From a Woman's Point of View

There is always a special flutter of interest at a wedding when it is known that the bride is wearing her mother's bridal gown, and it has happened lately that several young women prominent socially have chosen to do so.

A SHORT HISTORY

A Serious Case of Chronic Catarrh Gradually Overcome By Pe-r-ru-na. A REMARKABLE CASE.

MR. ARTHUR TREMBLAY, 8 St. James street, Mont Pleasant, Que., Can., writes: "About three years ago, catarrh in its most serious form assailed me."

From a Woman's Point of View

I wonder how many of the autumn brides will lay away their exquisite wedding gowns with a hope that some day a daughter of their own may wear it to the altar, and if they do, how disappointed they will be when in 1928 or 1933 a willful damsel insists on a bridal gown that is entirely her own and in the extreme of fashion.

I was discussing the subject with the mother of five daughters recently and I was extremely touched by what she told me. I had always planned, she said, to have a daughter of mine wear my bridal gown on her wedding day, but unless Annie (here she motioned toward a little 12-year-old girl who was playing around the room) will do so I am afraid my wedding dress will never be taken out of the linen closet in which it lies in a chest in the attic.

Four of my daughters are married as you know, and to each when the wondrous subject of her wedding gown came up for discussion, I tentatively suggested the wearing of my own bridal robe. These men have succeeded in making five grades of paper from the bulky and heretofore almost useless material, and they say that the white grade, made from the outer covering of the stalk, seems to offer a very satisfactory substitute for the wood-pulp paper in general use.

The plain leather shoe will continue to be in good style, but its successful rival is the cloth shoe with the curved patent leather vamp and heel-piece, says a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

It is most becoming to the foot and is a return to an old style when women insisted upon footgear that made their feet look dainty and small. Recently women have not cared whether their shoes are No. 4 or No. 6, as it was not fashionable to have small feet.

The few women who continued to wear French kid and high heels to show off their feet were looked upon as quaintly vain.

Among these is the smart boot with soft patent leather vamps, slightly pointed, with heelpieces to match. Both of these curve in and vanish under the instep instead of going in a straight line from toe to heel.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, Lucas County.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney and Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of Hall's Catarrh Cure.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.

A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials free.

The inventing chemists of the United States Agricultural Department think they have made a discovery which if comes up to their expectations will allay the anxiety which Lord Northcliffe recently expressed lest newspapers should have to be made much smaller in the future for lack of wood pulp to print them on, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

The chief agency in this destruction is the pulp mill, because the millers so often burn the waste material which might be used in other ways.

A Gallant Spectacle

Friend and foe give Mr. Borden credit for the endurance he has displayed in this campaign. The famous reserve force of which he is the commander once made so much, seems to have had some physical basis, at any rate. If he has not won this election he has done all that could be done to the end of his sparring use of his physical energies during the campaign.

A Few Girl Thoughts

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 28.—As an exposition of girl thoughts, impressions and philosophy, the diary of Miss Mary McLain, who became involved in a recent divorce trial as one of the principals in a "shadowy kiss" comedy, is believed to outstrip anything since the revelations of that other Mary McLain, who came from Butte.

Here are some of the things in the blue-eyed cynic wrote in her diary while at Summer resorts and at home in Chicago.

It's awful to have to talk to a kid that's silly about you when you really need rest. It takes young men an awful while to get wise to a dilemma.

I'd rather chase home a cow with cackle burrs in her tail through a wet pasture than go three blocks for a patent bottle of milk with all the cream in one end.

I'm thinking of opening a manure parlor for exclusive patronage—that means nothing less than $5. Ma says the only people I'd get would be lunatics.

That's all right, too. All the manicures would be dead if it wasn't for the lunatics.

If kisses were ten dollar bills what a merry world this would be!

Now, this diary is to tell just only the absolute truth, and it's only for me to read, because one doesn't dare to tell the truth to one's friends, and one's enemies aren't worth talking to.

I've found out what love is. It was in a book written by a man who said he'd been loved by more women than he had fingers and toes.

Oh! I believe I have found the man! He's at least thirty-five, but he is the darlingest darling in Chicago, and he isn't married. When I told Pa he said he'd wait a month or two, because the worst spavined horse looks all right in the twilight. Pa's getting to be a pessimist.

Oh! Little Mary, why is it that all the women wait until they are fifty and wear their hair up to look like a widow?

Not, just think of me, morbid. Why they called me Sunny Mary from the time I was four—and the first time I can ever remember being real angry was when they fed me milk toast to the Bishop because he had four teeth and I had been crying for it for over an hour. I was only six then, but it shows you how they rub it into the suffering little ones.

Faithful Dog Kept Watch Over Body of Dead Master

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 25.—Nathaniel L. Frothingham, a prominent Boston attorney, was found dead of heart disease yesterday in the woods at Rye Beach, where his summer home is located.

Mr. Frothingham had been out gunning Saturday and when he did not return in the evening, a search was made for him. His body was found sitting in an upright position in the woods, with his dog keeping guard. The dog at first refused to allow the searchers to approach his body, but when a servant from the Frothingham cottage arrived the dog relinquished his guardianship over his dead master.

THE LIBERAL BANQUET

On Friday evening last a banquet was tendered William F. Todd, M. P., elect and Mrs. Todd in Coit's Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Todd arrived on the afternoon train from St. Stephen and were taken to the residence of Senator and Mrs. Gillmor.

At eight o'clock a committee, headed by Pres. Gearson of the Emmerson Liberal Club, Mr. James O'Brien, Mr. Lewis Connors of Black's Harbor, and others, escorted Mr. and Mrs. Todd and Senator and Mrs. Gillmor to the hall. The party were greeted on their arrival by hearty cheers proposed, by that strong tongued veteran in Liberalism, Sergeant Thomas Coughlan and swelled into a tremendous roar from over four hundred voices of Liberal electors, their wives, sisters and daughters.

The main floor was given over to tables arranged to seat two hundred. The tables and the table decorations were worthy the occasion, worthy the ladies whose hearts were with the victors in the late contest. Smiling young women and dainty girls, one and all proudly displaying the "Red Bow"—the Liberal colors—waited on the guests and brought them each and every one an oyster stew piping hot and good—there were cake, coffee, nuts, raisins and fruits and the inner man was well looked after—cigars followed then came the flow of oratory.

Mr. Todd's reply to the toast coupled with his name: "Our member" delighted his hearers. He thanked them heartily for the honor they paid to himself and Mrs. Todd in the reception they had tendered them—He said, that the recent election had placed a great responsibility upon him, he felt the result was good for the County of Charlotte not because he believed had been for the betterment of Canada. The industries of the County would receive from him every encouragement, he believed that if the interests of any manufacturing business in the County needed Government assistance they would obtain it and he would be happy in pressing the claims of Charlotte on the Cabinet. He did not believe because they had elected him—that like a former representative, he owned the County. He felt rather that the County owned him. The fishing interests would be looked after, the farmers would find in him a friend. His address was received with pleasure by those present and hearty applause greeted his remarks.

Three rousing cheers, a tiger and the singing of "He's a jolly good fellow" rang in his ears as he finished his remarks and took his seat.

Senator Gillmor beamed the pleasure the occasion was for him and the cheers that greeted his announcement of the satisfaction he felt, over the result of the election, showed him the place he occupies in the hearts of the Liberals of St. George and how they share with him the joy they felt in victory. The Senator heartily congratulated Mr. Todd on his victory and in an able manner discussed the issues of the campaign as they had been presented to the electors of Charlotte. His speech was full of

The Peacemaker

Constantia thought she had a talent for peacemaking and she exercised it in and out of season.

"People, as a rule, don't want to be peacified," I tried to tell her. "They like to fight it out. It's really better, and more conducive to a friendly feeling than interrupting before they've said all the nasty things they have in their minds. There's nothing more irritating than thinking how you might have routed your enemy and didn't."

"I can't agree with you," she said, shaking her head. I think a word in season—a little oil on the troubled waters—is a duty we owe each other. So often the outsider can see at once who is in the right and who is in the wrong.

Do you think that has anything to do with it? I asked. They probably don't either of them care a rap about the rights of the case once they are in the thick of the fray. Human nature still loves a fight, and a very good thing, too.

I now you don't mean half you say, she said patiently. In any case I must continue to do my duty as I see it. And she did.

We were both dining at the Richard Smiths that night, and I was not surprised that before the dinner was half over there were mutterings of a coming storm. We were both old friends, and neither Mr. nor Mrs. Smith troubled to repress their feelings on our account. They never agreed on any point, and arguments were the order of the day, but if they were left alone they soon quieted down. A third person joining in only added fuel to the fire.

If I ever get into parliament, Mrs. Smith began, I shall bring in a bill for preserving the best names of our country. How often a fine old history name is lost when a woman marries. Take my case for instance. Fancy a Macgregor becoming a Smith! It's too absurd. This was one of her grievances. I had often heard it before, but Constantia had not.

You didn't seem to think it so absurd at the time, her husband replied, picking up the gloves. I should have said you seemed rather pleased than otherwise. You might have been a Macgregor still, you know, it was quite optional.

You are too modest about your own attractions Mr. Smith, said Constantia, with a charming smile. She forgot the name in the man, you see. She was beginning to pour oil, and I looked on with interest. But instead of it calming the troubled waters, Mr. Smith quite bristled up.

I don't want anybody to forget my name, he said, I'm not ashamed of it. It's a good honest English name. I don't pretend to have come down from cattle-lifting, bare-legged, red-headed, night-raiders of ancestors.

No, it would be of no use, Mrs. Smith said sweetly. No use at all, dear.

Not, but what, her spouse continued hotly, I could fight as well as any man if I saw occasion to do so. They thought a good deal of me in the Volunteers, I believe.

I am sure they would, Constantia said with generous emphasis and I am equally sure, looking at Mrs. Smith with an olivebranch smile, that your wife agrees with them, but she is just teasing you a little bit, I can imagine, she continued, smiling every four hours.

Supplement with Nerviline, and when warmth and circulation are established, put a Nerviline Porous Plaster over the aching spot. Nerviline Treatment is always successful in colds, neuralgia and pleurisy. Try it yourself.

As Mr. Smith does not much more than reach up to his wife's shoulder this was rather a bad shot, and was received advice to his son when they plunged in to a scrimmage just for the love of the thing. Wherever you see a head, my boy, hit it. That is the proper spirit.

I cannot measure courage by inches she said, or judge of a man's strength by his size. Many of our greatest generals have been little men, not any taller, I should say—than our tallest.

Mr. Smith had been wriggling uncomfortably on his chair for some minutes, and could no longer restrain himself. Our friend is very kind to make such flattering comparisons, he said, with a not very successful laugh, but I am afraid I cannot take them to myself, I have never been considered a small man, though I may not be suitable for the Life Guards. What I have always aimed at has been breadth even more than height. I don't like your long weedy chaps.

I suppose Constantia saw, as I did, the obvious retort that rose to Mrs. Smith's lips, and determined to stop it at all costs, she knocked over her wine glass. There was a little pool of claret on the spotless tablecloth and the glass was broken. But she had gained her purpose and turned the current.

I'm so sorry, she exclaimed. How careless of me! I hope I haven't done much damage!

Oh, no, Mrs. Smith said resignedly; it doesn't matter at all. Please don't trouble. I told Richard when he bought those glasses that they would go over at a touch.

I don't remember you saying anything of the kind, returned her husband, who was obviously put out at the accident. But at the same time it would certainly be unusual if you approved of anything I said or did.

Oh, come now, Mr. Smith, said Constantia playfully. You must not be too hard on us poor women. You know as some great writer said. The shadow of the harem still rests on the woman of to-day. We had 'o hide our feelings for so many centuries that even now we often say just the opposite of what we really mean.

That was a good idea—the harem, he exclaimed, quite snatching at the word. Excellent! I can't think why it was ever done away with. They manage these things better in the East. Give a woman liberty and she loses her head. Now a Turk can always reckon on finding his wife pleasant and amiable when he comes home, if not, significantly, there's the Bosphorus outside.

Constantia was rather taken aback at having her words twisted round like this. But Mrs. Smith was quiet equal to the occasion.

My dear Richard, she said with a superior smile, I am afraid your geography is a little vague. Do you suppose that the Bosphorus is like the canals at Venice outside every window? And your ideas of the Turk are a little antiquated. I gather from people who know him well that the modern Turk is the most perfect gentleman in Europe.

I believe he has greatly improved, said Constantia, judiciously. His domestic arrangements are on a better footing than formerly. No doubt, trying to get on a safer ground, there is something to be said in favor of all countries. But, playfully, in spite of all temptations to belong to other nations, I put England first.

By England, do you mean Great Britain? Mrs. Smith inquired suspiciously.

Of course, Constantia made haste to reply. Why should I separate them? Well, they often are separated. Mrs. Smith said, touched on a vital point. England as signifying Great Britain is an insult to every right thinking Scots man or woman. What has England done that Scotland has not done better? Why—

All the oil that Constantia had left was utterly useless. I saw—not wholly with regret—the peacemaker swept by a storm of her own raising. When it was over even she was reduced to silence.

Many Down With Pleurisy

Doctors say the country is full of it. First comes a chill, then cold develops—the inflammation grows—you can't draw a long breath—lungs and sides get sore, and pleurisy sets in. A good home-cure consists in taking twenty drops of Nerviline every four hours. Supplement with Nerviline, and when warmth and circulation are established, put a Nerviline Porous Plaster over the aching spot. Nerviline Treatment is always successful in colds, neuralgia and pleurisy. Try it yourself.

She Was Insulted

"Harry, love," said Mrs. Knew to her husband when he entered his home a few evenings ago, "I've been dreadfully insulted."

"Insulted?" repeated Mr. Knew indignantly. By whom?

"By your mother."

"My mother, Flora? Nonsense, dear. She's the kindest woman in the world. And how could she insult you. She isn't here; she's miles away."

"But Harry, she did insult me," persisted Flora, "and it was done in a letter."

"Show it to me."

"I'll tell you about it. A letter came for you this morning addressed in your mother's hand writing, and so of course I opened it."

"Of course," said Mr. Knew dryly. "It was written to you all the way through, you understand?"

"Yes, I understand that, but where does the insult to you come in?"

"In the postscript. When I read along to that it said, 'Dear Flora—Don't fail to give this letter to Harry; I want him to have it.' Now, tell me, wasn't that an insult?"—Pearson's Weekly.

Cotton-Bating for Rheumatism

"There is nothing so good for rheumatism as cotton-bating," a lady declared the other day to a friend who was a victim to it.

"I have tried every other remedy under the sun, and cotton-bating has helped me when everything else had failed. For sciatica it has no equal. I had suffered from it for weeks, could not turn myself in bed, and had about concluded that I had either got to wait and let it wear off or wear me out, whichever chose to happen first, when I remembered how my mother used to baste cotton-bating in her stockings when she had rheumatism in her knees; and, like the drowning man and his straw, I resolved to try it. I sent for several sheets of cotton-bating and swathed my leg in it from hip to toes, leaving not a loophole through which a particle of air could enter. In less than a week I was up and about the house. The pain had left me entirely, and I never have felt a twinge of it since."—"The Ladies' World."

In cases of acute rheumatism, cotton-bating is even better than wool, as it entirely excludes the air and generates a warmth, which is rheumatism's best friend.

An obstinate case of neuralgia will also succumb to the same treatment if persisted in. An arm that had ached for weeks—a dull, heavy ache, with sudden unexpected twinges in every part of it—was swathed in cotton-bating and lulled to rest like an infant.

Care should be taken, however, especially in the winter, not to leave off the wrapping too suddenly, even though the pain may have entirely gone, as any part of the body from which the air has for a time been excluded is much more sensitive to cold. When leaving off the wrapping, therefore, something a little less bulky should at first be worn until the place is so toughened that the usual covering may with safety be adopted.

A Tailor's Washing Hints

Washing boys' or men's trousers seems a difficult task, especially if they are nice ones and one wants them to keep their good appearance after washing. A tailor gives this way of doing the work, and the results are satisfactory:

First wash thoroughly in warm (not hot) soap-suds, rubbing as little as possible, but pressing between the hands.

Avoid rubbing soap on any parts, except the worst spots, and do that before they are put in water. Rinse carefully twice in cool water, not wringing them at all, but allowing them to drip. After the last rinsing, turn wrong side out and hang them outdoors in a perfectly shady place. Pin them to the line by the waistband, using pins enough so that they hang naturally, not sagging anywhere.

Watch closely, and as fast as the water collects in the hems press it out with a cloth between both hands.

Before they are quite dry, press carefully with a hot iron on the wrong side, afterward turning them and creasing down the front of each leg. If the directions are followed they will look like new and no appreciable shrinkage will be seen.

My washerwoman, instead of allowing them to drip, begins at the hem at the hem at the bottom of one leg, rolls it up, smoothing it as she goes to avoid wrinkles. As the cloth is rolled tightly and squeezed between the hands the water is pressed out; when both legs have been rolled the body is treated in the same way.

Little Elvira—Mamma, when the fire goes out where does it go?

Mrs. Gaylord—I don't know, dear. You might just as well ask where your father goes when he does not.

Do you like the neighbor who is eternally borrowing and never returning? Now tell the truth, do you? Of course not! Nobody does.

There never was a better time to buy the best of Cream Separators than right now.

The advantages derived from the use of the good Cream Separator are greater in the fall and winter than at any other time—when the cows are old in lactation, the loss of butter-fat is otherwise greatest, and butter prices are highest.

Likewise are the advantages of the superior DE LAVAL separators greatest over imitating separators when the milk is hard to separate and the weather cold and variable.

In every case a DE LAVAL separator, of suitable size, will surely at least save its cost between now and July 1st next, and go on returning 100 per cent. per year on the investment for twenty years to come.

THE GREAT WRITERS.

Ideas and Inspiration Taken by One Author From Another.

BUT GENIUS BORROWS NOBLY

The Crude Ore is Refined and the Raw Material Fashioned into a Thing of Beauty—Shakespeare as a Most Brilliant Example.

Our great writers are not great robbers. Literature is not a repository of stolen goods. What seem like stealings by the steel pen are rather the output of the lapidary or a reissue of the mint or, better still, the borrowings from a bank repaid with interest. "It is wonderful," says Charles Reade, "how genius can borrow." "All literature," remarks Oliver Wendell Holmes, "lives by borrowing and lending." "It is a good thing," says Dean Swift, "to have a good image like a diamond, which may be set a hundred times in as many generations and give new beauties with every change." This is not a question of originality. "The lightning a candle at a neighbor's fire," observes Dean Swift, "does not affect our property in the wick and flame." "Genius borrows nobly." The transference is often a transmutation. For brass, the borrower brings gold, and for iron, silver, and for wood, brass, and for stones, iron. The crude ore is refined and the raw material fashioned into a thing of beauty.

It has been pointed out by Mr. Huth in his "Life of Buckle" that there is a kind of pedigree in literature. Dante avows his indebtedness to Virgil, as the latter himself was under obligations to Homer.

Ariosto owes much to Virgil, and Spenser borrows frequently from Ariosto. Spenser's "Faerie Queene" gave birth to Fletcher's "Purple Island" and the title to Bernard's "Isle of Man," and this in turn to Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe" and Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress." In like manner, Shakespeare has been called "the great Warwickshire thief," so invested in his borrowing habit. His literature like a Napoleon brought back the rarest art treasures to enrich and beautify his verse. One is surprised to learn that our dramatist has no original plots, that he has given to poetry no new rhythm or stanza and that "he ran not only in the old road, but in the rut." His "As You Like It" is taken from an old romance. The characters of his "Julius Caesar" are old Romans taken from Plutarch. But what borrowing! Dry bones are turned into living men. The commonest materials are taken into the lambent flame of his genius and transmuted into airy beauty.

Milton, too, is a free borrower. It is this fact, indeed, that makes his verse so rich in learned reminiscences and so gorgeous with "barbaric pearl and gold." He owes much to Shakespeare. Some critics think Milton's Eve is borrowed from Shakespeare's Miranda. In the "Taming of the Shrew" occurs the line:

As morning roses newly washed in dew,
White Milton in "Allegro" speaks of—
Fresh blown roses washed in dew.

Milton is a very naive to many. Dope is his debtor. Milton's "Smoky Sorceress"—a woman to the waist and fair, but "ending foul in ugly a scaly fold voluminous and vast"—is made to say, "They call me sin and for a sign portentious hold me; but, familiar grown, I pleased and with attractive graces won the most adverse." Pope says:

"This is a monster of so frightful mien
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."
Tennyson must have had in mind Milton's

Hangar in a golden chain
This pendant had
when he wrote:
The whole round world is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

Tennyson, indeed, derives much of his exquisite imagery and felicitous phrasing from authors whose names, even many literary men do not know.

Pope borrows his "Vital Spark" idea from an old poem by Thomas Flattman. Byron gets his "Eagle Feather" image in his "Duchess Loris and Scotch Reviewers" from Aeschylus, who flourished in the fifth century before our era.

Coleridge owes his "Ode to Mont Blanc" to a German poem by Friedrich Breven.

Bishop Kea is indebted for his thought in "The Evening Hymn" to Sir Thomas Browne in his "Colloquy With God."

In his own characteristic manner Rudyard Kipling has met the question of unconscious literary with a bit of verse which commences:

When 'Omer smote 'la bloom' lyre
'Ed ward men sang by land and sea,
And west thought's right route
'E went as' took the same as me.

Let Shakespeare's lines close this paper:

I'll example you with thievery:
The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast sea; the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun's
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears; the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composed sides.

CRITICISMS OF CANADA

SOME IMPRESSIONS OF THE DOMINION AND ITS PEOPLE.

London Journalist Says Canadians Are Not Such Sportsmen as English—Canny Set Is Everywhere—Sabbath Too Rigidly Kept—Praises Railway System—Why Drug Stores Flourish.

Mr. Hamilton Pyle, a well known English journalist, recently toured Canada, and he has just concluded a series of articles in The London Daily Mail on "The Land of the Future." Some of his impressions are not favorable, and a number of them are given herewith, because it always does Canadians good to read what visitors from overseas think of us, whether their criticisms are well founded or not.

Mr. Pyle thinks that neither the Canadian boy or man is as good a sportsman as the English. He says: "Canada as a whole has not yet come to a full understanding of the value of education. It is only the few who can see any use in imparting to the young knowledge which will not be of direct service to them in making a fortune. The same material spirit is far too prevalent among the young themselves. The Canadian boy is not as good a sportsman as the English. He plays games to win rather than for the sake of the game. There is a reason for this in the newness of the country. Life is a serious business in a land which has to be won from wild nature. There is real live-or-die fighting to be done every day. No room for dilettanteism. The keynote of character built upon such foundations is deadly earnestness. No doubt the Englishman would be a vastly better man if he had the Canadian's determination and grit. Yet it seems a pity all the same that Canada should not have produced a more sportsmanlike spirit.

Mr. Pyle, as an example of our lack of "sportsmanlike" qualities the fact that many Canadians thought it rather odd that Gen. Botha should have been lionized to such an extent in London, at the time of the Colonial Conference. The knack of his reproach runs thus:

"Why should an enemy be honored?" they asked, and referred bitterly to the number of Canadians killed and maimed in the war. It was possible to make them understand the Englishman's respect for an enemy who has put up a good fight against him. That was too detached an attitude of mind for them."

Ontario and the Maritime Provinces sleep and Winnipeg humorously pretends to think they are dead. But they go along quietly and comfortably, content with moderate wealth (that is what the West cannot understand) and continued this slow and sure is the best pace. You might think it impossible to arouse their enthusiasm if you never saw them at a Scottish concert, a curling match, or a St. Andrew's Day dinner. You would not call them blasphemous after that.

If you ever want to travel through Nova Scotia on a Sunday you will have good reason to remember the old saying that the Scots keep the Sabbath and everything else they can lay hands on. The stations are all deserted. There are no trains running. From Saturday midnight till Monday morning the Intercolonial Railway, which serves the east from Montreal, remains through Quebec, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, is out of business. Not is it only in Nova Scotia, by the way, that the Sunday observance party are strong. Indeed, Nova Scotia does not go so far as certain other provinces. In Toronto a clergyman recently threatened to prosecute a hotel, who sent flowers to a funeral on a Sunday, under the law prohibiting Sunday trading. An even more absurd case happened in the same province (Ontario) while I was there. An immigrant from England, who had built himself and his family a little wooden house, was putting in some work at it early on a Sunday morning on his own. It and told him he would be summoned under the law forbidding Sunday work if he continued this grave offence again."

Traveling in Canada.

It is interesting to know what the Englishman thinks of Canadian traveling methods. The impressions left by the jolting by rail from Cobalt to North Bay were not pleasant: "A hot,

COMPLETELY DEMORALIZED

The more the results of the election are examined the greater and more remarkable appears the triumph achieved by the Laurier Government, and the more disastrous the route of the Opposition.

Let it not be forgotten that the Opposition expected to win this fight. Since 1896 they had been confident, not merely of securing a majority of seats, but also of making a sweep of the Dominion. To this end they had laid careful and elaborate plans. First of all they had the best and most efficient organization in the history of the party. They placed the "party" badge for all it was worth. They assiduously exploited "scandals" which had no foundation or basis in truth. They entered upon an organized campaign of slander, so desperate in its character, that they were convinced that it could not fail to stampede the country. They engaged in a conspiracy to destroy the National Transcontinental Railway, by exaggerating the cost of the work and by circulating malicious stories about "graft" in connection with its construction, and, so, to cripple the credit of the Dominion.

And finally came the grand stand play of the Tory managers—the tour of the Provincial Premiers. Having nothing but defeats to his own credit, and having no followers of sufficient prominence or reputation to present to the country, Mr. Borden called upon men who bore the prestige of victory in their respective Provinces, with a view to persuading the public that he had a winning combination behind him. This is the explanation of the spectacular tour in Eastern Canada of the now discredited troupe of the Roblins, the Hazens, Hannas, and Bowers, and of the eleven-hour hunt of Premier Whitney, of Ontario.

But in spite of this formidable array of political warriors who had won notable victories in the Provincial arena, and in spite of this skillfully designed plan of campaign, and of the cries of the Slanderband, the Tory Party went down to the most overwhelming and humiliating defeat in its history. Sir Wilfrid Laurier vanquished the Bordenites at every point. The significance of the Liberal victory over these forces cannot be overstated. In fact, we doubt whether the public yet appreciate the measure of the success achieved by the Liberal Party at this time. But when we consider that from the Atlantic Ocean to the boundary of Ontario the Opposition have succeeded in electing only twenty out of a possible membership of 100 in the four Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Quebec, we see how overwhelming has been the rout of the Tory forces. Added to this are the splendid Liberal gains in Ontario and the emphatic rejection of the Western Provinces, the locus of the much exploited land "scandals" of the Tory appeal.

No such decisive and telling victory has been won before by either party in Canada. Not only have most of the fighting leaders of the Opposition been driven out of public life, but the "Provincial Premiers" combination have been so discredited, through the exposure of their slanders and falsehoods, that no leader of the Opposition would dare to present them again to the people of Canada as shining examples of "purity in politics," much less as prospective members of a Federal Cabinet.

The net result of the election is as every intelligent person must perceive, not merely that the Tory Party has been overwhelmingly defeated, but that it is completely demoralized. It is today in a much worse and more hopeless plight than it was after the debacle of 1896. It then had still some semblance of policy and some leaders of national calibre left. Now it has neither policy nor men, and under its present nominal leadership which is the weakest and in every respect and the most disappointing of all, it can never hope to establish itself in the public confidence. It was in a better position, we venture to say, to make a winning fight this time, than it will be again within a decade at least.—Chronicle.

BY THE WAY

Why don't you laugh?

A new post office?

Get down to business.

Honestly, aren't you glad the elections are over?

Be like the sun which never sees the dark side of anything.

Emerson's majority about 1500—Fowler in the minority by nearly 500.

The "I told you so" man has been working overtime since Oct. 25th.

The laboring men of St. George should read M. McLeod's letters, published during the recent campaign.

Beland's majority of 5500, in Beauce, is the largest in Canada.

A man's income is five times what he tells the assessor, and a fifth what he tells his wife.

Mr. Cahill—Can I see that burglar who was arrested last night for breaking into my house?

Inspector (hesitatingly)—well, I don't know. What do you want to see him for?

Mr. Cahill—Oh, there's nothing secret about it. I just wanted to find out how he managed to get into the house without waking my wife.—Illustrated Bits.

We have been shown a design for an upholstered front gate, which seems destined to become very popular. The foot board is cushioned, so that a short girl can bring her lips to the line of any given mustache without trouble. If the gate is occupied at 10:30 p. m. an iron hand extends from one gate post takes the young man by the left ear, turns him around and he is at once started home by a steel foot.—Ex.

When you hear a man sneering at the local paper because of its criticism of certain public questions, you can bet he does not squander any of his wealth in assisting his own party, or in advancing the interests of the town. He lives in a narrow groove, considers himself the critic of every person. His stock-in-trade is a man's bigotry, and he is about as much good to the town as a delinquent tax payer. When he goes out he will never be missed and the world will be better without him.

Poor Mr. Hazen. The Highway Act with its double taxation: caught himself reading an absolutely incorrect affidavit designed to serve political ends; with his county gone Liberal; with his dear friend, Hon. Mr. McLeod, accomplishing in York what he failed to do in his home county; with three by-elections bound to come; what a happy, happy man the premier must be.—Tribune.

Speaking of coming close to game, a gentleman was engaged in the illegal sport of showing his wife and nine-year-old son the game on a certain river in New Brunswick by means of a "jack" lantern. As it was only a sight-seeing expedition the man, whose name I withhold for obvious reasons, had only a shot gun with him. While watching several deer grazing at the jack in mild amaze, a crashing in the alders made all their ears quickly, and much to their consternation a large bull moose was coming right upon them. Without a moment's hesitation the man fired both barrels at the charging animal, which was by then in the water. The gun was charged with buckshot and he killed the moose. "As it was close season he had to be careful; but such a supply of meat could not have been allowed to go to waste. Then, too, it really was in self-defence. That plea, however, is not always taken seriously by the courts."—Boston Record.

"Seventy seats out of 86 in Ontario for Conservatives. E. L. Borden will be the premier of Canada within the next eight weeks."—Pun. Gleaner Oct. 21st.

Either run a town with a vim, or just sell out and loaf. One thing must be done—run the town for all that it is worth, get up steam and keep it up. Do you want trade? Bid for it. Do you want business to come to your town? Encourage what you have. Do you want a prosperous town? Then never permit jealousy to ruin your actions, but work together for common prosperity and mutual benefit.

The kickers on the farm are not so hard to get along with as the kickers in town. On the farm there is the kicking cow, and our long-suffered friend, the mule, while in town there is the old mossback who wants all the municipal improvements without paying for them. The cow may be sold for beef, the mule traded for a shot gun, but how on earth will we get rid of the town kickers?—Exchange.

The dredge has about completed the work at the wharf for the present, and will commence operations down river in a few days.

Some decided improvements have been made in Boyd's hotel and the house presents a pleasing and attractive appearance.

It is rumored that a wealthy Montreal gentleman will have a summer residence here. An offer has been made for a place in town and is now under consideration.

C. F. R. Engineers are going over the New Brunswick S. Road and preparing plans for the installing of overhead water tanks. It is said the water tanks will be placed as near the stations as possible.

Saturday was the last day for the American Express agents on the N. B. S. On Monday the express business was taken over by the Dominion Ex. Co. They will have no agent on the trains--Station Agents along the line will transact the express business.

Among the out of town guests who attended the reception tendered Mr. and Mrs. Todd on Friday last were: Mr. Lewis Connors, Beaver Harbor, Mr. Fred Paul, Mr. Enos Justisan, Pennfield; Mr. Ira McConnell, Councillor Hickey, Herb. McLean, John Hoyt, John Catherine of L'Etete, Mr. Ambrose Ryan of St. Stephen and many others.

On Monday at St. Andrews, W. F. Todd was declared elected by a majority of 200 over G. W. Ganong. Mr. Todd addressed the electors present. T. A. Hartt replied for Mr. Ganong who was prevented from attending by illness.

Charles E. Starr, General and general Manager of the L'Etete Gold and Copper Mining Co., returned Thursday from an extended business trip through the Provinces. He sold some considerable stock in Nova Scotia. It will be remembered that L. H. Newcomb is treasurer of this Company. The mines have proven a success thus far and promise rich results.--Eastport Citizen.

The opening convocation of Pine Hill College, Halifax, took place Wednesday. The chief feature was the induction of Rev. Dr. Stewart into the chair of church history and pastoral theology. Rev. Dr. Stewart at one time filled the pulpit of St. Andrew's church in this city and has many friends here. His wife was Miss Wetmore, daughter of the late Col. Wetmore of St. George.--Globe.

A meeting of Temperance advocates, their friends and sympathizers will be held in Foresters Hall, Wednesday evening for the purpose of re-organizing Red Granite Division. High officers in the temperance movement will be present. The re-starting of this division, at the present time, will be beneficial to the people of St. George in more ways than one. It will stimulate interest in the temperance cause, it will encourage the young of our town to adopt a temperance course in life; it will bring its members into closer contact with each other and thereby cause an appreciation of the good in each; it will cause a sociality to grow among its members; it will provide an evening of good clean enjoyment, at least once a week, during the winter weather; it will train the youth of our town to speak out in meetings; it will give fluency to the hesitating talker, and mold public debaters in our midst. Everybody should go, everybody will be welcome and good will come of the meeting.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Will every member of Red Granite Division respond to the call for re-organization, by attending the Temperance Meeting tonight in Forester's hall.

A meeting of the sardine packers of Eastport and vicinity was held in this city last week, but no definite decisions arrived, at, so far as can be learned, and the factories, despite the rumor that they were to close at an early season than formerly, will probably be kept open until the end of the packing season if fish in sufficient quantity and of suitable quality can be obtained.--Sentinel.

The Williams Stock Co. began a week's engagement here Monday night, the opening bill being "A Woman's Struggle." A large audience was present and showed their appreciation of the different features of the play by frequent applause. The specialties were very good and seemed to meet with the hearty approval of the audience.

Tuesday evening the company played Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde to a good audience. For the balance of the week the following plays will be put on:

Wednesday Eve. The Golden Cliff
Thursday " Bells of Shandon
Friday " Little Nell
Saturday " Dark Side of N.Y.

Saturday Matinee, East Lynn, at which children will be admitted for ten cents.

On Friday evening the ladies will have an opportunity to vote for the homeliest man in town. A prize will be awarded the person receiving the largest number of votes. A number of young men have been entered for this contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cook have returned from Red Beach. While on their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Cook were given a cordial welcome in Red Beach, the home of the groom. The Improved Order of Red Men, of which Mr. Cook is a member, accompanied by the band and their lady friends, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Cook. After several selections by the band, Chief Elliott in a pleasing manner presented the bride and groom, in behalf of the order, a handsome linen tablecloth with napkins to match. A number of handsome presents were received in linen, glass, wedgewood and silver. Refreshments were served and a most pleasant evening closed with hearty good wishes for Mr. and Mrs. Cook.

Prices on domestic sardines are firmly maintained. Three-quarter muskies are said to be nearly out of the market, so far as first hands are concerned. The fish have been running small in size. With the packing season drawing to a close and the raw material scarce, the trade will doubtless find itself in straits to meet the demand.

The Gazette's San Francisco correspondent writes that during the past week there has been a great run of sardines in the Bay of Monterey, and the Booth cannery has been busy taking care of all that was offered.

An enormous number of sardines are canned in Egypt by the natives during the course of the year. The cheapest quality packed in tins, comes from Portugal and Spain, while the better class article for European consumption is shipped from France.

Late reports are to the effect that the Maine mercantile Company, after conferences with leading commission merchants in New York and Boston, will maintain quotations at the present level "until February next, at least." It was at one time believed, in view of short pack, that prices would be advanced.

We all make them occasionally and they sell other than to convert them into when we discover our mistakes the best money. As a matter of fact these thing we can do is to correct them with as little delay as possible. Many honest people have been induced to buy inferior cream separators because of false statements made by the manufacturers and their agents. Others have bought cheaply constructed machines for which great claims are made and which are advertised as being sold at a great reduction in price by mail order houses and others who have no reputation to sustain, and who have no interest in the separator's proposition.

A Wise Mothers Story

Let all Mothers and Daughters Read Carefully and Profit By It

"I am convinced," writes Mrs. A. B. Hopeford from St. John, "that a majority of young girls who die of consumption do so because their mothers neglected their health at the critical time when carefulness insures vigor and sound health. If a girl's health is neglected from her eleventh to sixteenth year her body will be weak and she becomes a ready victim of typhoid, anaemia and in many cases consumption itself. In her sixteenth year my youngest daughter showed signs of failing strength. Some dyspeptic troubles developed, her heart became weak and palpitation frightened her dreadfully. She was irregular in the important bodily functions and rapid loss in weight and a ruddy complexion indicated a rapid decline.

She disliked making her troubles known to our doctor, a feeling I felt I should respect, and so by good fortune I was led to use Ferreroze with most gratifying results. My neighbor next door, Mrs. Woods, had found Ferreroze so good in nervousness that she persuaded me that it would restore Flossie's health, and from the time the second box was commenced her improvement was constant. She is now a big, strong girl, ruddy and plump, able to study hard and to take her share of household duties. I am an earnest advocate of Ferreroze. We all use it now as a tonic, as it is certainly woman's best friend."

All dealers sell Ferreroze, 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50; procure a supply to-day.

A smooth-looking stranger recently placed a number of penny-in-the-slot machines in a certain town. The machines bore the following inscription:

The greatest known aid to digestion. Drop a penny in the slot. Push, then pull.

At the top of the machine was a handle to be pushed, then pulled, and many townspeople who could not resist the temptation of trying some new device for the same reason that Timothy took the wine—for his stomach's sake—dropped in their pennies and took a push and pull out of the machine. But that was all. No result followed, and there was some talk of blowing open the hoarded treasure.

At the end of the week the agent reappeared unlocked the machines, garnered the wealth and retired, after explaining that "exercise was the greatest thing for digestion in the world."

The crowd was so paralyzed that the agent escaped unharmed.

Kept His Word

He was a little man, but he had a loud voice and evidently wanted everyone to know what he said. He and a companion—who, he said to his credit, seemed ashamed of the company he was in—stood in the hotel rounds one Saturday night. The little fellow was talking about Ireland, and he said many hard things concerning the country and the people.

A great big man stood by listening to the little fellow's vapourings. He merely smiled, until the little fellow said in a very loud tone:

"Show me an Irishman and I'll show you a coward."

Then the big fellow slipped up and, touching the little fellow on the shoulder said in a heavy bass voice:

"What's that you said?"

"I said, show me an Irishman and I'll show you a coward," said the little fellow, whose knees were shaking under him.

"Well, I'm an Irishman," said the big man.

"You are an Irishman? Well, and a smile of joy fitted over the little fellow's countenance as he saw a hole through which he could crawl, "I'm a coward." And he set off at a run.

Candid Friend: "As your husband died intestate, you will, of course, get a third."

Merry Widow: "Oh, I hope to get a fourth. He was my third, you know."

Nellie (calling to her sister): "I'm going to make some lemonade, Mary. Where is the squeezer?"

Mary (in a brown study): "The squeezer? Oh, he hasn't arrived yet; but I'm expecting him any minute."

"Did Bibbs have any luck hunting lions in Africa?"

"Yes, Great Luck."

"How?"

"Didn't meet any lions?"

What Causes "Nerves"?

Most people say worry—they are wrong—the cause is in the blood which is thin and lacks nutriment. To cure "Nerves" more blood, sinew and flesh are required. You get these quickly by taking Ferrozone. No health bringer is so certain, no nerve strengthener more potent, no system tonic so well adapted to the wants of the run-down, nervous or sleepless. Let Ferrozone build you up, let it fill you with vim, energy and surplus vigor. It has done this for thousands.

How Do You Do?

Have you ever stopped to think how you say "good morning" or "how do you do"? There are as many different ways of saying these simple words as there are foreign salutations, or ways of shaking hands—and we all know our friends and enemies and judge people by their hand-shake, says "The Ladies' World."

Not Engaged

Just as the express train stopped at a large station in the Midlands a lady rushed out of a carriage to see after her luggage, the station being a transfer point, and promptly turning to a porter, she demanded: "Are you engaged, porter?" "No, madam," was the latter's reply. "I'm a married man."

Interesting Facts

What is the real surname of the English royal family? is a question which puzzles not a few people, and not infrequently causes no small amount of discussion owing to different opinions on the subject. Nearly nine out of every ten persons when asked the question unhesitatingly answer "Guelph." This is not quite correct, for, although the royal family are Guelphs by descent, the late Queen Victoria, of course, changed her name when she married the late Prince Consort. His family name was Wettin, and consequently it became the surname of the Queen and all her descendants.

A Cure for Nervousness.

An American scientific journal published recently timely remarks on what it calls "house nerves" that is to say, the low spirits and brooding, irritable, morbid habit of stay-at-home or sedentary people. Women, especially women who are delicate and afraid to go out owing to the weather, are those who suffer most from this malady. They grow anxious for their husbands and conjure up accidents, analyze their feelings and lose their power of will.

would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the Heart, and one to the Kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fall, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these falling nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by All Dealers.

Obituary

MISS RACHAEL CARSON
Miss Rachael Carson died on Tuesday last at the home of her brother Wilson Carson. She was a woman of sterling character much respected by her friends and acquaintances. In Digdeguash where she resided for many years Miss Carson had many friends who will hear of her death with regret. The funeral took place on Thursday and interment was in the cemetery at Ellenville.

ALEXANDER ARMSTRONG
News of the death of Alex. Armstrong was received here Sunday. He was ill only a short time, with typhoid fever, and passed away in the public hospital at Winnipeg, Man., Sunday morning. He was 19 years of age, and his death is a severe blow to his family and relatives. He went west on the harvest excursion, leaving here in the best of health. Mr. Armstrong was a young man of temperate habits and popular among those with whom he came in contact. The remains will be brought here for interment.

GEORGE DUNBAR
On Oct. 30th the death took place of one of the most respected citizens of St. George, in the person of Mr. George Dunbar. The deceased had been ill a long time with the dreaded consumption and his death was not unexpected. The funeral was held on Sunday, Rev. H. I. Lynds conducting the services. The procession to the cemetery was very long, and was attended by Court Mistletoe, I. O. F. of which Mr. Dunbar was a valued member. The Foresters burial service was read by T. Stewart McAdam.

JOHN DALEY
We regret to announce the death of Mr. John Daley of New River, who passed away Monday night after a long illness. He leaves, to mourn their loss, a wife, three sons and one daughter. Mr. Daley was 69 years of age. A large number of friends in St. George extend their sympathy to the sorrowing family.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hawkins, Beaver Harbor, died on Sunday evening. The funeral was held on Tuesday.

What Causes "Nerves"?
Most people say worry--they are wrong--the cause is in the blood which is thin and lacks nutriment. To cure "Nerves" more blood, sinew and flesh are required. You get these quickly by taking Ferronone. No health bringer is so potent, no system tonic so well adapted to the wants of the run-down, nervous or sleepless. Let Ferronone help you up, let it fill you with vim, energy and surplus vigor. It has done this for thousands.

Cure Your Dandruff

Why? Because it is annoying, untidy. And mostly, because it almost invariably leads to baldness. Cure it, and save your hair. Get more, too, at the same time. All easily done with Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula. Stop this formation of dandruff!

Does not change the color of the hair.

The new Ayer's Hair Vigor will certainly do this work, because, first of all, it destroys the germs which are the original cause of dandruff. Having given this aid, nature completes the cure. The scalp is restored to a perfectly healthy condition.

Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.
