For keeping pots and pans hygienically clean there is nothing like

Old Dutch

Leaves no trace of soap, caustic or alkali. The soft, flaky particles cleanse more thoroughly and with less work. Saves time, money and labor.

Manufacturers of Wear-Ever and Duro Aluminum Ware recommend Old Dutch Cleanser for the cleaning of their utensils.

Saves $24 A Year

Cooking experts figure that the SMP Enamelware Roaster will save the average Canadian family fully $24.00 a year in meat bills. The secret is, it roasts the meat with very little shrinkage. Also, it makes cheap cuts taste like the best ones.

You place the roast in the roaster, put on the cover; the roaster does the rest. No broasting required. Every roast is perfectly cooked.

The cover fits close, so that cooking odors cannot escape. Grease can't spatter out, which means a sweet clean oven. Prices range from 55c to $1.50 each, depending on size and finish. And don't forget the saving of $24.00 yearly.

This Little Brandon Lassie Is Never "Dosed" for Colds

The Browns Now Use the "External" Treatment for Croup and Cold Troubles.

Mrs. John Brown, of 426 24th St., Brandon, Man., is the mother of this fine little girl and one of the many Canadian mothers who now use the vaporizing salve, Vicks VapoRub, in treating the colds of all the family. After using Vicks for some time Mrs. Brown writes:

"I have eight small children—seven from one to twelve years—and can certainly say that Vicks is the only cold remedy I have in the house all winter. If the cold is in the child's head I just put a little up each nostril and it gives relief in a short time. If it is in the chest I rub Vicks well in at night and by morning the cold has almost disappeared. I also use Vicks for chills and for burns—in fact, I use it too for severe headaches and find relief in a very short time. I always recommend Vicks to my friends especially those who have children."

CANADA'S GREAT HARVEST OF THE SEA

Canada's sea harvest increases in value. In May, 1925, $7,264,000 lbs. of sea fish were landed on both coasts and the value of the catch, $2,532,165, is nearly a million dollars better than in May 1924.

On the Atlantic Coast the catch of mackerel, cod and haddock was plentiful and the lobster fishing brought more than twice the catch in the previous May, in spite of rough weather towards the end of the month.

On the Pacific coast, 1,694,000 lbs. of salmon were taken, compared with 927,400 pounds in May 1924. The bulk of the salmon catch was sold fresh.

The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted

By GERTRUDE S. de WENTWORTH-JAMES

SYNOPSIS
Eileen Manning is particularly proud and happy when she wakes this morning for it is her son Bob's twenty-first birthday. She has every reason for pride in both him and her husband, John, who is District Attorney. Her husband is still her lover. When he, too, wakes, he compliments her on her beauty—"the prettiest bride that ever came out of Kentucky," he calls her, and both rejoice over possession of a fine, manly boy.

She laughed outright. The thought of John Manning, who was forever stalking absently by her, her closest friends with never a nod of recognition, posing as a judge of feminine pulchritude was amusing. But she managed to display appropriate apprehension.

"What a speech, John? I hope you are not in the habit of exercising this marvelous judgment of which you are so proud?"

He received her mock alarm with the careless indifference of a man with a clear conscience.
"With you here at home, Eileen, it's not worth the trouble. With the queen of all beauties presiding over my house, why bother about others?"

"But the years," she said gently. "The years have left some marks. I'm not as young as I once was, John."
"Nonsense," he burst forth with conviction. "You don't look a day older than the day you left Louisville as a bride."
Back flashed her thoughts to the scene in the station. The throng of excited friends the ever present shoes and rice. Then she was a girl, tricksters, the white ribbons, old. Now there was Bob as old as she was then. How absurd for John to say such a thing, yet how lovely, for the best of all he really meant it. Still she regarded him severely.

"Flatterer—there you go again. I would be vain if I crept under your eye. Base flatterer that you are, how can you sit there and make such speeches to me—a mother. And what is more the mother of a grown man. Do you realize that this is our son's twenty-first birthday?"
He shook his head as if it were a fact most difficult to believe.
"Great Scott, Eileen, I hadn't thought of it. It seems only yesterday that he was a baby."

In the Center of the Bed-room Stood a Handsome Youth.

She nodded, her eyes softened by memories of chubby fits and tiny toes.

He seemed to fall under the spell of her mood and reached forth to draw her to his side where she nestled contentedly. So they sat, lost in pleasant memories of yesterday until John broke the silence. "The kid was a noisy rascal those days. Heavens, what a powerful pair of lungs he had."

She bridled instantly.
"The idea—he was a darling, a perfect darling of a baby, everybody said so."

"Darling he may have been, but furthermore he was gifted with a power which he never hesitated to exercise regardless of time or place. John, how can you say such a thing?" she protested. "It was only his lungs that he was exercising. Bless his little heart it was the one way he had to exercise."

"Well, he took advantage of it to the fullest degree until he got to crawling, then he combined both forms."

"There was nothing in the least abnormal about Bob," retorted Eileen coldly. "He had to crawl before he could walk."

"And what a climber he was," John went on, perfectly oblivious to her reproach. "Always climbing, do you remember later on when he climbed up on the roof of the barn and managed to fall off and break his arm?"

"Don't I, and you were away at Circuit Court," her eyes grew big at the memory of the calamity. Of herself, a girl wife, crushed beneath what seemed to her tragic responsibility towards her offspring—and her husband absent.

"That was my first big case," Large though his son's injury had been in his life, John was not referring to it, but to a very venerable cause, involving the rights of certain most sophisticated but none the less innocent purchasers for value, upon which he had expended much lamp light. "It was next on the calendar and there I was waiting expecting it to be called at any moment when your message came. It was hard to decide just what to do and the train service was very bad."

How hard had been that decision nobody but John knew. A certain inborn reticence, a high standard of integrity so far as the case he would accept had made John's progress slow in those days when compared to the advancement of less scrupulous men. And even now, when he looked upon the world from the world from the vantage ground of a assured reputation, those early battles to maintain his ideals and still make a living had graven the lines of care and strength which gave character to his handsome face.

Eileen reached over and patted his hand.
"You decided for me, you knew I wanted you, needed you."

"The old automobile in which I made the trip would be like an ark now. The trouble—ignition trouble, get out and get under. And the fear that old lawyer Johnson in whose hands I had left the case would get a chance to try the case and get credit for my months of hard work. Lord, what a ride!"

"But you came to Bob and me," Drawing closer, Eileen rested her head on his shoulder and when he stroked her hair raised her lips for his kiss. So they sat, oblivious to their surroundings, in the fullness of their mutual affection living over again those bygone days.

In the midst of their meditations, Eileen started and sat up.
"What?" she cried, the water, and with a wild look made for the door. "A minute more and we would have had a flood," she explained as she turned from the brimming tub.

"You turned on the water and forgot it," she explained as she turned from the brimming tub.

"Maw!" A masculine voice of force and power sounded from the room they just quitted. "A headless of her husband, Eileen made for the door. In the center of the bed room stood a handsome youth, apparently driven to the point of desperation by the bow tie he had been attempting to tie."

"Bob," called Eileen, her face alight with tenderness. "What is the matter, dear?"
"My tie—I've had such a time with it, mother, I can't get the bow thing to go right."

To prevent the passage of a public bill, which he considered hostile to the interests of the country, he spoke for 26 hours until the moment when the legal dissolution of the House had come and the Lieutenant-Governor was there to perform the formal closing legal function.

OFFICE FILLING

Hon. E. A. Reilly, minister without portfolio in the Baxter cabinet, is reported from Fredericton as a probable appointee to the position of chairman of the N. B. Hydro Commission, now held by Hon. P. J.
Veniot. It has been officially stated by two members of the provincial executive, however that no appointments were made at the government meetings in Fredericton this week.
Several Conservatives today expressed the opinion that it would not be good policy to make appointments
before the Federal elections, as there are so many after the few provincial jobs available that any appointments would result in a great deal of dissatisfaction among the unsuccessful aspirants.—St. John Globe.

"SLAVERY" IN PORTUGUESE AFRICA.

"Now we are all slaves," says a black man in Portuguese Africa fifteen years after formal emancipation. "The slaves were better fed than we forced laborers are, for we are not properly clothed, but they can't get into trouble," he says, "magisterially opined visitors, sent to Portuguese Africa by Prof. Edward Alsworth Ross of the University of Wisconsin, who embodied their findings in a report to the League of Nations. As explained by G. Ellis Porter, the conditions coming down a mountain road at 40 miles an hour, she came to a turn and espied two cars stalled ahead of her. On one side of her was a cliff, on the other a precipice. What to do? Modestly explains the youthful westerner: "I had less than 500 feet in which to do my thinking. It was hard, hard work, or a long, long drop, or some quick work with the brakes and gears. I shoved on my foot brake, threw her into reverse, and just as she came to a slow-down on her slide, I got the emergency brake on and shut off my engine. I stopped broadside on to the other cars, without even getting a scratch. If that wasn't a good time for a woman driver to lose control of her car, I never hope to see one."

The average male driver must admit that he would have to travel more than 500 feet before he thought of making his wheels stand still and turn backwards at the same time. That is, indeed, "some stuff." And, for their own sakes, it is to be hoped that those of either sex who attempt it at forty miles an hour around steep curves in this vicinity will not have to request Judge Cohen to issue them a certificate for safe driving. They may get something entirely different.

STUDENTS ON OCEAN LINERS

A new way of "working one's way through college," has been found by American students in taking service on ocean liners. The number of applicants from colleges, it is said, is unusually large, especially for jobs with the big passenger companies. They have helped to raise the percentage of native Americans on American ships from 50 per cent, which it was last year, to the present 60 per cent.

A 50 per cent. increase is shown in the amount earned by students working their way through the University of Oregon, according to the annual report of Mrs. Charlotte Donnelly, employment secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association. A total
