Parliament May Do Something to End Carnival of Corruption

Which Prevails Throughout Canada From the Atlantic Seaboard to the Pacific Coast.

n Important Suggestion From th Leader of the Opposition as to How the Evils Might Best Be Ramedled-Hon. Mr. Fielding Made a Significant Announcement in This

OTTAWA, April 4.-It looks as if parliament will really do something to end the carnival of corruption, which prevails from the Atlantic to the Pa-cific. John Charlton's bill to amend by their commanding officers for adju-tancies.

the Dominion Elections Act of 1900 was approached with a spirit which shows The Canada-Atlantic railway's trackmen threaten to strike unless they receive $1.25 per day. Three hundred men disgraced this country and made its the election act as it now stands, but the reading of his bill had the good effect of calling forth opinions, which, if the government is in earnest, will enable them to deal with election crimes in a most drastic manner.

The debate, with a single exception, teemed with harmony. The one dissenting voice was that of M. K. Cowan, the liberal member for South Essex. For a number of years, Mr. Cowan has made it part of his politicowan has made it part of his politi-cal stock in trade to state on all pos-sible occasions that Pritchett, the man who stole the seats in West Huron and Brockville for the liberal party, owed his escape from the clutches of the law to Samuel Barker, conservative M. P. for Hamilton, Yesterday was the first opportunity Mr. Barker had of meeting his traducer face to face. When Mr. Cowan repeated the slander, the member for Hamilton replied that the man with whom the story originated and the whom the story originated and the man who repeated it indulged in de-liberate falsehood. Some pretty sharp things were said before the incident closed, but on the whole recrimination was avoided by both parties. The leader of the opposition regretted that Mr. Cowan should approach such an important question in the way he did. Hon, W. S. Fielding, too, did not take kindly to the attitude assumed by his supporter, and suggested that it would be better for all concerned to discuss such a question from the standpoint of the best interest of the country rather than in the interests of party.

The first important suggestion as to The first important suggestion as to how the evils might he best remedied came from Mr. Borden. His proposal is that a Crown prosecuting officer should be appointed to deal with all violations of the act. He would clothe this official with all the powers of an auditor general, and make him absolutely independent of paritament. Such a man would of necessity be of sterling character and beyond the influence of any of the baneful cliques which have cursed party politics. He which have cursed party politics. He would have his own staff of officials, and if he were to exercise the same vigilance displayed by J. L. McDougall in keeping track of the Canadian public accounts, Vance, Pritchett, Lewis, Cap. Sullivan, Brunet and the other cut-throats who have infested the polling booths of the country, would quickly find themselves behind

It is through such men as Mr. Borden that the desired reforms can be accomplished; and no member of the House of Commons doubts the sincerity of the opposition leader, when he says that corruption of the electors is hateful to him. He has pledged his support to any reforms that may be broached by the severment. broached by the government, and if the Justice Department takes upon it-self the framing of an act to meet the cases constantly cropping up, the op-position will be found as a unit in sup-

Mr. Borden has also hit the nall on the head in regard to the men who abstain from exercising their franchise. It is a remarkable fact, that although thousands of men have died to secure a share in the government of the country, there are thousands of Canadians who consider it too much trouble to say their say as to the personnel of parliament. They refuse absolutely to discharge the duty they owe to themselves and their brother men, and year after year neglect to record their voits. Others falling to appreciate the value of the franchise, accept a paltry bribe to remain at home, thus affording endless temptation to the gentlemen whe dispense the "long green." This evil was most propounced during the recent contest in North Ontarlo. All the energies of the liberal organizers were directed to inducing the electorate to abstain from voiting, and although "the campaign was of the hottest possible character, the vote recorded was unusually small. Mr. Borden thinks that the man who does not value his franchise should at least be prevented from realizing upon it. It is a logical conclusion, that if a man does not poil his vote, he does not value his franchise should at least to refrain from voiting, and although "the campaign was of the hottest possible character, the vote recorded was unusually small. Mr. Borden thinks that the man who does not value his franchise should at least be prevented from realizing upon it. It is a logical conclusion, that if a man does not poil his vote, he does not value his franchise should at least to everloaded with the names of such persons. The leader of the opposition suggests that in the future of electors should be visited with disfination of the control of oribery which is so evident today.

Hon. W. S. Fielding was quite in accord with what Mr. Borden had to say in regard to the disfranchisement of electors who remain at home. How-ever he urged that instead of a pub-lic prosecutor, the judges of the Su-perior Courts should be made respon-sible for the political cleanliness of their respective circuits. While some judges have always a sufficient amount of work on hand, the finance minister contends that the majority could readily find time to take over the new duties. When an election takes place it would be the duty of the judges, should Mr. Fielding's proposals be accepted, to make prompt and searching enquiry as to how the election in his nquiry as to how the election in his phere or jurisdiction had been conducted. There would be no waiting for an election petition and the facts could be brought to light while they were still fresh in the memory of witnesses. Thirty days from the date of the election would be the time limit that Mr. Fielding would allow the justices to commence their enquiries. There would be no waiting for elec-There would be no waiting for elec-tion protests. The very fact that a man before protesting an election must pay a fine of $1,000 by putting up must pay a fine of $1,000 by putting up a deposit to that amount, imposes a hardship on him who is expected to expose the crimes of his opponent. The judges would remove this responsibility from the shoulders of the can-didates and treat violations of the election law in the same manner as other offences.

As one of the greatest impediments to the enforcement of the election law is the enormous cost which is imposed upon candidates, one of the greatest objections to the present law would thus be removed. It is all very well for people to criticize the candidate who fails to bring his dishonest op-ponent to justice, but it must be remembered that the process involves an expenditure of thousands of dollars. For example, if the candidate supects that he has been robbed of votes which should be properly credited to him, a scrutiny may be necessary, and this, in the province of Ontario, costs $20,000. A scrutiny therefore is a luxury which few private citizens can afford to indulge in. They may feel morally certain that they have a right to sit in parliament and that another person occupies their seat, but unless they are wealthy it, is impossible for them to secure justice and substantiate what they may be excused for saying while smarting under a sense of wrong done them.

Mr. Fielding made a most important announcement when he stated the the government had given consideration to the proposals made by him, and that they intended to invite the opposition to appoint representatives to a joint committee, which will take into consideration the best reme to be applied to the rapidly growing system of corruption. The leader of the opposition expressed his willingness to assist the government in any way, and it is probable that before the house prorogues, an ordinance will be framed under which the days of the political thug will be numbered. Such a committee could accomplish much. It could agree upon a measure, which, if thrown into the arena of general debate, would cause charges and counter-charges to be made by he two parties, and in the end little would be brought to pass.

That better times are dawning in respect to political propriety will be learned with general satisfaction throughout Canada. If we secure just and practical laws to govern political contests, there is no doubt that the standard of parliamentary life can be raised. The average member of parliament is representative of the best elements in business and professional circles. But there are men entering public life, and the number is not diminishing, whe will not stop at any thing to secure their election. Such a man was Joseph Brunet, the late member of St. James division, Montreal. Parliament is well rid of him, and not and if it is possible for the liberals and conservatives to join forces and ostracize such material, then, and not till then, will the people learn that honest government is money in their pockets, and that the bribes they retributed by the taxes they are called upon to pay, in order to provide necessary exercises.

(E. W. Thomson in Boston Transcript.) Ever since a small collection of uniformed men climbed up the cliff of Quebec in 1759. Canada has been called an English country. It is very much so in respect of political institutions but it might be called a French-Irish country, if the origins of its inhabitants were solely considered. The defeated of 1759 have effected wonders cated. To a considerable extent they have been aided by Catholic immigration and to a minute degree course may be visibly seen in Montby recruits from France. Speaking by and large, it may be truly said that and large, it may be truly said that from the loins of the 65,000 inhabitants of 1759 have sprung the 1,659,352 Canadians of French origin in 1901, to say nothing of the swarms thrown off into the republic. Judging by the Canadian census of 1901, so far as reported by its first volume and numerous bulletins, the French of the dominion have been less fecund than they were formerly. The tale of French Canadian pro-The tale of French Canadian progress is confirmed more significantly by those census tables which show the ages of the people. There are more children per 1,000 in Quebec than anywhere else, except the new Northwest Tarritories. That this is true of all the ages between infancy and maturity is shown by a more particular examination of the census than is summarized by this official table:

Many a child has been fooled by the story of the pot of gold which is to be found just at the foot of the rainbow, and has started out to gather riches full of happy dreams.

Many a man and woman have been deceived by the tale that there was health to be found out beyond the sunset, and they have started out dreaming of a healthful future, as were to be realized.

People who have tried change of climate in vain for the cure of weak lungs have been perfectly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures deep-seated coughs, broachitis, bleeding hungs, emaciation, and other conditions which, if neglected or unskilfully treated, find a fatal end in consumption.

*Last spring I had a severe attack of pneumonia which left me with a very lad cough. That they do not stay in Canada after maturity so numerously per 1,000 as English Can-adians do is signified by the decline in adians do is signified by the decline in their numbers per 1,000 after twenty years of age. Hence people of the "effective ages," between twenty and fifty-five, are less numerous in Quebec than anywhere else in Canada. The province stands at the expense of rearing many workers for the United States. This partly explains why Quebec appears less prosperous than other Canadian provinces. Per contra, the French do not have so many old people to maintain. Those who go to the states appear to stay there until death arrives. By considering Quebec's comparative lack of mature inhabitants one sees that even a greater birth rate one sees that even a greater birth rate for each marriage exists there than the preceding table indicates. It may be worth recalling that the English provinces, because of their larger proportion of the voting ages, would gain in political power if representation in parliament were computed on the basis of mature inhabitants instead of on the basis of total population. French Canadians may be said to vote their children, as the Southern States were the dren, as the Southern States vote the colored people to whom they refuse the franchise.

It does not appear to be by excessive marrying that the French Canadians hold their lead. If they indulge in that happiness as commonly as some other Canadians, many of them, as might be surmised from the figures, do so in the states. These are the returns of married people in each thousand of the Canadian population:

Canada..... 841 British Col Manitoba ..... 331 Nova Scotia..... 332

That Ontario, with the largest proportion of married folk, should have so comparatively few children, would please philosophers of the school of H. G. Wells, author of Anticipations, etc. The province is very rich and well edution than Jean Baptiste is. But their descendants may think the prudence who can remember the condition westward direction, Similarly Eastern Ontario becomes more and more French.

On public works one often hears French foremen ordering French lab-orers in English. It is not necessary to explain this on the theory that English, as the more imperative and the more applicable to common purposes, in his adventurous blood, he acquires as best he can the language that may enable him to ask intelligently for work anywhere in America.

The table shows the distribution the Canadian French:

the percentage of increase in the number of houses and in the number of families, with this result:

the percentage of increase in the number of port from almost the entire Catholic population of Canada, or 2,229,600 of the total of 5,371,315 people. In the same defence they can number all Protest-ants who are liberal enough to be con-servative of the truly liberal Confederation Act, or Constitution of Canada, which accords to the French that which accords to the French that equality of race, creed and language which they value, and by which they are made loyal to the country. Its prosperity depends much on the maintenance of the remarkable degree of accord which the constitutional agreement signalized in 1867, and under which Canadians are solving, perhaps, better than any other heterogeneous people, except the Swiss, the problem

THE POSITION OF MR. MCKEOWN

The Telegraph makes the statement oncerning the unopposed election of Mr. McKeown that were expected. It leclares that Mr. McKeown owes nothing to the generosity of his opponents and that no candidate appeared against him because the conservative machine knew that opposition was hopeless. Nothing is further from the truth says the Telegraph, than that no opposition candidate appeared because Mr. McKeown made certain promises to their liking. Now the exact fact is that if Mr. McKeown had not made pertain statements and given certain assursinces concerning the ballot, he would have been opposed, and the candidate against him would have been Mr. John H. Wilson. The solicitor general made an accurate statement on nomination day when he said that in the interview of the previous evening there had been no bargain made or question rais- ada for skilled and unskilled labor. ed concerning opposition. Discontent; Gurse and Gure, By Rev. Dr. Reese F. Alsop, Rector of St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dr. Reese F. Alsop, rector of St. Ann's church, New York, recently preached on "Discontent: Its Cause and Cure." The text was from Matthew xx: 11 and 12: "And when they they had received it they murmured against the good man of the house,saying, these last have wrought but one shour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day." Dr. Alsop said: The revised version says they murmured against the householder; that is, against their employer. The echo of that murmur has been prolonged through the centuries. It is here to day, and the reverberation is louder than the first utterance. This is indeed one of the symptoms of the times. When we think of it there is something remarkable about it.

I suppose that it may be fairly said that never was the workman better paid than he is, and has been in these days. Taking the class as a whole, skilled labor as well as unskilled, or-

than he is, and has been in these consider that these eleven hours would have been far more happy if they had been labor as well as unorganized, ed labor as well as unorganized, past than he is, and has been in these days. Taking the class as a whole manufer that the days are the control of the property skilled labor as well as unskilled, organized labor as well as unorganized, said that never was there more unrest and dissatisfaction among the workers in the community than there is today. The daily papers furnish a sufficient proof of this statement. Day that all this is very natural. There is after day we read of signs of this unfeel as if all society were resting upon cano that may at any day break into in Sweden a universal strike of all organized laborers. There was the same thing in Switzerland. We are our anthracite regions—a strike the consequences of which have reached into almost every home. There is threat today of a strike of tens of thousands of bituminous miners. What that would mean in the way of disturbance of industries, stopping the mills, throwing workmen out of em-ployment, it is difficult to describe, impossible even to imagine. There have been and are today strikes of motormen and conductors on trolley lines which have disorganized travel. to undertake any great works lest all their calculations should be over-thrown by strikes of all those engaged in the building trades.

Now, all this unrest is the token and expression of a state of feeling. It is expression of a state of feeling. It is one at bottom of discontent. It is a mur that comes up like the rolling ork of society, and are not satis-

which are plain to us, but by rules which come out of the wisdom and goodness of Him who makes no mistakes. Jesus after His resurrection, when Peter was inclined to ask questions as to what was to come to John, said: "If I will that he abide till I come what is that to the?" Some they were, and yet they show signs of greater discontent. How are we to acwe have been speaking. The text tells us that certain men murmured against their own employer. Why were these men disgruntled? We seem to see them gathered into a sulky group. They have their wages—dinar, the regular day's wage, that for which they agreed to work—that which seemed to them in them orning a fair equivalent for their work; that than which they for their work; that, than which they spected nothing greater. They have it a their hand or their pocket. The ay's work has had about it nothing usually trying. The sun has not less hot beyond his wont. The toil as not been heavy. Vineyard work by no means the hardest that men called to do. One would suppose t they would return home with the ing which a workman usually has hen the day's work is over—a little t tired, perhaps, but on the whole apy and contented. He has done his with his family and to rest. He is ankful, perchance, that he has been this disposition to look askance upon the with his family and to rest. He is thankful, perchance, that he has been fortunate enough to get the job, and asks for no better luck the next day. Yet these men did not feel this. The trouble was they were thinking not of what hey earned, but of what certain other men had got. There were the men that came in at five o'clock in though it do seem to be more easily won than ours. Though my wage in life be hard earned, though my portion be modest, though glitter, splendor and eclat be for others, not for me, I will not the less prize what falls to me. Yet, in spite of all this, it may be yet, in spite of all this, it may be yet, and that never was there more unrest spirit of those to whom large fortunes have come, and as they look their own portion seems meagre and despicable. So all through society there grows a spirit of discontent. Instead of rejoicing in, and being thankful for what we have, we murmur at our lot. We grudge others what they have, and rob ourselves the while of the joy that

A ripple of excitement has been caused in Charlottetown by a passage at arms between the editor of the Guardian and Hon. J. F. Whear. When the Dominion Packing Co. lecated here last fall very strong ground was taken by the Guardian against the proposal that the government should guarantee the campany bonds to the extent of $150,000. As a result considerable feeling was manifested on both sides of the question. Up to the present this matter has not been brought up in the house. But the company applied to the city council for exemption from taxatien for the next 20 years. Hon. Mr. Whear is also finance minister in the city council. The vote for exemption stood 5-2, but as the council has the power to vote only five years' exemption application had to be made to the legislature to pass a bill giving the council power to exempt the company applies to the legislature to pass a bill giving the the council has the power to vote only five years' exemption application had to be made to the legislature to pass a bill giving the council power to exempt the company for 20 years. In discussing this proposition the Guardian charged Mr. Whear with being the paid promoter of the company and using his position as a member of the government to railroad the bill through the legislature. Hon. Mr. Whear referred to this matter in the house, pointing out that these charges, if true, implied a high crime or misdemeanor under the rules of the English parliament. It amounted, he said, to a breach of the privileges of the house, being an imputation on the character of one of the members. He then moved, seconded by Capt. Read, that a select committee of five be appointed to investigate and report upon immediately, and that the committee have power to summon and examine witnesses on oath and to send for persons, papers, etc. Hon. B. Rogers, Capt. Read, G. W. Simpson, W. A. O. Morsen and John McLean were appointed the committee, and interesting developments are expected to follow. A citizens' meeting has been held to discuss the matter. It was almost unanimously connected to the versity.
