A MYSTERIOUS QUEST.

CHAPTER III.

THE END OF A GREAT AMBITION.

There are some moments which to a sensitive mind seem to be of a dream-like or supernatural character. To Hamilton Degraw this was one of them. Never did it, never could it, seem real. Lost in its wonder, he stood motionless, petrified, gazing back into those orbs which in the glare which now fell upon them seemed welling with light. Had it been death to her, he could not have moved. Not till she threw up her arms, scattering widely the flowers that lay on her breast, did he feel the spell sufficiently broken to comprehend what had occurred. Though he had begrudged Death its victim, though he had longed to see this young girl live, and for the last few minutes had only existed in the hope of doing so, he quailed before the realization, and questioned his own sanity in believing in it. Even the shrill cry that now left her lips fell on well-nigh deaf ears; and when next moment, she raised herself and spoke, he roused with a start, flushing from chin to brow with joy, though the words she uttered were full of terror and suggestive of mystery.

"Alive?" This was her cry. "Then have they deceived me." And she looked wildly around till her eye rested on the old crone. "Annetta!" she exclaimed, with something more he could not understand, for her English had rippled off into the strange unknown language of the person she addressed.

The old woman, eager and restless now, answered her in a few quick sentences, at which the maiden—for who could doubt her such?—covered her eyes with her hands and sobbed. But instantly recovering herself, she looked up in despair, and encountering the artist's gaze, seemed to speak, though words of grief and shame were evidently trembling on her tongue.

For him the moment was delightful. He returned her look, and his self-possession failed him. "You are not dead," left his lips in almost childish simplicity. "Thank God that appearances deceived me. You are too young, too fair to yield thus soon to the Great Destroyer. I am glad to see you living, though I know nothing of you, not even your name."

She smiled faintly but piteously. "Nor do I know you," she cried. "I am a child lost to the world, lost to life, lost to everything. I should not be here, speaking, breathing, living, suffering. I expected to die. I wanted to die, but some one has deceived me, and I am alive. For what? Oh, for what?"

The artist stared amazed. From a picture of peace she had become an image of despair. He did not love her less thus, but he felt vaguely out of place and knew not whether to speak or fly.

She saw his trouble and waved him back. "Since I must live," she murmured, "let me leave this bed of death." And without waiting for any assistance, she slid to the floor and stood tottering there, clothed in a long, white garment, bordered with gold, as beautiful as it was odd and poetic. "What trappings are these?" she cried, pointing to the bed and glancing down at her own garments. "If I were not to be allowed to die, why this wealth and beauty of adornment? I am still dreaming, or—" Her eyes fell again on Annetta and she asked her some other question.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

This is the age of research and experiment, when all nature is to be explored and its secrets revealed for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides during the past century, and among these by no means least important discoveries in medicine comes that of THERAPION. This preparation is unquestionably one of the most potent and reliable Patent Medicines ever introduced, and has, we understand, been used in the Continental Hospitals by Ricord, Rostan, Jobert, Volpeau, Maigne, and the well-known Chassagnac, and indeed by all who are regarded as authorities in such matters, including the celebrated Lallemand, and Roux, by whom it was some time since uniformly adopted, and that it is worthy of the attention of those who require such a remedy we think there is no doubt. From the time of Aristotle downwards, a potent agent in the removal of these diseases has been the "philosopher's stone," the object of search of some hopeful, generous minds; and far beyond the mere power of such could ever have been discovered—of transmuting the base metals into gold is surely the discovery of a remedy so potent as to remove the energies of the confirmed leprosy in the one case, and in the other so effectively, speedily and safely to expel from the system without the aid, or even the knowledge, of a second party, the poisons of acquired or inherited disease in all their protean forms as to leave no trace or trace behind. Such is THERAPION.

THERE IS absolutely no word to express the efficacy of Scott's Emulsion in the treatment of COUGHS, COLDS BRONCHITIS CATARRH, GRIPPE AND RHEUMATISM ALL DRUGGISTS

Meantime young Degraw had stepped back to the table upon which lay the sketch he had been making. Lifting it up, he turned it toward her. "Let this explain my presence here," said he. "It may also make clear to you what otherwise must seem wrapped in mystery. Your picture was desired. I was summoned here to draw it. You must know by whom. The name accompanying the request reads like Andrea Montelli."

She left the old crone and took a step in his direction and that of the picture he held. A flush was on her cheek, a flush that vaguely irritated him and made him, for the first time, question who this Andrea Montelli really was.

"I do not understand," said she; "but it is of no consequence. Nothing is of any importance to me now. I am living, that is all I can think of; I am living and the struggle with my fate must re-commence."

"This expression of grief at finding herself once more in the world of human beings, both shocked and touched him. Though he felt she ought to have some one with her of her own kindred, or at least, of her own station and sex, he did not see how he could leave her with no one to soothe her but this old woman, who was at once so coarse and so repellent.

"Have you no friends in the house?" he asked.

She sadly shook her head. "Is there no one I can call?" he persisted, turning now toward the door.

She shivered and caught him by the hand. "Do not leave me," she entreated. "Do not go till I have told you why I was so wicked; for you must think me very wicked to try to take my own life."

"And did you—?" He got no further, for the tears which now filled her fathomless eyes called up a suspicious moisture to his own. Strange and wrong as it all was, he had never felt himself so affected. "Tell me your trouble," he pleaded at last. "Why should one so young and, pardon me, so fair, wish to die before the possibilities of life were fully tested?"

"Because," her cheeks flashed fire and a color broke out on her cheeks, "because I had failed."

"Failed," he murmured. "I am Selina Valdi!"

Selina Valdi! He knew the name. It was that of the young musical debutante who, but a month before, had stood up before a great assembly of expectant listeners, beautiful, fascinating, but tongue-tied. A wonder, with every promise of song in her blazing eyes and upon her trembling lips, but with no voice at her command, no answering sound to the orchestra's inviting tones, nothing save the moan with which she finally gave up the struggle and sank, overcome and annihilated, behind the falling curtain, Selina Valdi! He remembered the name well, and all the talk and criticism which followed her defeat; and, moved by a boundless compassion, he took her by the hand. Immediately she added:

"At least that is the name by which I was known to my teachers and expected to be known to the world. My real name is Jenny."

"Why did she not finish?" Why did she look at him so strangely and drop her eyes and shake her head? His expression had been one of expectancy, and all his manner was encouraging. But she seemed to tremble before him, and did not speak the name, only murmured:

"But I forgot. I have sworn not to tell my name. I am Selina Valdi without the success which was to make that name illustrious."

cannot face a crowd. At the sight of faces surging in a sea before me, such a terror seizes me that I want to shriek instead of sing; something catches me by the throat and I am suffocated, lost, drowned in a flood of horror to which I can give no name and against which it is useless to struggle. Oh, it is a cruel fate. But I can sing; listen!"

And with sudden impetuosity, her voice soared up in an Italian air, so sweet, so weird, so thrilling, that he stood amazed, entranced, subdued, marveling at the freshness, the power, the soul-moving quality of her tones, as well as at the perfection of her manner and the correctness of her interpretation. A living, breathing genius, glorying in her own gift, was before him, and he could but acknowledge it with delight.

She saw his pleasure and rose in dignity and flushed with power. Her voice left the intricate ways of Italian song and deepened into the broader, deeper channels of German opera. It swelled, it rose, it triumphed, till the strange and shabby room became an edifice, and the atmosphere seemed laden with the breath of gods. A genius? She was more, or seemed so while her voice thrilled and her beauty flushed; but when all was still again, and she stood panting and deprecatory before him, then she seemed only a tender child again, craving sympathy and expecting confidence.

"Marvelous! Marvelous!" So he spoke, lifted out of himself, first by her power and then by her humility. "And with such a gift as this you could be discouraged by one failure, overcome by one fright?"

"Ah," she murmured, "that is how I can sing to you; but I can never sing like that to the multitude."

"Never?"

"But, dear child, you are not sure of this. You are very young, and after some few months of training you will gain courage and reap a full success. You cannot help it, with your genius. God does not give such a voice to be smothered in obscurity."

"God?"

With what an indescribable intonation she spoke. He looked at her in amazement. "Do you believe in God?" she asked, and her face took on a strange look, almost like that of fear.

"I do," he returned; "and so will you, when you have lived long enough to realize His goodness."

She shuddered; a change came over her; she no longer looked so young. "I have not been taught," she murmured. "I have not been trained in church ways and church thinking. Would it have been better if I had? You look so good, would that have made me good, too?"

The old simplicity and childlike manner were coming back, but with something new in it, that, if not comprehended, affected him deeply. "Are you not good?" she smiled. "You have committed one sin, I know, but that was the result of frenzy, and certainly does not argue a bad heart. But good, as man reckons goodness, you must be, or your eyes would not be so clear, or your smile so inspiring. If you were happy—"

"If I were happy?" A fresh change had come over her; she seemed to hang upon his words.

"Then you would no longer query if there were a God, but rejoice in the fact that there is one."

Her face was fallen again, and she seemed to struggle with herself. For some minutes she did not answer.

"Go!" she murmured at last. "I have already kept you too long. Go and forget—" she gasped, gave one look at the crone in the corner to which she had withdrawn, and sank sobbing and troubled in a chair.

He turned to obey her. Something within him told him that he ought to seize upon this excuse to tear himself away from a presence so dangerous to his peace. But when he reached the threshold and turned, as almost any man would have done, for a final look, he found her gazing at him with such despair in her large, dark, limpid eyes, that he made one bound to her side, and seizing her by the hand, exclaimed: "I will not go till I know just what I leave behind me. You have moved me too much. If you are a true woman you will tell me all that a friend should know, or else dismiss me without this look of grief which holds me back in spite of my better judgment."

"I cannot help my looks," she said; "but I can restrain my words. But I will not. I long to have an adviser. I long to have a friend—outside of the profession," she added; "outside of that selfish world where all is rivalry, jealousy and distrust. Can you spare the time to listen, or will you come again to-morrow?"

"I had rather linger now. It is not late. See, it is barely ten o'clock, and I am impatient to know my friend better."

She sighed, and something like a spasm passed over her face; but it was an innocent face; he had no doubt of her, and he listened with irrepresible emotion to the pathetic story which she proceeded to tell him.

Ruth Cameron's New Book.

Ruth Cameron, who writes the daily "Chit-Chat" articles for the Evening Telegram, has just published her splendid articles in beautiful book form. Miss Cameron's articles being read by more than 3,000,000 people throughout the United States and Canada.

"Chit-Chat" is an exhortation to cheerfulness and obliging readiness. In it there is a reminder of the courtesy which is so sweet from youth to old age; a warning against heavy temper, malicious gossip or frivolous spending of time or money.

Ruth Cameron's good, wholesome character building talks hold up a higher plane, to live by a more unselfish ideal, and to avoid even the appearance of evil by better heading the proprietors.

Ruth Cameron is a cultured woman of unusual intellect—a character full of human sympathies and understandings. Her publisher is George M. Adams, Chicago.

The book has a splendid cover design, which includes a pen portrait of Miss Cameron. It makes a splendid holiday gift-book. Doubtless many of the readers of the Evening Telegram, who have been scrap-booking Miss Cameron's articles, will be delighted to learn that they can get her writings in this beautiful book form.

We give Ruth Cameron's "Chit-Chat" our editorial God-speed.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By MUTE CAMERON

"All things are engaged in writing their history. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain; the river, its channel in the soil; the animal, its bones in the stratum; the fern and leaf, their modest epitaph in the soil. The fall-drop makes its sculpture in the sand or on the stone. Not a footstep into the snow or along the ground but prints in characters more or less lasting the map of its march. Every act of the man inscribes itself in the memory of his fellows, and in his own manners and face."
 —Ralph Waldo Emerson.
 "The day will come," I once heard a psychologist prophesy, "when we shall be able to read each other's minds."
 "Well, I devoutly hope NOT," promptly commented one member of the group, to whom the psychologist spoke.
 And the rest of the group echoed the wish in varying forms, but with unvaried fervor.
 This unwillingness that our fellow-men should be able to see into our hearts seems to be universal. I don't wonder. I share it just as you do. But I do wonder if most of us realize as to how large an extent others can see the inside of our hearts.
 I was talking with a big business man the other day a man who owes much of his success to his ability to understand human nature. "Do you know," he said, "I believe that everybody wears a label and somebody is reading it all the time."
 How tremendously true that is. There are no such things as secret acts.
 There is hardly any such thing as a secret thought—surely no such thing as a secret trend of thought.
 Everybody is wearing a label and somebody is reading that label every day.
 Everybody can't read it. Indeed, very few—I might say mercifully few—can. But I don't believe that ever a day goes by but each of us meets someone who can and does read our label.
 I heard a woman say of a clerk in a certain store in my home town: "That woman is not a good woman."
 "How do you know?" "By looking at her face." "Is that a safe way to judge?" "Far safer than any other way. I would believe what I read there much sooner than I would any gossip about her." Incidentally, the woman was right in her judgment.
 Labels are slow in the making, but the process is as sure as it is slow. They are never wrong.
 One thought does not make a label. One act doesn't. Each single thought and deed only makes the first faint tracing of some single letter of the label. Subsequent thoughts and deeds may obliterate and change this first tracing.
 What is YOUR label?
 What are you making it?
 What do you want to make it?
 Are you willing and glad that it should be read by anyone, or are you afraid of those who have eyes to see? Impertinent questions, you say?
 Perhaps so, but pertinent, too, I think.
Ruth Cameron

Mr. English's Review of Mr. McGrath's Book.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Before taking up in order the many errors that interlard very plentifully the pages of that book compiled by Mr. P. T. McGrath I will divert back to the article in Friday night's Chronicle, wherein English is placed vs. Howley.

This is a most reprehensible and mean subterfuge on the part of the Editor of the Chronicle. It is not at all English vs. Howley it is English vs. McGrath. Mr. McGrath is by his own words found guilty of a downright plagiarism. Until last night he was content to strut, like the fabled Jackdaw, in borrowed plumage, and no doubt would continue in borrowed plumage so to strut were it not discovered that gross errors abound in the work. Only in a few minor instances are quotation marks used by the compiler.

Mr. McGrath is guilty of another sin against good taste and literary ethics. He admits that he knows nothing of geology or mineralogy, but at the same time does not fail to draw conclusions of his own, and to give us the benefit of his lightly trained intellect, that brought to bear upon the published works of others, can deduct such sweets of knowledge.

He tells us (or perhaps it were better to say his book tells us) that the geology of the country is very simple. I wonder what Mr. Howley will say to that. If we look over the geology of the country (as published) we will find that large sections of the rocks, have not yet had their positions in the geological scale assigned them. Is this meant as an implication against the capacity of Mr. Howley. It would seem so.

In Mr. McGrath's book we are told that the valleys were formed by the rivers (vide p. 24). Mr. Howley says, in his report of March 5th, 1909, that they were formed by glaciers (McGrath vs. Howley). Neither one is correct, for neither glaciers nor rivers have formed the valleys. Were it in the scope of this article I could tell Mr. McGrath just how it was that valleys were formed. On page 102 of Newfoundland in 1911, the author misquotes Mr. Howley and makes that gentleman responsible for the following silly assertion or statement, "If some of the local gold-bearing areas were carefully and economically handled with up-to-date appliances for recovering all the ore, they might develop into paying propositions." In his we find the word ore substituted for values.

Mr. McGrath's lack of technical training led him into this mistake, in it we see strong evidence in support of my contention, that Mr. McGrath does not know the difference between ore and metal. The word values is technically applied to gold, silver and other more or less precious elements in ores. According to Mr. McGrath mining machinery is what is needed in the case, but what Mr. Howley meant is quite different. He meant the erection of cyaniding and amalgamating plants. Mr. McGrath knows of some great difference between storm and tempest, as will be seen by reference to page 16, of the wonderful book. I shall have to refer so very frequently to "Newfoundland in 1911," and that being rather awkward to write, I shall in future refer to the work as "Caliban." It is so grotesque, impish and untruthful, that I fancy the title fits it most admirably. It is indeed a "Caliban" among books. The compiler does not realize any distinction between a bay or any inland extension of the sea and an ocean, else he is ignorant of where the greater number of our people live. On page 16, "Caliban," he says: "Until recent years the Island had not a settlement beyond sight and sound of the ocean, since fishing was the chief pursuit of its people, and they naturally located in as close proximity (I use Mr. McGrath's spelling) to the ocean as possible."

On page 17, "Caliban," reference is made to the abundant islands in Bay-of-Islands. Now as abundant is a relative term. It would be interesting to hear from Mr. McGrath how many islands in this case constitute an abundance of islands on the West Coast. Where is that river and what are its dimensions? I confess I do not know of any river of any consequence on the West Coast of that name. Here is a new sample of incongruity of language. On page 19 we find, "the mountain ranges extend North and South, and the principal is the Long Range Mountain, which begins at Cape Ray and continues north-east for 200 miles." In the first part of the sentence he tells us that the mountains run north and south, on next part he tells us that the principal range runs north-east and south-west. Is it Mr. Howley's fault?

On page 20 we are informed that "the more recent geological formations do not appear, except in the form of glacial debris and clay deposits due to the disintegration of the rocks." Let us look at the first part of the foregoing sentence. It says that "the more recent geological formations do not appear." I should like to hear from Mr. McGrath how he accounts for the presence of alluvials and loams, are they recent or not? Fancy, farmers cultivating glacial-drift. Certain clayey soils can be tilled, but I should not envy the poor fellow whose farm could boast of no other soil but clay and glacial debris. This from the Editor of an organ of a party that is making such a fuss over the farming possibilities of the country. Now, for the second part, Mr. McGrath must have written this part for the kindergarten. In this we are told, take your thumbs out of your mouth and stand up straight, whilst Mr. McGrath propounds the astounding scientific fact that glacial debris and clays are derived from the disintegration of the rocks—to continue the first part of the sentence, "except in the form of glacial debris and clay, due to the disintegration of the rocks." Whoever heard of fragmental rocks that have resulted from the breaking up of still older rocks, except, of course, certain limestones, which are in a sense fragmental.

In to-morrow evening's Telegram, Mr. Editor, I hope to continue this review of "Caliban."

Makes Stomach Trouble Vanish.
 No Indigestion, Heartburn, Gas or Dyspepsia in five minutes.
 Why not get some now—this moment, and forever rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion? A lump of stomach gets the blues and troubles. Give it a good eat, then take Pape's Diapiesin to start the digestive juices working. There will be no dyspepsia or belching of Gas or retentions of undigested food; no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach or heartburn, sick headache and Dizziness, and your food will be absorbed and your breath with nauseous odors.
 Pape's Diapiesin costs only 50 cents or a large case at any drug store here, and will relieve the most obstinate case of Indigestion and Upset Stomach in five minutes.
 There is nothing else better to take Gas from Stomach and cleanse the stomach and intestines, and, besides, one single dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all your food the same as a sound, healthy stomach would do it.
 When Diapiesin works, your stomach rests—gets itself in order, cleans up—and then you feel like eating when you come to the table, and what you eat will do you good.
 Absolute relief from all Stomach Misery is waiting for you as soon as you decide to take a little Diapiesin. Tell your druggist that you want Pape's Diapiesin, because you want to become thoroughly cured this time.
 Remember, if your stomach feels out of order and uncomfortable now, you can get relief in five minutes.

THE DISCOVERY OF STEAM.

Robert Fulton, who discovered the principle of steam at the tender age of twelve years, was born in Pennsylvania in 1765 of Scotch-Irish stock with long Havana hair. At the age seventeen he took to china painting and his father gave him up, but he rallied from this attack and became one of the first advocates of the ship subsidy. While waiting for dinner one day, Robert carelessly inserted an index finger into the spout of a tea kettle, thereby contracting a worldwide idea and a large water blister. Going to New York he built the ship Clermont, which attained a speed of five miles per hour going south and two punctured boilers going north. Robert was the subject of much contumely at this period. The natives would gather on the shore and whistle and utter coarse remarks, calculated to raise his drooping spirits to a temperature of about 22 below zero, and then go back to the corner grocery and pass a motion to the effect that Robert was the original fathead. When the Clermont became a shining success, his old neighbors and friends crowded in to buy stock, providing they could get it on the ground floor with a modest discount for cash. It was at this time that Robert invented the steam tug, which has put quite a crimp in his popularity. His later years were embittered by second mortgages on his visible assets, which consisted of one pair of paddle wheels and a horse steam chest. He had to go to law so often to protect his patents that he became quite expert and got so that he could tell the applicant from the appellant. He died in 1815, owing a large grocery bill, but is better appreciated now.

Broken Pledges

Although there have been picnics in plenty, lashings of good things, land grants galore, new jobs for heelers, fat contracts for supporters, and in general plenty and profusion for the well-to-do supporters of the Picnic Party, the general body of workers have to toil and moil and sustain the increasing cost of living and heavy burden of taxation without any sign of relief from the Government. More railway contracts are foretold and big loans loom in the near future, and still there is no sign of the Picnickers keeping their promise to redeem their pledges and put tea, sugar and pork and other prime necessities on the free list. It is a pledge that has been ignored for the past three sessions and the duties have been collected on foods that Premier Morris said he would remit when he got into power.

This pledge has been broken as ruthlessly as his promise to the fishermen about the sealing voyage, and as callously as the promise of simple legislation for Elective Road Boards, in order that the men in the outports might manage their own local affairs. Not only has the Picnic Party broken its promise to relieve the people of the heavy duty on foods, but that party has failed as strikingly to redeem its promise to cheapen coal. Here is what the Premier promised three years and two months ago, and nothing worth while has been done: "The serious situation created by the present price of coal is so far-reaching, touching as it does every fireside in the Colony, as well as every industry, that it has become a national grievance. Coal in Sydney to-day sells at low as $2.00 a ton, yet it costs our people in many settlements in the Colony as high as $7.20 a ton, though a cargo of English household coal was brought across the Atlantic, a distance of two thousand miles, and sold in St. John's recently for $5.50 a ton. A means must be found for effecting a reduction in the price of coal, and if elected, we shall take steps to bring about such a result."

Died Saturday.

We regret to record the death of Mr. Thomas Kelly of LeMerchant Road, which took place at 3 p.m. Saturday. Deceased who was in his 25th year, leaves a widow and one child, two brothers and two sisters. He was a son of the late John and Theresa Kelly, and brother of Mr. John Kelly of Bowring's Southside premises. He had consumption.

The Empire All Right.

The schr. Empire is now out over 60 days from Oporto and last week some uneasiness was expressed about her. She, however, we are glad to say, is all right, having been sighted by the Tobiatic which arrived here yesterday 11 1/2 days, near the Gulf Stream. She was but 1 1/2 miles from the Tobiatic in lat. 40 N., 41.30 W., but showed no signal and was making good weather. She was, however, entering the storm zone then, and would have since met bad weather.

Collection Over $4,000

We learn to-day that the Christian Brothers collection has gone over $4,000, several amounts having been handed in since yesterday. This shows that our people more and more appreciate the efforts of the Christian Brothers unselfishly directed for the moral and material improvement of their children.

Such changes all around I see; from ancient ways our country swerves; this blamed old world's too swift for me, I can't keep cases on its curves. The world has got too swift for me, I make acknowledgment with grief; I'm only waiting here to see the ice box used for roasting beef; I only wait on trembling legs, to see the bushes bearing cheese; to see the hens lay scrambled eggs, and roasted turkeys in the trees. And when King Death in sombre tones shall summon this back number rube, they'll shoot me to the place of bones by way of a pneumatic tube.

The sail, however, was rendered useless, most of it being burned, and a new one must be made. Sparks from the forecastle stove caused the damage.

The Situation in China.

Special to Evening Telegram: PEKIN, To-day. Late developments are all unfavorable to the Imperialists, whose hopes rise and fall with every change. To-day they were dejected because Unga, the capital, has taken occasion to declare independence and has expelled officials. Various reports are reaching Peking which indicate that Manchuria which up to the present has been only passively rebellious, is likely soon to become an active factor in the revolution. The Viceroy of Manchuria reports to the Government that the Japanese are assisting the revolutionaries. They are importing dynamite for the rebels and even joining the rebel ranks. Newspapers are beginning to voice the popular idea that Premier Yuan intends soon to declare himself Regent, because of his inability to prevent the intriguing of the Manchu princes. Evidently, the Premier not being able to bring the rebels to terms acceptable to Manchuria, intends to do further fighting. Heavy movements of troops through Pao Ting Fu indicate that an attack in the Shansi rebels is not far distant.

Routing out the Pirates.

Special to Evening Telegram: HONG KONG, To-day. Gun boats are effectively policing West River. Steamers bound to Wu Chow are escorted by warships. Others are travelling in pairs for their mutual protection, their wheel-houses being enclosed in steel. The Chinese war vessels are routing out the pirates and a desperate fight has taken place, the Shihing robbers being driven back, but they are expected to make another stand. A mass meeting will be held at Canton on Tuesday to discuss the situation and receive suggestions in regard to the administration of the republic.

Capture is Complete.

Special Evening Telegram: LONDON, To-day. A despatch from Shanghai says the capture of Nanking is complete. The Imperialists did not resist, hence there was no bloodshed. The last stronghold on Sloan Hill capitulated on condition that the lives of the defenders were spared. Destruction prevails but the railway service has been resumed. Nine thousand revolutionists crossed the river Pukow but were driven back with the loss of two guns.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

Special to Evening Telegram: PITTSBURGH, To-day. The boilers in the tow boat Diamond exploded on the Ohio river, killing the captain and six of the crew, and injuring three.

May Change Parade.

At the annual meeting of the T. A. & B. Society to be held next Sunday, the question of the propriety of other-wise of deferring the annual parade to another season will be raised. heretofore it has been held on New Year's Day, and it is now proposed to hold it the Sunday following the anniversary of Father Matthew on the 10th October. Weather conditions in January are anything but favorable as a rule for parades.

The Gift That Pleases.

There is no gift more acceptable at Xmas than a photograph. We cannot suggest a more delightful present than a portrait by S. H. PARSONS & SONS. A good portrait is a possession of great charm—a human document—always interesting—always welcome. We have revolutionized our photographic methods and all photographs taken up to the 15th of the month will be delivered before Xmas. Studio: Corner Water and Prescott Streets. dec.2,11.

Vessels Arrive.

The schr. Tobintee, Capt. Pebites, arrived here yesterday forenoon, after a run of 32 days from Oporto in ballast. She had fine weather until off this coast about two weeks when gale succeeded gale until within the past couple of days when it abated and allowed her to get to port. She came in ballast to A. S. Randall & Co. The brig, Lake Simoes, Capt. Wilson, arrived here yesterday afternoon in ballast, after a run of 29 days from Pernambuco, to Batne Johnston & Co. She had fine weather up to about 10 days ago when it became pretty stormy and until port was reached it remained so.

A World Trust.

The annual report of J. & P. Coats, Limited, of Paisley, Scotland, is always an event in the industrial world. This concern is a classic example of the international trust, a development which eighteenth and nineteenth century economists made no provision for. It makes the thread of the world and takes toll of all nations and nearly all people. Its net profit last year was £3,103,000 (about $15,500,000) out of which it paid a dividend of 24 per cent, adding also £225,000 to its reserve fund (which stands at £6,000,000), and £42,500 to its pension fund, and carrying forward £2,808,500. Its "wages-like" career in the past six years is told in this table:

Year	Net Profits and bonus.	Dividends
1906	£2,974,000	25
1907	3,056,000	30
1908	2,701,000	30
1909	2,917,000	35
1910	3,171,000	35
1911	3,103,000	35

A trust in a free trade country is a phenomenon. Unsheltered by a tariff it can only hold its ground by marketing an article at a price lower than the lowest price at which the same article is produced elsewhere, seeing that it is exposed to every other country's competition. A trust of this kind has no terrors for the British people, but the thread Colossus is not of this kind. Bestriding the world, it fears no foe at home or abroad, because it has no foe to fear. It is the Alexander of trusts; there is nothing left for it to conquer. Unlike the common or garden variety of trusts, it even despises the prop of a tariff. It scorns the law of supply and demand, and laughs at the economic maxims which a former generation of Britisbers regarded as almost divinely inspired.

Thread is one of the necessities of life, and it is necessary for the world to buy it from J. & P. Coats, Limited. What more could the Messrs. Coats want? But why Limited?—London Advertiser.

Maine Was Destroyed

By Explosion Under the Ship, Declares Inspection Board. Havana, Nov. 27.—The Maine Inspection Board will start for home some day this week. It has already been amply demonstrated to them that the Maine was destroyed by an explosion which occurred under the ship a little to the port of the keel, between 28 and 30, where the outside skin was blown up and doubled over towards the starboard by the first explosion. After this the transverse armor bulkhead was blown aft from frame 24 by a second explosion and buried itself in the mud through the hole left by the first explosion, which removed that part of the bottom of the vessel.

Cape Report.

Special to Evening Telegram: CAPE RACE, To-day. Wind south, strong, weather dull; the S. S. Lake-Michigan passed east, and a Swedish steamer, J. W. P. D. west, yesterday; the S. S. Empress of Britain past east at 8.30, and a large two-top-mast schooner inward at 10 a.m. to-day. Bar. 29.72; Ther. 38.

Child Terribly Burned.

DIED FROM EFFECTS OF INJURIES YESTERDAY.

About 4 p.m. Saturday a dreadful accident occurred at the residence of Mr. Lafosse on Summer Street, off Merry-Meeting Road. It appears that Mrs. Lafosse went out to see her mother who resides next door and left her three children in the kitchen of her house. When she left two of them went out in the garden at the rear and began pelting each other with snow balls, and left the two year old boy, their brother, at the kitchen table with a book in his hands. It is believed that the child went to the stove and set fire to the book the blaze communicating with and igniting his clothes. The screams of the child were heard by the mother who rushed in and found the poor little lad in the hallway like a human torch with his clothing enveloped in flames. The mother seized a couple of pails of water near, and threw them over the boy quenching the blaze. The poor child was terribly burned about the head, face and arms. Dr. Cowperthwaite was summoned and did all possible for the child, who lingered until yesterday forenoon, when death put an end to his sufferings.

The Life of Sir Humphrey Gilbert.

BY W. G. GOSLING.

This is in every respect a very valuable work and reflects the highest credit on the author, Mr. Gosling, as a historian, an accomplished writer, and a scholar. The format of the book, paper, binding, printing and illustrations are also excellent. The author is slightly in error about the fine portrait of Gilbert in the frontispiece, which Mr. Gosling says has not appeared before, but if he will turn to page 72 of my History he will find the very same likeness. Naturally he claims for his hero great distinction specially amongst the Devon County families and comparatively underrates the family of the half-brother Raleigh.

In the older times the greatest possible distinction for an English gentleman was to be selected for Knight of the Shire and Member of Parliament. The first real Parliament ever held in England was the famous assembly convened by Simon de Montfort. The records show in that the two members selected to represent Devon are Prouz and Raleigh. The former name is found continuously in the rolls of Parliament, Raleigh only in the reign of Elizabeth.

Gosling's life of Gilbert will remain the standard biography of a great Elizabethan and one of the founders of English Colonization. I have to thank the author for his reference to my work. Writing about the continuity of English fishing voyages to Newfoundland he says: "But it is to Judge D. W. Prowse that the honour belongs of having demonstrated in his excellent History of Newfoundland—that although the Crown of England had not by any Executive Act maintained its title, the hardy fishermen of the West Country had by no means surrendered what they had discovered, and doubtless continued steadily to pursue their calling in the prolific waters of Newfoundland. The evidence in support of this theory is rather relative than direct, but it is none the less convincing." The London Times in its long two column review of my book commences with these very remarkable words: "Judge Prowse has added a chapter to the 'History of England.' This refers to my discovery of the Act of Henry VIII. in which the Newfoundland cod-fishery is placed on a par with the other great fisheries of the Kingdom. Surely the best possible proof of its existence. The Venetian letters about 'abot's voyage are also very striking evidence of continuity could any one believe that these daring old West countrymen, a money-loving race, having found such a gold mine, would give it up to the foreigner. The reasons and the method of secrecy I have fully explained and proved it was to guard their ships from the rapacious hand of the tyrant King. Mr. Gosling has one great quality—the courage of his opinions. He is also candid and neither shirks nor shuns over difficulties. He neither extenuates. All the brutality of Gilbert's dealings with the poor Irish is clearly set forth, also his base truckling to the court when a member of the House of Commons. On one subject our author is boldly set himself against the literary and scientific world of England and America. Both as a statesman and an Empire founder he places Gilbert above his half-brother, Raleigh. When the Americans placed a tablet in Westminster Abbey to the memory of Raleigh, the founder of our Colonial Empire, the one great mind who had first dreamt of a greater Britain beyond the Seas, they expressed not only their own opinion but the verdict of the world.

Raleigh was a wonderfully all round man. We know him now by his poetry and his glorious prose, but to his own world he was the great man of action, sailor, warrior and scientific discoverer. Gilbert's misfortunes and his tragic death excite our sympathy. The bravest man who ever lived, at his last moments he seems to have courted death. His resolution to remain in the poor little Squirrel was the act of a mad man. We have to thank Mr. Gosling for a very interesting book, the life story of a bold pioneer and a martyr of science.

Christian Brothers Collection.

Yesterday at noon, after the collections had been taken up in the various churches of the Parish, a large gathering of representative Catholic citizens repaired to Mount St. Francis, the home of the Christian Brothers, and presented Rev. Bro. Kennedy, the Superior of the Community, with the collections. The presentation was made by the Hon. J. D. Ryan, President of the Benevolent Irish Society, who, in a congratulatory speech expatiated on the good work done by the good Brothers since their advent in Newfoundland. Rev. Bro. Kennedy in reply thanked the people of St. John's for their generosity, which manifestly showed their sincere appreciation of the Christian Brothers' labours. He felt honoured to be the representative of the Order in Newfoundland, whose people were nowhere outdone in kindness and goodwill.

Mr. E. M. Jackman, as representative of the West End of the city, referred in a hearty speech to the Brothers' labours and remarked that the collection received, though it was large, was by no means a sufficient remuneration, but was merely a slight tribute.

Mr. John P. Fitzpatrick, on behalf of St. Joseph's Parish, in a brief but happy speech expressed the pleasure he had in handing their collection to the Brothers, and said that no words of his could describe the remarkable work done by the Christian Brothers since their inception.

Speeches were then made by Rev. Bro. Ennis (on behalf of Mt. Cashel), Sir Edward Morris, Messrs. P. J. Summers and P. T. McGrath (representing the Press), V. P. Burke (R. G. School Inspector), and Hon. J. D. Ryan, Mayor. Ellis was unavoidably absent through business in connection with St. Patrick's Church Extension.

The Brothers are to be congratulated on the record collection. We trust that they may be long spared to continue their work in Newfoundland.

The collection amounted to $3,881.43 apportioned as follows:—
 Cathedral $2,788.80
 St. Patrick's 961.43
 St. Joseph's 82.00
 Mount Cashel 37.00
 Kilbride 12.00
 $3,881.43

McMurdo's Store News.

MONDAY, Dec. 4, '11.

In order to have your Christmas cooking quite right you have to consider the quality of the Baking Powder. Spices and Flavorings you use. It makes a great deal of difference in the result whether you use ordinary grades or special qualities of these indispensable things. If you use Acme Brand you can be sure of good results so far as the best qualities in these things can secure them. No alum, phosphate, or anything deleterious in the Baking Powder, the best procurable spices, good strong essences made from the purest ingredients—all these count in the result. Your cakes, pudding and pastry will all be better if you use Acme Brand.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Joseph's Chapel, Holytown, on Wednesday, Nov. 29th, when Mr. Rd. Penny and Miss Mary Kelly were united in the bonds of matrimony by the Rev. Dr. Kitchen. The bride, who looked charming, was given away by her father; Miss Maggie Roche being bridesmaid, and Mr. Jas. Spear, best man. After the ceremony supper was partaken of at the home of the bride's parents, after which the happy couple left for their future residence on Cochrane Street.

At R.C. Cathedral

Rev. Father O'Brien, of Tilting, preached at the R.C. Cathedral at 10 o'clock Mass yesterday. His theme was the "Immaculate Conception." The reverend gentleman has the gift of oratory in a marked degree, and his well modulated voice could be heard all over the church.

At 11 o'clock Rev. Dr. Greene celebrated High Mass, assisted by Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan and Rev. Fr. Sheehan, as Deacon and Sub-Deacon. Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan preached a powerful sermon from the Gospel of the day on the last judgment. His Grace the Archbishop occupied the Throne assisted by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Roche.

At Vespers Rev. Fr. McDermott occupied the pulpit and preached a graphic and thrilling discourse on the text: "He sitteth on the right hand of God, Father all Mighty, from thence He shall come to judge the living and the dead." The terrors of the last great day when men shall wither away through fear were eloquently described. The general judgment would reveal all the hidden things of the world and no one could any longer conceal his sins and successfully act the hypocrite. All men will be known on that great day, and every one would receive his just merits. The Rev. preacher closed by appealing to the confessions and repent of their sins and avert the unrepentant sinners judgment on that great last day. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament followed.

Test of Solignum

Saturday a reporter of the Telegram witnessed a remarkable test of the preservative powers of Solignum at the premises of W. & G. Rendell. A killock used by fishermen had been immersed near the premises in a place which is infected by sea worms since May last, and was only drawn up Friday. Though the iron work filled with animalcules, not a particle of the wood contained them owing to the coating of Solignum it held. A remarkable proof of its qualities as a preservative of wood.

T. A. & B. Meeting.

A special meeting of the T. A. & B. Society was held last evening for the purpose of nominating candidates for office for the coming year. The result was as follows: President, W. J. Ellis, unopposed; V.P., L. Griffin, unopposed; 1st Asst. V.P., J. Cochrane, unopposed; 2nd Asst. V.P., F. H. Summers, unopposed; 1st Treas., M. J. Summers, unopposed; 2nd Treasurer, W. E. Kenny and P. J. Hanley; Secretary, Geo. J. Coughlan, unopposed; Grand Marshal, N. J. Murphy and F. Woods. The meeting was a large one and great enthusiasm was manifested and there were indications that there will be a lively contest for the offices next Sunday, when the election will take place, especially for the office of Grand Marshal, when the best of many victorious battles, M. N. J. Murphy will cross swords with Frank Woods for the office of Grand Marshal. After the nomination was over the officers repaired to the Juvenile Hall and each in turn spoke in a most encouraging manner to the four hundred boys present. President Ellis's prizes for the boys bringing in the greatest number of recruits to the ranks, was won by Leo, Griffin, the second place was won by Thos. Dunn. The prizes were two gold medals. At the close of each of the adult officers offered a prize in the 1912 recruiting business. Mr. N. J. Murphy's prize is a particularly good one and will be largely sought for. Master J. Kelly, President of the Juveniles, in a well delivered speech thanked President Ellis and the other officers for their kindness in visiting their rooms and their generosity in presenting souvenirs. The meeting then adjourned.

At Cochrane St. Church

The Rev. W. H. Webber was the preacher at Cochrane Street Methodist Church last evening. The subject of his discourse being, "The Diocese of the sermon the Rev. Dr. Connerwhite, a former pastor of this church, made reference to the death during the week of the late Mr. Alex. Marshall, whom he had known and visited since he came to Newfoundland now over twenty years ago. During the course of his remarks the Doctor made an earnest appeal to the young men as they face the battles of life, saying that industry, economy, sobriety and honesty are some of the most important factors in the make-up of a successful business life. "As I look around the congregation to-night I miss the faces of many, scarcely a family where the reaper death has not entered. Let us be up and doing, 'For in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.'" At the conclusion the Dead March in Saul was played by Organist Mews as the congregation reverently remained standing.

Annual Meeting Juvenile Society.

Yesterday afternoon the annual meeting of the Juvenile T. A. & B. Society was held and largely attended. The year past has been a very successful one and sixty-eight members were enrolled, so that the Society now has a membership of over 400. The financial report as well as the reports dealing with the other departments were of a very satisfactory character. The election of officers resulted as follows:—

President, J. Kelly; V. P., W. Doherty; Sec., A. Joy; 1st Asst. Sec., T. Murphy; 2nd Asst. Sec., G. Buckley; 1st Treasurer, T. Christopher; 2nd do, D. French. A vote of thanks was heartily accorded Master C. Murphy, the retiring Secretary, who has been transferred to the parent Society.

Concert at Queen's Col.

The first of a series of invitation concerts was given in the Library of Queen's College on Saturday afternoon. The programme was as follows:—

 2. Songs (Schubert)—(a) An die Musik, Op. 89, No. 4; (b) Auf dem Wasser zu singen, Op. 72; (c) Lachen und Weinen, Op. 59, No. 4. Miss Dorothy Johnson.
 3. Pianoforte Solo, Andante in E major (Beethoven)—Mr. Alfred H. Allen.
 4. Songs (Schubert)—(a) Du bist die Ruh', Op. 59, No. 3; (b) Standchen (Schwanengesang, No. 4). Miss Dorothy Johnson.

A Young Thief.

Saturday a man named W. Kenny, of Petty Harbour, came to the city, and after indulging rather too freely went into Mr. John Healey's grocery store, where he fell asleep. A boy named Kennedy, who has a police record, saw him place some money in his pocket and walking into the store as if he intended making a purchase slipped his hand into the man's coat pocket and stole all the money he had—$4.80. The boy was seen in the shop by Master P. Healey, the proprietor's son. A description of him was given the police and he was arrested Saturday night by officers Noseworthy and Lawlor. Most of the money was found on the lad, together with a flask of rum.

Reported Drowned

A telegram to the Deputy Minister of Justice from Mr. H. F. Colbourne, says:—"Richard Gunn, aged 26, unmarried, was drowned here yesterday. He flew to skate across to Botwood on the newly made ice, and has not been heard of since; body not recovered."

The Cutest Swindles Ever Worked.

(Told by a Master Crook.)

No. 1.—How Jewellers are Defrauded.

Most of the frauds on jewellers are pretty well-known nowadays, as for example, sending jewellery to an hotel for a selection to be made. But the following is one that was only carried through successfully by one man, and he was one of the cleverest swindlers who ever misused his talents.

We will call him Billy Merton. Billy was a man who could assume the character of a rich Society man as easily as he could that of a common rogue. His versatility was, indeed, amazing. In the following scheme he had another man and woman as confederates. The two were as clever as himself, and well capable of playing the parts required.

Some wealthy peer is selected as a victim. Whoever it is who is chosen, it is necessary that he shall have a town and country residence. Suppose Lord Jones is the nobleman who is chosen. One of the clique find out where Lord Jones banks. This is easy enough, for the clique have a banking account of their own, and a casual remark to the manager soon settles the question.

As soon as he discovers Lord Jones' bank, Merton opens an account there, and obtains a cheque-book. He also has elaborate notepaper printed bearing Lord Jones' crest and address. We will suppose that Lord Jones resides in the W. District.

Rubs Out the Pencil Address.

Billy Merton is now ready to begin his scheme. He finds out a shop close to the town residence of Lord Jones, where letters may be addressed. To this shop he addresses a letter to himself. This letter is addressed in pencil, and inside is a letter supposed to have come from Lord Jones. Now note this letter, for it is important. As soon as Merton gets it he rubs out the pencil address, and re-addresses it in ink to Lord Jones. He has now in his possession a letter apparently written by Lord Jones to Lord Jones, with the proper district stamp on it.

The next step in the scheme is to hire a smart motor-car, with chauffeur and footman complete. He writes to a big garage on Lord Jones' notepaper, and asks that the motor-car shall be sent round at such and such a time next day. At the appointed hour the chauffeur and footman appear, to see Billy Merton, posing as Lord Jones, at the gate of his residence putting on his gloves.

"Very late, aren't you?" he says. "No, my lord. The carriage was ordered at eleven o'clock."

"Oh, I thought I said a quarter to. Well, never mind. Drive me to So-and-so's, the jeweller's."

Off goes the motor to the well-known Jeweller's. Merton, now Lord Jones, has his faked letter in his pocket. This letter, it will be remembered, is supposed to come from Lord Jones, and says:

"Oh, by the way, you were inquiring about your clocks? You can't do better than go to So-and-so's the jeweller's. They have done good work for me before." This letter is written on Lord Jones' notepaper, with the proper crest.

The Forgotten Letter "Swank."

On arrival at the jeweller's, the sham Lord Jones instructs the footman to take in his card, and out comes the manager.

"I want you to send a man down to my house to repair a clock. You did some work for Lord Brown, and he recommended me to you. Do you remember?" The manager for the moment doesn't. Out comes the forgot letter.

"Oh, yes," says the jeweller. "I remember now." He doesn't, as a matter of fact, but it is not policy to admit that to Lord Jones as he suspects him to be.

The Kidneys Wear Out

But in advanced years you can keep these organs healthy by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

As old age comes on most people suffer more or less from derangements of the kidneys. With some there are years of pains and aches, with others Bright's disease sets in and the end comes quickly.

Fortunately many have learned about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and are enabled by their use to keep the kidneys healthy and active.

Mr. Richard Preston, Osborne, Lambton County, Ont., says: "Seventeen years ago I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills when my back was so bad that to stoop or rise was torture to me. The kidneys were in bad condition, but these pills entirely freed me of back pains. I have used them ever since, whenever the kidneys would get out of order, and now, at eighty years, am well and hearty, thanks to this grand medicine."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

"Can you call on Thursday next, or better still, I will drop you a line. I am having some of the rooms refurbished, and things are rather in a muddle." The jeweller is about to retire when Lord Jones calls him back.

"Oh, by the way, I am giving a wedding present to my niece! I don't know whether I have time now to settle—pulling out an expensive gold watch. Well, perhaps I can spare a few minutes."

Lord Jones enters the jeweller's, and selects a necklace or other suitable present for his niece, costing anything between £500 and £1,000.

While with the jeweller he does everything to add to the impression that he really is Lord Jones. He will take out a gold snuff-box with Lord Jones' monogram on it, for example, leaving a cigarette case lying about with the monogram on it, and in a dozen little ways brings before the jeweller that he is Lord Jones and no other.

When he has chosen the necklace and other little presents he instructs the jeweller to place them on one side and keep them for him.

"I don't want to give her anything that she has already got," he says. "However, I shall be seeing her, or writing to her in the next few days, and I will then settle definitely what I will have, and away with Lord Jones alias Billy Merton goes."

When Can Lord Jones Call? Now comes the time for his woman confederate to play her part. A letter is faked as the previous one was, but this time the contents run something as follows:

"Dear Uncle,—I am going to surprise you to-morrow. I am coming to town, and mean to stay to lunch. Expect you to look after me."

The crook promptly writes to the jeweller, on Lord Jones' paper, and informs him that his niece is coming up to town next day, and it will be a suitable opportunity to settle the necklace question. Will the jeweller kindly state his own time when it would be convenient for Lord Jones to call? Will he also see that Lord Jones gets the letter, marked Private, first post in the morning.

The jeweller writes to Lord Jones' address, and informs him that four o'clock would be a most convenient time. This letter, of course, goes to the real Lord Jones' London address. Now Billy Merton was always careful to choose a peer who was out of town at that time, staying at his country residence. The real Lord Jones' therefore doesn't get the letter that morning, though the jeweller thinks he does!

It is of the utmost importance that Merton should find out what time the jeweller has fixed. This is where his pal come in. About two o'clock a well-dressed stranger drives up in a taxi to the jewellers and goes in.

"Oh, has Lord Jones been here yet?" "No, sir," replies the jeweller.

The well-dressed stranger pulls out his watch. "What a nuisance. I wanted to see him this afternoon. He told me at the club last night he would be calling here, and I thought I could catch him."

"He won't be here till four o'clock, sir," replied the jeweller. "I'm very much obliged. Tell him Lord William will try and drop round here and see him, will you, though four o'clock is rather an unfortunate time for me," and off he drives.

See the supreme indignity of the Jeweller! He has made the jeweller tell them the time of the appointment, and the jeweller doesn't realize the fact! At four o'clock sharp no driver is supposed to drive up to the jeweller's and his niece to the jeweller's.

"Awful rush to get here. Wish you had made it four-thirty instead of four," he says, impressing the jeweller in quite a casual manner that he had received his letter late that morning.

Lord Jones turns to his niece, who is well dressed, of course, and capable of playing her part without arousing suspicion.

"I'm in a hurry, my dear. Just pick what you like, though you will find my choice is not a bad one."

The supposed niece selects what she requires. Lord Jones promptly writes out a cheque for the amount and the pair drive off, leaving the jeweller rubbing his hands at having done such a good stroke of business. He rubs them to a different tune, however, when he hears from the real Lord Jones, who has received his letter in the country, and finds out that the cheque is a forgery.

Meanwhile, Billy Merton, Lord Jones no longer, has gone straight to one of the leading pawn brokers and converted the jewels into hard cash!

Remarkable Skill of Japanese Dentists.

Extract Teeth With Fingers at Rate of Six or Seven Per Minute.

Japanese native dentists conduct their business in a manner which would undoubtedly cause any European practitioner to open his eyes in amazement. The victim is seated on the ground. The dentist bends over him and forces his left hand between the patient's jaws in such a manner that the mouth cannot possibly be closed. Then he grasps the doomed tooth between the thumb and forefinger on the right hand and with one deft wrench removes it and throws it upon the ground.

So great is the skill of these native dentists that many of them are able to remove six or seven teeth per minute. Indeed, their skill is hardly to be wondered at when one considers the course of preparatory training they are obliged to undergo. A number of holes are bored in a stout plank and this is fixed firmly to the ground. In the holes are driven wooden pegs and the would-be dentist has to extract them with his fingers without dislodging the board. This process is repeated with a board of pine wood and finally with one of oak, and it is only when he has succeeded in extracting the pegs from the oak plank that the Japanese considers himself qualified to practice upon his fellow men.—Pearson's Weekly.

Head of Carnegie Trust Company Guilty.

New York, Nov. 30.—Wm. J. Cummings, the former Tennessee promoter and recent directing head of the Carnegie Trust Co., was found guilty to-day of the theft of $140,000 from the Nineteenth Ward Bank by the jury before whom he had been tried for the past five weeks. He was remanded to the Tombs Prison until Friday, when his counsel will be given the privilege of making such motion as he may decide upon before sentence is pronounced. The principal witness against Cummings was Bradley Martin, Jr., Vice-President of the Nineteenth Ward Bank, who testified that the loans put up by that institution and the Van Norden Trust Co. had been turned over to the Carnegie Trust Co. under a trust agreement by which the money was to be used to retire Van Norden, Nineteenth Ward Bank and Twelfth Ward Bank stocks held as collateral in loans.

The State held that Cummings had $140,000 of this fund credited to himself, and that he used it to bolster up the finances of his various industrial companies in the South, which the State Attorney referred to as "paper" companies.

The penalty for Cummings' offence is an indeterminate term of from five to ten years as the maximum sentence. Cummings is fifty years old and has a wife and married daughter.
