publishers'," said Mr Hicks. "Undoubtedly," answered the writer "I do not think it necessary to explain my reasons for declining your offer. You might perhaps regard them as absurd, but they satisfy me.

The aspirant for literary honors was not to be thus easily put off. He continued the argument, and Mr Capelle listened in bored silence, until an insinuation was thrown out to the effect that perhaps he was not satisfied with the amount offered, and hoped to get finished—a bulky pile of finely written abrupt end to the interview. more. Then he arose, and put a rather

When the visitor had departed, the author of "The Earth Bubble" settled himself again to enjoy the reading of his unique work. Presently, when he had turned over half-a-dozen pages, he dropped the manuscript into his lap, and leaning back burst out with a loud roar of laughter.

"When the visitor had departed, the author of "The Legality of the Proceedings to Be Tried in a Court of Law The Helicoland" "What a joke it would be," he

He could get it published—by expending a good sum of Papa Hicks's cash. Then imagine the sneers of the critics and the hears a paring of

Now there is a certain class of people with whom decisions do not decide. Owen Capelle belonged to that class. He has decided, of course, not to rell "The Earth Bubble," or any other manuscript to Mr J Cecil Hicks—but what had that to do with the real outcome of the matter? Mr Hicks had explained to the beather is less that any less than the second of the matter? to the brother in law the result of the interview, and the latter, as soon as Mrs Capelle returned from the seashore, talked it all over with her.
"Five thousand dollars is an awful lot of money," said the worthy woman, "and the Lord knows we need it bad enough. Owen has just got to sell him that book he has been writing on while we were away."

Perhaps it is hardly fair to Capelle to mous cane about; evidently preparing himself to unfold a tale.

At last the visitor spoke:

"I want you to write a book for me—that is, to be published in my name. I will pay you more for it than any publisher will give—you can name your own figure. I should like it to be a novel, quantum suf, of pleasure in its creation and in its subsequent reading; but now that the vacation was over, and the im pulse which gave the work its life burned out, the manuscript could lay no special claim to veneration. Besides, the snm which Hicks offered, as his wife truly said, was a good deal of money. If the fellow were fool enough to pay it for a manuscript, which Could have the said of the said manuscript which Capelle's experience convinced him no publisher would con sider, why not yield-and enjoy a quiet life again?

So Mr J Cecil Hicks took away "The Earth Bubble," leaving a check in its place.

tim, writing and erasing corre words and phrases, so as to have it look cation. I shall have plenty of illustra-tions made for it by the best artists, and the paper, binding, and so forth, shall be in the latest and most approved writer, with a smile that was half sarcasm and half regret. "At any rate," replied Mr Hicks, I shall be credited with having written a book. Now this is the point where the story of "The Earth Bubble" merges into the history of recent contemporaneous literature. If it should be that the reader ha not perused this remarkable book, he has at least heard of it as the reigning sensation in letters. There are those who claim for it a permanent place with the few famous books of the century, and predict for its gifted young author, Mr J. Cecil Hicks, a splendid future. I be lieve that he has, as yet, however, withstood all the blandishments of the pub-lishers, and rests contented with his one great success. As for Owen Capelle, he still works ploddingly along, doing his best to please the public.—Charles Dwight Willard, in The Argonaut.

THE STRUGGLE FOR CENTRAL AMERICAN UNITY.

Bloodshed, Turmoil, Intrigue—That About Sums Up the History of the Five Republics for Many Years Past-Results

CITY OF MEXICO, July 30.—The days have American Congress closed its deliberations at Washington, yet, although the chief result of its sittings was the adoption of a ment of war with all its horrid ills from the lands this side the Atlantic, the flerce flames

Mr. Blaine's ambitious schemes, to the conof the Western Hemisphere except the Canadians, and the sole purpose of which was the commercial aggrandisement of the United States, have fallen to the ground, and the prospects of extended trade relations between the United States and the Spanish-American republics are suddenly darkened.

On the last day of February, 1885, the late President of Guatemala, Gen. Justo Rufino
Barrios, issued his famous proclamation declaring a union of the five Central American republics, "by reason or by force." President Barrios' proclamation was unanimously approved by the Guatemalan Congress and Barrios at once set about to carry his beloved project into effect has some one who will soon call him
"Pa." Years ago the boys here nicknamed him "Dad," but there is ne humbug about his claim to the title now.—

United States Minister Hall was at tha time the almost constant companion and adviser of Barrios. Mr. Hall had told Barrios that President Arthur's administration ap proved of the Central American union and that he bad no doubt that the new adminis tration of President Cleveland would follow Mesers Livingstone, is now busily engaged having the flax crop for the Sectorth mills pulled. The crop is very good, but is ripening fast, and Mr Paul complains that he can't get hands enough out the same acquiescent policy. Barrios tions for a campaign. Enlistments were ammunition were distributed among the ant, a war loan of $1,000,000 was subscribed in less than three days wherewith to pay the troops and carry out the successful achieve ment of the union. Toward the middle of March, 1885, General Barrios and his army were ready for action, Paterson has exchanged his property on Victoria of Wingham, with Mr. Dunn. Mr or son will take possession of his gene about two months.

Political Pointer's Last Works Storm-Terrible Cyclone in Ontario_The Loss of the Steamer Idahe-Election Protests-General Middleton's Successor.

TORONTO, July 28.- Inis last week, the city of Kingston, which a few days ago was crowded to overflowing with Freemasons, has been captured by uniformed corps of Oddfellows. A gala time has been spent there and many competitions were held. The prizes, all of which were very valuable have been awarded as follows:—Drill, first prize. Oswego, N. Y.; second, St. Thomas, Ont.; Belleville. Ont.; third. Ottawa secured the prize for the largest uniformed Canton on parade, and St. Thomas, the prize for the Canton coming the longest distance. coming the longest distance.

Another bad storm passed over the country last week, and did a dreadful amount of damage. These storms seem to be weekly affairs. Hardly a week has passed this summer that we have not had some sort of storm. Rain in a perfect deluge, thunder, lightning, hall and small cyclones have devastated miles of farm land. Western Ontario. Despatches state that wheat and oats have suffered greatly. Whole fields have been laid low and stripped. Several houses and barns have been reported as blown down, and near Hamilton a barn was carried 100 yards into a neighbor's farmyard. Fruit trees and vegetables have also suffered terribly. Where the cyclon struck and where the hail storm ploughed it way, miles and miles of property have been destroyed. This storm it is stated was the small northern portion of the cyclone which has created such awful havoc in the Eastern States and Massachusetts, there 500 people are homeless, many lives have been lost, a hundred or more houses and building have been utterly destroyed and over a hundred thousand dollars worth of damage has been done. This has been altogether an unusual year for storms and although the State have received the brunt of them, Canada has suffered a great deal.

Things generally have been pretty quie in political circles. The twenty-fifth pe tition against the election of members to the Ontario Assembly has been filed here It is against the election of A. F. Campbell in East Algoma, Mr. Campbell is straight Equal Righter, who got elected on that ticket. This petitioning seems to work both ways, for a counter stream of petitions is flowing in. Mr. Dunlop, M. P. P. North Renfrew, against whom a petition was filed some weeks ago is the first to lay a count er petition against his opponent in the election, Thomas Murray. If this sort of thing goes on, the whole Legislature will be petitioned against and a new election will be in their first meeting in Montreal last week, but did not do much business. Much stir has been created in Montrea over the loss of the steamship Idaho or Anticosti. Shipping and export merchants in various cities in Canada are the chief in terested parties as the Idaho's cargo was ex tremely valuable. It was worth abou $650,000 and consisted of 89,000 bushels o grain; 40,000 boxes of cheese; 200 head o cattle and 88 sheep. HUNTING THE CLAM PEARL the Villagers of Albany, Wis., Spent

ALBANY, Wis., July 28.—The pearl fishing craze has broken out afresh in this little village and 1000 men, women and children, to the water drop as many old kild gloves many with large rakes, others using their as can be produced; three or four are hands and others diving into the channel of Sugar River, were out Sunday from daylight

Let this come to a decided boil, and until midnight in their enthusiastic search for pearl-bearing clams.

The occasion of the excitement was the letting out of the water from the Albany milldam, by which 200 acres of overflowed lands were made accessible to the pearl fishers. The result of the day's work was many wagon-loads of clams, and perhaps $1000 worth of pearls, although it is very difficult to make an exact estimate as to their value, owing to the reticence of the fishers. water in the pond is still falling rapidly, and the hunt will continue for several days, until all or nearly all of the clams are taken away. To-morrow it is expected the number of pearlers will be largely increased. A picturesque scene was presented by the pearl fishers. All wore wide-brimmed hats and old ciothing; many farmers drove in with their families from the surrounding country to enjoy the boliday and it required but a short visit to the under metamorphose the neat country lasses into veritable water nymphs, and the were soon up to their armpits in the mud and water digging clams with the rest.

As fast as secured the clams were taken to the shore and there opened, the finding of a particularly valuable gem being announced by a mighty shout of joy. So tar as known no pearls were found having a value of more than $100. Many fables are told of big prices being obtained for these pearls in Now York pearls in New York and elsewhere. They have really very little value and have been offered by the bushel to dealers. About one pearl in ten bushels might bring $10. A farmer, John Shafer, two miles from Albany. says he has refused $700 for a pure white pearl found on this farm. Some estimates place the value of pearls sold since the advent of the industry, a year ago, at $300,000 The pearl territory comprises about 30 miles

THE LOTTERY BILL. A Hard Fight Will Probably Have to Be

WASHINGTON, July 28 .- Although the vote on the substitute bill adopted by the House Postoffice Committee denying the further use of the mails to those engaged in the lot tery business for the purpose of forwarding that business was unanimous, an effort was nevertheless made to amend the measure here and there, apparently in the interests of a less vigorous form of procedure against

It was proposed, for inscance, that the bill be amended so as to except newspapers furthering public lotteries from the operations of the bill. But in reply it was urged with convincing force that the portion of the press accepting such patronage was the agency next only to the mails themselves upon which the lottery companies relied for the successful carrying on of their busin With the committee's endorsement of a bill however, the fight has but just begun. The next move must be to secure a day for the consideration of the bill in the House. While a large majority of the House is at present in favor of the bill, the lottery companies are strongly intrenched here, and there is every reason to believe that through their paid agents they will attempt in some way to defeat the action proposed. After the successful purchase of a State Legislature no hesitation will probably be felt about attempting to corrupt Congress. But the situaor the country, is di ferent from that at Baton Rouge, and however active the lottery agents and lobbyists may be their daily transactions can be noted and the proper warning sounded.

Chicago May Have Gas Fuel. CHICAGO, July 28.—Chicago hopes soon to be emancipated from the abominable smoke nuisance. The City Council has taken up the fuel gas ordinance, so long delayed, and will probably pass it on Monday evening. The measure is backed by the Chicago Economic Fuel Gas Company. The company proposes to furnish fuel gas from Indiana, which will have to be piped about one hundred and fifty miles, and to supply local consumers at from 50 to 60 consumers. local consumers at from 50 to 60 cents per thousand feet, with a rebate to the consumer for cash payment and 5 per cent. to the city of the company's earnings for the privilege of laying pipes in the alleys. Those in position to know all about the project laugh at the idea advanced by the company's of the the idea advanced by the opponents of the ordinance to the effect that it emanated with either the Standard Oil Company or the old Gas Trust. The laying of the pipes through Indiana is already under way. If the com-pany is given its ordinance fuel gas will be delivered here before Jan. 1.

THAT BABY. Thing of Beauty and a Joy Forever There was a baby in the railway car the other day. It was not an unusual child, but it had a decidedly bright face and pretty ways. For the first few miles she was very quiet, and her blue eye looked around in wonderment, for evi dently it was the little one's first ride on the cars. Then as she became used to the roar and rumble the baby proclivities asserted themselves, and she began to play with her father's mustache. At first the father and mother were the only parties interested, but soon a young lady in an adjacent seat nudged her escort and directed his attention to the laughing child. He looked up, remarked that it was a pretty baby and tried to look unconcerned; but it was noticed that his eyes wandered back to the spot occupied by the happy family, and he commenced to smile. The baby pulled the hair of an old lady in front, who turned around savagely and glared at the father with a works: Opp. G. T. R. Several otners had become interested in the child by this time—business men and young clerks, old ladies and girls—and when the baby hands grasped the large silk hat of her father and placed it on her own head, it made such a comical picture that the old gentleman across the way, unable to restrain himself, burst out into a loud guffaw, and then looked sheepishly out of the window, as if aahamed to be caught doing such an unmanly thing, Before another five minutes he was playing peek-a-boo across the aisle with the baby, and every one was envying him.

The ubiquitous young man, ever on the move, passed through, and was at a loss to account for the frowns of every body. He had failed to notice the baby. The brakeman looked in from his post on the piatform and smiled. paper boy found no custom till he had spoken to the baby and jingled his pocket of change for her edification. The conductor caught the fever and chucked the little one under the chin; while the old gentleman across the aisle forgot to pass up his ticket, so interested was he playing peek-a-boo. The old lady in front relaxed, and diving into her reticule, unearthed a brilliant red pip-pin and presented it bashfully to the little one, who, in response, put her chub-by arms around the donor's neck and pressed her rosy little mouth to the old lady's cheek. It brought back a flood of remembrances to that withered heart, and a handkerchief was seen to brush first this way and then that, as if to catch

The train sped on and pulled into the station where the baby, with her parents were to leave the car. A look of regret came over every face. The old gentleman asked if he couldn't kiss it just once; the old lady returned the caress she had received, and the baby moved towards the door, shaking a by-bye over the shoulder of her papa, to which everyone responded, including the newsboy who emphasized his fare-well with a wave of his hat. The passengers rushed to the side where the baby got off and watched till she turned out of sight at the other end of the sta-tion, shaking by byes all the time. Then they lapsed into silence. They missed that baby and not one of them would be unwilling to acknowledge it. The little one's presence had let a rift of sunshine into every heart, warm or cold, in that car.—Orphan's Friend, House of Angel comfortable. A painter, at $3 the day will take a great deal of money, and a woman who needs that money for other things can easily do her own painting, especially if she has a moderately inteligent man of all work to assist her.

In the first place, as to brushes, you

ary. Do not get them too heavy, will tire you; a medium round mah, a flat brush about six inches wide, small "liner" to mark the edges and go into corners, and you have enough. After you have bought them soak them and prevent the falling out of the bristles, and they are then ready for use. Lard cans are most useful for mixing your stains, but if you buy that article in a more economical fashion tin vegetable cans will do if the top is cut entirely out.

To begin with the hall, I should remand, if you are undecided about mend, if you are undecided about color, raw sienna, rather than a darker stain, as it does not show dust or foot marks, and it harmonizes with any foot marks, and it harmonizes with any rug. The half of a pound can of prepared paint mixed with a gill of turpen-tine will give you all the color you require for quite a large room.

Now take your small brush and paint a line around the edge of your floor to prevent your large brush from smirching the walls. Then with the round paint the lengths of board with the grain of the wood. When stopping your work al-ways complete the board on which you are working; thus the stain will look equal and even. Take a low chair by all means, as you can then paint your lengths of boards with very little fatigue, merely moving the chair when desired. This is certainly not professional, but it has been tested and found most satisfactory.

The flat brush is for 'the hard oil fin-

What Need Have Canadians to Steal Yankee NEW YORK, July 21.—The Herald's special New York, July 21.—The Herald's special from St. Paul says that lumber stealing by Canadians along the northern border of Minnesota has become so extensive that the Government has concluded to put a stop to it. A large expedition, headed by four agents, will leave Duluth about August, and will start in a northwesterly direction, its destination being the western portion of Rainy Lake. The four officers of law and the interior department will be instructed to continue their work as far as in their own judgment seems best, and no time is fixed for their return. The expedition was decided on every chance they have for pure air and judgment seems best, and no time is fixed for their return. The expedition was decided on by the heads of the interior and land departments after an examination of the report by a special agent who made a trip along the northern boundary of the state. He reported that on Big and Little Rainy rivers great quantities of logs were being run into the lake and across to the Canadian border. Trees had been cut from government land. Work was being carried on under the direction of Canadian lumber firms, and was performed by Canadian halfbreed Frenchmen and by some of the dwellers on this side of the line, who were probably for aware that they were engaged if a fraudulent enterprise. The special agent estimated that in these two rivers there were 75,000,000 feet of logs, and perhaps as much more was being cotten away with a tother. estimated that in these two rivers there were 75,000,000 feet of logs, and perhaps as much more was being gotten away with at other points along the boundary line. GARUTIA IS A LEPER.

Brought to New York from Yucatan to Complete His Education, He Finds That He Is a Victim of a Dreadful

New York, July 30,-Manuel Garutia rich, cultured and young, is under sentence of death by a disease from which no victim has ever recovered. The sentence and the manner of its execution are as diabolical as any invented during the darkest days of the Inquisition. Its principle is that of torture.
It is an insidious, lingering death, advancing by almost imperceptible stages, but always advancing; a gradual dissolution of the body which the unclouded mind observes with despair, from which the soul recoils with loathing. There is no momentary reprieve during which the one under sentence may meet his family and friends, to hear their voices and take them by the hand, for their love has been extinguished by fear and the associates linger on, a community lost to

There is a word that has not been breathed in the ear of young Manuel Garutia. The merciful physicians have spared him that. That word is "leprosy."

Has Garutia whispered that word to him-relf? No one knows, but yesterday when Dr. Dillingham visited him and proffered his hand cordially in greeting the unfortunate youth did not respond at once, but looked enquiringly in the physician's face. The sympathetic hand was not withdrawn, and as the young man seized it a smile lighted his calm face and tears dimmed his eyes.

The disease, as manifested in Garutia, consists in lesions of the skin and flesh on different parts of the body and limbs. These spots are scarcely distinguishable to the eye, but another, including the nail, is gone, though in both cases firm flesh has grown over the wounds. Both of Garutia's hands are slightly shrunken and the tendons of the fingers have already begun to contract, giving the hands that claw-like appearance so common to place almost inaccessible for fire engines, but years old he slightly wounded the end of one of his fingers. The flesh was torn and the nail broken. The boy had always enjoyed good health, but this trifling injury gave him a great deal of trouble. The wound was a long time healing. It never bled, but the raw flesh remained without a covering of clean skin for several weeks, and when at last the finger was apparently sound, there was no nail, and the end of the bone pressed against the skin. Neither Manuel nor his parents were alarmed, and the young man desiring to learn the English language, it was arranged that he should enter a military school at Chester, Pa., of which a favorable report had been brought back by a neighbor's son who had been a pupil there. Before he had been many weeks at Chester Manuel discovered a spot on his breast which seemed dead to feeling when he rubbed himself with a towel after bathing. Then he discovered similar spots on other parts of his body. There was only a slight discoloration of the skin, so the matter was half forgotten until an incident occurred which caused him to remember the slow healing of his sore finger in Yucatan. While playing ball one day Manuel reand full of the joy of living. His parents came to New York and wrote to him to join them here. Shortly after his arrival here he consulted Dr. Theodore Wiggin of No. 66 West Forty-sixth-street. He asked to be treated for the numbness in his hands and in other parts of his body. Dr. Wiggin told him to call again, and immediately notified the Health Board of his suspicions. It was on July 20 that Manuel was examined in Dr. Wiggin's office by Dr. Dillingham and Dr. Edson of the Board of Health. They decided that the case was one of genuine leprosy. He Won't Pay It. OTTAWA, July 30.—Premier Mowat of Ontario has rejected the claim of $17,000 submitted by the Dominion Government for Crushed to Death. Peterboro, July 30.—A shocking accider occurred yesterday near the Roman Catholic Cemetery by which the little daughter of George H. May was literally crushed to death. Mr. May was drawing sand from a pit in the neighborhood of his own hom and little Clara, aged 2 years and 2 months, had followed him to his working place. In drawing a load of sand from the pit he had to pass through a gate, and just as the ceived the unyielding sphere on the tip of an outstretched finger. The joint was misplaced, but neither the accident nor the surgeon's setting of the boxes are read to the setting of the boxes. surgeon's setting of the bone caused Manuel had not observed the girl's presence and much pain. The finger became numb, and the skin and flesh at its end shrunk until one day walked around to the other side and was skin and flesh at its end shrunk until one day the injured joint dropped off, painlessly and without the loss of a drop of blood. It seemed as though in getting rid of this joint the finger gained new life, for in a few weeks new skin had covered the wound. In telling the physicians of his symptons Manuel does not confess to having been worried over the incident just described. He was young, rich and full of the joy of living. His preparts a sickening spectacle when taken home. There was life enough remaining for the little sufferer to cry at first, but gradually this ceased and death ensued in about 11/2 hours after the accident.

> A "Floater" Found. CORNWALL, July 30 .- On Sunday after noon the body of a man named Joseph Thibeault, a resident of Corwall Island was found floating in a bay two miles Ruilding west of that town. Coroner Hamilton was notified, a jury empanelled and the remains examined. Thibeault was one of the best known raft pilots in this section. Several small articles were found on his person, among them a deck passage from Cornwall to Prescott per steamer Algerian. He had been missed since last Tuesday. No marks of viclence were discorned on him and it is generally supposed that his death was purely generally supposed that his death was purely accidental.

Another Cornwall man named Smeator was drowned at Massena on Saturday.
