

The Superfine in Chocolates

Everything that is used in making Stewart's Chocolates—fruit flavors, sugar, cream and chocolate—must be the finest that money can buy. Our years of experience tell us just how to blend these choice materials to make the most delightful chocolates obtainable.

Sunset Ranch

(Conclusion.) Sunset station is merely a pine packing box turned sideways, with a telegraph desk inside, and a tank of drinking water on the shady corner. On the north side of the tracks were drawn up a couple of what Sunset called conveyances. One was a buckboard, the other was an automobile, large, deep, bright red, and "mighty comfy," as Nell Wickes said when she caught sight of it.

"I like local color," she said, "but not applied in chunks. I'll take mine as an impressionistic background to the picture and ride in the 'bubble.'"

McGowan was talking to the telegraph operator, dictating a list of messages and talking home chat. His sister tucked herself comfortably into one of the back seats of the automobile and proceeded to wrap her head up in a six-yard veil of pale-green chiffon.

Over near the buckboard stood a couple of figures, quiet, immovable, speechless. One was short and slumped-shouldered, with a round, brick-colored face and inquiring eyes of childlike blue. The other was tall, Lady Scarsdale, standing beside the red automobile, tried to get a more definite impression of him.

As she had stepped from the train ignoring the outstretched arms of McGowan, and the hand of the porter, she had seen only one object in Sunset, this tall figure in khaki-colored garb, his cream-colored comb-over pulled low over his eyes, and those eyes looking steadily at her.

That was absolutely all she could tell of him, and yet, in that second of time that instant when she had stood poised on the car steps and met his gaze full of glances for glances, the inner soul, spirit, consciousness, or whatever one might care to call it, was awakened for the first time in her life in Lady Scarsdale.

When McGowan had finished with the telegraph operator and had sprung over to the two figures and gripped them by the hands, Isabel took her place beside Mrs. Danforth Wickes.

"Hello, Cherry!" called that lady gayly. "Didn't know me in this outfit, did you? Come over here."

The short figure obeyed with alacrity. Vaguely Lady Scarsdale was glad the tall one had not responded. She leaned back in the leather seat and smiled at Mr. Cherry Barnes.

"The Colonel looks something great, don't he?" he said. "Got fatter since he was up last year, too. Couple of weeks on the range will put a lather of tan on him that'll make him show up like a sure enough Rapahee buck."

"Oh, Tom's looking fine," retorted Mrs. Wickes fervently, with a little side glance at the silent, graceful form beside her. "He's pretty happy today."

And Cherry "tumbled," and wondered what under the light of heaven that slim, sweet girl saw in big, rough Tom McGowan.

"Lady Scarsdale is her name," he said, after the red automobile had rolled down the smooth, dusty stretch of road that led over the country toward the Sunset ranch. "One of your folks, I guess, Harry."

For the next month matters looked as if Cherry were right. Sunset ranch lay at the feet of Lady Bell to do with as she liked, and his owner's neck was beneath her dainty heel. But there were days at a time when the lion Tom was called by the name of his office, down to Cheyenne, and his sister Nell forgot her role of chaperon at large, and motored joyously with her old "pal" Cherry. For more than mere mystery lay between Washington and Wyoming, and the freedom of the range steals into one's blood, and rouses the primitive instincts. Cherry would not have shone at Washington, but he conformed perfectly with the primitive values.

And into the body and soul of Lady Scarsdale there crept, too, this strange, insidious spirit of the open. It is a mythical, inexplicable influence. There is a santheistic mystery to it, a personal mingling with the very forces of nature, until the minor things of life—life such as Lady Scarsdale had known in London, and Paris and Washington—became simply nothing in the general scheme of things. There remained only the grandeur of the open where one might do just as he wanted according to the primitive values.

"If only one never had to go back," she had said one day, when Kincaid had ridden with her along the ridge of sandstone buttes and they had paused to look at a sudden open belt of green, cut by a low, yellowish creek.

"It isn't the going back," Kincaid had answered slowly. "It is the going back—alone."

She had not looked at him, nor spoken again. There was no need. In her silence he read a greater confession than mere words could have said, and she drained her eyes. Through and through they searched her, read her thoughts, and left her unmasked, without pose or balance, until she was conscious of a wild unreasonable longing to put everything behind her, the old artificial life with her mother and sisters, the poor, pitiful brief history of her life, and creeping gray death had seemed to steal over her, to blot out all the sunlight of life, put it away, and stand by this man's side, only Kincaid.

Who was she she did not know, nor care about. All her life she had been taught to judge a man by his pedigree and name. The man himself counted for little. Even McGowan, with all his crude roughness had been a relief.

One day she had come home from a ride with Kincaid and found Nell waiting for her on the blue veranda of the one-story ranch house. Keenly, kindly the other woman's blue eyes had looked at her, looked at the light in her eyes, and made her feel as if she were being looked at by a man who had a heart, and whose brain clear and active, whose nerves strong, whose blood rich and pure, and whose whole being thrilled with a new life.

"Tom doesn't stand a ghost of a chance, does he, dear?" And as Lady Scarsdale was silent: "Why don't you tell him so? It would ease up matters a little."

"Just because Harry Kincaid isn't the boy to butt into another man's game," retorted Mrs. Wickes, coolly. "These boys up here play a square deal in love as well as other things. They're not your Continental breed. You can't give Harry a fair show until you've fired Tom."

McGowan came back from Cheyenne that night. And the following morning the red automobile took the road for Sunset station that the "colonel" might catch the noon train for Omaha.

Standing on the veranda, with her eyes red and swollen from crying, Nell turned a glowing, proud face on the woman beside her.

"Isn't he game, though?" she exclaimed. "I knew he would clear out if you once told him there was no show. I'm awfully sorry for him, but he'll pull up all right. Tom's game."

Kincaid understood, too, without her telling him. He went to the station with McGowan, and when he came back to the ranch, she had gone for a ride, Nell said. He knew where to find her, just as he had known all the way home that she would be waiting for him. And the letter he carried

FOR OPERA MATINEE.

Opera matinee and evening opera are two different things, so far as the dressing of society is concerned. Nevertheless one sees some very interesting novelties at these daytime performances which are very much worth while from a fashion viewpoint. For instance, the pictured coat and muff of lace and chinchilla, brought over from Paris especially for the opera season by a young society matron whose fancy for horses and taste in clothes is well known. The body of the coat is of white silk applique over white satin and trimmed with a pointed stole collar of chinchilla with pendant cord ornaments in white. A wide fur hand finishes the bottom of the coat and the Japanese sleeves. The muff is of the applique hand and draped with the chinchilla.

Had a stab-like pain through the heart. Milburn's heart and nerve pills cured her and saved her life.

There is no one, we imagine, sets about deliberately to do injury to the heart, yet in the excitement and excesses of present-day living the nervous system is done violence to, and the heart and nerve being so intimately bound up with one another, disorganization of the one means disease and disorder of the other.

When you find your heart the least bit out of rhyme, your nerves unstrung, don't wait until you are prostrated on a bed of sickness. Take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They'll put you in such condition you'll never know you have a heart, make your brain clear and active, your nerves strong, your blood rich and pure, and your whole being thrilled with a new life.

Mrs. John C. Yensen, Little Rock, Ark., writes: "I was troubled with a stab-like pain through my heart. I tried many remedies but they seemed to do me more harm than good. I was advised by a friend to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after using two boxes I was completely cured. I cannot praise them enough for the world of good they did me for I believe they saved my life."

Price 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct, receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ried grew heavier, it seemed, with every mile he covered. She was sitting at the base of a big, blasted pine on Devil's Peak when he found her. Near by grazed the black pony McGowan had picked for her. In her riding outfit, with her short hair, and her loose, pongoe waist, she looked younger, and more girlish than ever. As Kincaid looked at her in his arms, she beamed back at him, and he said, "I'm never going back any more," she whispered.

"I've had to sweatheart, sometimes," she said. "For your sake, I've told Tom that I will leave the ranch. It had to be you know. He understood. But listen to me. I am not rich—"

She placed her hand over her lips imperatively. "I won't listen," she exclaimed. "There are other places besides the Sunset that we can go to aren't there? I don't want you to be rich, I only want to be with you, somewhere, anywhere."

"Do you think it's fair?" Do you think I have a right to ask? She laughed and closed her eyes. Kincaid kissed her and the letter in his pocket fell less weightily. Lying at her feet under the old, blasted pine, he handed her the envelope later and watched her read what it contained. It was a brief business letter, from the late Lord Scarsdale's barrister in London and merely notified Mr. Henry Kincaid of the death of his father's cousin in some months previous, and of their difficulty in locating the whereabouts of the said Mr. Henry Kincaid. They traced it would arrive in England shortly as the estate was in a somewhat tangled condition and required Lord Scarsdale's personal direction.

Isabel let the letter fall to the ground and looked at the tanned, strong, young face of the man beside her. She had known vaguely that her husband's heir was a distant kinsman, and that no trace had been found of him, but that fate should have led her across an ocean and a continent to the place where he was, secured inscrutable. "You know sweetheart, I couldn't help it," laughed Kincaid. "You'll still be Lady Scarsdale, my lady."

"But not there, Harry, not over there," she pleaded, and looking across the range, purple and gold in the sunset glow, the new Lord Scarsdale solemnly promised Lady Bell that they would found a Wyoming dynasty of the barony of Whittford.

DESPERATE BURGLARS LOOT
BRANCH BANK IN QUEBEC TOWN

Took Manager Out of Bed and Forced Him to Try to Open Safe—He Purposely Fumbled With Combination and Looters Blew Up Vault Stole $2,400 and Escaped.

Montreal, Nov. 14—Four desperate burglars successfully looted the branch of the Bank of St. John's at Naperville at an early hour this morning, getting away with the contents of the bank safe, amounting to $2,400 in bills.
 The burglars were evidently experts in the business, and seemed to know the lay of the land thoroughly. Paul Brault, the local manager, lives with his family in rooms over the bank, and was sound asleep when about 2 o'clock he was roughly awakened to find two masked men in the room, one of whom covered him with a revolver while the other ordered him to go downstairs. Mr. Brault got up and tried to dress but he was so slow that one of the men gave him a blow on the jaw which nearly knocked him out. A moment later he thought he saw a chance to get away and knocked one of the assailants down, but was overpowered by the rest, two more appearing from below. They did not fire on him, as they wanted him to open the safe.
 The four then took Mr. Brault down to the banking office and planted him in front of the safe, bidding him open it without delay, one man standing on each side with a gun at his head, as an inducement to haste. They gave the bank manager three minutes to open the safe or they would shoot him. Mr. Brault, however, did not open the safe, but fumbled with the combination, hoping that aid might arrive. Finally he told the crooks that he was so bothered by the blows on his head that he could not work the combination and they hustled him upstairs again. One man was left to stand guard over Mr. Brault and the other three blew up the safe with nitro-glycerine, securing $2,400 in bills. They then called the fourth man and departed on a hand car, which they had placed on the D. & H. tracks ready for their departure.
 Mr. and Mrs. Brault were so overcome by their experience that it was half an hour before they could give the alarm, when Mr. Brault telephoned to Montreal and detectives were at once sent out on the chase.
 The hand car has been since found near Lacolle, but no other trace of the burglars has been ascertained. It is supposed that they jumped on a freight train and made for the frontier. Notices have been sent to all the frontier points and a sharp lookout is being kept for the burglars.

SOCIETY AT THE DOG SHOW

Impressions Gathered by a Young Lady From a Visit to Queen's Rink.

Society has never appeared to me very strongly. It has always seemed too difficult to distinguish the solid real from the glittering imitation. Why climb to a height that has no solid basis, and where the air is no purer than down below?

However, on Wednesday afternoon, I tried of the company of my equals and decided to spend some hours in Certified Society. There were others in St. John who were on the same quest, but my method differed radically from theirs. I go to the official function at the Royal or to the bridges or teas which further rather did I dress in my smartest and plainest attire, and purchasing my right of entry with a humble silver quarter, pushed boldly into the precincts of the Queen's Rink.

As I entered, my ears were greeted by the confused uproar which is always the first indication of a social function. High voices, gruff voices, low and shrill voices asked and answered in an undivided chorus. There were some bright lights and steady currents, attendants ran to and fro, and canine society spoke its mind. I walked in, not quite sure of my reception, but I humbly content to look and hear if no better lot befell me. But my expectations were too modest. My manners (as well as my yellow note book) seemed to give me who are thought worthy to be reception committee for canine aristocracy.

My first presentation was to the English setter, a noble company with lofty manners and languid ways, and more-over, surrounded by substantial printed proofs of their lineage, and of their former triumphs.
 Even in canine society, testimonials from other lands and other cities are of great value. Substantial proofs of success and popularity are never spared nor unappreciated.
 Madam Lit O' Leary from Montreal, was plainly feeling bored. Her chum Stoughton had been torn from her side by a fine record from Montreal, was plainly feeling bored. Her chum Stoughton had been torn from her side by a fine record from Montreal, was plainly feeling bored.

Next in line were pensive hounds, and the big Newfoundlanders, notably Baby, who has outgrown her name, but who shakes hands with the confident air of a well bred infant.
 From these neck beauties I went on to the St. Bernards, shaggy blondes every one of them, with an expression above frivolity and mere worldly success.
 Among the visitors from Montreal were some magnificent English bulldogs, clad in white sweaters to protect them from the damp cold of St. John.
 The bull-terriers were taking little interest in proceedings that afternoon. It seemed weary and one suspected that this lassitude was the result of the excitement of Tuesday evening, when these gentle creatures were called upon to take prize for their unrequitable tendency to fight. A quite disgraceful case of assault and battery was recorded on the diet card of one of those sporty aristocrats.
 My heart went out to the spaniels, charming little brunettes, with their delicate and also the affection and faithfulness which some bards have lauded.
 The next figures were "Marco Polo," all the way from Santa Cruz. He was the centre of an admiring throng, as was also his rival in the miscellaneous class, a little grey creature, veiled in long silky hair.

The Irish terriers were a fascinating lot, and apparently patriotic, as one of them was surrounded by the flag of his nation. Scotland was represented by elegant collies, of whom "Gennie" had had a great success in the judging ring. Unique among the collies was "Princess," a pure white and most noticeable beauty.
 On my way out I paused again to bid farewell to the Boston terriers. One of the most pitiful was "Bobby," local star who, as an enthusiastic admirer said, was a darling from his blazing eyes to his quirky tail!

Regrettably I left the gay scene to emerge upon shadowy Charlotte street. Here were rich and poor, all sorts and conditions of men, and for twenty-five cents one of them might have followed my example and spent a charmed hour in the company of real aristocrats.
 CANDIDA.

The social round has been unusually gay during the past week and the numerous events which followed one another in rapid succession taxed society people to the very limit.

The public reception in honor of His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Tweedie at the Royal Hotel on Wednesday afternoon was a brilliant function, and more than four hundred guests were present, many having come from various points outside the city. The guests were received in the ladies' parlor by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Tweedie, assisted by Lieutenant-Colonel J. D. B. McKenzie of Newcastle, who received the private secretary, who presented the callers. Mrs. William Pugsley and Mrs. J. V. Anglin assisted in entertaining the guests. Mrs. H. H. McLean and Mrs. G. R. Roll White presided at the testable and Mrs. J. Douglas Hagan, Miss Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Short, Miss Edith Skinner and Miss Harding assisted.

Many beautiful games were in evidence and the rooms were artistically decorated with chrysanthemums, carnations and smilax.
 A very large number of society people attended the opening of the first annual bench show, under the auspices of the New Brunswick Kennel Club, which took place on Tuesday evening last.
 Among those noticed in the gathering were Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. L. P. D. Tilley, Mrs. Fred Harding, Mrs. David McLellan, Mrs. D. P. Chisholm, Mrs. Malcolm McKay, Mrs. G. C. J. Goster, Mrs. Allison, Mrs. Thomas McAvity, Mrs. Walter Holly, Miss Bayard, Miss McAvity, Miss Ethel McAvity, Mr. and Mrs. Verner McLellan, Miss Sears, Mr. and Mrs. George West Jones and others.
 Mrs. DeB. Carrite was hostess at a very delightful afternoon bridge on Wednesday last, when Mrs. McLaughlin and Mrs. Walter Holly were prize winners.
 Among the guests were Mrs. Lucius A. J. Henson, Mrs. William Hazen, Mrs. Gillis Keator, Mrs. L. P. D. Tilley, Mrs. E. A. Smith, Mrs. John MacLaren, Mrs. R. Langhlin, Mrs. F. J. Haxton, Mrs. R. Downing Patterson, Mrs. D. P. Chisholm, Mrs. Teed, Mrs. H. A. Powell, Mrs. J. B. Cudlip, Miss Alice Walker and others.
 Mrs. Carrite also entertained delightfully on Thursday evening at a dance for the younger members of the social circle.
 Mrs. L. P. D. Tilley was hostess at tea on Tuesday afternoon last. In the dining room, which was tastefully decorated, Mrs. L. W. Barker and Mrs. Walter Foster presided and the function, which was given in honor of Miss Bettison, proved one of the brightest and most enjoyable of the season.
 The Badminton Club held its annual meeting on Tuesday evening last, when the report of the secretary, Paul Longley, was received and showed the club to be in a flourishing condition. The ladies and seven gentlemen, were elected, and officers were elected as follows:—President, Col. George West Vassie, H. N. Stetson and Cyrus F. inches, Ladies' committee—Mrs. Simon Jones, Mrs. W. E. Foster, Mrs. Vassie, Miss Inches, Miss Daisy Fairweather, Miss Elise McLean and Miss Winifred Barker.
 Mrs. William Allison received a large number of her friends at her home, Union street, on Tuesday and Wednesday last, for the first time since her marriage. The bride who wore her wedding gown, looked particularly attractive, and on both days was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Joseph Allison.
 The drawing room was very prettily adorned with chrysanthemums, while in the dining-room the floral decorations consisted of crimson roses. On Tuesday Mrs. Walter Allison and Mrs. H. E. Pidding, too poured tea and coffee, and were assisted by Miss Muriel Fairweather, Miss Alice Davidson and Miss Nellie McIntyre while on Wednesday Mrs. Harold Cowan Schofield and Mrs. Fred. Foster poured, with Miss Constance Smith, Miss Charlotte Vassie and Miss Daisy Fairweather as assistants.
 Local society people are looking forward with a very great deal of interest to a lecture to be given in St. Andrew's church school-room by Mrs. E. A. McKenzie King Finds it Hard to Prove That Japs Violated Alien Labor Law - Strong Anti Jap Feeling.

Vancouver, Nov. 14—Commissioner King examined former secretary of the local Japanese consulate, F. Nosky, who is now head of Nippon Supply Company here doing a business of $15,000 per month in trade with the Orient and holding labor contracts with local Japs. Nosky said thousands of Japanese came here with the object of finding their way to the United States and he had seen maps sold to his countrymen with points on the boundary line marked showing where they could cross into the United States.
 Nosky denied the statement of the head of a rival Japanese firm that the Nippon Company had immigration agents in Japan.
 Mr. King said: "Someone is trying to conceal something. I mean to get to the bottom of it," and he also warned witnesses of the penalty for perjury.
 Editor McConnell, of the Saturday Star, told of one Japanese being brought here from Honolulu under contract and of the recent publication in the local press of a specimen form of contract. McConnell gave the name of his informant, now in California, but could not give the name of any individual or company whom the commissioner could prosecute for violation of the alien labor act.
 Ottawa, Nov. 14—(Special)—Hon. Mr. Templeman, minister of inland revenue, has returned from the Pacific coast. Mr. Templeman says that the Japanese riots at Vancouver were very much exaggerated in the reports sent to eastern Canada. The feeling, however, against Oriental immigration was strong on the coast. The sending of Mr. Lemieux to Japan and the investigation which Mr. MacKenzie King is now conducting in Vancouver are having a good effect, and Mr. Templeman hopes to see at an early day the whole question satisfactorily adjusted.

SIFTON IS FOR
"ALL-RED" ROUTE

Speaking at Bristol He Declares Strongly in Its Favor.

Montreal, Nov. 14—A special London cable says:
 Hon. Clifford Sifton today inspected the Royal Edward dock at Avonmouth and appeared to be much impressed with the facilities afforded for the landing of Canadian products. At a luncheon which took place at the Victoria rooms, Bristol, Mr. Sifton on rising to respond to the toast of the ships of the colonies and commerce, was received most enthusiastically. It was some moments before he could obtain a hearing, the applause was so long continued.
 At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. Sifton referred to the All-Red route and pointed out that as other countries had a fast service, Canada and Great Britain should have equally as good a service. Mr. Sifton's remarks were received with much applause and any reference to Canada enthusiastically so.

INSTANTLY KILLED BY A FALLING TREE

William McGouey of Indian-town Killed at Eagle Lake Yesterday Morning.

William McGouey, aged 34, of 193 Bridge street, Indian-town, died yesterday morning at Eagle Lake, Thursday morning. He was in the employ of the Ingelwood Lumber Company as a yardman and was struck on the head by a falling tree. McGouey left home about six weeks ago to work for the Ingelwood people. The party he was with at Eagle Lake was a small one composed of himself, Gorham, Murphy and Anthony Thompson, the boss. McGouey's work was to drag with his horse the cut logs. It was thought he was out of harm's way, as the horse pulling the load was some distance off. The tree which the men were cutting fell without a warning and the men were horrified to find the unfortunate man with his brains dashed out. It was decided to take the body to the settlement, which was done after great difficulty. They arrived at Westfield at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. There the coroner held an enquiry. He took the statements of Gorham, Murphy and the man under oath and decided not to hold an inquest. The body was driven to the city last night about midnight. McGouey leaves a father, Patrick, two sisters and three brothers. The sisters are Mrs. John McKinley of Maine, Miss Annie at home; the brothers are James, John and Edward, at home.

COUNCILLOR LONG MAKES FINE HOST

John Long, contractor on the Negro point breakwater work, gave a most enjoyable clam bake there yesterday afternoon with more than 100 guests from both sides of the harbor.

The feast was delicious and a short literary and musical programme and speeches were much enjoyed. George Robertson, M. P., spoke of the work on the breakwater and said that as far as he had had an opportunity to interview them both Canadian and English engineers who had seen the harbor were at one as to the importance of continuing the breakwater to the island. Speaking of the Imperial Dry Dock Company he assured his hearers that they had no intention of dropping the project of building a dock here. As soon as the present abnormal conditions in the money market were straightened out and the money tightness was over he had no doubt the work would be started. Financiers had regarded it as an excellent investment.

Col. Domville spoke of the future of the port of St. John. He had not the slightest fear as to this because he knew the shipping centre it already is. Knowing the faith these men had in the city and themselves and their tireless energy, he confidently predicted the growth of the place.

FELL INTO A DITCH

J. B. Nice, of South Bay, met with a painful accident a night or two ago and as a result is confined to his bed and unable to move. He had been out spending the evening and on returning homeward, started to walk along the railroad track, and instead of crossing it fell headlong into a ditch, where he lay until his cries brought assistance from the house he had just left and he was taken home.

C. P. R. TERMINALS AT VANCOUVER

Plans Prepared for an Extensive Series of Wharves and Warehouses at the Pacific Port.

(The Railway and Marine World)

The C. P. R. has prepared plans for the construction of an extensive series of wharves at Vancouver, B. C. The area within which the wharves are to be constructed extends from the Pacific Coast Lumber Co.'s yards to the Hastings wharf. The proposed construction for this year is the wharf between Thurlow St. and Burrard street, a new transfer slip taking the place of the old one west of Thurlow street. This is to enable transfer barges to be loaded at any stage of the tide. The other wharves, have yet to be constructed, and a good many of them are not likely to be built for some time. The contracts for dredging, rock filling, turpentine piles and Australian hardwood decking, for the first of the piers to be 640 feet long by 172 feet wide, with three depressed tracks in center, and will have two sheds 500 by 54 feet. The depth of water at low tide, and the bottom consists of sandstone rock with very little mud covering. In order to brace the structure sides and outer end of wharf—the top being about eight feet below low tide—the space inside being filled with dredged material. In order to protect the structure from ravages of the teredo and limnoria, which act quickly in Burrard Inlet, the piling used will be Australian turpentine which is practically proof against marine insects, for the four outside rows on each side and end. In the interior portion of piling will be used, protected by a covering manufactured by a local company. The caps, joists, etc., will be fir, treated with carbolic carbolineum and the deck will be Australian hardwood. The sheds will be constructed of corrugated iron, this wharf will be especially for the Oriental trade, and is the first of a series to be constructed as requirements demand.

HE WINS $10 PRIZE

Charles P. Archibald, Formerly of St. John, Wins Toronto Trade Paper's Prize for Best Article.

Charles P. Archibald, a young son of Charles S. Archibald, formerly in the retail hardware business at Antigonish, has been awarded the first prize of $10 for the best article containing the most practical suggestions for increasing sales of retail hardware lines during the holiday season. The prize was offered by Hardware and Metal, of Montreal and Toronto, and the competition was open to all hardware traders, retailers and clerks throughout the Dominion. The winning of the prize by Mr. Archibald is especially noteworthy, he having had no retail experience himself, his connection with the hardware trade having been in the wholesale department of the Lewis & Son, Toronto, and in his present position with the Kennedy Hardware Co., Toronto. Mr. Archibald's father was formerly travelling representative for the Portland Rolling Mills, St. John, but is now Canadian sales representative for the Nicholson File Co., Port Hope, Ont.

THE GOAT DIDN'T KNOW

A well known physician, who is somewhat sceptical as to the soundness of Christian Science doctrine, says 'Harpers' Weekly' tells the story of an ardent Edgemoor and her little boy. The mother was crossing the field with a goat when a goat appeared and came toward her threateningly, to the dismay of the youngster, who shrank in his mother's arms. Remembering her father's words, she said soothingly, as the goat continued to advance, 'Don't you know that you're a Christian Science child, and that there's no such thing as pain and that it would be useless for the goat to try to hurt you? Don't you know that?' 'Yes,' wailed the doubting believer between sobs. 'I know it, and you know it, but the goat don't know it.'

FAIRVILLE WANTS ELECTRIC LIGHTS

The matter of electric lights for Fairville has been agitated for some time and, according to statements made by Councillor William Fox, will materialize before very long.

The next meeting of the municipal council will probably be asked to bring the matter before the legislature asking that body for authority to issue debentures, Fairville people, generally, are of the opinion that electric lights are a necessity.

Boyd-Tatton

The marriage of Miss Tatton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Tatton, of Pennfield, to William Boyd, proprietor of the Arden House, St. George, took place at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. I. Lynds in the presence of a large number of guests. The bride looked charming in a pretty costume of white silk trimmed with lace, and carried a handsome bouquet of white flowers with a few gracefully fastened in her hair. She was attended by Miss Green of Eastport. The groom had the support of Mr. Everett McKay. The wedding march was played by Miss Jennie Mestling. After congratulations refreshments were served and the happy young couple left on the afternoon train on a short wedding trip. The bride's going away gown was of royal blue.
